Such a bill was passed a long time ago in the administration of President Coolidge. It passed both Houses and it was vetoed, as I recall, for only one reason, and that was that the General Accounting Office instead of the Attorney General was made the monitor of the public interest in that respect. Then again it passed either the Senate or the House another time, and as of this good hour there is on the Union Calendar of this House a bill which is almost identical with the tort claims title carried in the pending bill, and it may come on for action before the present session is over. All that is in the interest of time and economy, to get rid of some of these private bills.

Secondly, there is the bridge title. I have introduced bills to secure authority to build bridges over navigable streams, and in a sense of confusion and bewilderment I have often wondered what it was all about. When a bill like that is introduced, what happens to it? It has to go to the War Department. Having been a marine contractor once upon a time and having something to do with bridges I know what the mechanics are. First of all, the Department engineers must determine whether the location is suitable and whether or not it will obstruct navigation. If some dredges and pile drivers are to be brought in to pick up spoils where the caissons are to be sunk, will it constitute an obstruction to navigation in the stream? Who determines that? The War Department. What is the nature of the bridge that is to be built? Does it run at right angles with the stream or does it run diagonally? Is it a traffic hazard? Is the clearance sufficient to take care of the stacks of the inland steamers and other boats and smaller river craft? When they have made that determination they send it up and the committee considers it and sends in the committee report. Is not that a sensible thing to do? Very well. Let us give the War Department blanket authority to consider this question of bridge bills. They have to do the work anyway. We enlarge their authority a little bit under existing bridge acts, and those are not invalidated by the title that is contained in this bill.

The purpose is, you understand, to save time from those chores and those routine matters that are of course indispensable to the country and to the people and particularly to our constituents, but to have them done with dispatch by the staff of your committee and to give you more time. The staffing provisions have the same thing in mind.

Then in addition to the time element we were thinking in terms of efficiency and economy. The staff of the Legislative Reference Service of the Library of Congress is an instance in point. We provide and authorize more money for the Legislative Reference Service. I am very devoted to that Service. I think it is a very fine thing. I have often thought what a fantastic business it is, too, with over 12,000,000 exhibits, books, charts, and documents in the Library, the greatest volume of them, not even the Bodleian in London excepted, and then to have it there in undigested form. What good does it do, unless we have senior experts to digest it when legislation is before the committees? That is what the people expect, and that is the use we should make of our Library. It is designed, of course, to bring information, to bring data, and to bring a finer degree of efficiency in the discharge of our legislative responsibilities.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. TABER. I just want to say that my experience with that outfit has been discouraging. Just yesterday a very important matter came up which I wanted to work on and I tried to reach the head of the outfit through my secretary and was unable to do so—he was too busy.

Mr. DIRKSEN. In two Congresses before the present one I appeared before the Subcommittee on Legislative Appropriations and asked for $100,000 for the Legislative Reference Service. I did not get it. If my memory serves me correctly, and I apologize in advance if it does not, my distinguished friend from New York was one of those who opposed it. They have been understaffed. They have been so loaded with work the marvel is that they have done as much work as they have.

Mr. TABER. But the attitude of the outfit toward Members of Congress is wrong.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I have never found anything wrong with the attitude of the Library of Congress, and I have especially found nothing wrong with the attitude of Mr. Ernest Griffith, the Director of the Legislative Reference Service, who has been so helpful and so cheerful about it, and he has assumed every responsibility that I have ever placed in his lap. I think the RECORD will show that I probably use the Library of Congress as much as any Member of the House or of the Senate. I have found them a great instrumentality in helping me to do my work. I use them freely. I have never had occasion to doubt their patriotism, to doubt their loyalty, or to doubt their diligence, but I have had occasion to wonder why the Congress year after year has starved them to death. Here we make authorizations for necessary funds so that they can have specialists in every branch of economic endeavor, which is so essential if they are going to be able to advise the Members and committees of this House. What I am trying to spell out for you is the general approach to this thing, to develop more time to reflect upon our work, and to produce a greater efficiency in the structure of the Congress and a greater economy, particularly in the matter of time.

There are some other things that we seek to do for ourselves. There is the increase in pay. I do not know what disposition the House will make of that. I am only going to make this comment on that item. When this bill was in the Senate it carried the same item of $15,000 per year. But there was a provision written in when it went to the Senate which provided for the deductibility of the expenditures under the Internal Revenue Code. That was defeated in the Senate and for a very good reason—not that the Senate objected to it, but on the ground that it was a revenue provision. When you examine that very fresh and virile Constitution of the United States you will find that all revenue proposals must originate in the House of Representatives. That is the only reason it was taken out. So if the increase in salary was interpreted along with that deductibility provision, then it would make a perfect picture, do not you know—so it ought to be restored. I think I am free to say that the majority leader of the House of Representatives has the language and will offer that deductibility clause when we read the bill under the 5-minute rule.

Just a word in reference to the retirement system. I know there are many people in the country who feel we ought to make no provision for the retirement of elective officers. I see no reason why we should not. I see no reason why we should not enjoy the same security provisions that are extended by the civil-service retirement system and the social-security system to almost every person in the country. It is a good system. On one occasion several years ago when we inherited all these bundles for Congress, and I got my share—they did not bother me any—we brought in a retirement proposal here which was really no retirement proposal at all. It was enough on which to starve to death and I did not care for anything like that. Now, we bring you a real retirement system, and you will find the annuities spelled out in the report that accompanies this bill. You make a 6-percent contrbution and then at age 62 if you pay in the entire amount you get 2½ percent of your basic salary times the number of years that you served.

If you pay back only $2,500, which we accept arbitrarily for the purpose of letting this pay out in the 22-year period, there also you get a reasonably substantial annuity.

Mr. ROBERTSON of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. ROBERTSON of Virginia. Is it true that with this 6-percent contribution it will make this fund self-sufficient in a period of 20 years?

Mr. DIRKSEN. That is right; either 20 or 32 years.

I want to add one little thing on this question of salaries and retirement. I want to read to you, with the indulgence of the House, and I hope you will not think I am transgressing when I read what Senator BARKLEY said on the last day this was under consideration in the Senate. I want to read this to you because I think it is priceless. I quote:

> I remember when I was in the House of Representatives, when the last increase in salaries occurred for Members of Congress. The salaries were increased from $7,500 to $10,000 a year. I voted against that salary increase. I voted against it in part, at least, because 2 or 3 weeks before that I had voted against a general increase in the salaries of Government employees, and I was not willing to vote myself an increase when I had voted against increases for others. The newspapers in my congressional district mentioned rather favorably the fact that I had voted against that increase in salary. Some of them had editorials after this fashion: "Old BARKLEY stood by the people; he did not engage in this raid on the Treasury," and so forth.
>
> Congress adjourned shortly after that, and I expected to be patted on the back by everyone I saw when I got home because I had voted against the increase in the salaries of Members of Congress. I was at home for a week. I went up and down Broadway in my home city and into the stores to see my friends and visit with them. I spent an entire week there, and no one mentioned the subject. No one said a word about it. Finally an old farmer friend of mine, much older than I was, but a very dear friend who always came to town when he heard that Congress had adjourned, heard that I had returned home, and he wanted to talk about what was going on. He was a well-informed man. We stood in the shade of a brick wall for about an hour and talked about what had happened in Congress. Finally he said, "I see that you fellows in Congress increased your salaries." I replied, "Yes, Uncle Jack. They did, but I voted against it." He looked straight into my eyes for about 5 minutes, and finally he said, "You are just a damn fool."

Now, Mr. Chairman, if the minority whip is present I am going to say this, with his indulgence. Yes. He is here.

You remember when we had this last bill on retirement under consideration. The issue was raised out in his district in Illinois. He is my beloved friend and he is my congressional neighbor. He called up one day and he said, "I wish you would come over here, if you can spare the time."

I went over there. They had a party meeting. They had a great dinner. A very charming and capable lady, fortified with plenty of money, who was an opponent of his in the primary, was there, on my special invitation. She was the one who had advertised in the newspapers in great flaming headlines that the Congressman from that district had voted himself $348 a month pension. And then, in fine type that you could see only through bifocals, was the rest of the explanation. That gracious lady was sitting there in a company of 500 other members of my party at that dinner. I went particularly that night to discuss that very thing, in the Masonic Temple in Bloomington, Ill. When it was all over and finished the whole issue had been dispelled.

It is time that we on our own responsibility go back home and, without cringing, without showing some kind of public and legislative cowardice, we say to our people, "Sure, I did it, and here is the reason why." We have been running around, too often, and they do not understand our positions. Perhaps that is one of the reasons why the prestige of Congress has gone down in public esteem. Let us not do it. Let us say and do the things that we believe contribute to the better discharge of our responsibilities here, even if it does cost some more money.

Finally, I have said not once but a dozen times, up in Madison, Wis., over in Fort Wayne, Ind., over in South Bend, over in Youngstown, Ohio, recently over in Dayton, and elsewhere where I have had an opportunity to crusade for congressional reorganization, I said: Write your Congressman and make him do it, because the one way to get an independent Congress that will stand up squarely, face every issue no matter how feverish or controversial it may be, is to give them also as we have given to all the other millions of this country a little sense of security in their jobs.

One other item has been a pet of mine. I have been so distressed about the appropriations procedure in the Congress. I have served on the Appropriations Committee for quite a long time. I try to be diligent in my efforts and I leave the verdict in your hands. I have said so often on this floor that a lot of it is farcical; and let me under the probability that I may be guilty of violating a confidence, just reach into one meeting and pull out the truth. It is good for the country and it is good for us that we be shocked on occasions. When Paul Porter and the OPA people came before the deficiency subcommittee recently and we had hearings there about next year's operations, the amount asked was $142,000,000. We had some sessions on the matter and finally we put it on a 9 months' basis and gave them $106,000,000 which is about two-thirds of $142,000,000. We virtually took Mr. Porter at his word. Was there somebody who could examine into the techniques and the office procedure, into the investigatorial techniques of OPA and see whether they were spending too much or too little? No; we had no investigation, even though we passed resolution No. 50 several years ago under which we have a staff. But it was not investigated, and that is one reason why these committees must be equipped with investigators who do not go down there for a week or 10 days at a time.

They must go and live in the structure of Government and find the weaknesses and then they must sit at the elbows of the Members of Congress as they are assembled in committees and say: "Ask him this question; ask him that question; ask him how he justifies this expense or that procedure." That is the only way you are finally going to get economy in this country. So we gave them $106,000,000 for 9 months. It went across the floor of the House and was approved and sent to the other body. When it got to the Senate they did not have a single member of the OPA before a Senate committee and when the bill went across the Senate floor and finally got to conference it had been cut from $106,000,000 to $56,000,000; and I do not know why. Then we went to conference and we ragged around. Some said: "Oh, give them $106,000,000; do not penalize them." Some said: "They should not have that much." One conferee said: "Let's give them only $25,000,000." Then I reached up into thin air and pulled out a figure. I said: "Mr. Chairman, I suggest we give them $75,000,000." And that is the figure that went up to the White House in the bill. Is that intelligent appropriating? I say to you we do not get to the vitals of the thing we do in the subcommittee. If we do not, how are we going to balance the budget at a time when the public debt is $275,000,000,000? There is a way, and that way is written into this bill. It is to have subcommittees of Ways and Means and Appropriations of the House and a subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee, five or seven men from each—and we are going to amend the language here so that it does not require the full committee—we provide that members from the two committees which wrestle with the question of revenue income that is sweated out of the people and filters into the Public Treasury shall work together with the spending committees of the House and Senate in contriving an over-all fiscal policy.

Here is another group from the two committees charged with the responsibility of appropriating money out of the Federal Treasury. In all the days I have been in Congress, there never has been a meeting of the Ways and Means Committee and the Appropriations Committee, not one. If I am wrong, let any Member stand in his place and challenge that statement. Is that not an amazing thing?

What do the taxpayers think about it? They are the people who are in interest, after all. Here in the files are telegrams from taxpayers associations in Connecticut, Illinois, Ohio, and elsewhere, insisting that the provision to set up a legislative over-all budget be preserved in this bill. An effort will be made to knock it out. I hope you will rise, be patient and see that it is preserved. It requires this group of people from these four committees to get together and examine the President's budget that comes here the first of the year, then to spell out an over-all ceiling. We can kick it over if we want to. But think of the moral effect on the tax structure of our country to be able to say that men skilled in finance and in expenditures have contrived a revenue structure, an over-all appropriation structure, that will result in a balanced budget and we can look down the corridors to the year's end, June 30, 1947, let us say, and there at that point we know we will find a balanced budget.

Now, then, who is for this sort of proposal? Does the name of Dr. Fred A. Fairchild, of Yale University, mean anything, one of the greatest financial men of the United States, so great that thousands of hard-headed businessmen who belong to the United States Chamber of Commerce have hired him as a fiscal adviser? Mr. Fairchild came before the committee and said on page 53 of the hearings:

> That a budget committee be established in the House of Representatives and in the Senate to set annually an over-all figure for appropriations.

That is what we have written into this bill. Here is our good friend from Massachusetts [Mr. HERTER], who made such a great record in the Massachusetts Legislature. He was explaining the principle before the joint committee, and said:

> In the financial operation of Congress, on the other hand, there is no fiscal pattern, and appropriations are made in a vacuum.

You never knew how right you really were unless we can set a ceiling, then we can move on in the direction of that ceiling and correlate our revenues and our expenditures to get a balanced budget when the new fiscal year begins.

There is Harold Smith, Director of the Bureau of the Budget, now with the Bretton Woods organization. Here is what he said:

> The Budget and Accounting Act (the act of 1921) contemplated close relationships between the Bureau of the Budget and the committees dealing with revenues and expenditures. Unfortunately, these relationships have never been fully developed.

Oh, Mr. Former Budget Director, how right you are. They have not been developed.

Here is Mr. Adkins, director of the Connecticut Public Expenditure Council, on page 776 of the hearings:

> We suggest that procedures be developed to set up an over-all fiscal plan. The present procedure is weak because appropriation bills are passed piecemeal.

Here is former Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, who served a long time as Secretary of the Treasury, and you will find this on page 273 of the hearings:

> If, for instance, the Ways and Means and Appropriations Committees of the House and the Finance and Appropriations Committees of the Senate could meet each session as a joint committee on fiscal policy to consider the over-all aspects of the expenditure and revenue programs, simplification and greater effectiveness would result.

That from a former Secretary of the Treasury. Finally, here is what the Acting Director of the Bureau of the Budget said in a letter to Senator MURRAY, member of the joint committee, dated June 10, 1946:

> So far as section 130 is concerned, it seems entirely proper for the Congress in the spring of each year to state the sense of the Congress in respect to total Federal expenditures, revenues, and deficits.

I submit this question: If the argument is made here that there are no committee rooms in which we can meet, are we going to let a hundred-billion-dollar business suffer because of some momentary physical difficulty? They say, "Oh, your subcommittees cannot start hearings." Is that so? I have always served on one committee that started in December, and you can go on with your hearings just the same and hold up the marking of the bill until the gentlemen who are referred to in that over-all joint committee come in and say, "Look, here is the ceiling." Is there anything to prevent it? There is no argument that can be made against it.

Notwithstanding that fact, I feel impelled to say to you that the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, who has never been for streamlining the Congress, staged a meeting of the Committee on Appropriations yesterday morning, and out of 43 Members there were 21 present, and only 20 voted, and he came along with a substitute proposal which carried by a vote of 17 to 3, which simply recites what the section contained in the Budget and Accounting Act of 1921, and the chairman moved to strike this out. I hope the House will not go along with that proposal.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I am certain the gentleman wants to be accurate. The chairman did not move to strike it out. The chairman made no motion at all.

Mr. DIRKSEN. The gentleman has brought in a substitute motion.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. TARVER] made the motion.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes; but who brought the resolution to us. Who was the moving spirit that brought in the resolution that lay on the committee table yesterday morning?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The gentleman begs the question. The gentleman says the chairman made the motion when all who were present will recall that he did not make the motion. In answer to the gentleman's last question, the ranking majority and minority members of the committee met with the two ranking majority members of the Senate Committee on Appropriations and all agreed that section 138 should be stricken from the bill. It was decided to submit it to the entire membership of the Committee on Appropriations and get their reaction. I had supposed it would be submitted orally but when the committee convened the clerk, with his usual efficiency, had prepared for each member of the committee the print to which the gentleman refers. I had never seen it before. I had not directed that it be printed.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Who engineered it? The clerk certainly does not engineer things like that. Somebody did it.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The gentleman has had the exact facts in the case.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Maybe it came from Mars.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. And the gentleman made many other misstatements.

Mr. DIRKSEN. There is a good deal involved here, and I do not take this sort of thing lying down. I never did.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. There is too much involved to make misstatements.

Mr. DIRKSEN. The chairman of the Committee on Appropriations has been busy getting out this booklet entitled "An Anvil Which Has Worn Out Many Hammers—Congress and Its Traducers." There are three speeches made there. One was made when the resolution creating the joint committee was before this House. You should read that little booklet. He is not for staffing. He is opposed to committee realinement. He is opposed to making a legislative body. He wants to carry on in the dim dark past, and if you are going to stand for that sort of thing, then we might just as well have no bill. Let it never be said of us by the American people that we are going to reach out for extraordinary benefits, with increased pay, and not give the taxpayer a little show for his money. I admonish you with all the fervor that I can bring to you, if you strike that out, the last hope of a balanced budget may go glimmering. Have we become so accustomed to deficits and deficit spending that we will leave a single stone unturned, a single method unexplored to get back to a budget that will infuse confidence in our people. It is indeed astonishing that Members argue that lack of time, or lack of facilities, or some other equally unsubstantial reason makes this impracticable.

Let me point out to you that this proposal was well considered in the Senate. When the final vote came, 10 members of the Senate Appropriations Committee voted for the bill and only 3 voted against it. Is it to be presumed that members of the Senate Appropriations Committee are so untalented in the fiscal field that they were unable to spell out the meaning and intent of this proposal for a legislative budget. I think not.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the gentleman from South Dakota.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Admitting, as I personally do, the very great desirability of achieving some coordination between the possible revenues of the Government in a given year and the probable appropriations, I am wondering if paragraph (b) of the proposed bill really gets us anywhere. In the first place, a concurrent resolution would have no effect whatsoever upon the reduction of the public debt; it would not be a law. In the second place, there can be no guarantee that the Congress would adopt it, and even if it would adopt it, a bill might be proposed the next day that would accomplish something else in violation of it, and the subsequent action of Congress would be controlling.

Mr. DIRKSEN. That can be done. The House, having passed a bill, in my judgment would be pretty reluctant to kick over that which it had done the day before, unless you made a pretty persuasive case. Besides that, would you not hear from the people back home who have to pay these taxes that we appropriate?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. If you really want to make it effective, when you adopt a budget based upon your anticipated revenues, should you not provide that upon the passage of such legislation no bill should be passed in cases of that kind unless it were done by two-thirds?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I wrote a provision like that that I placed before the Committee on Ways and Means in 1943. In fact, we also had language in this bill that we acted upon. However, we did not want to be too inflexible with that sort of thing and then delete some of the provisions passed by the Senate. Our disposition was entirely correct in the matter, but we thought if we went too far it might yet work out properly. We left it with certain flexibility, and after we have a year or two experience under it, we can then approach this question again and analyze this whole technique. We did not do this overnight.

Mr. TABER. I am anxious that we do everything that can be done constructively toward improving the operation of Congress. I want to see every forward-looking move made. But I do not like to see something undertaken here without the slightest explanation of how it would work or whether or not it could work.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield five additional minutes to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. TABER. I should like to see this thing explored on the floor. I do not care what somebody says about it who is not familiar with congressional procedure. I should like to see the thing brought out clearly. If you are going to have an over-all ceiling upon a budget—a legislative budget—you have to explore for a time and then you have to apportion that proposition. You are going to be subject to all sorts of pulling and hauling and pressure. It is going to be just like an omnibus appropriation bill, where you would have logrolling. We have adopted the other method of appropriation because it has been found that it was possible to cut things down by proceeding with people who were not interested in special projects. I hope the thing will be explored before we get through so people will understand what you are shooting at and how you propose to proceed.

Mr. DIRKSEN. That is the whole weakness of the whole fiscal procedure of Congress today. We get so interested in the trees that we cannot see the forest. We get so interested in a few $5,000 and $10,000 items that the whole business of an over-all budget finally escapes us. The thing to do is to see it on broad lines and in perspective, to get a real policy, to kick out the policies we do not want that cost money, and then finally resolve it and let your subcommittees work under that ceiling, and even make that a target under which they can effectuate even greater reductions in appropriations and finally in the national debt.

As to the exploration, if you want some interesting reading sometime, get down the old volumes of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD when the Budget and Accounting Act was debated in 1921. It is marvelous. On that occasion one might have heard the familiar cry, "It will not work." How often that was reechoed in the well of this House. How do we know it is not going to work unless we try it?

There is just enough of adventurous and the pioneering instinct in me to want to try it, because the great goal is an ordered budget, a reconstruction of the whole structure of confidence, that is so necessary in the hearts and souls of the American people today, and a better and a more improved Congress than we have ever had before. That is a goal worthy of any pioneer and of any adventurer who wants to move down into the great caverns and abysses of fiscal relations in government where adventure really lies. Let no small argument be permitted to prompt the removal of that thing out of the bill, because you will rue it all the days of your congressional service.

Let it not be said that we are so selfish that we take staff aid—we take clerical help—we take retirement—we take increases in salary—we take deductibil-ity from income—and then not have something constructive and useful to give to the 140,000,000 people who pay the money that is expended and appropriated by this body.

I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. MILLER].

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. The original bill in the Senate had a provision for an administrative assistant. I believe that is not contained in the House version.

Mr. DIRKSEN. That is taken out.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. I wish to inquire whether with the consolidation of the committees does the gentleman feel the individual member will have more work placed upon his shoulders and that he might therefore be in need of an administrative assistant?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I am hoping that he will have less. As a member of the committee that has one or more senior specialists attached to it, he can do more work and perhaps have a little time for leisure.

Members of the House, we have brought you an integrated bill. If you are going to kick it around, it will be like taking the mainspring out of a watch. It will not work. It will be like taking one of the jewels out of the works of a watch. The watch will not run. Of course, I am not so arbitrary as to feel that you cannot offer an amendment here. But so far as the committee structure is concerned and the staffing of these committees—that has been integrated and worked out. If you kick out one of these things without good and persuasive reasons, then, of course, you are going to break up the definite and precise procedures we are trying to write into this bill. Let the amendments be very persuasive before you permit them to be written into the bill.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished member of the committee the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. LANE].

THE REORGANIZATION OF CONGRESS

Mr. LANE. Mr. Chairman, it was encouraging. It was compelling. It was extraordinary. I refer to the outstanding single fact observed by the Special Committee on the Organization of Congress on which I served as a member. As you know, this special committee, composed of Members of both the Senate and House, devoted a year's full and complete study to the pressing question of congressional reorganization. And the outstanding single fact observed by the committee was the virtual accord of criticism and suggestion proposed by the numerous and expert observers who appeared before us. Here in Congress where the urgent interests of the Nation meet and toss turbulently before being channeled into legislative direction, we rarely meet such a concord of deliberate opinion. The prevailing impulses, the dire need and the vital interest of all our people are represented here and the diversities of public opinion find their expression here. It is as if the waters of our great rivers and our countless streams all flowed in one great sea, met and thrashed and tossed violently before being finally channeled and directed into a great and mighty canal which served the entire Nation.

The special committee devoted a full year's study to this vital question. It heard a great variety of testimony from Members of Congress, political scientists, students of government, and so forth. Yet despite the significant and fundamental nature of the study and the great diversity of testifiers, a substantial, unanimous opinion prevailed. Without exception the witnesses, as we may call them, were thoughtful and thorough, their criticisms reasoned and penetrating, their suggestions basic and formative. I impress this fact because it sounds as a trumpet call to positive and immediate action.

And this clear trumpet call sounds as an impressive contrast to the confused disagreeable sound of isolated and often violent cries raised not infrequently against Congress and its individual Members. No Member of either of our Houses can have failed to hear often in the past, and ever continuing, the attacks on this body and its Members. When such attacks have been bitter, harsh, unjust, and mean, as they often have been, we have had either to ignore them, which is dignified but not rebuking, or protest them, which is to expose one to degrading controversy. But when there has been a measure of truth in such attacks we have had to bear their entire burden while knowing at the same time that our efforts have been arduous, our intentions sincere. And we have realized more and more, as the burden becomes greater, and the criticisms more insistent, that the fault lay not in ourselves so much as in the legislative machinery we have been operating with.

The problems we face daily are of the complexity of our times, of the variety of our people and its concerns. Legislative work has multiplied, committee work grown more demanding, office work has become staggering. At the same time our effectiveness has been limited, our legislative prerogative greatly deferred to the executive branch, our power of policy making disorganized, our oversight of administrative performance negligible, our access to essential information cut off. Small wonder that our great and unceasing efforts have often ended in confusion. "The mountain was in labor."

And small wonder too that there has been a tremendous surge in recent years in and out of Congress for reorganization, a surge which we hope will gain the highest level. There is not one of us in Congress who did not know that our constant and often distressing burden must be eased, our vigor restored. There are many of us who made specific proposals. And beyond our walls there have been since 1941 a series of independent surveys of the machinery and methods of our National Legislature by public and private organizations. The work and study of the joint committee was the culmination of that surge and the bill proposed, passed by the Senate, and now before us, is the peak of that surge which should sweep over the top. Here in Congress we know the necessity of reorganizing our machinery. The most astute observers of political science have urged it with compelling force. And we owe it to the people we represent to guarantee that their National Legislature is strong and effective. Recent history is too full of pointed warnings of the consequence of the default of legislatures. The decay of national vigor or the surrender of all power to the dictator have been the product of the impotence of the legislature in modern times.

The joint committee has proposed, and the Senate has passed with some limiting amendments, a bill designed to eliminate most of the defects in our present machinery and to enable Congress to perform adequately its main functions of determining policy, authorizing administrative organization and appropriations to carry out policy, and supervising execution of the resultant program. The term "streamlining Congress" is frequently heard in reference to these proposals. Such a term ignores the structural and basic element of reorganization incorporated. We are equipping ourselves with a modern and more efficient engine which eliminates waste, restores power, utilizes energy to the fullest, and assures continued performance.

Mr. Chairman, I refer to the proposed changes as basic and structural, designed to improve the machinery and method of both Houses and of the Congress as a whole. Before I analyze the separate provisions and indicate their structural improvements, I would like to point out that there is one proposal which I regard as extraneous and not basic. It is a proposal which I do not believe should be part of a constructive plan whose design is reorganization. In the select committee I affirmed for the RECORD as noted in the committee report my opposition to the proposed increase in salary for Members of Congress. I repeat here in insistence that this provision should not be included in the bill, that it is alien to the basic intent of the bill, and declare that if it remains as part of the bill, I must object to its passage.

My endorsement and unstinting support of the reorganization bill is a matter of record and I reiterate that endorsement here. Consequently, I feel obliged to state why my objection to this single provision is so strong. In so doing I regret the necessity of disagreeing with the other capable and distinguished members of the committee. My opinion is a minority one and this emphasizes the necessity for declaring my reasons. But in so doing I am most anxious to assert, since the issue might be regarded as a delicate one, that this difference of opinion reflects no discredit on either party to opinion.

Mr. Chairman, the committee has proposed to correct the practice of attaching riders to appropriation bills, a proposal we should all endorse since such riders are alien to the intent of the particular bill. These riders tagged on to bills which are assured of final passage thus ride into the realm of law not on their own merits, but despite them, for often they are provisions which would not otherwise receive the approval of Congress. So they are extraneous to the intent of the bill, usually quite unrelated and even alien, and they do not stop for review and approval before passing into the realm of law. This is not right; we propose to eliminate such a practice.

But in including a salary proposal in a bill which is designed to improve the machinery of Congress, we are doing much the same thing. The salary question is extraneous; it is alien to the proper intent of the bill. We would condone, and, it might be noted, to our own advantage, an abuse of legislative purpose which at the same time we propose to eliminate. This is a weakening inconsistency. Let the question of salary pass or fail on its own merits, debated and voted under open scrutiny.

But it is argued that such a proposal is at one with the intent of the bill, namely to improve the functioning of Congress, since a salary increase would substantially improve the caliber of the membership. I regard this as a gratuitous assumption. I believe that the salary received by Members of Congress is of slight weight in determining its membership. Men are elected to Congress on the support of the voters of the Nation because their record of public service has been meritorious or their qualifications are outstanding. Men seek election to Congress because they are devoted to or fascinated by public service, enjoy its responsibilities, desire the prestige and accolades that accompany it, are resolved to participate in forming the policy of the Nation and for similar reasons. It is significant in this respect to note that most Members seeks reelection year after year, that comparatively few resign, except in wartime, to work elsewhere in public service, and salary is rarely the decisive factor. No, membership in Congress appeals to most of us quite apart from the salary, which obviously does not enrich us, and membership in Congress is determined by a popular vote which imposes a challenging demand on candidates. I am quite sure that a readjustment in our salary would scarcely affect the calibre of Congress. The opposite assertion is gratuitous.

Charles A. Beard, the eminent historian, has been one, and among the most astute, who has pointed out that our deficiencies lie in the system, not the men. He, while making cogent observations on present structural limitations pertinent to our study, has rebuked the oft-expressed opinion that the calibre of Congress has seriously declined. He says:

> It is possible to pick out of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for the past 10 years addresses (not orations) which for breadth of knowledge, technical skill, analytical argument, close reasoning, and dignified presentation compare favorably with similar utterances made in the preceding century by the so-called great orators.

The improvements proposed by the reorganization bill in the structure of Congress are not only long overdue but they are so thorough and far-reaching that they will modernize Congress. They are not only urgently needed but they promise extremely beneficial results. The study which produced them was thorough. The spirit that proposed them was ambitious. The consensus of opinion that aided in formulating them was of the highest order. They are an integrated series, with the single exception of this salary proposal. While I believe that it would be a mistake to retain this extraneous provision, I will strongly protest against any attempt to reduce the essential body of proposals to segments. It is unfortunate that the salary question has been included; it does not belong. But all else is integral to the purpose and plan, vital to its intent, essential for its efficacy.

The committee has proposed changes which would seek to secure a firm follow-through between legislative decision and executive action, which would not only determine broad policies clearly and decisively but would also review the effectiveness of the policy and the subsequent administration of the policy. Most important of these is a simplified system of standing committees corresponding with the major areas of public policy and public administration. First, the correlation of the committee systems of the two Chambers with each other would facilitate joint action on specific measures by means of joint hearings. And the coordination of the congressional committee system with the pattern of the administrative branch of the National Government would, as the report states:

> Improve the performance by Congress of its legislative and supervisory functions, provide direct channels of communication between the two branches, promote more harmonious and unified action in the development of public policies, and go a long way to bridge the gap between the legislative and executive branches of the Government.

The proposed committee realinement would certainly increase committee efficiency, of prime importance since committee work is the center and nucleus of our system. It is provided, for example, that the Appropriations and Ways and Means Committees of the House shall confer and by such conference guarantee a balance between money obtained in revenue and money expended. The right and left hands of our monetary policy would not only know what the other was doing, but would work together. And working together the committees could exercise more effective insight into administrative policy, as is variously provided. No longer will the tremendous sums of money we appropriate vanish into the great morass of Federal agencies and Government corporations to be freely employed and easily interchanged. We will now appropriate funds knowing what the Federal income will be, and instructing all agencies specifically in the expenditure of those sums. And the committee has further provided against supplemental appropriations by requiring the President to take specific steps to assure that allotted funds are not exceeded.

Of great interest to all of us is the reduction in the number of standing committees and the elimination of special committees. We have all had the experience of being members of separate committees which were meeting at the same time. One of the chief difficulties of the special committee was this very conflict of demands on our time. Not infrequently I was unable to hear the testimony of authorities of special note because of the meetings of the Judiciary Committee of which I serve. The reduction in the number of committees, the specific assignments of committee responsibility and province, and the provision for joint hearings of both the Senate and the House on important matters are all designed to speed up and strengthen our system while minimizing wasted time and confusion, overlapping, and conflict of claim.

Mr. Chairman, as regularly as the clock strikes the hour, and enforced by that striking, every Member is reminded every day of two facts, as closely allied as the hands of the clock. The first is that the demands on his time are incessant and even oppressive, and that his sources of information and assistance inadequate. In the Seventy-seventh Congress a total of 10,793 bills were introduced and 541 joint resolutions. Out of this flood Congress passed 1,078 House bills and 476 Senate bills. Again in the second session of the Seventy-eighth Congress 953 bills and resolutions were passed, of which only 86 were subject to any real discussion. The other 867 were passed by voice vote or without objection. But it is not only in this flood of legislation that we are overwhelmed. I have mentioned the demands of committee work; yet we know too well that this is only part of the demand. The tremendous detail of office work, which we are unwilling to stint, the public appearances, the special investigations, the trips to or consultations with officers of the Federal agencies, meeting constituents, radio appearances, and so forth—the fact is, as we know well, that we are trying to do a great deal too many things which we regard as our responsibility without being able to do any of them as well as we would like or are able to do.

Furthermore we have hard-working, but greatly overburdened, assistants whose extraordinary efforts cannot keep pace with the demands placed on them. We have five legal counsels trying to assist in drafting legislation not only for 435 Members but for the House committees as well. The committees are forced to do their work with staffs that are but a fraction of corresponding staffs in the executive branch. We must rely on the very representatives of the Federal agencies for information when we are trying to exercise our supervision of their carrying out of the policy we have prescribed. These and many more inadequacies in our modus operandi have been cited insistently as draw-backs to our efficient operation.

So comprehensive are the many changes proposed, so significant is each to our policy and procedure, and so worthy is each of special note that it is impossible here to attend to all. A quick review will, however, show us an impressive array, revolutionary yet fitting. Witness. Improved fiscal procedure. Private bill banned; the claims deferred to the courts. Definite adjournment provided annually. Improved committee procedure. Special committees banned, and committee jurisdiction better defined. Conference rules are defined to prevent the introduction of provisions not approved by either House. Standing committees will exercise continuous surveillance of the execution by the administrative agencies concerned of laws within the jurisdiction of respective committees. Committee hearings will be preserved. More adequate provision made for information on the legislative day. Transfer of appropriations is prohibited to executive departments and units therein, and administrative management analysis are called for from the Comptroller General on efficient and economic administration and expenditure of public funds. The CONGRESSIONAL RECORD to be improved. Committees on the Library and Printing reorganized. Lobbying regulated. This requires a word without curtailing the rights of free speech, of freedom of the press and the right of petition, without applying to publishers of newspapers or other periodicals or limiting people who appear openly and frankly before committees of Congress, lobbying will be regulated by provisions which include detailed account of contributions, filed statements and registration with specific penalties for violations.

Here are a few of the numerous wise and progressive provisions that make the reorganization bill the epoch-making legislative proposal that it is.

Charles A. Beard, in an article entitled "In Defense of Congress," remarked:

> It has spent time, energy, and money investigating every conceivable subject of national concern, but it has never made a thorough inquiry into its own record, into its own weaknesses, and into need of raising its standing and competence as a principal branch of National Government.

That inquiry has now been made, a systematic, courageous, and comprehensive inquiry. We have an historic opportunity. We can effect a modernization of Congress by approving the most significant changes in its structure since its very first session. And simultaneously we can lessen our burden and heighten our accomplishments. We can restore our prestige and effectiveness. We can free our hands then to be able to grip the great issues of these crucial days. We can refute the thesis of the managerial revolution and maintain the instrument of representative government. We can restore the democratic process to government action.

The words of Walton H. Hamilton, professor of law, Yale Law School, in a New York Times article entitled "Blueprint for a Virile Congress" are pertinent:

> These proposals are addressed to a situation already overripe for reform. They all stand directly in the line of our great common tradition. They represent the very minimum of adjustment of our accepted political order to the conditions under which the Government must operate today. Administration is an adaptation of the ways of business to the state. And in a world in which the national economy is made up of huge corporate estates, the pressures toward Presidential rule are relentless. But lest the historical trend write its own ticket in an irresponsible Executive or an oligarchy of pluralistic agencies, the American system should be accorded another chance. So, let us restore to Congress, the institution tied up most closely with the liberties of the people, its vital role in the conduct of public affairs. For we are inventive; new techniques must serve ancient ends, and even if administration is here to stay, we need not sacrifice representative government.

I feel that I would be neglecting what almost constitutes a duty if I were to fail to speak my praise of the great efforts and accomplishments of Senator LA FOLLETTE and Congressman MONRONEY, chairman and vice chairman, respectively, of the joint committee to whose creative initiative, patient perseverance, and deep understanding we are indebted for these historic proposals. And we all must feel indebted to Mr. George B. Galloway, chairman of the Committee on Congress of the American Political Science Association, who served with remarkable vigilance and admirable devotion as staff director of the committee. From his profound knowledge of the National Legislature and the National Government and his penetrating, analytical insight came not only many of the concrete proposals, but the moving and sustaining spirit of our study.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield the remainder of the time, 7 minutes, to the gentleman from California [Mr. OUTLAND].

Mr. OUTLAND. Mr. Chairman, I join with those others who have spoken this afternoon in paying tribute to the chairman of the House part of the joint committee which has brought in this bill, the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MONRONEY], and to the other Members on both sides of the aisle who, in my judgment, have brought before us today one of the most important bills to come before the present Congress. It is not perfect. It has flaws. It does not go far enough in many respects, but if we are going to perform the duty that we as public officials should perform and do that job adequately, we are going to have to make a great many changes in congressional procedure.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] made a splendid presentation of the more important phases of that bill and there is no point in my duplicating them. I would say in passing, however, that the heart of this bill is the reorganization of the committee system. Whenever we start to make any change, somebody's toes get stepped on. Whenever we start to reduce the number of committees, there is going to be an automatic reduction in the number of committee chairmen. But I am sure we realize, Mr. Chairman, that committees are not ends in themselves. Committees are a means to an end, and that goal is the better performance of the job we have been sent here to do. If by a reduction of the number of committees and the consolidation of their functions we can perform a more effective job for the American people, then we should be glad to reduce the number of committees and glad to reduce the number of committee chairmen.

It is quite true that each committee will lose certain functions which it has had in the past. I am proud of the fact that I am a member of the great Committee on Banking and Currency of this House. I think our chairman is one of the most splendid men in this House. Our committee will lose some functions. So will other committees. But the loss of prestige on the part of any particular committee is not the main issue; the point is better over-all congressional functioning.

I may say in passing that it just might have been that if our committee had not had so many jobs on our hands this year, we could have turned out a report on the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill and gotten it through and obtained a vote on it at this session. But the tremendous load of work this particular committee has been carrying unfortunately has delayed hearings on this vital housing measure. If the other committees had not had so much on their hands they might have turned out legislation that is very important. So I think in the long run this consolidation of committees is an excellent thing.

Mr. HAYS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OUTLAND. I yield.

Mr. HAYS. I want to join my colleague from California in emphasizing this matter of surrendering committee functions. He would agree, would he not, that it is incumbent upon us to think not solely of one committee and its functions if we are to make this tremendously forward step in efficiency? I would call attention to the fact that under this set-up the Committee on Banking, of which both of us are members, loses some of its jurisdiction over foreign loans and agricultural loans. That we would surrender to the Agriculture Committee and the other to the Foreign Affairs Committee functions which we have been jealous of heretofore.

Mr. OUTLAND. I agree with the gentleman completely.

Mr. Chairman, there are two or three additional things I want to mention. One is the registration of lobbyists here in Washington. I do not care from what source an individual receives money or to whom he gives it, but if this Congress is to do its full duty to the American people it should make every individual who represents an outside organization state his income and his outgo. It is a worth-while provision. I hope it will be adopted.

Then, finally, there is a provision which I think is excellent, which sets a definite date for congressional adjournment. If we had had a definite date set for the adjournment of this House when we started this year we would not do so little work on Mondays and do so little work on Fridays, but we would be here 5 and 6 days a week and the work of the House would have been finished before today. It will be a very good thing to have Congress set a definite date for adjournment. Then it will be possible for us to return to our districts more often and keep more closely in touch with our people. Then it will be fair to the 48 States instead of just a few located near the seat of government.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Chairman, will the chairman comment on the provision that is made to consider legislation which might not be considered under present rules?

Mr. OUTLAND. Yes; I would like to, but I may say to the gentleman from West Virginia that my time is nearly up. I wanted to make two or three other points first. I will try and get to the gentleman's point before I conclude.

I said a few moments ago that in my judgment this bill did not go far enough. I would like to see restored on the floor of the House the provision for an administrative assistant for each Member of Congress. Why should there not be one? Are Members afraid to vote themselves that additional help if they need it to properly perform their duties? I was going to introduce such an amendment but I now understand that the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Mrs. WOODHOUSE] is going to introduce the amendment. I shall support it here on the floor.

May I say too that I hope joint committees of the House and Senate will be set up to expedite committee hearings; that measures will be taken to take out of the hands of congressional patronage appointment of men to both service academies. I can see no reason why it should be a congressional prerogative to appoint the future Army and Navy officers. It should be on a civil-service basis, on the basis of merit, alone, and upon no other basis.

I think also the appointment of postmasters should be based on merit and should not be retained in the hands of Congress.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OUTLAND. In just a moment. I have only a few minutes and I still have several points to bring out, if the gentleman will pardon me.

I would like to see eventually the provision reinstated in a measure of this nature which will provide for more joint sessions of the two Houses of Congress and for joint committees of the two Houses. One way in which we are going to expedite our work even more than is provided for in this measure is by seeing that committees which are considering the same legislation do not call the same man back to give exactly the same testimony before each one of them. It has come to my attention that in one instance a very important governmental official, one high in the ranks of government, had to come up here eight different times to give exactly the same testimony on the same subject matter before eight different committees. If we make some provision in our reorganization plans to correct that kind of situation I think we will be doing a great service to the country.

Mr. Chairman, I hope this bill is passed by a tremendous majority. I trust also that the splendid work begun by this joint committee this session will be continued in the Eightieth Congress. Only as we criticize and improve our own procedure will we be able to make the legislative branch of our Government achieve its full and rightful place in the American system of government.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired, all time has expired.

The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc.—

SHORT TITLE

That (a) this act, divided into titles and sections according to the following table of contents, may be cited as the "Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946":

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer a committee substitute in the nature of a committee print dated July 20, 1946, which is at the Clerk's desk. I offer that as a substitute for the Senate bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Substitute offered by Mr. MONRONEY: Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

SHORT TITLE

That (a) this act, divided into titles and sections according to the following table of contents, may be cited as the "Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946":

TABLE OF CONTENTS

TITLE I—CHANGES IN RULES OF SENATE AND HOUSE

Sec. 101. Rule-making power of the Senate and House.

Part 1—Standing rules of the Senate

Sec. 102. Standing committees of the Senate.
Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.
Committee on Appropriations.
Committee on Armed Services.
Committee on Banking and Currency.
Committee on Civil Service.
Committee on the District of Columbia.
Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.
Committee on Finance.
Committee on Foreign Relations.
Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.
Committee on the Judiciary.
Committee on Labor and Public Welfare.
Committee on Public Lands.
Committee on Public Works.
Committee on Rules and Administration.
Sec. 103. Appropriations.

Part 2—Rules of the House of Representatives

Sec. 121. Standing committees of the House of Representatives.
Committee on Agriculture
Committee on Appropriations.
Committee on Armed Services.
Committee on Banking and Currency.
Committee on Civil Service.
Committee on the District of Columbia.
Committee on Education and Labor.
Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.
Committee on Foreign Affairs.
Committee on House Administration.
Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.
Committee on the Judiciary.
Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.
Committee on Public Lands.
Committee on Public Works.
Committee on Rules.
Committee on Un-American Activities.
Committee on Veterans' Affairs.
Committee on Ways and Means.
Sec. 122. Delegates and Resident Commissioner.
Sec. 123. Reference of private claims bills.

Part 3—Provisions applicable to both Houses

Sec. 131. Private bills banned.
Sec. 132. Congressional adjournment.
Sec 133. Committee procedure.
Sec. 134. Committee powers.
Sec. 135. Conference rules on amendments in nature of substitute.
Sec. 136. Legislative oversight by standing committees.
Sec. 137. Decisions on questions of committee jurisdiction.
Sec. 138. Legislative Budget.
Sec. 139. Hearings and reports by Appropriations Committees.
Sec. 140. Records of Congress.
Sec. 141. Preservation of committee hearings.
Sec. 142. Effective date.

TITLE II—MISCELLANEOUS

Part 1—Statutory provisions relating to Congressional personnel

Sec. 201. Stenographic pool.
Sec. 202. Increase in compensation for certain congressional officers.
Sec. 203. Committee staffs.
Sec. 204. Legislative Reference Service.
Sec. 205. Office of the Legislative Counsel.
Sec. 206. Studies by Comptroller General.
Sec. 207. Expenditure analyses by Comptroller General.
Sec. 208. Correction of Military and Naval Records.

Part 2—Statutory provisions relating to committees of Congress

Sec. 221. Improvement of CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.
Sec. 222. Joint Committee on Printing.
Sec. 223. Joint Committee on the Library.
Sec. 224. Transfer of functions.
Sec. 225. Joint Committee on the Economic Report.
Sec. 226. Economic Report of the President.

Part 3—Provisions relating to Capitol and pages

Sec. 241. Remodeling of caucus rooms and restaurants.
Sec. 242. Assignment of Capitol space.
Sec. 243. Senate and House pages.
Sec. 244. Effective date.

TITLE III—REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT

Sec. 301. Short title.
Sec. 302. Definitions.
Sec. 303. Detailed accounts of contributions.
Sec. 304. Receipts for contributions.
Sec. 305. Statements to be filed with Clerk of House.
Sec. 306. Statement preserved for 2 years.
Sec. 307. Persons to whom applicable.
Sec. 308. Registration with Secretary of the Senate and Clerk of the House.
Sec 309. Reports and statements to be made under oath.
Sec. 310. Penalties.
Sec. 311. Exemption.

TITLE IV—FEDERAL TORT CLAIMS ACT

Part 1—Short title and definitions

Sec. 401. Short title.
Sec. 402. Definitions.

Part 2—Administrative adjustment of tort claims against the United States

Sec. 403. Claims of $1,000 or less.
Sec. 404. Reports.

Part 3—Suits on tort claims against the United States

Sec. 410. Jurisdiction.
Sec. 411. Procedure.
Sec. 412. Review.
Sec. 413. Compromise.

Part 4—Provisions common to part 2 and part 3

Sec. 420. One year statute of limitations.
Sec. 421. Exceptions.
Sec. 422. Attorneys' fees.
Sec. 423. Exclusiveness of remedy.
Sec. 424. Certain statutes inapplicable.

TITLE V—GENERAL BRIDGE ACT

Sec. 501. Short title.
Sec. 502. Consent of Congress.
Sec. 503. Tolls.
Sec. 504. Acquisition by public agencies.
Sec. 505. Statements of cost.
Sec. 506. Sinking fund.
Sec. 507. Applicability of title.
Sec. 508. International bridges.
Sec. 509. Eminent domain.
Sec. 510. Penalties.
Sec. 511. Rights reserved.

TITLE VI—COMPENSATION AND RETIREMENT PAY OF MEMBERS OF CONGRESS

Sec. 601. Compensation of Members of Congress.

Sec. 602. Retirement pay of Members of Congress.

Mr. MONRONEY (interrupting reading of amendment). Mr. Chairman, I ask that the reading of the substitute over to line 1, page 4, be dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEPARABILITY CLAUSE

(b) If any provision of this act or the application thereof to any person or circumstances is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of the act and of the application of such provision to other persons and circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

The CHAIRMAN. Permit the Chair to say that this substitute is now being read as an original bill subject to amendment. It will be read section by section.

Mr. RIZLEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I am one of those who advocate and who believe that there are many things that need to be done for the purpose of improving congressional procedure and I want to congratulate the committee on the very effective and constructive work it has done on this bill. I am in full accord with all of the provisions of the bill insofar as they affect legislative procedures in the House. Of course, I accord to every Member of this Committee the same privilege and prerogatives that I hope they accord me.

I am against the retirement provision for elective officials not only for Members of Congress but of any other legislative body. I think it is wrong in principle. I do not believe it was ever contemplated that the legislative branches of government which must pass upon retirement laws and retirement benefits for ordinary civil-service employees and many others should ever be placed in the same category or should ever place themselves in the same category as those appointed officials or appointed employees who become a part of the working system of the Federal Government. It was intended by the founding fathers when they so wisely set up this system of government that the Congress itself would not be a professional Congress, if you please, but a citizens' Congress of independent individuals, not pensioners of the taxpayers, and if this Congress goes that far I believe that we destroy some of the very things we are attempting to cure.

I am one of those who believe that the Members of Congress should be paid an adequate salary and should be paid an adequate expense account for their actual necessary and legitimate expenses. There is no sound argument or reason why Members of Congress should be required to pay legitimate expenses incurred in conducting official business out of their salaries.

I know that very fine and sympathetic arguments can be made with respect to retirement benefits. I know there are many cases that come to our attention of Members of Congress of splendid citizens, who have given the best part of their lives in faithful and long service here in the House who are insecure in their declining years, but at the same time I do not think that because of those few cases we can afford, as Members of Congress, to place the Congress of the United States in the category of pensioners. It is not a matter, as I see it, of whether we have the courage to do something for ourselves. I voted for the expense account because I thought the Members of Congress were entitled to it. That is not the question in this bill, but it is a question whether or not the principles of retirement shall be applied to Members of Congress. That is the way I feel about it.

Certainly, we do not cripple the things that my distinguished friend, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] talked about by striking from the bill the retirement feature. I think he made a splendid argument in connection with the need for an improved fiscal policy for this Government, and the coordination that must be had between the Committee on Appropriations and the Committee on Ways and Means. We certainly do not weaken that provision or any other provision of the so-called streamlining of Congress by striking from this bill the provisions for retirement benefits. At the proper time I shall offer an amendment to strike out that language.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I rise to ask two questions of the vice chairman of the Committee on Reorganization, the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MONRONEY]. First, I ask this question: There is enumerated the jurisdiction of the various committees. For example, take the jurisdiction of the Committee on the Judiciary, as enumerated on page 36. I find that there are not mentioned certain subject matters over which the Committee on the Judiciary has always had jurisdiction; for instance, war powers, salary increases of Congressmen, Alien Property Custodian, prohibition, flags. What will be the rule if those subject matters are not specifically mentioned in this bill?

Mr. MONRONEY. I thank the gentleman for a very, very good question. It was the feeling of the Committee on Reorganization that it was a physical impossibility to spell out in complete detail every single possible jurisdictional matter that would be before a committee. We tried to erect this as a guidepost from the House precedents.

The feeling of the committee is—and I am sure it will be the feeling of the House—that unless otherwise specifically provided the existing precedents of the House will apply to committee jurisdictions.

Mr. CELLER. I thank the gentleman. I now ask this question: What about the question of seniority? For instance, the Committee on the Judiciary, of which I am the ranking Democratic member, assumes the duties and prerogatives of the Committee on Claims, the Committee on Patents, the Committee on Revision of the Laws, and the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. I presume that some Members of those committees will try to get membership on the Committee on the Judiciary. What will be their status in reference to seniority?

Mr. MONRONEY. I will reply to the gentleman that I cannot say. We do not change or interfere in any degree with existing practices in the House regarding committee assignments or the places which are assigned by the Committee on Ways and Means on our side and the Committee on Committees on the Republican side.

That is still left a matter for the two major parties to determine. The only place that that actually comes before the House is the existing House rule that the chairman of committees of the House shall be elected by the House, which is the existing rule of the House.

Mr. CELLER. It is not the gentleman's recommendation, then, that the seniority rule that now prevails should not be changed?

Mr. MONRONEY. We do nothing whatsoever about the seniority rule or try to regulate the places on the committees.

Mr. CELLER. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last 3 words, and ask unanimous consent to proceed for 10 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I feel that this question of section 138 should be brought out in the open and that we should discuss it from the standpoint of its merit and not from the standpoint of generalities. Section 138 creates the legislative budget. It is my desire and my hope that whatever comes out of this bill will help to make the Congress a better legislative body and will permit us to do things in a better way than we can now.

The first question is, is that legislative budget to be anything more than a pious gesture? What would happen at the present time? If we are going to have a legislative budget set up after the President's budget is sent in here approximately the middle of January, what would be the procedure? Either the joint committee of the Appropriations and Ways and Means Committees and the Senate Finance Committee and the Senate Committee on Appropriations, containing 104 members, can go ahead and go into the details through subcommittees or otherwise of the Budget estimates that are sent down here and establish a ceiling relating to each appropriation bill, after complete and thorough hearings, and that ceiling would have to go through that joint committee, or we can have a very cursory examination of the picture by that large committee and they can then present a resolution, if the thing is going to be any good it has to be after thorough hearings. We might just as well be honest with the people back home and these organizations that have been interested in this thing. What earthly use would the Bureau of the Budget's recommendations be if they did not over a period of 4 or 5 months before the Budget is presented to the Congress, hold hearings which are conducted by representatives of the Budget as to each particular department? They have a large number of these hearings running at the same time. If the legislative budget is to be of any value and is to have any integrity, it means 2 or 3 months' work. What does that mean? It means before the Appropriations Committee could go to work and put through its bills and get anywhere it would probably have to wait until that legislative budget was established. Under the amendment, that proposed by the chairman of the committee, the date at which the report would have to be made by that committee would be February 15. They have changed it from the way the proposed bill stood. Would that legislative budget then have to go through the House and the Senate? There is nothing said here as to whether it is proposed that that be done. We were not enlightened on that subject when our friends discussed the matter. I do not know.

In other words, it is a kind of a pig in a poke. We do not know where we are at in connection with it. If we were to wait until after that resolution could be considered by the House and Senate, we could not start the detailed hearings of the committees until then.

I yield to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE].

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I simply want to point out that the bill, of course, makes no requirement that the Congress shall adopt the report of the Budget.

Mr. TABER. No; that is true. It could make no such requirement. But I do not know what their program is or what idea they have in mind. I could get a little better idea of what might be done if I knew.

Let me look at another feature of this. Is this going to result in an omnibus appropriation bill? Is it going to be an omnibus appropriation bill where logrolling can be done? It was the idea of Martin Madden in charge of the Appropriations Committee very shortly after the Budget and Accounting Act was passed that no one should serve on one of the subcommittees if he had a special interest which could be promoted by such an arrangement. As a result of the way he laid out the procedure for the Committee on Appropriations, the committee has been able to approach that with men on the subcommittees who have no special interest to serve and has been able to cut large sums out of those bills. Whether we are to continue that practice or whether we are as a result of this operation to get an omnibus appropriation bill and have it put through by special interests as a result of logrolling is the question involved. All of these recommendations of the Budget must be considered by this 104-man committee and decided in that way. Is it going to be that kind of a budget or it is going to be a budget gotten up by members of the committee who do not represent special interests? I am interested in finding out something about it—as to what is proposed and how it could work. We have had nothing but generalities. If we are going to be delayed until the 1st of March or the middle of March or the 1st of April before we can start Appropriations Committee hearings—and that is the way it looks—I do not see how it is going to be possible ever to get these bills out and have them considered in time to be enacted into law before the end of the fiscal year and in time for them to take effect. I would like to see what these people have in mind. Of course, if it is nothing but a pious gesture and if it is to done in a slipshod way with ideas that these people have in their heads—ideas taken out of the air—that is one thing. But if we are going to have a thorough attempt to go through our Budget estimates which are sent down to us by the President, we must work on them just as soon as the Congress is organized, and that work must be done intensively or otherwise we are not going to accomplish any results. I am projecting these thoughts because I want to see the right thing done. I want to see it done because it is the right thing and not because a lot of people have been putting out propaganda or because people who do not understand it have suggested it.

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. Can the gentleman tell me how it is possible for any group to meet along about the 15th of February or the 1st of March and place a ceiling on appropriations without hearings having been held previously to determine what is necessary?

Mr. TABER. If you are going to have the job done intelligently, you must have hearings as a basis for it. If not, your work will be utterly useless.

Mr. ROBERTSON of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. ROBERTSON of Virginia. In the summer of 1945, when the Ways and Means Committee had before it a bill to repeal the excess-profits tax, did not the Secretary of the Treasury testify before that committee that the budget for the fiscal year 1947 would be approximately $25,000,000,000, and is it not a fact that it went up to $42,000,000,000?

Mr. TABER. I think it is. I remember when he went over there once and was $20,000,000 off on his estimate for the current year. I was asked to come before the committee and I gave my figures about 6 months before the end of the fiscal year, and I was within a billion or two of the total. But I do feel that this is a serious thing.

Now, look at this budget-ceiling proposition that they have in here. Suppose you put on a budget ceiling, and without having that ceiling allocated to different appropriation bills and different departments the Appropriations Committee should attempt to bring in bills. The first 8 or 10 bills that were brought in might be under the ceiling or they might wipe out the ceiling without getting anywhere at all.

Mr. ROBERTSON of Virginia. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. ROBERTSON of Virginia. Does not the gentleman realize the position in which the tax committee is placed if it proceeds on the assumption that you will have a budget of $25,000,000,000 and then make a tax cut, and then we find later on the appropriation bills have amounted to $45,000,000,000?

Mr. TABER. That is a terrible thing. I appreciate the necessity for a balanced budget. I have worked for that ever since I have been here. A great many times it was not effective. On the other hand, at times it has been effective.

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. I think if this committee met approximately the 15th of June and went over the work of the various subcommittees and all the discussions which had been held upon the floor, and then perhaps that committee could recomend to the Congress to slice the personnel throughout the Government by a certain percentage to bring it down to the proposed ceiling, that would be using a little common sense.

Mr. TABER. That might be a good suggestion. I can see how that might work.

Mr. GEARHART. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. GEARHART. I notice it is necessary for the new committee of 104 members to first give consideration to the Presidential Budget.

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. GEARHART. In order to properly analyze and understand the Presidential Budget, it must take this committee of 104 almost as long as it took the Bureau of the Budget to prepare it. Can the gentleman tell us how long it takes the Budget to be sent to us?

Mr. TABER. At least 4 months.

Mr. GEARHART. Then, this committee would have to do that and complete the Budget and have it before the House before the 15th of February.

Mr. TABER. They could not possibly do it short of 3 or 4 months.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. O'NEAL. The Bureau of the Budget met in June and is meeting again this month in the consideration of Budget items for 1948.

Mr. TABER. In other words, they are laying out a program where they will have over 6 months to work on the Budget.

Mr. O'NEAL. And in 30 days this committee expects to tell them where they are wrong.

Mr. TABER. Well, I want to see something done that will help. I want to see these specialists that are going to be provided here go to work and I want to see them have authority to do something, but I do not want to do something destructive.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. PHILLIPS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last four words.

Mr. Chairman, I hope I am not the only Member of this body who thinks that this is a very good section of the legislative program and who feels that, if it is properly considered, it will be thought to be workable. As one who has spent much time in the past quarter century with the very thing which is being discussed here, I would like at least to suggest that we translate this into simple language. Perhaps we can understand it better.

If you were preparing a household budget for yourself for the calendar year, you would first set up, from some knowledge on your part, the probable amount of money that you expected to have during that year. Then you would set up the groups of expenditures into which you expected to put your personal income for that year. You would not worry at the beginning of the year about the details of every group of expenditures, but you would divide your income under the general classifications. You would be very sure in your family, which no government ever is, that you have only so much money to spend, and you would have to keep within it. So here the proposal is to set up the amount of money the Government may properly spend in its financial situation, and then to realize that the Appropriations Committee and the Ways and Means Committee should work together, first to appropriate economically and within limits which do not exist at the present time, and then for the Ways and Means Committee to raise the money as it may safely be raised and still preserve safely our form of government. I think you will see that it will work, and if you will realize that at the present time there is little coordination between the subcommittees in the Committee on Appropriations you will see that anything of the kind would be an improvement over present methods. At the present time you have each subcommittee considering appropriations separately from the other appropriations..

I think the principal thing that must be understood is that in the first year of the application of this new procedure, there would be difficulty. No one here should deny it. It would be the first year, but in subsequent years the experience of the preceding years would tend to help the preparation of the new budget, and in the long run the taxpayers of the United States and the country as a whole would be infinitely benefited.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PHILLIPS. I yield.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. To carry the gentleman's analogy of a family budget a little further, if the family were setting up its budget and it appeared they might want to spend more money than they had immediately in sight, would the gentleman think they should immediately go out and try to borrow the money that would be necessary to meet the excess?

Mr. PHILLIPS. That is what the Government does not do and that it what I do not think it should do.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Nor I, but I am afraid that is what is proposed in paragraph (b) here. I cannot understand why in advance of maturing obligations Congress should adopt a resolution saying the public debt should be increased until there is an actual need for the cash. That is why I think (b) should be revised to accomplish the apparent objective.

Mr. PHILLIPS. That may be, but I think even if we left it in we would be trying to decide how much we want to spend, and then to consider the ability of the taxpayers to pay. Taxes have already gone beyond the historic 25 percent set down as a safe limit.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. And certainly I think there should be coordination between revenues and expenditures. That part of the bill I think aims at a most desirable objective; but I do not see why the Government should go out and increase the public debt in advance of actual cash needs for maturing obligations.

Mr. PHILLIPS. The gentleman makes a good point.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last three words.

Mr. Chairman, having been on the Appropriations Committee for many years and also having handled the legislative budget estimate and being tremendously interested in the reorganization of Congress, I have had some occasion to review the history of legislation of this character. Everything suggested now in this paragraph of the bill presented has been discussed by Members of Congress for 50 years. The proposals that are in this bill today on that subject were discussed on the floor of Congress at least 30 years ago and Congress during that period of time, having investigated the matter thoroughly, has found that such way of handling the business is not the scientific nor the best way.

On the question of saving money and handling appropriations, in my humble judgment, the most authoritative and most expert witnesses that you could possibly call into this picture would be the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER]. I know of no two men who have done more to help balance the budget or who are more sincerely interested in those things than the gentleman from Missouri and the gentleman from New York. They have lived with this thing. It has been their daily occupation for years. They know what has happened for many, many years, and they tell you without the slightest doubt in their minds that this provision is impractical, it is idealistic, it is wishful thinking, that it will not do a thing to better the situation. In fact, they tell you it will interfere with the proper handling of business on the floor of the House. I concur entirely with their expressions.

There is absolutely nothing constructive or practical in this provision, and anyone who will take the time to go into the matter can see why it is a futile gesture and the result of a futile gesture develops a lack of confidence next year or at some other time when nothing has been accomplished by it.

Mr. Chairman, these budgets come to us after a thorough study of from 4 to 6 months by 850 employees of the Bureau of the Budget. They have sat there and are sitting there today on the 1948 budget, examining every item. They bring it to us after cuts, the best that they can do under the circumstances. They bring it to us, and the Appropriations Committee divides this vast budget among subcommittees which sit down for months and try to cut and trim where it should be cut and trimmed. We do everything we can to save a dollar for the taxpayers. The result is that vast amounts of money are being saved.

Think of the ridiculousness of the proposition offered here. They are going to call the Ways and Means Committee in to help the Appropriations Committee on the proposition, and we are going over to the Ways and Means Committee and tell them how to do their taxing, what they should put in their revenue bills. Then the Senate is coming over here to tell us about our budget and we are going to tell them about theirs. The result will be confusion because under this bill as it stands today all of this vast and intelligent analysis that is so necessary will have to be done in 30 days under the bill. Mr. Chairman, it is preposterous.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky has expired.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for two additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Chairman, these estimates are worked on by the Bureau of the Budget with 850 employees, with their experts, trying to do a job, and then the Appropriations Committee works on them, to cut them intelligently; yet all of that is to be superseded by a 30-day study by this super committee made up of Ways and Means Committee of the House and the Appropriations Committee, together with the same two corresponding bodies in the Senate. In that 30 days they will tell you what you should appropriate.

Gentlemen, it is ridiculous, and it will bring nothing toward orderly and better Government.

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, I am not here to offer any crippling amendments or to make suggestions that would throw monkey wrenches into the works, but when I heard the last speech made by the gentleman who just preceded me, extolling the virtues of the Bureau of the Budget, and how hard they labored to save money for the taxpayers, I could not help thinking about the President's reorganization plans that this House defeated overwhelmingly. The gentleman who was in charge of the Bureau of the Budget, Mr. Smith, on that occasion, even though this House passed the bill providing for a 25 percent decrease in the cost of government, when asked regarding that decrease, said that it had not ever been considered.

I have great respect for the gentleman from Kentucky, and he is most convincing, and because he is so eloquent and convincing, I felt the need to rise on this occasion to point out the fact that the Bureau of the Budget is not so very much interested in saving money. Obviously they were not interested in saving money in the reorganization plans.

I personally feel that the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MONRONEY], who sponsored this legislation, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] are on the right track. We have been talking about improving our machinery, and now we have an opportunity to act. Frankly, the cost of government is going up all the time. I do not think so much of the economy job they are doing. I do not think the Bureau of the Budget is so wonderful. I am for this bill, and I am for the amendment suggested by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BROWN]. I think we are doing a good job for the country by voting up this resolution and voting for it unanimously. I trust the gentleman from Kentucky will change his mind as far as this particular feature is concerned.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BENDER. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. O'NEAL. If the gentleman is attacking the amendment that we offered, I wish he would stick to the amendment. As far as the bill is concerned, we are all for the bill.

Mr. BENDER. I am glad to hear that.

Mr. O'NEAL. If the gentleman had been on the floor he would have understood it.

Mr. BENDER. I have been on the floor all the while.

Mr. O'NEAL. But the gentleman directs his remarks against the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. BENDER. I would not make any argument against the gentleman from Kentucky, because I like the gentleman too well. He is a fine public servant. But I will say this about his statement regarding the Bureau of the Budget economy program. I do not share his view at all.

Mr. O'NEAL. I think the Congress has gotten into a very bad habit of attacking the Budget and giving no credit to many hard-working men down there who are trying to do their job as sincerely as the gentleman is trying to do his.

Mr. BENDER. Frankly I do give credit to them. I think they are a fine agency and I think there are many good men working there. I have no criticism of them except when you tell us how much money they saved and how anxious they are to save money, all I know is that the public debt is going up all the time, and obviously they are not saving any money.

Mr. O'NEAL. Let me say to the gentleman that if he will put it on the doorstep of Congress he will find the answer. It is not the Bureau of the Budget. In this very Congress we appropriated $3,000,000,000 over and above what the Budget sent up here, $50,000,000 for airports, $3,750,000,000 for a loan, $400,000,000 for housing and other vast amounts. The Budget cannot change it. They carry out what the gentleman and I vote for.

Mr. BENDER. But the Budget has made many recommendations that we revised downward, and we do it regularly, on every appropriation bill.

There are many pressing and difficult issues before the Nation today which demand our keenest thinking. Virtually every one of these problems requires legislative analysis and action. Yet Congress finds itself in the position of seeking to battle a multitude of complex economic, social, and political difficulties with archaic legislative weapons. Our procedure has proven itself painfully slow, cumbersome, and expensive.

A Congress which is forever prodding the Executive to cut down on unnecessary expenditures cannot itself sanction the wastefulness of duplicating committees, hearings, and functions. Nor is there any justification in these days for the expensive double employment of experts by the executive branch of our Government and by special congressional committees.

Congress will do well to take action at once on the proposal now pending to modernize its functions.

The Nation's pressing problems will be better solved and more adequately considered if this congressional reorganization takes place. Under the terms of the bill now before us, each one of the committees remaining in existence would have a staff of full-time experts keeping its membership informed and working in close contact with executive agencies carrying out the legislative intent of Congress in its field. A joint committee of Senate and House to assure effective cooperation would be set up. Another joint committee representing the majority and minority parties in Congress would be created. Still a third joint committee would become a legislative-executive council.

The need for change in our legislative procedure is apparent to every citizen who follows the daily news. Duplication of investigations, long delays in considering legislation, the ease with which issues distasteful to a few individuals can be effectively shelved are all too evident in Washington.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, section 138, the legislative budget, is something I have been wishing would come before the House of Representatives for a long, long, long time. I tried many times to get the Appropriations Committee and the Ways and Means Committee to get together and determine how much money the Congress was going to have to spend for a session of Congress, and then figure out just how they were going to raise the money they wanted to spend. By that means, a joint committee of those committees of the House and similar committees of the Senate would determine just what our budget would be, and then we would try to hew to the line of a balanced budget.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. Does not this section provide the answer to the gentleman's famous question, "Where are we going to get the money?"

Mr. RICH. Yes; it provides the answer to the mechanics of how we are going to get the money. It does not provide the money, exactly.

The situation is this. Let us take the home as an example. In any home the father and mother know what the earning power of the home is. Then from that they know just exactly what they can spend in that home. If they spend more than they take in, when they have to go in debt for it they know that it is a burden on the family in future days to get rid of that debt. The only way to get rid of it is to pay it off. That is the only honest and honorable thing to do, to pay it off.

In operating its business the directors of a corporation get together and say, "We are going to do this and we are going to make additions or improvements" and they figure the cost. They know it will cost so much money. But before they determine that they are going to spend that money they know exactly where they are going to get every dollar of it. They do not obligate themselves for hundreds of thousands of dollars when they do not know where it is coming from. They make arrangements with the banks or somebody else to finance them, and then they know how much they have to make from day to day to pay that debt off.

For 14 years I have been very much dissatisfied with the way we have been squandering, unintelligently, the money of the taxpayers of this country, and I say we have been squandering it, and I say it advisedly. Look at our financial statement and it will reveal its terribly terrible condition to you. We have not used business procedure or business methods in Congress in our financing the Federal Government. If we now adopt section 138 and carry out its provisions, as I hope will be the case, I believe we will be able to do something that will eventually cause us to have a Budget we can balance. If we do not do that, our Government is hopelessly lost, because our indebtedness of $268,000,000,000 now certainly is an amount that ought to make every one of you shudder. Each one of you owes $2,000 of that debt, and every man, woman, and child in your district owes the sum of $2,000. A family of five owes $10,000 of that debt of this country, and they have to pay it. It is for this reason if for no other reason that we ought to adopt section 138. Also we should not vote any increased salaries to Members at this itme, the country is not in condition to accept the increase and they cannot afford to pay it. You must cut down the expenses of government and show the taxpayers that the majority party are worthy of their hire. The stockholders of a corporation would not elect directors that would wreck the corporation and put it into bankruptcy if they knew it. Do you think they would? No; they would vote them out. I say to you, watch out if your stockholders do not do likewise.

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I have been privileged to be a member of the Committee on Appropriations for a number of years and have tried in the performance of my duties on that committee to give everything I possess in the way of energy, talent, and ability. I want to place myself four-square with the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN]. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] has today given to the House of Representatives a challenge. So far as I am concerned as a member of the Committee on Appropriations, I endorse what he has said 100 percent. I know the House of Representatives is not going to turn its back upon the provisions in this bill which the sponsors of the bill say, and the distinguished Senator from my own State of Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] says, are the very guts of this bill. Now, let us see what they are arguing about. They say, "Oh, nothing is going to happen if you set up this great superduper committee and if you bring the representatives of the Committee on Ways and Means and the Committee on Appropriations of the House together with the representatives of the Finance Committee and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate in a joint meeting to take a look at this budget which the President submits at the beginning of each session." Why not? I ask you. Why should they not take a look? Why should they not examine that budget? Why should they not raise the question as to whether or not it is possible to adopt a legislative budget—a legislative mark, if you please—that the committees of Congress may shoot at in an attempt to balance the budget? The budget that the President will submit in January 1947 is in process of being prepared right now. The chances are that the figures contained in that budget will be 6 months old when they are submitted on the 3d of January. Why should not the Congress, through this committee, have up-to-the-minute estimates of the Treasury Department as to the revenues? Why should not they have the up-to-the-minute figures of these departments submitted so that we can have an up-to-the-minute legislative budget? Perhaps it may interfere somewhat with this Subcommittee on Deficiency Appropriations that has already reported out 3 deficiency bills involving billions of dollars which never were considered by any of the subcommittees of Congress charged with appropriating for the items contained in those deficiency appropriation bills. So far as I am concerned, I am willing to take this step in the direction of an effort to secure a balanced budget. Despite the things that my friend from New York has said and despite the argument made by my friend the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. O'NEAL] I have not heard one sound argument adduced which to me is a compelling argument against the adoption of the provisions of this reorganization bill which will give this joint committee an opportunity to go over the Presidential budget to try to set up an over-all budget, if you please, that will be up to date on the basis of up-to-date financial estimates from the Treasury Department and set a ceiling that the subcommittees of the Committee on Appropriations can shoot at.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has expired.

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for two additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Chairman, there is nothing in this proposal that stops the subcommittees from going to work. They will have the Presidential budget before them and there is nothing to stop them from going ahead with their hearings.

I want to tell you, if you sat in these hearings, despite all this breast beating year after year down here, the whole situation of appropriating money, as I have experienced it, is "by guess and by God." That is about what it amounts to. I think it is about time that we began to take some steps in the direction of having a more scientific approach to this matter of budget making and the matter of appropriating the public's money. It is because I have such a sincere conviction in that regard that I, as one member of the Appropriations Committee who has spoken on this question many times before, want to endorse to the Congress of the United States the sentiments so ably and magnificently expressed by the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN].

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has again expired.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last three words.

Mr. Chairman, there are many features of this bill which I think are important. The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] and the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MONRONEY] and their committee have worked long and hard in preparing a measure reorganizing the activities of Congress. Practically all of us are in sympathy with their views, even though some points may be controversial. But, because it is a good bill, because it will do the job and help improve congressional procedures, there is no reason why some other controversial features should be introduced at this time. In other words, features which might not be adopted if they independently came before the House.

It was only a few months ago that this House had the privilege of voting directly on the question of pensions for Congressmen. The bill was sent back to committee. The House refused to take any action whatsoever regarding it. Previously that question has been before the Congress and has been discussed and turned down. Yet, because this is an important bill and because it is a step in the right direction, even though it is not complete in all particulars, again we have this question of congressional pensions inserted. I happened to be among those who opposed congressional pensions during many Congresses and I continue to oppose them.

Another is the provision for the increase of salaries of Senators and Representatives. There is a way of increasing the salaries of Members of Congress if that should be wise to do so, and that is to bring a bill out of the proper legislative committee, let it receive favorable consideration in the Committee of the Whole, and then a vote by the House, on a yea and nay vote. That is the way to increase salaries and do it fairly and squarely. There is no reason why that particular salary provision should be put into this bill. There is nothing in the procedures of Congress that depends upon the salaries that Members receive. Unless those two features are stricken out, notwithstanding that I favor the purposes of this bill, I shall not vote for it.

Only yesterday the House passed the so-called social-security bill. There are some 60,000 pensioners in the State of Wisconsin depending more or less upon Federal aid for social security in the small amount allotted to them. Such old-age assistance amounts to about $30 a month, half payable from Federal aid and the rest by the State and county.

Under the so-called social-security bill passed by the House, yesterday, the old-age pensioners, blind persons, and those children under pension in the State of Wisconsin will receive an additional $640,000 per year as Federal aid. That will be for the 46,000 pensioners drawing old-age assistance and about 14,000 more on the pension lists of the blind and children's aid. The increase of Federal aid for them will probably amount to not to exceed $20 per year for every pensioner on the lists. Certainly if there is any reason why salaries should be increased in Congress, or why there should be a wage increase everywhere else, there is every reason in the world why these people, two million and a quarter of them in our country should receive a more reasonable increase in their assistance payments.

Unless amendments are adopted to strike out these, the provision for congressional pension and pay increases, which I do not think are properly in this bill, I shall be compelled to vote against it even though I am heartily in favor of the general purposes of the measure.

The Clerk read as follows:

TITLE I—CHANGES IN RULES OF SENATE AND HOUSE

RULE-MAKING POWER OF THE SENATE AND HOUSE

SEC. 101. The following sections of this title are enacted by the Congress:

(a) As an exercise of the rule-making power of the Senate and the House of Representatives, respectively, and as such they shall be considered as part of the rules of each House, respectively, or of that House to which they specifically apply; and such rules shall supersede other rules only to the extent that they are inconsistent therewith; and

(b) With full recognition of the constitutional right of either House to change such rules (so far as relating to the procedure in such House) at any time, in the same manner and to the same extent as in the case of any other rule of such House.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the portions of the bill from line 12, page 5, to line 13, page 24, be considered as read and printed in the RECORD. That portion of the bill deals exclusively with the rules of the Senate over which the House exercises no real jurisdiction, and it would expedite consideration of the bill to treat it in this manner.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

(The portion of the bill referred to follows:)

PART 1—STANDING RULES OF THE SENATE

Standing committees of the Senate

SEC. 102. Rule XXV of the Standing Rules of the Senate is amended to read as follows:

"RULE XXV

"Standing committees

"(1) The following standing committees shall be appointed at the commencement of each Congress, with leave to report by bill or otherwise:

"(a) Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Agriculture generally.

"2. Inspection of livestock and meat products.

"3. Animal industry and diseases of animals.

"4. Adulteration of seeds, insect pests, and protection of birds and animals in forest reserves.

"5. Agricultural colleges and experiment stations.

"6. Forestry in general, and forest reserves other than those created from the public domain.

"7. Agricultural economics and research.

"8. Agricultural and industrial chemistry.

"9. Dairy industry.

"10. Entomology and plant quarantine.

"11. Human nutrition and home economics.

"12. Plant industry, soils, and agricultural engineering.

"13. Agricultural educational extension services.

"14. Extension of farm credit and farm security.

"15. Rural electrification.

"16. Agricultural production and marketing and stabilization of prices of agricultural products.

"17. Crop insurance and soil conservation.

"(b) Committee on Appropriations, to consist of 21 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Appropriation of the revenue for the support of the Government.

"(c) Committee on Armed Services, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Common defense generally.

"2. The War Department and the Military Establishment generally.

"3. The Navy Department and the Naval Establishment generally.

"4. Soldiers' and sailors' homes.

"5. Pay, promotion, retirement, and other benefits and privileges of members of the armed forces.

"6. Selective service.

"7. Size and composition of the Army and Navy.

"8. Forts, arsenals, military reservations, and navy yards.

"9. Ammunition depots.

"10. Maintenance and operation of the Panama Canal, including the administration, sanitation, and government of the Canal Zone.

"11. Conservation, development, and use of naval petroleum and oil-shale reserves.

"12. Strategic and critical materials necessary for the common defense.

"(d) Committee on Banking and Currency, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Banking and currency generally.

"2. Financial aid to commerce and industry, other than matters relating to such aid which are specifically assigned to other committees under this rule.

"3. Deposit insurance.

"4. Public and private housing.

"5. Federal Reserve System.

"6. Gold and silver, including the coinage thereof.

"7. Issuance of notes and redemption thereof.

"8. Valuation and revaluation of the dollar.

"9. Control of prices of commodities, rents, or services.

"(e) Committee on Civil Service, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. The Federal civil service generally.

"2. The status of officers and employees of the United States, including their compensation, classification, and retirement.

"3. The postal service generally, including the railway mail service, and measures relating to ocean mail and pneumatic-tube service, but excluding post roads.

"4. Postal-savings banks.

"5. Census and the collection of statistics generally.

"6. The National Archives.

"(f) Committee on the District of Columbia, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. All measures relating to the municipal affairs of the District of Columbia in general, other than appropriations therefor, including—

"2. Public health and safety; sanitation, and quarantine regulations.

"3. Regulation of sale of intoxicating liquors.

"4. Adulteration of food and drugs.

"5. Taxes and tax sales.

"6. Insurance, executors, administrators, wills, and divorce.

"7. Municipal and juvenile courts.

"8. Incorporation and organization of societies.

"9. Municipal code and amendments to the criminal and corporation laws.

"(g) (1) Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"(A) Budget and accounting measures, other than appropriations.

"(B) Reorganizations in the executive branch of the Government.

"(2) Such committee shall have the duty of—

"(A) receiving and examining reports of the Comptroller General of the United States and of submitting such recommendations to the Senate as it deems necessary or desirable in connection with the subject matter of such reports;

"(B) studying the operation of Government activities at all levels with a view to determining its economy and efficiency;

"(C) evaluating the effects of laws enacted to reorganize the legislative and executive branches of the Government;

"(D) studying intergovernmental relationships between the United States and the States and municipalities, and between the United States and international organizations of which the United States is a member.

"(h) Committee on Finance, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Revenue measures generally.

"2. The bonded debt of the United States.

"3. The deposit of public moneys.

"4. Customs, collection districts, and ports of entry and delivery.

"5. Reciprocal trade agreements.

"6. Transportation of dutiable goods.

"7. Revenue measures relating to the insular possessions.

"8. Tariffs and import quotas, and matters related thereto.

"9. National social security.

"10. Veterans' measures generally.

"11. Pensions of all the wars of the United States, general and special.

"12. Life insurance issued by the Government on account of service in the armed forces.

"13. Compensation of veterans.

"(i) Committee on Foreign Relations, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Relations of the United States with foreign nations generally.

"2. Treaties.

"3. Establishment of boundary lines between the United States and foreign nations.

"4. Protection of American citizens abroad and expatriation.

"5. Neutrality.

"6. International conferences and congresses.

"7. The American National Red Cross.

"8. Intervention abroad and declarations of war.

"9. Measures relating to the diplomatic service.

"10. Acquisition of land and buildings for embassies and legations in foreign countries.

"11. Measures to foster commercial intercourse with foreign nations and to safeguard American business interests abroad.

"12. United Nations Organization and international financial and monetary organizations.

"13. Foreign loans.

"(j) Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Interstate and foreign commerce generally.

"2. Regulation of interstate railroads, busses, trucks, and pipe lines.

"3. Communication by telephone, telegraph, radio, and television.

"4. Civil aeronautics.

"5. Merchant marine generally.

"6. Registering and licensing of vessels and small boats.

"7. Navigation and the laws relating thereto, including pilotage.

"8. Rules and international arrangements to prevent collisions at sea.

"9. Merchant marine officers and seamen.

"10. Measures relating to the regulation of common carriers by water and to the inspection of merchant marine vessels, lights and signals, life-saving equipment, and fire protection on such vessels.

"11. Coast and Geodetic Survey.

"12. The Coast Guard, including life-saving service, lighthouses, lightships, and ocean derelicts.

"13. The United States Coast Guard and Merchant Marine Academies.

"14. Weather Bureau.

"15. Except as provided in paragraph (c), the Panama Canal and interoceanic canals generally.

"16. Inland waterways.

"17. Fisheries and wildlife, including research, restoration, refuges, and conservation.

"18. Bureau of Standards including standardization of weights and measures and the metric system.

"(k) Committee on the Judiciary, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Judicial proceedings, civil and criminal, generally.

"2. Constitutional amendments.

"3. Federal courts and judges.

"4. Local courts in the Territories and possessions.

"5. Revision and codification of the statutes of the United States.

"6. National penitentiaries.

"7. Protection of trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies.

"8. Holidays and celebrations.

"9. Bankruptcy, mutiny, espionage, and counterfeiting.

"10. State and Territorial boundary lines.

"11. Meetings of Congress, attendance of Members, and their acceptance of incompatible offices.

"12. Civil liberties.

"13. Patents, copyrights, and trade-marks.

"14. Patent Office.

"15. Immigration and naturalization.

"16. Apportionment of Representatives.

"17. Measures relating to claims against the United States.

"18. Interstate compacts generally.

"(l) Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Measures relating to education, labor, or public welfare generally.

"2. Mediation and arbitration of labor disputes.

"3. Wages and hours of labor.

"4. Convict labor and the entry of goods made by convicts into interstate commerce.

"5. Regulation or prevention of importation of foreign laborers under contract.

"6. Child labor.

"7. Labor statistics.

"8. Labor standards.

"9. School-lunch program.

"10. Vocational rehabilitation.

"11. Railroad labor and railroad retirement and unemployment, except revenue measures relating thereto.

"12. United States Employees Compensation Commission.

"13. Columbia Institution for the Deaf, Dumb, and Blind; Howard University; Freedman's Hospital; and Saint Elizabeths Hospital.

"14. Public health and quarantine.

"15. Welfare of miners.

"16. Vocational rehabilitation and education of veterans.

"17. Veterans' hospitals, medical care and treatment of veterans.

"18. Soldiers' and sailors' civil relief.

"19. Readjustment of servicemen to civil life.

"(m) Committee on Public Lands, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Public lands generally, including entry, easements, and grazing thereon.

"2. Mineral resources of the public lands.

"3. Forfeiture of land grants and alien ownership, including alien ownership of mineral lands.

"4. Forest reserves and national parks created from the public domain.

"5. Military parks and battlefields, and national cemeteries.

"6. Preservation of prehistoric ruins and objects of interest on the public domain.

"7. Measures relating generally to Hawaii, Alaska, and the insular possessions of the United States, except those affecting their revenue and appropriations.

"8. Irrigation and reclamation, including water supply for reclamation projects, and easements of public lands for irrigation projects.

"9. Interstate compacts relating to apportionment of waters for irrigation purposes.

"10. Mining interests generally.

"11. Mineral land laws and claims and entries thereunder.

"12. Geological survey.

"13. Mining schools and experimental stations.

"14. Petroleum conservation and conservation of the radium supply in the United States.

"15. Relations of the United States with the Indians and the Indian tribes.

"16. Measures relating to the care, education, and management of Indians, including the care and allotment of Indian lands and general and special measures relating to claims which are paid out of Indian funds.

"(n) Committee on Public Works, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Flood control and improvement of rivers and harbors.

"2. Public works for the benefit of navigation, and bridges and dams (other than international bridges and dams).

"3. Water power.

"4. Oil and other pollution of navigable waters.

"5. Public buildings and occupied or improved grounds of the United States generally.

"6. Measures relating to the purchase of sites and construction of post offices, customhouses, Federal courthouses, and Government buildings within the District of Columbia.

"7. Measures relating to the Capitol building and the Senate and House Office Buildings.

"8. Measures relating to the construction or reconstruction, maintenance, and care of the buildings and grounds of the Botanic Gardens, the Library of Congress, and the Smithsonian Institution.

"9. Public reservations and parks within the District of Columbia, including Rock Creek Park and the Zoological Park.

"10. Measures relating to the construction or maintenance of roads and post roads.

"(o) (1) Committee on Rules and Administration, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"(A) Matters relating to the payment of money out of the contingent fund of the Senate or creating a charge upon the same; except that any resolution relating to substantive matter within the jurisdiction of any other standing committee of the Senate shall be first referred to such committee.

"(B) Except as provided in paraprag (n) 8, matters relating to the Library of Congress and the Senate Library; statuary and pictures; acceptance or purchase of works of art for the Capitol; the Botanic Gardens; management of the Library of Congress; purchase of books and manuscripts; erection of monuments to the memory of individuals.

"(C) Except as provided in paragraph (n) 8, matters relating to the Smithsonian Institution and the incorporation of similar institutions.

"(D) Matters relating to the election of the President, Vice President, or Members of Congress; corrupt practices; contested elections; credentials and qualifications; Federal elections generally; Presidential succession.

"(E) Matters relating to parliamentary rules; floor and gallery rules; Senate Restaurant; administration of the Senate Office Building and of the Senate wing of the Capitol; assignment of office space; and services to the Senate.

"(F) Matters relating to printing and correction of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

"(2) Such committee shall also have the duty of examining all bills, amendments, and joint resolutions after passage by the Senate; and in cooperation with the Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives, of examining all bills and joint resolutions which shall have passed both Houses, to see that the same are correctly enrolled; and when signed by the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate, shall forthwith present the same, when they shall have originated in the Senate, to the President of the United States in person, and report the fact and date of such presentation to the Senate. Such committee shall also have the duty of assigning office space in the Senate wing of the Capitol and in the Senate Office Building.

"(2) Each standing committee shall continue and have the power to act until their successors are appointed.

"(3) Each standing committee is authorized to fix the number of its members (but not less than one-third of its entire membership) who shall constitute a quorum thereof for the transaction of such business as may be considered by said committee, subject to the provisions of section 133 (d) of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946.

"(4) Each Senator shall serve on two standing committees and no more; except that Senators of the majority party who are members of the Committee on the District of Columbia or of the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments may serve on three standing committees and no more."

Appropriations

SEC. 103. Rule XVI of the Standing Rules of the Senate is amended to read as follows:

"RULE XVI

"Amendments to appropriation bills

"1. All general appropriation bills shall be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and no amendments shall be received to any general appropriation bill the effect of which will be to increase an appropriation already contained in the bill, or to add a new item of appropriation, unless it be made to carry out the provisions of some existing law, or treaty stipulation, or act, or resolution previously passed by the Senate during that session; or unless the same be moved by direction of a standing or select committee of the Senate, or proposed in pursuance of an estimate submitted in accordance with law.

"2. The Committee on Appropriations shall not report an appropriation bill containing amendments proposing new or general legislation or any restriction on the expenditure of the funds appropriated which proposes a limitation not authorized by law if such restriction is to take effect or cease to be effective upon the happening of a contingency, and if an appropriation bill is reported to the Senate containing amendments proposing new or general legislation or any such restriction, a point of order may be made against the bill, and if the point is sustained, the bill shall be recommitted to the Committee on Appropriations.

"3. All amendments to general appropriation bills moved by direction of a standing or select committee of the Senate, proposing to increase an appropriation already contained in the bill, or to add new items of appropriation, shall, at least 1 day before they are considered, be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and when actually proposed to the bill no amendment proposing to increase the amount stated in such amendment shall be received; in like manner, amendments proposing new items of appropriation to river and harbor bills, establishing post roads, or proposing new post roads, shall, before being considered, be referred to the Committee on Public Works.

"4. No amendment which proposes general legislation shall be received to any general appropriation bill, nor shall any amendment not germane or relevant to the subject matter contained in the bill be received; nor shall any amendment to any item or clause of such bill be received which does not directly relate thereto; nor shall any restriction on the expenditure of the funds appropriated which proposes a limitation not authorized by law be received if such restriction is to take effect or cease to be effective upon the happening of a contingency; and all questions of relevancy of amendments under this rule, when raised, shall be submitted to the Senate and be decided without debate; and any such amendment or restriction to a general appropriation bill may be laid on the table without prejudice to the bill.

"5. No amendment, the object of which is to provide for a private claim, shall be received to any general appropriation bill, unless it be to carry out the provisions of an existing law or a treaty stipulation, which shall be cited on the face of the amendment.

"6. (a) Three members of the following-named committees, to be selected by their respective committees, shall be ex officio members of the Committee on Appropriations, to serve on said committee when the annual appropriation bill making appropriations for the purposes specified in the following table opposite the name of the committee is being considered by the Committee on Appropriations:

Name of committee	Purpose of appropriation
Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.	For the Department of Agriculture.
Committee on Civil Service.	For the Post Office Department.
Committee on Armed Services.	For the Department of War; for the Department of the Navy.
Committee on the District of Columbia.	For the District of Columbia.
Committee on Public Works.	For rivers and harbors.
Committee on Foreign Relations.	For the diplomatic and consular service.

"(b) At least one member of each committee enumerated in subparagraph (a), to be selected by his or their respective committees, shall be a member of any conference committee appointed to confer with the House upon the annual appropriation bill making appropriations for the purposes specified in the foregoing table opposite the name of his or their respective committee.

"7. When a point of order is made against any restriction on the expenditure of funds appropriated in a general appropriation bill on the ground that the restriction violates this rule, the rule shall be construed strictly and, in case of doubt, in favor of the point of order."

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the further reading of the bill be by the titles of the sections, each section to be open for amendment when the title has been read.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, and I shall not, I want to ask the gentleman from Oklahoma a question: Would we by the provisions embodied in this bill have the right to change the rules of the next Congress despite the fact that this bill was passed by the Senate and the House?

Mr. MONRONEY. No. It specifically recognizes the right of either House to change its rules at any time. We are merely doing it jointly for the purpose of convenience and clarification. The rules can be changed by the new Congress or by this Congress at any time.

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman restate his request?

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be read by titles of sections, each section to be considered open for amendment when the titles are read.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman means to read the title and not the section?

Mr. MONRONEY. Yes.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, how many sections are there in the bill?

Mr. MONRONEY. Probably a hundred sections.

Mr. PATMAN. Will the reading by sections be according to the consent request?

Mr. MONRONEY. The Clerk will read the titles of the sections.

Mr. PATMAN. All right; starting now with section 121, how far would the Clerk read before an amendment would be offered?

Mr. MONRONEY. He would read the first part, of course, and then an amendment would be in order.

Mr. PATMAN. The first part down to where?

Mr. MONRONEY. The Clerk would read:

Rule X of the rules of the House of Representatives is amended to read as follows.

And then the section would be considered as read.

Mr. PATMAN. Then he would get down to page 27?

Mr. MONRONEY. Yes.

Mr. PATMAN. Then rule XI on page 27 would next be in order?

Mr. MONRONEY. That would be the next subtitle the Clerk would read and it would be open to amendment.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object. I think if the gentleman wants to give us a chance he will let the bill be read by sections. He can call the sections without reading them, then let us offer amendments.

Mr. MONRONEY. I was trying to do that.

Mr. TABER. Let him call the number of the section and ask for amendments to that section. I think that would be all right. The titles are so hard to find, unless one is exceedingly familiar with it. It will be difficult for anyone to follow.

Mr. MONRONEY. I will be glad to modify my request.

Mr. TABER. Let the Chairman call off the section numbers one at a time and amendments may be offered. I would be willing to do that.

Mr. MONRONEY. I agree with that.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, will the Chair just state what the request is so that all Members will be advised?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent that the section numbers be read as they are reached, that the reading of the language in the section be dispensed with but that when the section number is read it will then be in order to offer amendments to any part of that section.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. The Chair will announce the page of the bill?

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

PART 2—RULES OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Standing committees of the House of Representatives

SEC. 121. (a) Rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended to read as follows:

"RULE X

"Standing committees

"(a) There shall be elected by the House, at the commencement of each Congress, the following standing committes:

"1. Committee on Agriculture, to consist of 27 Members.

"2. Committee on Appropriations, to consist of 43 Members.

"3. Committee on Armed Services, to consist of 33 Members.

"4. Committee on Banking and Currency, to consist of 27 Members.

"5. Committee on Civil Service, to consist of 25 Members.

"6. Committee on the District of Columbia, to consist of 25 Members.

"7. Committee on Education and Labor, to consist of 25 Members.

"8. Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, to consist of 25 Members.

"9. Committee on Foreign Affairs, to consist of 25 Members.

"10. Committee on House Administration, to consist of 25 Members.

"11. Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to consist of 27 Members.

"12. Committee on the Judiciary, to consist of 25 Members.

"13. Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, to consist of 25 Members.

"14. Committee on Public Lands, to consist of 25 Members.

"15. Committee on Public Works, to consist of 27 Members.

"16. Committee on Rules, to consist of 12 Members.

"17. Committee on Un-American Activities, to consist of nine Members.

"18. Committee on Veterans' Affairs, to consist of 27 Members.

"19. Committee on Ways and Means, to consist of 27 Members.

"(b) (1) The Speaker shall appoint all select and conference committees which shall be ordered by the House from time to time.

"(2) At the commencement of each Congress, the House shall elect as chairman of each standing committee one of the members thereof; in the temporary absence of the chairman, the member next in rank in the order named in the election of the committee, and so on, as often as the case shall happen, shall act as chairman; and in case of a permanent vacancy in the chairmanship of any such committee the House shall elect another chairman.

"(3) All vacancies in standing committees in the House shall be filled by election by the House. Each Member shall be elected to serve on one standing committee and no more; except that Members who are elected to serve on the Committee on the District of Columbia or on the Committee on Un-American Activities may be elected to serve on two standing committees and no more, and Members of the majority party who are elected to serve on the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments or on the Committee on House Administration may be elected to serve on two standing committees and no more."

(b) Rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended to read as follows:

"RULE XI

"Powers and duties of committees

"(1) All proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the subjects listed under the standing committees named below shall be referred to such committees, respectively:

"(a) Committee on Agriculture.

"1. Agriculture generally.

"2. Inspection of livestock and meat products.

"3. Animal industry and diseases of animals.

"4. Adulteration of seeds, insect pests, and protection of birds and animals in forest reserves.

"5. Agricultural colleges and experiment stations.

"6. Forestry in general, and forest reserves other than those created from the public domain.

"7. Agricultural economics and research.

"8. Agricultural and industrial chemistry.

"9. Dairy industry.

"10. Entomology and plant quarantine.

"11. Human nutrition and home economics.

"12. Plant industry, soils, and agricultural engineering.

"13. Agricultural educational extension services.

"14. Extension of farm credit and farm security.

"15. Rural electrification.

"16. Agricultural production and marketing and stabilization of prices of agricultural products.

"17. Crop insurance and soil conservation.

"(b) Committee on Appropriations.

"1. Appropriation of the revenue for the support of the Government.

"(c) Committee on Armed Services.

"1. Common defense generally.

"2. The War Department and the Military Establishment generally.

"3. The Navy Department and the Naval Establishment generally.

"4. Soldiers' and sailors' homes.

"5. Pay, promotion, retirement, and other benefits and privileges of members of the armed forces.

"6. Selective service.

"7. Size and composition of the Army and Navy.

"8. Forts, arsenals, military reservations, and navy yards.

"9. Ammunition depots.

"10. Maintenance and operation of the Panama Canal, including the administration, sanitation, and government of the Canal Zone.

"11. Conservation, development, and use of naval petroleum and oil shale reserves.

"12. Strategic and critical materials necessary for the common defense.

"(d) Committee on Banking and Currency.

"1. Banking and currency generally.

"2. Financial aid to commerce and industry, other than matters relating to such aid which are specifically assigned to other committees under this rule.

"3. Deposit insurance.

"4. Public and private housing.

"5. Federal Reserve System.

"6. Gold and silver, including the coinage thereof.

"7. Issuance of notes and redemption thereof.

"8. Valuation and revaluation of the dollar.

"9. Control of prices of commodities, rents, or services.

"(e) Committee on Civil Service.

"1. The Federal civil service generally.

"2. The status of officers and employees of the United States, including their compensation, classification, and retirement.

"3. The postal service generally, including the railway mail service, and measures relating to ocean mail and pneumatic-tube service, but excluding post roads.

"4. Postal-savings banks.

"5. Census and the collection of statistics generally.

"6. The National Archives.

"(f) Committee on the District of Columbia.

"1. All measures relating to the municipal affairs of the District of Columbia in general, other than appropriations therefor, including—

"2. Public health and safety, sanitation, and quarantine regulations.

"3. Regulation of sale of intoxicating liquors.

"4. Adulteration of food and drugs.

"5. Taxes and tax sales.

"6. Insurance, executors, administrators, wills, and divorce.

"7. Municipal and juvenile courts.

"8. Incorporation and organization of societies.

"9. Municipal code and amendments to the criminal and corporation laws.

"(g) Committee on Education and Labor.

"1. Measures relating to education or labor generally.

"2. Mediation and arbitration of labor disputes.

"3. Wages and hours of labor.

"4. Convict labor and the entry of goods made by convicts into interstate commerce.

"5. Regulation or prevention of importation of foreign laborers under contract.

"6. Child labor.

"7. Labor statistics.

"8. Labor standards.

"9. School-lunch program.

"10. Vocational rehabilitation.

"11. United States Employees' Compensation Commission.

"12. Columbia Institution for the Deaf, Dumb, and Blind; Howard University; Freedmen's Hospital; and St. Elizabeths Hospital.

"13. Welfare of miners.

"(h) (1) Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.

"(A) Budget and accounting measures, other than appropriations.

"(B) Reorganizations in the executive branch of the Government.

"(2) Such committee shall have the duty of—

"(A) receiving and examining reports of the Comptroller General of the United States and of submitting such recommendations to the House as it deems necessary or desirable in connection with the subject matter of such reports;

"(B) studying the operation of Government activities at all levels with a view to determining its economy and efficiency;

"(C) evaluating the effects of laws enacted to reorganize the legislative and executive branches of the Government;

"(D) studying intergovernmental relationships between the United States and the States and municipalities, and between the United States and international organizations of which the United States is a member.

"(i) Committee on Foreign Affairs.

"1. Relations of the United States with foreign nations generally.

"2. Establishment of boundary lines between the United States and foreign nations.

"3. Protection of American citizens abroad and expatriation.

"4. Neutrality.

"5. International conferences and congresses.

"6. The American National Red Cross.

"7. Intervention abroad and declarations of war.

"8. Measures relating to the diplomatic service.

"9. Acquisition of land and buildings for embassies and legations in foreign countries.

"10. Measures to foster commercial intercourse with foreign nations and to safeguard American business interests abroad.

"11. United Nations Organization and international financial and monetary organizations.

"12. Foreign loans.

"(j) (1) Committee on House Administration.

"(A) Employment of persons by the House, including clerks for Members and committees, and reporters of debates.

"(B) Expenditure of the contingent fund of the House.

"(C) The auditing and settling of all accounts which may be charged to the contingent fund.

"(D) Measures relating to accounts of the House generally.

"(E) Appropriations from the contingent fund.

"(F) Measures relating to services to the House, including the House Restaurant and administration of the House Office Buildings and of the House wing of the Capitol.

"(G) Measures relating to the travel of Members of the House.

"(H) Measures relating to the assignment of office space for Members and committees.

"(I) Measures relating to the disposition of useless executive papers.

"(J) Except as provided in paragraph (o) 8, matters relating to the Library of Congress and the House Library; statuary and pictures; acceptance or purchase of works of art for the Capitol; the Botanic Gardens; management of the Library of Congress; purchase of books and manuscripts; erection of monuments to the memory of individuals.

"(K) Except as provided in paragraph (o) 8, matters relating to the Smithsonian Institution and the incorporation of similar institutions.

"(L) Matters relating to printing and correction of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

"(M) Measures relating to the election of the President, Vice President, or Members of Congress; corrupt practices; contested elections; credentials and qualifications; and Federal elections generally.

"(2) Such committee shall also have the duty of—

"(A) examining all bills, amendments, and joint resolutions after passage by the House; and, in cooperation with the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration, of examining all bills and joint resolutions which shall have passed both Houses, to see that they are correctly enrolled; and when signed by the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate, shall forthwith present the same, when they shall have originated in the House, to the President of the United States in person, and report the fact and date of such presentation to the House;

"(B) reporting to the Sergeant at Arms of the House the travel of Members of the House;

"(C) arranging a suitable program for each day observed by the House of Representatives as a memorial day in memory of Members of the Senate and House of Representatives who have died during the preceding period, and to arrange for the publication of the proceedings thereof.

"(k) Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

"1. Interstate and foreign commerce generally.

"2. Regulation of interstate railroads, busses, trucks, and pipe lines.

"3. Communication by telephone, telegraph, radio, and television.

"4. Civil aeronautics.

"5. Weather Bureau.
"6. Interstate oil compacts.
"7. Railroad labor and railroad retirement and unemployment, except revenue measures relating thereto.
"8. Public health and quarantine.
"9. Inland waterways.
"10. Bureau of Standards, including standardization of weights and measures and the metric system.
"(l) Committee on the Judiciary.
"1. Judicial proceedings, civil and criminal, generally.
"2. Constitutional amendments.
"3. Federal courts and judges.
"4. Local courts in the Territories and possessions.
"5. Revision and codification of the statutes of the United States.
"6. National penitentiaries.
"7. Protection of trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies.
"8. Holidays and celebrations.
"9. Bankruptcy, mutiny, espionage, and counterfeiting.
"10. State and Territorial boundary lines.
"11. Meetings of Congress, attendance of Members, and their acceptance of incompatible offices.
"12. Civil liberties.
"13. Patents, copyrights, and trade-marks.
"14. Patent Office.
"15. Immigration and naturalization.
"16. Apportionment of Representatives.
"17. Measures relating to claims against the United States.
"18. Interstate compacts generally.
"19. Presidential succession.
"(m) Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.
"1. Merchant marine generally.
"2. Registering and licensing of vessels and small boats.
"3. Navigation and the laws relating thereto, including pilotage.
"4. Rules and international arrangements to prevent collisions at sea.
"5. Merchant marine officers and seamen.
"6. Measures relating to the regulation of common carriers by water and to the inspection of merchant marine vessels, lights and signals, lifesaving equipment, and fire protection on such vessels.
"7. The Coast Guard, including lifesaving service, lighthouses, lightships, and ocean derelicts.
"8. United States Coast Guard and Merchant Marine Academies.
"9. Coast and Geodetic Survey.
"10. Except as provided in paragraph (c), the Panama Canal and interoceanic canals generally.
"11. Fisheries and wildlife, including research, restoration, refuges, and conservation.
"(n) Committee on Public Lands.
"1. Public lands generally, including entry, easements, and grazing thereon.
"2. Mineral resources of the public lands.
"3. Forfeiture of land grants and alien ownership, including alien ownership of mineral lands.
"4. Forest reserves and national parks created from the public domain.
"5. Military parks and battlefields, and national cemeteries.
"6. Preservation of prehistoric ruins and objects of interest on the public domain.
"7. Measures relating generally to Hawaii, Alaska, and the insular possessions of the United States, except those affecting the revenue and appropriations.
"8. Irrigation and reclamation, including water supply for reclamation projects, and easements of public lands for irrigation projects.
"9. Interstate compacts relating to apportionment of waters for irrigation purposes.
"10. Mining interests generally.
"11. Mineral land laws and claims and entries thereunder.
"12. Geological survey.
"13. Mining schools and experimental stations.
"14. Petroleum conservation and conservation of the radium supply in the United States.
"15. Relations of the United States with the Indians and the Indian tribes.
"16. Measures relating to the care, education, and management of Indians, including the care and allotment of Indian lands and general and special measures relating to claims which are paid out of Indian funds.
"(o) Committee on Public Works.
"1. Flood control and improvement of rivers and harbors.
"2. Public works for the benefit of navigation, and bridges and dams (other than international bridges and dams).
"3. Water power.
"4. Oil and other pollution of navigable waters.
"5. Public buildings and occupied or improved grounds of the United States generally.
"6. Measures relating to the purchase of sites and construction of post offices, customhouses, Federal courthouses, and Government buildings within the District of Columbia.
"7. Measures relating to the Capitol Building and the Senate and House Office Buildings.
"8. Measures relating to the construction or reconstruction, maintenance, and care of the buildings and grounds of the Botanic Gardens, the Library of Congress, and the Smithsonian Institution.
"9. Public reservations and parks within the District of Columbia, including Rock Creek Park and the Zoological Park.
"10. Measures relating to the construction or maintenance of roads and post roads, other than appropriations therefor; but it shall not be in order for any bill providing general legislation in relation to roads to contain any provision for any specific road, nor for any bill in relation to a specific road to embrace a provision in relation to any other specific road.
"(p) Committee on Rules.
"1. The rules, joint rules, and order of business of the House.
"2. Recesses and final adjournments of Congress.
"(q) (1) Committee on Un-American Activities.
"(A) Un-American activities.
"(2) The Committee on Un-American Activities, as a whole or by subcommittee, is authorized to make from time to time investigations of (i) the extent, character, and objects of un-American propaganda activities in the United States, (ii) the diffusion within the United States of subversive and un-American propaganda that is instigated from foreign countries or of a domestic origin and attacks the principle of the form of government as guaranteed by our Constitution, and (iii) all other questions in relation thereto that would aid Congress in any necessary remedial legislation.
"The Commerce on Un-American Activities shall report to the House (or to the Clerk of the House if the House is not in session) the results of any such investigation, together with such recommendations as it deems advisable.
"For the purpose of any such investigation, the Committee on Un-American Activities, or any subcommittee thereof, is authorized to sit and act at such times and places within the United States, whether or not the House is sitting, has recessed, or has adjourned, to hold such hearings, to require the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, and documents, and to take such testimony, as it deems necessary. Subpenas may be issued under the signature of the chairman of the committee or any subcommittee, or by any member designated by any such chairman, and may be served by any person designated by any such chairman or member.
"(r) Committee on Veterans' Affairs.
"1. Veterans' measures generally.
"2. Pensions of all the wars of the United States, general and special.
"3. Life insurance issued by the Government on account of service in the armed forces.
"4. Compensation, vocational rehabilitation, and education of veterans.
"5. Veterans' hospitals, medical care, and treatment of veterans.
"6 Soldiers and sailors' civil relief.
"7. Readjustment of servicemen to civil life.
"(s) Committee on Ways and Means.
"1. Revenue measures generally.
"2. The bonded debt of the United States.
"3. The deposit of public moneys.
"4. Customs, collection districts, and ports of entry and delivery.
"5. Reciprocal trade agreements.
"6. Transportation of dutiable goods.
"7. Revenue measures relating to the insular possessions
"8. National social security.
"(2) (a) The following-named committees shall have leave to report at any time on the matters herein stated, namely: The Committee on Rules—on rules, joint rules, and order of business; the Committee on House Administration—on the right of a Member to his seat, enrolled bills, on all matters referred to it or printing for the use of the House or the two Houses, and on all matters of expenditure of the contingent fund of the House; the Committee on Ways and Means—on bills raising revenue; the Committee on Appropriations—on the general appropriation bills; the Committee on Public Works—on bills authorizing the improvement of rivers and harbors; the Committee on the Public Lands—on bills for the forfeiture of land grants to railroad and other corporations, bills preventing speculation in the public lands, bills for the reservation of the public lands for the benefit of actual and bona fide settlers, and bills for the admission of new States; the Committee on Veterans' Affairs—on general pension bills.
"(b) It shall always be in order to call up for consideration a report from the Committee on Rules (except it shall not be called up for consideration on the same day it is presented to the House, unless so determined by a vote of not less than two-thirds of the Members voting, but this provision shall not apply during the last 3 days of the session), and, pending the consideration thereof, the Speaker may entertain one motion that the House adjourn; but after the result is announced he shall not entertain any other dilatory motion until the said report shall have been fully disposed of. The Committee on Rules shall not report any rule or order which shall provide that business under paragraph 7 of rule XXIV shall be set aside by a vote of less than two-thirds of the Members present; nor shall it report any rule or order which shall operate to prevent the motion to recommit being made as provided in paragraph 4 of rule XVI.
"(c) The Committee on Rules shall present to the House reports concerning rules, joint rules, and order of business, within three legislative days of the time when ordered reported by the committee. If such rule or order is not considered immediately, it shall be referred to the calendar and, if not called up by the Member making the report within seven legislative days thereafter, any member of the Rules Committee may call it up as a question of privilege and the Speaker shall recognize any member of the Rules Committee seeking recognition for that purpose. If the Committee on Rules shall make an adverse report on any resolution pending before the committee, providing for an order of business for the consideration by the House of any public bill or joint resolution, on days when it shall be in order to call up motions to discharge committees it shall be in order for any Member of the House to call up for consideration by the House any such adverse report, and it shall be in order to move the adoption by the House of said resolution adversely reported notwithstanding the adverse report of the Committee on Rules, and the Speaker shall recognize the Member seeking recognition for that purpose as a question of the highest privilege.

"(d) The Committee on House Administration shall make final report to the House in all contested-election cases not later than 6 months from the first day of the first regular session of the Congress to which the contestee is elected except in a contest from the Territory of Alaska, in which case the time shall not exceed 9 months.

"(e) A standing committee of the House shall meet to consider any bill or resolution pending before it (A) on all regular meeting days selected by the committee; (B) upon the call of the chairman of the committee: (C) if the chairman of the committee, after 3 days consideration, refuses or fails, upon the request of at least three members of the committee, to call a special meeting of the committee within seven calendar days from the date of said request, then, upon the filing with the clerk of the committee of the written and signed request of a majority of the committee for a called special meeting of the committee, the committee shall meet on the day and hour specified in said written request. It shall be the duty of the clerk of the committee to notify all members of the committee in the usual way of such called special meeting.

"(f) The rules of the House are hereby made the rules of its standing committees so far as applicable, except that a motion to recess from day to day is hereby made a motion of high privilege in said committees."

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer several committee amendments which are on the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MONRONEY:
On page 25, line 15, after the word "of", strike out "25" and insert "27."
On page 26, line 11, strike out "27" and insert "25."

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, this is simply a clarifying amendment changing the number of members on the Ways and Means Committee from 27, which the committee had provided back to 25. Or, I should say, taking it back to its historic number.

The committee did not know it, but the Ways and Means Committee has always been a 25-man committee. The division within the committee has been 15 and 10 between majority and minority. We did not wish to disturb that historical relationship. We add to the 25 members of the Foreign Affairs Committee 2, making that 27 so as to preserve the numerical balance for the committee.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman tell us why the Committee on the Judiciary was reduced from 27 to 25 members in view of the fact that that committee absorbs under this bill the jurisdiction of four other committees? Why should it not be 27 instead of 25?

Mr. MONRONEY. The difference between 25 and 27 was largely to see that the mathematical balance of the House was preserved. If the gentleman wishes, he can offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MONRONEY: Page 27, line 16, after the word "respectively", insert a colon and the following: "Provided, That unless otherwise provided herein any matter within the jurisdiction of a standing committee prior to January 2, 1947, shall remain subject to the jurisdiction of that committee or of the consolidated committees succeeding generally to the jurisdiction of that committee."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MONRONEY: On page 29, strike out lines 5 to 7, inclusive; and on page 38, strike out lines 1 and 2, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"10. The Panama Canal and the maintenance and operation of the Panama Canal, including the administration, sanitation, and government of the Canal Zone; and interoceanic canals generally."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MONRONEY: Page 29, line 24, after the word "on", insert, "Post Office and."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MONRONEY: Page 35, strike out lines 18 to 24, inclusive, and lines 1 to 7, inclusive, on page 36 and insert the following:

"1. Interstate and foreign commerce generally.

"2. Regulation of interstate and foreign transportation, except transportation by water not subject to the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"3. Regulation of interstate and foreign communications.

"4. Civil aeronautics.

"5. Weather Bureau.

"6. Interstate oil compacts; and petroleum and natural gas, except on the public lands.

"7. Securities and exchanges.

"8. Regulation of interstate transmission of power, except the installation of connections between Government water-power projects.

"9. Railroad labor and railroad retirement and unemployment, except revenue measures relating thereto.

"10. Public health and quarantine.

"11. Inland waterways.

"12. Bureau of Standards, standardization of weights and measures, and the metric system."

Mr. PHILLIPS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of asking the chairman of the committee if he will refer to the matter of rural electrification under "agriculture" and tell me whether this in any way conflicts with that.

Mr. MONRONEY. I will say to the gentleman this does not conflict in any way with rural electrification. The purpose of this amendment was to clearly specify that the jurisdiction of the generation of electric power by water and connecting grids for those projects was in the public-works domain, and this leaves the rate-making activities and the stock relationships in the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MONRONEY: Page 37, line 17, after the word "water", insert "(except matters subject to the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission)."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MONRONEY: Page 38, line 22, after the word "projects", strike out the period and insert a comma, and the words "and acquisition of private lands when necessary to complete irrigation projects."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MONRONEY: Page 39, line 5, after "Petroleum conservation", insert "on the public lands."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MONRONEY: Page 39, line 16, strike out "and" and insert "including."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CELLER: Page 25, line 21, strike out "25" and insert "27."

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, there is reduced by this bill the number of Members on the Committee on the Judiciary from 27 to 25, despite the fact that a great deal more work is imposed on the committee. Because of the avalanche of business before the Committee on the Judiciary, we have divided our committee into five subcommittees; one on bankruptcy and four separate subcommittees on general legislation. Those committees are now behind in their work, because a tremendous number of bills are continually being referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Added to the work of that committee is the work of the Committee on Claims. Over 2,000 claims bills were filed in this very session of Congress. The Federal tort claims bill, which will be passed by the passage of this bill, might reduce the number of claims bills filed, perhaps cut it in half, to 1,000 claims bills, but there will have to be a separate subcommittee of the Committee on the Judiciary to handle those additional claims bills.

It will be essential to set up a separate subcommittee to consider bills involving patents, copyrights, and trade-marks.

We also have the added work of the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. There will be several hundred more bills involving immigration and naturalization.

We have the added work of the Committee on Revision of the Laws. There will be considerable additional work in that regard assigned to the Committee on the Judiciary. It took that committee on law revision about 3 months to revise and codify the criminal code. There are about four or five other sections of the United States Code that must be codified. It will be necessary to have a separate subcommittee to handle those revisions. How we are going to do all that work with 25 members is beyond my comprehension. I earnestly hope that you will give us at least two more members to help us out in the difficult tasks that will confront the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CELLER. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. MONRONEY. Will the gentleman permit an amendment to his amendment changing the membership of the Committee on the Judiciary from 25 to 27, and reducing the membership of the Committee on Foreign Affairs from 27 to 25, so we will keep our numerical balance?

Mr. CELLER. That is agreeable.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer that amendment to the gentleman's amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MONRONEY to the amendment offered by Mr. CELLER: On page 25, line 21, strike out "twenty-five" and insert "twenty-seven" and in line 15 on that page strike out "twenty-seven" and insert "twenty-five."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York as amended.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CANNON of Missouri: On page 45, line 12, after the word "House", insert "other than the Committee on Appropriations."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, the bill requires that the committees of the House meet on regular days, such meeting days to be selected by the committees. It is not applicable to the Committee on Appropriations for the reason that that committee has no stated days of meeting and could have no stated days of meeting. The committee meets only in response to reports from subcommittees. It is very seldom there is a meeting of the full committee for other purposes. It would be impracticable to call this committee of 42 members together at a stated time when there could be no business for the consideration of the committee. I therefore have offered this amendment to except the Committee on Appropriations from this requirement.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WADSWORTH: On page 29, line 11, after the period, insert:
"13. Scientific research and development in support of the armed services."

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, the chairman of the special committee, of course, will understand that that is a perfectly simple amendment. Certainly the committee on the armed services should have jurisdiction over legislation relating to scientific research and development in support of the armed services.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I think that is an entirely logical amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LYLE. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LYLE: On page 25, after line 24, insert:
"14. Committee on Post Office and Post Roads to consist of 25 members."
On page 30, strike out lines 4 through 7.
On page 38, after line 4, insert:
"(n) Committee on Post Office and Post Roads: All legislation relating to the post office and post roads."
On page 40, line 11, strike out the words "and post roads."

Mr. LYLE. Mr. Chairman, old soldiers die very hard, and the Committee on Post Office and Post Roads is one of the oldest and best soldiers that has ever served this Congress. Perhaps no other committee in Congress is so intimately associated with the lives and happiness and sometimes the sorrow of the people as is the Committee on Post Office and Post Roads. I know that many of you Members started in that committee, and have worked on it as I have during the long, long "years" of the Seventy-ninth Congress. We have a deep affection for that committee and for its work. We have a great admiration for it and for the things it has done, especially during this Congress. We feel it deserves more recognition and consideration than it is receiving in this measure. As the Post Office Department is represented by a member in the President's Cabinet, much of the work of the Civil Service Committee to which the Post Office and Post Roads Committee has been assigned under this bill deals with personnel.

Much of the work of our committee deals with the laws and problems of the Post Office Department and does not deal with personnel. We feel it has an important place in the work of Congress. Of course, there is not anything exciting about it. We do not report any OPA bills to you. We do not report any national-service legislation or draft legislation, but we never get you in trouble when we do report out bills to you because they are generally popular. We would like to continue to serve as a committee of this House. We feel it is important to the welfare of the country and to the Congress. We feel we can well earn the position that we are asking for. Perhaps there will be some confusion, Mr. Chairman, with reference to the number on the committee, but I believe that can be worked out quite easily in conference if the amendment is adopted.

Mr. MONRONEY. I believe it would be very difficult.

Mr. LYLE. I would be glad to help you. I think it could be worked out.

Mr. MONRONEY. I must say to the gentleman from Texas that we are forced to oppose the gentleman's amendment because we think this is a very, very important part of this whole matter of committee reorganization. If we knock a hole in it now for the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads, then we will have to knock a hole in it for the Committee on Disposal of Executive Papers and many others. Then, as a result, the whole overlapping committee structure will grow back up again. I would certainly have to oppose the amendment vigorously because it throws the whole set-up out of gear and destroys the plan which the committee has so laboriously attempted to work out.

Mr. LYLE. When I was in the Texas Legislature, every year just as soon as they could, they used to try to do away with some of the district courts down there. There was an old judge who had had his court for a long time. This situation reminds me of this story, and I am going to tell it.

One of the Senators called on him and said, "Judge, we are going to do away with your court."

He said, "My goodness, who is doing that?"

The Senator said, "Well, there is an old lawyer from Dallas who came down and testified against your court."

He said, "He came down to testify against your Honor." The judge said, "I knew he would." He said, "I have known him for 30 years and he has hated me ever since I beat him for county attorney. He is no good." He said, "Who else is down there?" He named another lawyer. He said, "He don't like me either. I caught him stealing money from a widow one time and he has never liked me since." The Senator said, "Wait a minute. Nobody is down here to try to tear up your court." And the old judge said, "Senator, you have made me say awful things, awful things, about two of the best friends I ever had."

I thought the gentleman handling this measure was going to agree to this amendment, so he has made me say some nice things about one of the worst enemies the Post Office Committee has ever had.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LYLE] has expired.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I hope the House will turn down this amendment by a very resounding vote. Let it be remembered that this bill passed the Senate on the 10th day of June. That is 6 weeks ago. In the Senate they joined up the Post Office Committee and the Civil Service Committee, precisely as we are doing in the House. We have heard no single complaint or protest in all that time. It was not until this morning that I understand a few telegrams filtered in to Members of Congress, probably inspired right down town, telegrams about which that earnest and diligent mail carrier who carries the mail in the cities out home or the man who plods down the country road delivering mail never heard anything.

It can work out very effectively this way. If you are going to disturb this committee structure now, then it will be like pushing over a little tin soldier in a whole row of soldiers, you start pushing them all over.

I am heartbroken over the entreaty expressed by the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. LYLE], but I do hope you will roll back this amendment by a very substantial vote.

Mr. O'BRIEN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment, and I ask unanimous consent to proceed for three additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. O'BRIEN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, this select committee originated by a resolution of the House in February 1945. Under a resolution to investigate and report, they held hearings for some ensuing weeks and months. No bill was ever introduced in the House until today. A bill was introduced in the Senate. No reference was made to a legislative committee in the other body. The statement was made by the majority leader in the other body that undoubtedly in the House the bill would be referred to a legislative committee and there would be hearings.

This bill has been brought before you today, introduced from the floor. There have been no hearings by a legislative committee in regard to this bill. I say that merely introductory of this: The bill contains in this section which is now before us a provision abolishing the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads of the House of Representatives. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LYLE] would continue the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads in this House. That is the issue presently before the House.

In the hearings held by this select committee on this resolution to investigate and report there is not a scintilla of evidence, there is not the record of any person with knowledge of postal matters testifying before that committee in behalf of this change. There is a statement by one Member of Congress in the hearings which the committee had published to the effect that the personnel of the Post Office Department being under civil service, therefore the legislative committee dealing with the Post Office Department should be the Committee on the Civil Service. It is my understanding that the entire civilian personnel of the Government is under civil service, so with equal logic one might say that the Committee on Agriculture, the Committee on Labor, the Committee on Ways and Means, and practically every other committee of the House should be abolished and all should be absorbed into the Civil Service Committee. Obviously, the fact that the personnel of the Post Office Department, like the personnel of every other department of the Government is under civil service is not a just reason for inferring that all the body of the law relating to the Post Office Department should be referred to the Civil Service Committee. Now, what is that body of law? Let anybody who wishes to inquire, and especially members of this select committee who made no inquiry into the subject whatsoever, as is revealed by the printed testimony—let them step into the library off the floor of this House and ask for the United States Code and see the body of law relating to postal matters. The Post Office Department is the largest single—what shall we say, business, utility, or enterprise?—not in the United States only but in the world. Its functions circle the globe; its functions relate to much more than personnel, but even in the matter of personnel it has always been the judgment of those who were aware of postal matters that such legislation should be separate and apart from general civil service legislation. But apart from personnel matters, the committee functions deal with legislation concerning the policy and operation of the Post Office Department. The functioning of this enterprise, the Post Office Department, is a business whose annual revenues approximate $1,600,000,000. It is a business enterprise or utility, whatever you call it, which is governed in its operations by laws of the Congress. To say that all the functions of that large enterprise, international in character, far more than personnel, involving finance, involving air mail, involving postage rates, involving foreign mail, should be referred to a committee that has to do with reports from the Civil Service Commission is ridiculous.

I think I can make the statement with absolute accuracy that no one connected with the postal service whether as employee, supervisor, Postmaster General, or anyone else in this far-flung enterprise has advised this committee to do the thing they have recommended.

I have in my hand a letter from the Acting Postmaster General. He has been a career man in the postal service, Jesse Donaldson. There is no partisanship in his statement. I wish to read this paragraph which is in response to my request for advice. He writes as follows:

> Title 5 of United States Code, deals with executive departments and Government officers and employees. Title 39 of United States Code contains 22 chapters dealing entirely with the Postal Service. These chapters cover laws involving all postal-service problems such as classification of post offices, city-delivery service, rural-delivery service, establishment of post offices, money-order service, postal-savings service, air-mail service, rural-delivery service, foreign service, as well as rates and accounts and revenues of the postal service. It would, therefore, appear to me that there should be some distinction between postal legislation and purely civil service or employee problems. I would think that the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads would be better equipped to handle these various postal problems, aside from the employee problems than would a committee handling civil-service matters. There are many problems handled by the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads having to do with the conduct of the Postal Service, especially with reference to legislation affecting the Postal Service which have little or nothing to do with the employee civil-service problems.

I do not know what motive might have existed in the mind of the committee to make this recommendation. It certainly had nothing to do with any testimony produced in the hearings and it certainly had nothing to do with legislative efficiency.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the pending amendment close in 15 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MASON] is recognized.

Mr. MASON. Mr. Chairman, I am in full accord with the objectives of the special committee in the streamlining of Congress, at least I am in full accord with the objectives that they announce on this floor. One was increased efficiency in the legislative department, another effectiveness, another the saving of time, and so forth. In order to bring that about they propose to telescope 48 committees of the House into 19 committees, doing away with 29 committees. I have no objection to that if it will accomplish the objectives that they say they want to accomplish. But I call the attention of the committee to the fact that the Post Office and Post Roads Committee of this House is a major committee and always has been. This major committee has departmental rank because the head of the postal service is a member of the President's Cabinet. This Post Office and Post Roads Committee handles not only the personnel, which is a small part of it, but handles the complicated rates and the complicated schedules of the Post Office Department. I know something about tariff rates and I know something about tax rates, and these postal rates are as complicated as the tariff rates and tax rates which the Ways and Means Committee handle. When you telescope that major committee, which is a board of directors for a corporation handling a billion dollars a year—it takes in a billion dollars and spends a billion dollars—into the Civil Service Committee that has had nothing to do with rates, are you bringing about efficiency or effectiveness or are you saving time? I want to ask if anyone in this House can justify that kind of telescoping? It is a billion-dollar corporation, the largest in the Nation, yet you propose to do away with its board of directors and hand that billion-dollar business over to another committee which has had no experience whatever in the major field that this committee handles.

Mr. Chairman, I do not think that is bringing about effectiveness, I do not think that is bringing about efficiency; in fact, in my opinion, it is going to bring about a period of chaos, and goodness knows, we have had enough of that.

We ought to adopt this amendment which would preserve the Post Office and Post Roads Committee in order to handle the very complicated business of the postal service.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COLE].

Mr. COLE of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, the Post Office and Post Roads Committee of the House is one of the oldest committees of the House. Its 25 members are the board of directors of the Post Office Department. We all know that the postmaster General is changed with each change of administration and we all know that most postmasters throughout the United States are changed with each change in administration; therefore it is the Post Office and Post Roads Committee that is the balance wheel for the Post Office Department, the greatest business in the world.

It would be a serious mistake to change this committee and place the business of the Post Office Department under the Committee on Civil Service, a committee that has heretofore dealt entirely with the Civil Service employees. But that is what this reorganization bill proposes to do. The members of the Post Office and Post Roads Committee have made a study of the postal services. At this session of Congress we have reported and passed bills pertaining to postage, to air mail, to air mail parcel post, and to salary increases for postal employees. We are familiar with these subjects. We are familiar with all the workings of the Post Office Department. To do away with this committee and place it under a committee that has had nothing to do with and no knowledge of the workings of the Post Office Department would, in my opinion, be detrimental to the postal service.

I sincerely hope that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas will prevail.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MONRONEY].

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, this is not just an amendment to reestablish the Post Office Committee. This is an amendment to decide whether you want a sprawling, overlapping, crazy-quilt of 48 standing committees or whether you want to do a job of reorganizing these committees as proposed.

You vote this amendment up and the House will be here until next week establishing other committees, giving back old jurisdictions, and we will find ourselves in the same hopeless morass of legislative difficulties that we are now certainly under.

I regret very much that some Members might be displaced from a standing committee called the Post Office Committee, but aside from that I can see no legitimate objection to the proposal as made in the committee bill.

We have changed the name of the committee from the Civil Service Committee to the Post Office and Civil Service Committee. We make that a major committee. The Civil Service Committee is now composed of 21 Members. Many of those Members enjoy high seniority on other committees, and they will choose their committees. You have the opportunity not to waste the learning, the astute understanding, the complete mastery of all the postal laws that have accumulated during the years by the Members of the Post Office Committee.

They surely will be eligible for membership on this merged committee and they will be able to enjoy and exercise this learning that they have. At the same time you will be putting their learning on the Civil Service Committee which handles practically the entire load of the Government personnel and personnel problems and now will include post-office personnel as well.

I surely think with the capable and intelligent gentlemen of the Post Office Committee who will go on this merged committee, that the rate-making difficulties that have been worried about here can surely be resolved.

I have more confidence in the Members of Congress who are placed on the committee, who are doing a good, hard job wherever they are placed, to not believe that we work in an absolute vacuum; that members of the Civil Service cannot know or learn anything about the post-office work.

My experience is that when legislation comes to us from the departments for consideration, it is pretty adequately documented and adequately explained, so the man who is conscientiously working to understand this thing will be able to understand what the department is trying to do.

Mr. O'BRIEN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MONRONEY. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. O'BRIEN of Michigan. Would the gentleman tell us what testimony he had before his select committee to support this recommendation? I have read the testimony all the way through and I have not been able to find anybody informed on postal matters that made the recommendation to support this provision in the bill.

Mr. MONRONEY. I will say to the gentleman that if we had called in all of the hundreds of agencies of government, whose business is scattered over the 48 overlapping committees, to testify, that the year would be 1956 before you would ever have a report from this committee. We placed the Post Office Department in the same position that we placed other departments of government. This is a congressional reorganization and I, for one, as a Member of Congress do not intend to let the executive agencies tell us what our organization should be on Capitol Hill.

Mr. COLE of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MONRONEY. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. COLE of Missouri. Are we putting the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads under the Committee on the Civil Service, or are we putting the Committee on the Civil Service under the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads by this move?

Mr. MONRONEY. The committees go together. We have explained time after time that we are not interfering with the prerogatives of the Committee on Committees on the Republican side or the Committee on Ways and Means on the Democratic side to determine these committee assignments. I think that has been rather well and adequately handled by the two parties of the House and under the traditions of the House.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LYLE].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. COLE of Missouri) there were—ayes 46, noes 92.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. BIEMILLER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BIEMILLER: On page 26, strike out all of lines 6 and 7.

Mr. BIEMILLER. Mr. Chairman, when the Seventy-ninth Congress convened an amendment to the rules of the House was passed. That amendment created the Committee on Un-American Activities as a permanent committee of the House. Previously that committee had been a special committee. You will recall that when that amendment was adopted there was a sharp division of opinion among the Members. It was not adopted by a large majority. Those who voted against it were of the opinion that the creation of such a committee would not add anything of value to the work of the House.

I am offering this amendment today so that Members who were dissatisfied on the opening day of the session and do not believe that there should be such a permanent committee will have an opportunity to voice their opinion.

Mr. COLE of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BIEMILLER. I do not yield.

Mr. COLE of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a correction?

Mr. BIEMILLER. I yield.

Mr. COLE of Missouri. When this committee was adopted as a permanent committee of the House, as I recall, there were only 81 votes cast against it.

Mr. BIEMILLER. I think the gentleman is in error. He will find there were in excess of 180 votes cast against it.

Mr. MASON. There were only 81. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BIEMILLER. Mr. Chairman, I will not yield further at this time.

Mr. MASON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield on that point?

Mr. BIEMILLER. I do not yield on that point.

Mr. MASON. Will the gentleman yield to clarify that?

Mr. BIEMILLER. Yes; surely.

Mr. MASON. I looked the matter up yesterday in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of May 17 this year and just 81 votes were cast against it.

Mr. BIEMILLER. Mr. Chairman, let us keep the record straight. I suggest that when gentlemen try to correct a Member who has the floor they make sure they know what the Member was talking about. I stated that the Un-American Activities Committee was created in January of 1945 and there were over 180 votes cast against the adoption of the committee at that time. The exact figure is 186.

Since that committee has been functioning certain things have happened that many of us have not liked. I am going to refer only briefly to one of those things to illustrate my point as to why I do not believe this committee should be in existence.

You will recall that an employee of this committee, a certain Mr. Adamson, has written threatening and insulting letters to several people in the United States wanting to know why they used the word "democracy" to describe the Government of this country. He has inferred they were un-American because they used the word "democracy" and the Committee might have to investigate them. I think most of the Members of the House are aware of the fact, for example, that in the ritual of initiation proceedings of the American Legion the Government of the United States is described as a democracy. Furthermore this country has fought two wars in defense of democracy. Who is this man, Adamson, who says democracy is un-American? We cannot let this type of activity continue and think we are going to enhance the prestige of the House of Representatives. So, I repeat, I simply offer this amendment today to give to those Members who are opposed to maneuvers like those of Mr. Adamson a chance to express their opinions. We are debating a bill to create a new committee structure in the House and I do not believe we need the Committee on Un-American Activities.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment close in 4 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. REED].

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Chairman, I have taken the floor quite a number of times heretofore when the House has not seen fit to pass some of the provisions which you find in this bill. The reason I am taking the floor now is simply that I do not like to hear the Members, although they have a perfect right to do so, take the floor and speak as if this bill was going to bring in a new civilization. As a matter of fact, this old country of ours for more than 150 years has met every crisis that our country has had to meet and it has met each crisis under the system by which we legislated for a century and a half. We went through the Civil War which tore this country from one end to the other. We went through the Spanish-American War. We went through the First World War, and we went through the Second World War successfully. We not only met the issue ourselves, but we helped other countries to meet the issues involved in these wars. I think the committees of Congress have functioned very well. To get up here and call the rules and procedure a "crazy quilt" is something of which I do not approve. The country has done well in the past under time-tested rules of procedure. Of course, there are certain provisions in this bill that I do not like, but there are others of which I do approve. I know members of the special committee have worked hard and conscientiously and they feel that they have brought forth something constructive for the American people—I hope they have. With certain modifications of the bill, I shall support the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MONRONEY].

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, this amendment would completely wreck the committee reorganization and it really has no place in the project that we are now undertaking.

I happen to have opposed the establishment of the Committee on Un-American Activities when it was before the House for consideration, but we have vigorously tried to keep out of this bill everything except that which deals with the functional reorganization of Congress.

There are no political considerations or ideological considerations involved in this. I do hope the committee will allow us to go ahead so that we can provide ourselves with better-running machinery which we so badly need in this day and age.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BIEMILLER] to abolish the Un-American Activities Committee. In my opinion this committee is serving a definite and necessary function to the Congress and the Nation in revealing subversive and un-American activities which are detrimental to the best interests of national security.

In spite of the criticism that has been leveled at this committee as to its functions it nevertheless must be continued and the dignity of the House and its power to subpena witnesses in order to reveal subversive activities must be protected.

There are underground forces operating in this Nation which must be continually watched, there are forces operating under the guise of democracy that have no other purposes than to weaken or if possible overthrow this Government. These forces operate under the privilege of freedom of speech and freedom of the press who would, if they succeeded in gaining power, abolish the freedom of speech and freedom of the press which they now use to gain their objective. Due to the nefarious and subtle manner in which these forces operate they have succeeded in enlisting many influential citizens in their cause. They have succeeded in obtaining large sums of money for propaganda purposes. They have succeeded in electing to public office many candidates that espouse their causes in legislative bodies throughout the Nation.

We need this committee to unearth these activities. We need this committee to put these forces on notice that we as a Nation will not stand for these activities. If we want to change our form of government we can do it by constitutional processes provided for in our Constitution. We do not need the demoralizing activities of these foreign and communistic influences usually found in these subversive groups that try to introduce foreign ideas and ideals into our body politic.

I have consistently supported the Un-American Activities Committee since it was established. When it was established I would have preferred to have seen it set up as a special committee with equal representation of both major parties on its personnel. My position in that regard was misunderstood as meaning that I was opposed to investigation of subversive and un-American activities. Nothing could be further from the truth. I shall always oppose any un-American or subversive force or group that attempts to weaken or demoralize the Government of the United States, the greatest government in the world for the benefit of all of the people all of the time.

I urge the defeat of the amendment submitted by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BIEMILLER] to abolish the Un-American Activities Committee of the House.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BIEMILLER].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. BIEMILLER) there were—ayes 25, noes 127.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

Delegates and Resident Commissioner

SEC. 122. Rule XII of the Standing Rules of the House of Representatives is amended to read as follows:

"RULE XII

"Delegates and Resident Commissioner

"1. The Delegates from Hawaii and Alaska, and the Resident Commissioner to the United States from Puerto Rico, shall be elected to serve as additional members on the Committees on Agriculture, Armed Services, and Public Lands; and they shall possess in such committees the same powers and privileges as in the House, and may make any motion except to reconsider."

Reference of private claims bills

SEC. 123. Paragraph 3 of rule XXI of the Standing Rules of the House of Representatives is amended to read as follows:

"3. No bill for the payment or adjudication of any private claim against the Government shall be referred, except by unanimous consent, to any other than the following committees, namely: To the Committee on Foreign Affairs and to the Committee on the Judiciary."

PART 3—PROVISIONS APPLICABLE TO BOTH HOUSES

Private bills banned

SEC. 131. No private bill or resolution (including so-called omnibus claims or pension bills), and no amendment to any bill or resolution, authorizing or directing (1) the payment of money for property damages, for personal injuries or death for which suit may be instituted under the Federal Tort Claims Act, or for a pension (other than to carry out a provision of law or treaty stipulation); (2) the construction of a bridge across a navigable stream; or (3) the correction of a military or naval record, shall be received or considered in either the Senate or the House of Representatives.

Mr. LEA. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that we may pass by the first paragraph of section 131 and return to it after the Committee has acted on title V.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Congressional adjournment

SEC. 132. Except in time of war or during a national emergency proclaimed by the President, the two Houses shall adjourn sine die not later than the last day (Sundays excepted) in the month of July in each year unless otherwise provided by the Congress.

Committee procedure

SEC. 133. (a) Each standing committee of the Senate and the House of Representatives shall fix regular weekly, biweekly, or monthly meeting days for the transaction of business before the committee, and additional meetings may be called by the chairman as he may deem necessary.

(b) Each such committee shall keep a complete record of all committee action. Such record shall include a record of the votes on any question on which a record vote is demanded.

(c) It shall be the duty of the chairman of each such committee to report or cause to be reported promptly to the Senate or House of Representatives, as the case may be, any measure approved by his committee and to take or cause to be taken necessary steps to bring the matter to a vote.

(d) No measure or recommendation shall be reported from any such committee unless a majority of the committee were actually present.

(e) Each standing committee shall, so far as practicable, require all witnesses appearing before it to file in advance written statements of their proposed testimony, and to limit their oral presentations to brief summaries of their argument. The staff of each committee shall prepare digests of such statements for the use of committee members.

(f) All hearings conducted by standing committees or their subcommittees shall be open to the public, except executive sessions for marking up bills or for voting or where the committee by a majority vote orders an executive session.

Mr. HERTER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HERTER: On page 49, after line 4, insert a new subsection to read as follows:

"(g) Each standing committee of the Senate and the House of Representatives shall set atside a regular period during each month to afford opportunity to Members who have introduced any bill or resolution to appear before the committee to explain the measure and outline the nature and character of the considerations which in their judgment support its passage."

Mr. HERTER. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is phrased in the exact langauge of the provision carried in the bill originally reported by the select committee and passed by the Senate. Apparently it was left out in the drafting of the bill that is now before us, for reasons with which I am not familiar.

It is a very simple amendment which, to my mind, carries out in part the argument used by the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH], in regard to the morale of Members of the House, and likewise performs a really useful service. Today a great many Members of the House, particularly the younger Members, are humiliated by having to go back to their districts and tell the people in their districts that a certain bill which they filed with the House of Representatives had not only never been acted upon, but that the chairman of the committee in charge of the bill had never even allowed the Member 5 minutes before the committee in which to explain the purposes of the bill.

All this amendment would do would be to require committees either in executive session or through subcommittees or in whatever way they might choose to allow Members to come before them at regular times to say in a few words as to why they had faith in a particular bill that had been referred to that committee.

Mr. RIVERS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HERTER. I yield.

Mr. RIVERS. Does the gentleman's amendment provide that they shall also take action or just give a hearing?

Mr. HERTER. It does not require them to take action of any kind and does not even order them to give hearings. It merely permits a Member who wants to come before the committee and say a few words in support of a bill he had pending before the committee to explain his bill and why he feels it is of sufficient importance to warrant consideration. From that point on it does not compel the committee to do anything.

Mr. RIVERS. Does not the gentleman think there should be disposition made of the bill after hearing?

Mr. HERTER. I do not think so necessarily. This would not be a full hearing. It would merely allow the Member to appear before the committee and say a few words in support of the bill.

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HERTER. I yield.

Mr. JUDD. Would the gentleman's amendment allow a Member to get his bill before the committee despite unfavorable action on the part of a particular chairman regardless of the reason for his action?

Mr. HERTER. The gentleman is absolutely correct. I have had that experience and I think other Members have.

Mr. JUDD. I am heartily in favor of the gentleman's amendment.

Mr. HERTER. We have all had experiences where the chairman of a committee or a subcommittee arbitrarily refuses to let certain bills come before the committee. This amendment would at least secure to the Members an opportunity to say a few words in support of their bill and not face their constituents and say they could not even get five minutes' time in which to speak before a committee on the bill. It would not be left entirely up to the whim of the chairman.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I would just like to explain this amendment. It was in the original Senate bill. In conference with the leadership we agreed to delete it from the bill because of controversy that would seem to arise. I do not, therefore, feel that the committee could accept the amendment and must register our opposition to its adoption.

It is up to the House to determine the question on that basis.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to return to page 46 for the purpose of offering an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. PITTENGER: On page 46, line 19, strike out all of lines 19 to 24, inclusive; and on page 47, line 6, strike out all of lines 1 to 16, inclusive.

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Chairman, I realize that an amendment at this time with the present disposition in evidence may be more or less futile, but I want the RECORD to show that I think the House is making a mistake to abolish one of the old, historic committees of the House and Senate, namely, the Committee on Claims. There would have to be some perfecting amendment if this one were adopted.

In my opinion the machinery set up in this bill for handling claims against the Government is worse than any objection that may be found with existing committees. I hope the House will retain the Committee on Claims, unless we have reached a point where we want to make a brand new departure in the history and theory of government and reverse the theory that you cannot sue the sovereign. If you do not want to do that then you had better adopt this amendment; otherwise you establish a new principle to the effect that people who have a claim against the Government can sue the Government. Those who may think they have a claim have no redress whatever under this bill if it is passed, except as their case is authorized in the courts.

I hope the House will adopt the amendment and retain the Committee on Claims.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, this does not reestablish the Committee on Claims. This merely messes the whole thing up because there would be no committee to which we could refer these matters.

Mr. Chairman, I ask that the amendment be defeated.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. PITTENGER].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CANNON of Missouri:

On page 48, line 1, after the word "Representative", insert "except the Committee on Appropriations."

Page 48, line 18, after the word "each", insert "such."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, this section deals with meetings of committees to hear those who have submitted legislation which has been referred to committees. The proposition is not applicable to the Committee on Appropriations for the reason that it originates its own bills. It considers no bills introduced by Members of the House and, as a matter of fact, no bills are referred to the Committee on Appropriations except legislative bills in which may inadvertently be embodied an appropriation clause. Such bills are never considered by the committee.

The hearings of the committee are practically confined to representatives of the various departments of the Government. Their testimony is submitted in justifications which are printed and which are available to the members of the committee before the item involved is taken up.

Mr. Chairman, I ask that the amendment be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I am not here in the well of the House advocating the separate retention of a committee that is to be merged with others under the pending bill, although some are to be merged which I would have remain separate. I merely inquire about the powers, prerogatives, and the duties formerly held by a committee. Will the jurisdictions be merged as the committees are merged? Would the chairman explain a bit further what provision has now been adopted regarding retention of the jurisdiction of the various committees in the merger?

Mr. MONRONEY. The jurisdiction of the new committees is as contained in the printed bill, with the addition of the provision by an amendment which was adopted a short while ago by the House. This provides that where not otherwise specified in the bill the jurisdiction will be according to the precedents established in the House for the assignment of legislation to the committees.

That amendment was adopted a short time ago in the list of committee amendments. Several chairmen and committee members asked that it be placed in there since we could not make the jurisdictional list all-inclusive to cover everything that might possibly come up in the course of the introduction of bills and the consideration of legislation.

Mr. MURDOCK. It was the intention of the special committee to retain the functions, but merely gather them into the new committee organization?

Mr. MONRONEY. That is correct, but unless the jurisdiction is otherwise specified in here the precedents of the House will apply.

Mr. MURDOCK. I thank the gentleman for this explanation. As an illustration, I call attention to the fact that the Bureau of Reclamation has for many years under numerous acts of Congress passed since 1902 to the present had charge of hydroelectric power produced on irrigation projects and incidental thereto. I assume that the new committee with which the present Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation is to be merged will have all the jurisdiction over irrigation and reclamation possessed by the existing committee. I am not only proud of my committee but jealous of its functions and I insist on preserving them fully.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee powers

SEC. 134. (a) Each standing committee of the Senate, including any subcommittee of any such committee, is authorized to hold such hearings, to sit and act at such times and places during the sessions, recesses, and adjourned periods of the Senate, to require by subpena or otherwise the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such correspondence, books, papers, and documents, to take such testimony and to make such expenditures (not in excess of $10,000 for each committee during any Congress) as it deems advisable. Each such committee may make investigations into any matter within its jurisdiction, may report such hearings as may be had by it, and may employ stenographic assistance at a cost not exceeding 25 cents per hundred words. The expenses of the committee shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers approved by the chairman.

(b) Every committee and subcommittee serving the Senate and House of Representatives shall report the name, profession, and total salary of each staff member employed by it, and shall make an accounting of funds appropriated to it and expended by it to the Secretary of the Senate and Clerk of the House of Representatives, as the case may be, at least once every 6 months, and such information shall be published periodically in the Congressional Directory when and as the same is issued and as Senate and House documents, respectively, every 3 months.

(c) No standing committee of the Senate or the House, except the Committee on Rules of the House, shall sit, without special leave, while the Senate or the House, as the case may be, is in session.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CELLER: Page 49, line 6, after the word "Senate", add the words "and House of Representatives."

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, you will note if you read the committee print that section 134 (a) provides that only the standing committees of the Senate shall have the express power of investigation with the right to subpena and require the attendance of witnesses, together with the subpenaing of books, papers, documents, and correspondence, and so forth.

The original bill provided that not only the Senate standing committees but the House standing committees should have the same right. Why are we being treated like stepchildren? Why should the Senate standing committees have the right of subpena and that right be denied to the standing committees of the House? Is not our work just as important as the work of the Senate? Is not our work just as painstaking? Should not we have the concomitant right with the Senate to subpena? The power of investigation is a very important power. It should not be denied us. We should have it without being compelled to go to the Rules Committee and then to the House. It is unavailing that we have witnesses appear before our standing committees voluntarily. We may need the right, in order to do our work properly, to compel witnesses to divulge certain information that we seek. We should have the right to demand the production of books and documents and letters and correspondence. We cannot have that right unless you adopt my amendment. We must first get permission from the House.

In addition you will note that the Senate standing committees can spend for purposes of investigation $10,000 each without authorization whatsoever. Now why should not our standing committees likewise have the right to spend upwards of $10,000 for purposes of investigaton? If you feel that our work is just as important as is the work of the Senate, you must adopt my amendment.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, this was rather carefully considered by the House committee, and our set-up is considerably different from the set-up in the Senate. The Senate is plagued with a great many special committees. It is a rash that has broken out over there which practically destroys the continuity and the power of the standing committees.

In order to get away from that outbreak of special committees the Senate wrote in this provision for subpena power by their standing committees.

In discussing this with the leadership on both sides of the aisle and with many of the other leaders of the House it was determined that we have the machinery and the facilities in the House at this time; that we can arm our special or our standing committees with subpena powers anytime we wish.

An amendment is going to be offered to the appropriation section by the distinguished gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON], that is going to arm all of the investigators and clerks of the new Committee on Appropriations with the proper power.

But I do not think that this House at this time wants to vote $10,000 to all committees, without reference to the House itself, to be spent in investigations, having the right to take added testimony, and then also to have them running around, whether Congress is in session or out of session, with the right of subpenaing records.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MONRONEY. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. DIRKSEN. In view of the fact that it is still possible to set up select committees in the House where the subpena power can be lodged, it is a pretty broad power to grant to all of the standing committees, is it not?

Mr. MONRONEY. I thank the gentleman. It is also possible to give subpena power to any of the standing committees if they go to the Committee on Rules and ask for that power.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MONRONEY. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. CELLER. Would the gentleman be willing to give that power to standing committees without the $10,000 provision?

Mr. MONRONEY. No; I do not believe so. I think we are either going to have to maintain the integrity of this House bill on the floor or tear up the carefully planned and considerate judgment given it by all.

This bill is not coming into this House at this late date simply because I want it to or because the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] wants it to. Somebody in the leadership had to take the time and the care to go over this bill section by section and line by line.

I refuse to be a party to breaking any agreement that has been made for the changing of this bill. I think the distinguished Speaker and the majority and minority leaders, who helped us bring this bill to the floor, are entitled to more consideration than that.

Mr. CELLER. I agree with the gentleman that the bill is an exceptionally fine one and I want to vote for it, but that is no reason why we should not offer amendments if we think the amendments are proper and just. I think the amendment I have offered is a proper amendment.

Mr. MONRONEY. It is perfectly all right for the gentleman to offer the amendment, but I differ with the gentleman and I hope the Committee will vote down the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HOOK: On page 50, after line 11, insert the following:

"HEARINGS OF LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEES

"(a) A legislative committee may hold either public or private hearings and may examine witnesses and receive documentary evidence in such hearings.

"(b) If the testimony of a witness in a private hearing shall be reported stenographically, he shall be entitled to a stenographic copy of such testimony, upon payment of the costs of such transcript, as soon as the committee shall make any public reference to such testimony.

"(c) A witness at a private hearing shall have the right to have his attorney present: Provided, That such attorney shall be allowed only to observe the proceeding and not to participate in it nor to advise the witness while on the witness stand, unless the committee member conducting the hearing shall at his discretion allow such attorney other privileges.

"(d) A witness who testifies in a public or private hearing shall have the right at the conclusion of his testimony either to make an oral statement or at his option to file a sworn statement, which shall be made part of the record of such hearing.

"(e) If a witness at a public hearing shall by oral testimony or documentary evidence defame, allege misconduct by, or otherwise comment adversely upon any individual, partnership, association, corporation, or governmental agency or officer or employee thereof, and the committee shall not strike such material from the record, such individual, partnership, association, corporation, or governmental agency, or officer or employee thereof, shall have the right to file with the committee a sworn written denial, defense, or other explanation, which shall be made part of the record of such public hearing, and in addition the person individually defamed or otherwise the subject of adverse comment shall have the right to testify in person concerning such adverse comment in a public hearing to be conducted by the committee.

"(f) No witness shall be deemed in contempt of a legislative committee for refusing to obey a subpena issued by one or more of its members, unless and until the full committee has, upon notice to all its members, met, considered the alleged contempt, and by a majority of those present voted such witness in contempt of such committee: Provided, That this subdivision shall not apply to a witness who having obeyed a subpena declines to answer a question at such hearing or otherwise acts contumaciously.

"REPORTS OF LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEES

"(a) A legislative committee shall not publish or file any report, whether interim or final, unless and until a meeting of the committee has been called upon proper notice and such report has been approved by a majority of those voting at such meeting.

"(b) A legislative committee, its members, counsel, employees, or agents, shall not publish or file any statement or report alleging misconduct by or otherwise commenting adversely upon any individual, partnership, association, corporation, or governmental agency, unless and until such individual, partnership, association, corporation, or governmental agency has been advised of the alleged misconduct or adverse comment and has been given a reasonable opportunity to present its sworn written denial, defense, or other explanation to such committee; nor shall any such statement or report be publicly released unless and until the committee, upon notice to all of its members, has met and approved such public release.

"NO PRIVATE PROFIT FOR COMMITTEE MEMBERS OR STAFF

"No member of a legislative committee, its counsel, employees, or agents, shall for compensation speak, lecture, or write about such committee, its purposes, procedures, accomplishments, or reports, during the existence of such committee."

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Chairman, this is procedure governing legislative investigating committees. I have talked about this amendment before. I think the membership of the House is well acquainted with it. I do believe there should be proper procedures of investigating committees set up in the House. You and I know that we do not have them at the present time. You know and I know that a very prominent Member of this House asked to be given the very privileges that are set forth in this bill for his own protection. I think that for the protection of witnesses brought before committees, and persons being investigated, and in the interest of orderly procedure, we should adopt this amendment.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on this amendment close in 1 minute.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I am confident this matter was not submitted to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MONRONEY] or myself or to any member of the joint committee. So far as I know, it was not submitted at the time the joint-committee hearings were in progress. Here is a long textual amendment which is very prolix.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. HOOK. This was submitted to the committee.

Mr. DIRKSEN. It has never come to my attention, I am sorry to say, and I sincerely hope the House will vote down the amendment. It may have been submitted to the committee but it has not currently come to my attention.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOOK].

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

CONFERENCE RULES ON AMENDMENTS IN NATURE OF SUBSTITUTE

SEC. 135. (a) In any case in which a disagreement to an amendment in the nature of a substitute has been referred to conferees, it shall be in order for the conferees to report a substitute on the same subject matter; but they may not include in the report matter not committed to them by either House. They may, however, include in their report in any such case matter which is a germane modification of subjects in disagreement.

(b) In any case in which the conferees violate subsection (a) the conference report shall be subject to a point of order.

LEGISLATIVE OVERSIGHT BY STANDING COMMITTEES

SEC. 136. To assist the Congress in appraising the administration of the laws and in developing such amendments or related legislation as it may deem necessary, each standing committee of the Senate and the House of Representatives shall exercise continuous watchfulness of the execution by the administrative agencies concerned of any laws the subject matter of which is within the jurisdiction of such committee; and for that purpose shall study all pertinent reports and data submitted to the Congress by the agencies in the executive branch of the Government.

DECISIONS ON QUESTIONS OF COMMITTEE JURISDICTION

SEC. 137. In any case in which a controversy arises as to the jurisdiction of any standing committee of the Senate with respect to any proposed legislation the question of jurisdiction shall be decided by the presiding officer of the Senate without debate in favor of that committee which has jurisdiction over the subject matter which predominates in such proposed legislation, but such decision shall be subject to an appeal.

LEGISLATIVE BUDGET

SEC. 138. (a) The Committee on Ways and Means and the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives, and the Committee on Finance and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, are authorized and directed to meet jointly at the beginning of each regular session of Congress and after study and consultation, giving due consideration to the Budget recommendations of the President, report to their respective Houses a legislative Budget for the ensuing fiscal year, including the estimated over-all Federal receipts and expenditures for such year. Such report shall contain a recommendation for the maximum amount to be appropriated for expenditure in such year which shall include such an amount to be reserved for deficiencies as may be deemed necessary by such committees. If the estimated receipts exceed the estimated expenditures, such report shall contain a recommendation for a reduction in the public debt. Such report shall be made by March 1.

(b) The report shall be accompanied by a concurrent resolution adopting such Budget, and fixing the maximum amount to be appropriated for expenditure in such year. If the estimated expenditures exceed the estimated receipts, the concurrent resolution shall include a section substantially as follows: "That it is the sense of the Congress that the public debt shall be increased in an amount equal to the amount by which the estimated expenditures for the ensuing fiscal year exceed the estimated receipts, such amount being $."

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer a committee amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment proposed by Mr. MONRONEY: On page 51, line 23, after the comma, insert "or duly authorized subcommittee thereof."

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman explain the amendment?

Mr. MONRONEY. This section deals with the legislative budget. The question was raised, that full committees of the House and Senate Appropriations Committees and full committees of the Ways and Means and Senate Finance Committees would be unwieldy because of their large number. It was not intended that subcommittees would not be permitted, in fact it was anticipated that the initial work would be done by them.

The language of the bill is broad enough to permit subcommittee action, but we are specifying in this amendment now that duly authorized subcommittees of the four committees joining in the preparation of this legislative budget will meet to take it up.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer a committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment offered by Mr. MONRONEY: On page 52, line 11, strike out "March 1" and insert in lieu thereof "February 15."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. TABER: On page 51, line 19, to page 52, line 20, inclusive, strike out all of section 138.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I took the floor a little while ago and explained what this amendment would do. I was hopeful that the proponents of this section would have something to offer other than bald generalities and would explain how the thing would work. We have received nothing in support of the section but bald generalities.

I am offering this amendment from a deep sense of public duty. It will absolutely destroy the operations of the Appropriations Committee in the House of Representatives. It will increase spending. It will prevent any kind of orderly procedure by the House. Instead of it being a progressive, forward-looking proposal, it is a reactionary proposal and a step backward. We might just as well be honest about it. If this proposal is adopted and an attempt is made to set up a legislative budget on any kind of a scale that is accurate enough to be any good, it means long, arduous hearings upon those items, just as our committees are obliged to give that situation. If it is to mean nothing, I do not know why we have it here.

In addition to that, the committee that is set up is absolutely cumbersome—104 members of the committee. Of course, under this provision it can act through subcommittees, but they would know absolutely nothing about it unless they conducted hearings. Then, what would happen? They would have to establish by resolution what that ceiling might be. If it was to be effective, we would have to break down into bills for agencies and departments a ceiling for each one. If we were to do that, it would be absolutely impossible for the Appropriations Committee to start hearings upon any of the bills until after that procedure had been followed.

The question here is whether we want to do the right thing and do a constructive thing or whether we want to do something that will destroy legislative processes. I want to see the House a better representative agency of the people, but if you pass this section and try to put it into effect, you will fix things so that it will be absolutely impossible to have thorough hearings upon appropriation bills and make the cuts that need to be made if this Government is going to be preserved. If you undertake to do this job in this way it will be impossible for the House of Representatives to control the initiative on appropriation bills. It is going to result in an over-all omnibus appropriation bill, with all kinds of logrolling and all kinds of efforts to destroy any economy in government.

The Appropriations Committee was set up by Martin Madden originally in such way that the men would be judges, independent of special interests. No one was permitted on the subcommittees who had any special interest or wanted favors. If you throw this thing into a mass where there are representatives of every special interest, and allow lobbying and logrolling to fix the original Budget and then cut down the time within which the Appropriations Committee can operate by itself, you are just absolutely destroying that independence that was set up when the original Appropriations Committee was set up. No one has presented anything but generalities and the statement that lots of people outside were looking for this and interested in it. There has been no explanation as to how it could possibly work, and work effectively and efficiently. To my inquiries I received no answer except generalities; I will receive none because there is none. If this were workable I would support it and I would go along with it wholeheartedly, but I know it is not, and I cannot.

I hope this amendment will be adopted and that we will try to follow a procedure in the House of Representatives where the Congress can cut down the bureaus of the Government and we will not have the appropriations of the Government in the hands of bureaucrats and self-seekers. That is the thing that would be sustained if this proposal were put through, and I do not like to see it.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section close in 25 minutes.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I have not talked on this bill at all. I should like to have 10 minutes on this section. This is the only section I wish to talk about.

Mr. MONRONEY. I will modify my request and make it 30 minutes.

Mr. PATMAN. I may say that the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON] has not talked on the bill, neither have I. Each of us would like 10 minutes. I do not think that is an unreasonable request.

Mr. MONRONEY. I will not insist on closing debate at this time; but, after all, this was discussed for an hour and 20 minutes this morning under the 5-minute rule. I do hope Members will limit themselves to a reasonable time.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I have not talked on this bill at all, either on the rule or in general debate, and this is perhaps the only time I will ask recognition. I therefore ask unanimous consent that I may proceed for five additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I must object. The hour is getting late, and many Members are going home tomorrow.

Mr. PATMAN. I do not think it was very kind of the gentleman to have objected. We have not objected to anybody having an extension of time. It does seem that on a bill of this importance we should have just a little time to discuss it.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Texas may proceed for 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

Mr. FOGARTY. Mr. Chairman, I object.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, this is a very important amendment; I am in favor of its adoption. It sets up what really might be properly termed a caste system in Congress. It leaves to 2 committees in the House and 2 committees in the Senate the power to control all important legislation involving appropriations for 435 Members of the House and 96 Members of the United States Senate. That is what it does.

HOUSE RULES UP TO DATE

I am not joining this anvil chorus proclaiming that our House rules are so obsolete and unworkable that we should absolutely make every radical change that is proposed. I am in agreement on a number of these proposed changes, but I consider the document that contains the rules of the House of Representatives as the most modern document in the Library of Congress or here in the House of Representatives. For 157 years these rules have grown up under trial and error. A majority of the House can always work its will under the rules of this House. We have gone through the greatest depression in all history and we have gone through the greatest war in all history. We whipped them both under the present rules of the House of Representatives. Now, this is a departure from the rules and this proposal is bad and the amendment striking it out should be adopted. Any time you propose to set up a caste system here and make it impossible for the majority of the Members of the House to do what they want to do, I say we should look into it and carefully consider it.

Here is what the result will be. These committees will meet and will say: "We will appropriate money for certain things only, just certain things only." Something like the terminal-leave bill comes up. If we had had this proposal in force this year we could not have passed the terminal-leave bill. If we were to have some kind of emergency arise, of course, unexpectedly, we could not take care of that if it required money. It would be a violation of the rule that we adopt on February 15 each year.

Mr. Chairman, this is a far-reaching proposal and should be stricken from the bill. Of course, it would be easy to say, "Now, we would like to pay old-age assistance, we would like to pay social security, we would like to appropriate money for highways, flood control, and soil conservation, but we have tied our hands. We gave four committees the power to say how much money we can appropriate this year and they have stated, we have adopted their suggestion, and we cannot exceed it." Of course, if we pass a resolution we could increase the national debt, then we could go ahead and do it. But why not allow an increase in the taxes, if necessary, without increasing the national debt to provide for something that we want?

This puts the House definitely on the spot to the extent that it will say, "Now, we have no money left. We would like to provide all these benefits; they are worth while, like terminal leave, and other things; but we cannot do it. These four all-powerful committees have met." They would meet with logrolling privileges and opportunities. They can swap among themselves. That is contrary to our form of government.

It was always intended that one House should be a balance on the other House. This is consolidating the two Houses, allowing the four most powerful committees to get together, trade among themselves, if they desire, and run the Congress like they want to run it. It is going too far and this amendment should be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pending amendment.

Mr. Chairman, it looks to me as if certain people are trying to make a mountain out of a molehill, to use a homely expression. When the gentleman from Texas speaks about members of the two tax committees and the two appropriations committees getting together and logrolling, I do not think he really meant what he said, because that would be expressing a rather low opinion of four very important committees of the Congress. It so happens that I am a member of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation and I know with what benefit to the country and to the taxing structure of the country that committee has functioned and continues to function. If a joint committee having broad supervisory powers over taxation is good for the tax structure, then why would not a joint budget committee be good for the spending program?

We have been going along for years, as the gentleman from New York so ably pointed out this morning, and there has been absolutely no liaison between the taxing committees and the spending committees. The purpose of title III is to coordinate the work of the two committees. The Ways and Means Committee should know what the budget is going to be before it brings in a tax bill and, on the other hand, the Appropriations Committee should know approximately what they are going to have to do with before they start reporting appropriation bills. Of course, I appreciate the fact that the Appropriations Committee views with distaste, if not with general alarm, any attempt on the part of the Congress to place even a small degree of supervision over spending.

We all know that the way we have been going for many years has not worked to the country's advantage. The budget has been out of balance for 12 or 15 years. The national debt continues to grow apace. It has not worked. Now let us try something else.

This need not necessarily be permanent legislation to the extent that it cannot be changed in a few years by a future Congress. We are embarking on something quite new in the way of government financing so we will have to proceed through trial and error. As this thing works out, we will see where it needs strengthening and perhaps where it should be cut down. This country is not going to expire next year, and neither is Congress going out of business next year. Let us try it. I maintain that it certainly cannot be any worse than the present system. To my way of thinking title III is the very heart of the proposal before us.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section close in 25 minutes, the last 5 minutes to be reserved to the committee.

Mr. JONES. I object, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I shall try to be very brief. Of course, I know that all of us want to complete this matter promptly, but let us look at this thing just very honestly and fairly and see how much there is to it and how much logic there is in it. All in the world that the provision in the bill does is to have a group of men, members of these committees, get together, probably on January 15 of each year, and make a decision by February 15 on all matters contained in the Budget. They are going to be in session for a long period of 30 days and are expected to tell us intelligently what we should do. Of course, they cannot. Everyone knows that it will be simply an offhand expression of opinion, because they can no more know all the details of the various appropriations than they could know about what is going to happen during the next year.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'NEAL. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Is it not clear in this proposal that this special committee shall be required merely to recommend the maximum amount to be spent and not the details of its expenditures?

Mr. O'NEAL. But that is the whole question. How can they make an intelligent decision? In fact, every year large appropriations are necessary because of legislation passed after February 15.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'NEAL. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. JONES. The provision in section 138 is meaningless because it does not bind anybody.

Mr. O'NEAL. Certainly not. Furthermore, let me say again that billions of dollars are appropriated after February 15 that they could not possibly know about. Exigencies arise and emergencies occur. They could not possibly tell what it is going to be, and it is the most futile gesture that I could imagine. Just listen to what the present law is. All we have to do is to carry out the present law and we will accomplish whatever we would by the provisions of this bill. The present law says:

1. If the Budget indicates an excess of expenditures (not appropriations) over receipts, the President is required to include in the Budget recommendations for new taxes, loans, or other appropriate action to meet the estimated deficiency.

2. If the estimated receipts exceed the estimated expenditures, the President is required to make such recommendations as in his opinion the public interests require.

3. If deficiency or supplemental estimates alter the regular-Budget proposals as regards deficits or excesses, the President is required to submit recommendations as in the case of the regular Budget.

That is the law today. If we have additional appropriations the President is required to make that certification, and all we have to do is to take that and act upon it. But how ridiculous it is to say that any group of men in 30 days' time can examine a thirty-five or forty billion dollar budget, anticipate what is going to be spent after February 15, and tell you then that you must live within it.

Gentlemen, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations and the ranking member of the committee, two men who have had more experience than anybody in the House with this subject, feel that it would very strongly work against the best interests of the country and the work of the Committee on Appropriations. The committee met and discussed the problem, and all of them are more or less experts on this proposition. My recollection is that the vote was 17 to 3 against this being in the bill. If you want to put something in the bill just to support the Reorganization Committee, all right; otherwise, I think the amendment of the gentleman from Missouri should be supported.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment close in 30 minutes. We have been over this subject for an hour in general debate and for over an hour under the 5-minute rule.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

Mr. JONES. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Chairman, may I say to the chairman of the special committee handling this matter that I have two amendments that I wish to offer. I think they are very important. This matter is very important to the Committee on Appropriations. We feel that the bill proposed by the special committee as far as it concerns the Committee on Appropriations is ill-conceived, and we feel very strongly about it. I ask the gentleman to reserve his request for a few moments.

Mr. RAYBURN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Chairman, the way our program stands now we must, if humanly possible, complete consideration of this bill today. Even though debate is not closed in a reasonable time, I trust the committee will stay in session until we complete the consideration of this bill today. If we are to do that, we will have to make more progress than we have been making in the last 2 hours.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I regret very much that I am compelled to ask unanimous consent that all debate close in 40 minutes. Only eight Members are standing at this time, and that will give each Member standing 5 minutes. I further ask that the last 5 minutes be reserved to the committee.

Mr. JONES. Is the request that debate close in 40 minutes on this section or on this amendment?

Mr. MONRONEY. On this section and all amendments thereto.

Mr. JONES. I object, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I am reluctantly compelled to move that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 40 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN].

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to this section of the bill because I feel it is unworkable. The reorganization features are mainly very good and certainly the number of the House committees should be cut down. The Members of the House should take into consideration the opinion of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations and the opinion of the ranking minority member of the Committee on Appropriations, as well as the opinion of 17 out of the 20 men on that committee who voted yesterday in our committee against including this particular section in the bill.

I would suggest as I have suggested heretofore that if the proposed joint commitee be scheduled to meet June 15 and then go over the work of the Committee on Appropriations up to that date and decide whether or not we had appropriated too much money for the session, then that joint committee could really be effective in saving money. That joint committee would decide perhaps that Congress has appropriated too much money and it is necessary to have a general percentagewise cut through the Federal personnel with certain exceptions, such as Veterans' Administration, for example. Then we would really have something to work upon. That committee could check over the general appropriation bills and make recommendations to the Congress as to what could be eliminated so that the budget could be balanced. We must have balanced budgets, and personally I have voted to cut out hundreds of millions of dollars of excessive expenditures. The New Dealers have shown, however, no inclination to save the taxpayers money, nor do I expect them to do so in the future. The House will be doing a great disfavor to the people of America by retaining this particular section. I hope Mr. TABER's amendment will be adopted.

Mr. Chairman, at this time let me say that I cannot vote for this bill if the provisions for salary increases to Members and retirement pay for Members remain in the measure. The old people of America have had little, if any, consideration from this Congress. In the past 8 years I have voted against all increases in our own salaries, feeling that, unless I oppose my own pay raise, no justification can be had in opposing increases for those in the Government employ. Unless we here in Congress show some resistance to the tide of inflation sweeping upon America, how can we expect other groups to do so. It is my hope that the House will not approve the raise in our own salaries nor the provision for retirement pay. Otherwise, I must vote "no" on this bill.

Mr. HERTER. Mr. Chairman, I hesitate very much to get into a debate on what is a fairly technical matter with the distinguished members of the Ways and Means Committee who have spent many years in handling the technical processes of appropriations in the House. I do so only with great reluctanee, but I feel qualified in a small way because I had to struggle with this problem for many years in our home legislature, and also as chairman of a committee of the Council of State Governments, working on the same subject.

The proposal the committee has offered is certainly no cure-all. Claiming too much for it would be just as serious as criticizing it too badly. Personally, I wish the committee had gone much farther in what to my mind are the most difficult processes in our appropriations. To begin with, I am convinced that as long as the credit of the United States can be used with the ease with which it is now used, in other words, as long as we can continue borrowing all the money we want to borrow by simple majorities in raising the debt limit, it is an open invitation to spend more money than you have got coming in from current revenue.

In the second place, the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] talked a lot about the evils of an omnibus bill. It is only through an omnibus bill that the Members of the House can tell where it is currently going, because when we vote on each individual appropriation bill we have no idea what is going to follow it, perhaps a week or 2 weeks or a month later. We never have a chance to see the full fiscal picture before us. In other words, each appropriation as it comes along is a temptation to spend more money on the ground that perhaps we can cut it off of a future appropriation bill for some other department later on. We never know from day to day whether the money we are appropriating is coming out of current revenue in accordance with the plans of the Ways and Means Committee, whether it is coming out of the sale of surplus material, the proceeds of which should be reducing our public debt, or whether it is coming out of borrowings.

I remember a short time ago a statement was issued by the White House saying that this year we were going to balance our budget for the reason that we had borrowed last year more money than we actually used. Of all the silly financial statements I have ever heard that is the silliest, and shows how muddled is our financial picture.

The particular provision in this bill is not going to cure the situation, but I think it is helpful. It is helpful because of the psychology that is established. If the committee, call it what you will, made up of joint committees of the two branches that control taxation and control expenditures, gives a financial picture to the House, even if it is no more than their best guess as to where we are going to come out if we appropriate as much money as shown by the budgetary recommendation of the President, then I think psychologically we can more intelligently take the point of view that we are either going to save money, we are going to stop borrowing money, or we are going to cut down progressively all along the line; or perhaps that this year because of the revenues predicated upon tax returns, we can appropriate a little more for public works. At least we will have a little more of the picture. Today we have none as we progress from one appropriation bill to the other.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HERTER. I yield.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. We had the same situation in the Postwar Economic and Planning Committee. My impression was when they came before the Banking and Currency Committee that they were forced to add to extravagance rather than detract. The chairman and the ranking member came before our committee and they were specially committed to this extravagance. So psychologically they were for the extravagance.

Mr. HERTER. What the lady says is true almost all along the line.

A moment ago the gentleman from Kentucky made the statement that the Appropriations Committee did not know by February 15 what kind of measures were going to come up in the form of other legislation that would require spending. That to my mind is one of the additional reasons for the section under debate. The most dangerous thing that happens is being uncertain in your mind as to what you can spend within a year, and then have unexpected legislation come along that completely upsets an orderly program.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. JONES] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Chairman, it is indeed regrettable that a matter so important as this has to be decided in so short a time. Let us see what the apparent purpose of section 138 is. It is to lead the people to believe that some way, somehow, appropriations will be limited to the amount of the income of the Government. That is the intended general impression: "That somehow this reorganization of Congress will limit appropriations to the amount of income the Government receives." There is nothing in section 138 that will do that. This section makes in order, makes legal, the very thing that the Joint Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments has done for the last 5 years. I have seen reams of material from that committee.

One of its most outstanding publicity stunts is an appeal to take one-third of the employees off the Federal pay roll, reduce the number by a million. What happened? Why did Congress not cut a million employees from the Federal pay roll? Because the chairman and some members of that joint committee are never on the floor to fight when individual appropriation items are before their particular body of Congress. They are not on the floor of Congress to cut down the number of employees provided for in those separate appropriation bills. They yell to the public some distance away from the appropriation debate.

The way to cut the appropriations or take people off the pay rolls is not to write magazine articles or get out brochures under the name of the Joint Committee on Federal Expenditures; the only way to do it is to get people in both Houses of Congress who want to cut expenditures to vote against the increases. Then they will be cut, if you can find a majority of Congressmen who want to stop deficit spending. An election, in my opinion, would help.

If you permit this section 138 to remain in the bill you are going to be embarrassed just as you are embarrassed today by having someone in your district say to you: "Why do you not get on the band wagon of the chairman of the Joint Committee on Nonessential Expenditures?" Why! Constituents have even written thus to Doc SMITH, who has voted "No" so many times that he may doubt whether he has ever voted for an appropriation. Constituents have even asked my colleague, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. CLEVENGER], and me why we did not get on the Byrd bandwagon. CLIFF CLEVENGER, of the Fifth, Doc SMITH, of the Eighth, and I, of the Fourth Districts of Ohio, have voted "No" on appropriations bills so often Chairman BYRD cannot find our band wagon or hear the music. And there is going to be a lot of confusion on the majority side for sponsoring this provision. You are going to be embarrassed. Project yourself into the future under this bill. The President sends to Congress a $35,000,000,000 budget. It will be examined by this committee provided by section 138 of 104 members or a subcommittee thereof, representing the Senate Finance Committee, the House Ways and Means Committee, the House Appropriations Committee, and the Senate Appropriations Committee. Thus super committee will get publicity. Headlines will be spread stating how they recommended a decrease to the President's $35,000,000,000 budget to $25,000,000,000. Then we proceed to start to commence to appropriate on individual appropriation bills just as we do now and we will wake up after all bills have passed to find that the present spending — deficit spending — membership of both Houses want to appropriate more than this "superduper" appropriation ceiling committee has recommended.

You find Congress has appropriated $45,000,000,000 and Congress has the same Members, the same administration, New Deal majorities, who want to spend, and spend, and spend; and then you will be embarrassed to the tune of $20,000,000,000 and the folks back home will think they have a bunch of nit-wits in Congress for not following this "superduper" synthetic ceiling committee. On the other hand your "superduper" committee will have to throw an ax at the $35,000,000,000 budget, as the gentleman from Illinois said he threw an ax at the OPA budget of $156,000,000 and finally OPA got $76,000,000. Under present procedure for a Budget estimate of $156,000,000 for OPA, the House allowed or appropriated $106,000,000. The Senate had a different idea and the item went to conference. The gentleman from Illinois says they threw an ax at the OPA in conference. It is silly to think the procedure will be otherwise with a $35,000,000,000 Presidential budget and in 1, 2, or 3 months' time, not having any analytical or scientic foundation or basis upon which to act, that this "superduper" committee can throw anything but an ax at it and cut $10,000,000,000 or $5,000,000,000 off or any amount that seems politically expedient. This section 138 is ill-advised, silly, ridiculous, will make fools out of the Members of Congress unless you adopt an amendment which says that the recommendations of this committee will be the ceiling, item for item, and that any amendment or bill offered by the Appropriations Committees, or any Member increasing the amount above the "superduper" committee's recommendation will be subject to a point of order and illegal. Then you make this "superduper" committee do what you are trying to make the public believe section 138 provides, to wit: A ceiling on expenditures based upon a Budget estimate and upon the best brains of the "superduper" committee.

I will offer amendments to make section 138 do what you say you want to do: "Make expenditures balance income." My amendments will legally make the section 138 "superduper" committee ceilings the legal ceilings on appropriations that Congress or the Appropriations Committees of the House and Senate cannot break through. Without such amendments section 138 is silly, meaningless, and an expression of a will-o'-the-wisp hope, published for political purposes, which will rise to plague Members of Congress.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, what about subsection (b) of section 138? Let me read what that says:

(b) The report shall be accompanied by a concurrent resolution adopting such budget and fixing the maximum amount to be appropriated for expenditure in such year. If the estimated expenditures exceed the estimated receipts, the concurrent resolution shall include a section substantially as follows: "That it is the sense of the Congress that the public debt shall be increased in an amount equal to the amount by which the estimated expenditures for the ensuing fiscal year exceed the estimated receipts, such amount being $."

What kind of a proposition is that? What does it do? Why, it gives sanction to deficit spending. It is bad enough to have this curse of deficit spending on us without any law, but why pass a law specifically legalizing deficit spending? I would like to have somebody answer that for me.

This language would give sanction to the whole program of deficit spending that has been going on for the last 15 years. This would have the effect of putting our stamp of approval on the deficit spending that the New Deal planners are contemplating for the future.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. I yield to the gentlewoman from Illinois.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. Does not the gentleman think it is absolutely futile to pass a law like this to reform Congressmen's uneconomical habits? To reform Congress you have to reform Congressmen; is that right?

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. I am reminded again of the statement made by a prominent historian who spoke about the great delusion, faith in the sovereign power of political machinery. Let the people of this country understand that there is nothing in this bill whatsoever that promises them any more statesmanship than they have been receiving in recent years.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. This bill just gives Congress a face-lifting?

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. Take out from this measure pensions and the increase of salary for Congressmen and I fear there will be left little interest in it. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH] was unable to get the attention of the committee until he mentioned pensions and salary raise for Congressmen. Then he got some attention.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. Does not the gentleman think this bill could be defeated very easily if it were not being log-rolled through?

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. Certainly.

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. Has the gentleman ever seen a regular appropriation bill leave the House and go to the Senate without it being increased considerably in that body?

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. I know it is a common practice for the other body to increase appropriations.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE] is recognized.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CASE of South Dakota: On page 52, line 14, strike out the period and the balance of the paragraph, lines 14 to 20, inclusive, and insert "and upon passage of that concurrent resolution no appropriation bill shall be passed appropriating funds in excess of the budget so adopted except by a vote of two-thirds of the Members voting in each House, a quorum being present."

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, on the whole, I think it must be said that the special committee has done a good job in the sections on committee reorganization. I think an attempt to establish a review of appropriations in the light of prospective revenues is especially to be commended; but if I may have the attention of the chairman of the special committee, the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MONRONEY], I would like to ask a question about its operation. The first paragraph of section 138 concludes by saying that such reports shall be made by March 1 or February 15, as now amended. Then, section (b) says:

The report shall be accompanied by a concurrent resolution adopting such budget, and fixing the maximum amount to be appropriated for expenditure in such year.

Now, I want to ask the gentleman what would happen if nothing is done with the report?

Mr. MONRONEY. I will say to the distinguished gentleman that there will be no further restriction on appropriations. Congress can break the financial budget which we set. But the country will know that we are morally bound, the newspapers and Members of the Congress will know it by voting affirmatively for this resolution adopting the budget.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Wait just a minute. All that this language requires is that such report shall be made by such and such a date. There is nothing in here that says that Congress has to adopt the report.

Mr. MONRONEY. I thought the gentleman was referring to the next section relating to the adoption of the concurrent resolution, fixing the total over-all appropriation figure, and if a deficit is running, to specify that the Congress authorizes the creation of that much debt for the fiscal year. I think properly we are making an approach to a definitely improved fiscal policy.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I thank the gentleman for his frank reply which, in effect, is that there is nothing to give effect to the budget ceiling except public opinion. That is my objection to paragraph (b). It does not go far enough. In fact, it does nothing to give real effect to the findings. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN] complained about this section on the ground that it ties the hands of Congress. My complaint is that it does no such thing. It merely holds out a little gesture to the country and says that we told a committee to make a report and recommend a ceiling on appropriations, but it does not bind the Congress to that ceiling. It does nothing about it except to require that the report shall be accompanied by a resolution which Congress may or may not adopt, saying that the national debt should be increased if the ceiling is exceeded. If Congress ignores the resolution nothing happens; if Congress adopts the resolution nothing happens except that Congress has said it thinks the national debt should be increased.

In my judgment the section needs something to give effect to the ceiling. So the amendment which I have offered says that if the concurrent resolution is adopted, then an appropriation in excess of that amount may be passed only by a two-thirds vote. That is in harmony with the provision which a great many State legislatures have; that deficiency appropriations may not be made except by a two-thirds vote and that appropriations may not be made immediately available on an emergency basis except by a two-thirds vote.

The language of the bill does not have any teeth in this section. It merely creates a committee and requires it to make recommendations. If the over-all budget idea is to be effective, you have to do something more than that. Nobody guarantees that Congress will adopt this resolution. The bill simply requires a report by a committee by a certain date recommending a ceiling for appropriations. If we really want to do something about joining expenditures and revenues, we must give effect to that ceiling. My amendment says that if Congress exceeds this budget, the excess may be adopted only by a two-thirds vote.

The latter part of (b) is not needed. As a matter of fact, we put Congress in a somewhat ridiculous position to require that the proposed resolution say that the public debt should be increased in advance of any demonstrated need for it. The Treasury does not go out and sell a lot of securities until it has demands for cash to meet maturing obligations. Many times receipts run ahead of the estimates. That has been true in the past and it is true currently, I think. Why then increase the public debt in advance of the time when the cash is needed to meet maturing obligations?

Consequently, I have offered an amendment dropping that language and providing instead that appropriations in excess of the ceiling may be adopted only by a two-thirds vote.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at an appropriate place in the RECORD prior to the vote on the amendment with relation to the Committee on Un-American Activities.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORE].

Mr. GORE. Mr. Chairman, not having spoken on this bill, I want to begin my remarks on this amendment by saying that my good friend and our distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MONRONEY] has done a monumental work. I want to praise him, although there are some features of the bill with which I disagree. This particular feature of the bill appears to be sound and I think it is a forward step. We have heard the situation described as some Members think it might prove to be under this provision. For instance, I have heard the distinguished gentleman from Ohio, my able friend [Mr. JONES], describe how silly a fiscal policy we might develop under this procedure. I wondered if he was not describing the ridiculous procedure which we have under our present system. Mr. Chairman, let us think a minute. Does the Congress have a fiscal policy? Does it? Let me ask you another question: Is there anything which will loom before the Congress within the next decade more important than fiscal affairs? Under the present system, we have no formal way of developing a fiscal policy, and what is more, we have no way of sensibly following a policy if we had one. Mr. Chairman, much has been said about the workability of this. For 4 years I have been on the Committee on Appropriations. The members of that committee work very hard. But I say to you that appropriations are made by the Congress and by the Committee on Appropriations with less accurate knowledge of the amount that should be appropriated than is healthy for the country.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GORE. Always, to my distinguished and able and lovable friend, the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. O'NEAL. Does the gentleman with his sound business experience and the experience he has had on the Committee on Appropriations feel that any group of men could pass on appropriation estimates in 30 days from January 15 to February 15, and do an intelligent job?

Mr. GORE. In specific items, no. If you mean by your question, Can the Congress in 30 days decide how much money they are going to appropriate for every item, this or that project, hither and yon?—no. But if the Congress cannot within 30 days make up its mind on a sensible over-all fiscal policy for the year, then I think Congress is a laggard institution and it is time that we were reorganizing. It is time we bestirred ourselves again and again to improve this institution.

Mr. O'NEAL. Will the gentleman indicate how this provision as recommended by the Committee on Reorganization could possibly accomplish such a result?

Mr. GORE. That is the purpose. I hope it can accomplish that result. I do not think it could be worse than the present helter-skelter procedure. We now have no definite goals for either over-all appropriations or revenue. And while we talk so much about appropriations, remember also that the revenue end of fiscal affairs is to be considered. Perhaps if the national need is sufficient to warrant an increased appropriation, the great Committee on Ways and Means would be spurred on to an earlier consideration and presentation of their bills and perhaps that committee then might not feel constrained to ask for a gag rule on every bill from that committee. This is the very heart of the effort made by this bill to implement the Congress and its methods of procedure to the end that the Congress itself may formulate and at least attempt to follow a sound fiscal policy.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] is recognized for 5 minutes to close debate.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, there have been some rather astounding arguments here today. It has been said by the gentleman from Kentucky that this is a futile gesture. The gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] said it would be dangerous. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. JONES] said it would be absurd and embarrassing to the Congress. The gentleman from Ohio said it would be an urge for deficit spending. Another Member said it restricts Congress and the country too closely. Just make up your minds. But what you see today is the recurring pattern of history. When the Keating-Owen Child Labor Act was introduced in 1916 it was Senator Beveridge who said it would not work. When women's suffrage was first given to the country, omniscient minds stood in this well and said, "It will not work." When the income-tax amendment was first proposed to the Constitution of the United States they said, "It will not work." There are Members sitting in this Chamber this afternoon who, when the General Accounting Act of 1921 was proposed, which first set up an Appropriations Committee with exclusive power to appropriate, said, "It will not work." Yes. That is the inertia of age talking. "It will not work." Have they given you a single persuasive argument why half a dozen Members from four committees of the House and Senate cannot sit down in a comfortable committee room and discuss the over-all aspects of the expenditure of revenue for this great corporation called the United States of America?

What an awful confession has been made here today, and members of my own committee, great committee that it is, have come into this well and confessed their ineptitude, they have confessed the inflexibility of the very committee of which I have the honor to be a member. God save the mark! Oh, let us not be put to one side by the talk that there is no time and that there are restrictive rules. You go out to Portland or Seattle or San Francisco or Cleveland or Milwaukee or elsewhere and tell one of your taxpayers that you would like to put a ceiling on the budget but there were rules obstructing it. They will say, "Rules do not register in my pocketbook."

What I want to do is to exercise a little flexibility of mind and judgment and I want some real, honest-to-God constructive effort to balance the budget of the United States that has been out of balance for 17 long years. We offer you now a simple device, a simple proposal that has a great deal of moral force in it for the country and a great deal of force to retrieve the esteem for Congress that is ebbing away and leaching away. Be not disillusioned or dismayed or put aside or fooled by all this unsubstantial argument that has been made here. They are the arguments of every generation in the history of the country. But, thank God, we move forward in a progressive line.

I suggest that all amendments, including the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] be voted down.

If the proposal which we present in this bill does not work, I shall be the first to confess my error if it has had a fair trial. But I do not propose to succumb to the defeatism which has been expressed over and over on this floor that it will not work. The taxpayers of the Nation are entitled to an opportunity to see whether or not it will work. Perhaps you recall the old expression, "Where there is a will, there is a way." Instead of the defeatist attitude expressed here today, let us determine that it can be made to work and it will work. We have used red ink a long time in chalking up recurring deficits. Let us see what can be done about changing the color to black.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired.

The question recurs on the perfecting amendment offered by the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE] to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment may again be reported.

There being no objection, the Clerk again reported the amendment offered by Mr. CASE of South Dakota.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE] to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I offer another amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CASE of South Dakota:

On page 52, after line 20, insert:

"(c) Until the concurrent resolution specified in subsection (b) has been agreed to by both Houses by record vote no general appropriation bill appropriating money for the ensuing fiscal year shall be passed by either House."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. TABER) there were—ayes 27, noes 101.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. JONES: On page 52, line 8, after the word "committee" and the period, insert "No amendment to any general appropriation bill shall be in order in either House proposing an increase in such bill which will result in an increase in the over-all amount which may be appropriated for any executive department or agency; and the over-all amount which may be appropriated for each executive department and for the several independent establishments including the District of Columbia shall be allocated by the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives prior to the consideration of the estimate of appropriations by the several subcommittees thereof."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Chairman, I offer another amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. JONES: On page 52, after line 20, insert a new paragraph as follows:

"(c) No appropriation contained in any appropriation bill which in percentage ratio to the estimate of the Bureau of the Budget for any such appropriation is in excess of the percentage ratio that the total recommended maximum appropriations contained in said legislative budget bears to the total budget estimates of the President as contained in the annual Budget for any such year, shall be considered or received in either House."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

HEARINGS AND REPORTS BY APPROPRIATIONS COMMITTEES

SEC. 139. (a) No general appropriation bill, other than deficiency appropriation bills, shall be considered in either House unless, prior to the consideration of such bill, printed committee hearings and reports on such bill have been available for at least three calendar days for the Members of the House in which such bill is to be considered.

(b) The Committees on Appropriations of the two Houses are authorized and directed, acting jointly, to develop a standard appropriation classification schedule which will clearly define in concise and uniform accounts the subtotals of appropriations asked for by agencies in the executive branch of the Government. That part of the printed hearings containing each such agency's request for appropriations shall be preceded by such a schedule.

(c) No general appropriation bill or amendment thereto shall be received or considered in either House if it contains a provision reappropr'ating unexpended balances of appropriations; except that this provision shall not apply to appropriations in continuation of appropriations for public works on which work has commenced.

(d) The Appropriations Committees of both Houses are authorized and directed to make a study of (1) existing permanent appropriations with a view to limiting the number of permanent appropriations and to recommend to their respective Houses what permanent appropriations, if any, should be discontinued; and (2) the disposition of funds resulting from the sale of Government property or services by all departments and agencies in the executive branch of the Government with a view to recommending to their respective Houses a uniform system of control with respect to such funds.

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. JENSEN: On page 52, after the word "bill", beginning on line 22, strike out the words "other than deficiency appropriation bills."

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Chairman, this section reads:

No general appropriation bill, other than deficiency appropriation bills, shall be considered in either House unless, prior to the consideration of such bill, printed committee hearings and reports on such bill have been available for at least three calendar days for the Members of the House in which such bill is to be considered.

My amendment seeks to eliminate the words "other than deficiency appropriation bills."

Mr. Chairman, it is very plain to see why I have offered this amendment, the main reason being that the regular subcommittees of the Appropriations Committee sit for weeks and months hearing the testimony of people from the departments who come before the respective subcommittees to justify their appropriations. We finally pass a bill out of the subcommittee. It then goes before the full committee where it is rarely amended one iota. In most instances the subcommittee reduces the appropriations requested by the departments to some degree, often to a very marked degree. The bill finally goes through the Congress and is signed by the President. But it has become a habit for the departments to continue to spend as though they were not restricted simply because they know they can come back to the deficiency committee any time and get most any amount of money they desire.

I do not have to tell you this because all of you know it is a fact. My amendment would make it mandatory that all deficiency bills and reports shall also be available 3 days previous to the time the bill is considered on the floor for the Members of Congress to examine.

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENSEN. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota?

Mr. JUDD. If the amendment of the gentleman is accepted and deficiency appropriation bills also have to be brought in with a report 3 days before they are considered and a real emergency arises, requiring immediate action, all we need to do is to suspend the rules on a two-thirds majority. The Congress would do that in a real emergency. This would prevent them from using it on every deficiency bill when there is no emergency.

Mr. JENSEN. The gentleman is right. The Appropriations Committee has been criticized severely, and rightly so, because great appropriation bills come to the floor and the Members have not had an opportunity to see the report or the bill until it comes to the floor. Even the members of the Appropriations Committee rarely see a bill from any other subcommittee except the ones they are on until the day it is brought before the full committee some forenoon and often the same afternoon it is brought before the House.

The criticism has been justified and certainly if any subcommittee should be required to bring a committee report before the House 3 days in advance of action, it should be the deficiency committee because it is less understood than any other report that comes before the House.

Mr. PHILLIPS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENSEN. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. PHILLIPS. The gentleman's amendment is a most excellent one, and I hope it will carry.

Mr. JENSEN. I thank the gentleman for his support.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENSEN. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. CURTIS. Is it not true that the regularly established subcommittees' procedure is fixed, well known, and more or less standardized?

Mr. JENSEN. Certainly.

Mr. CURTIS. This 3-day availability of hearings and reports is not nearly as necessary for them as it is the deficiency committee which might take up anything?

Mr. JENSEN. Right.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENSEN. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. MICHENER. The gentleman is a member of the Appropriations Committee. He knows whereof he speaks. I want to congratulate him on his courage and his forthrightness in stating these facts as they are.

Mr. JENSEN. I thank the gentleman and I sincerely hope my amendment will be adopted as I am certain it will have the effect of eliminating many millions of needless Government expenditures.

Mr. Chairman, I hope the salary increase and retirement pay section of this bill can be eliminated so I can support the bill on final passage, because in my studied opinion the reorganization of Congress would be beneficial to some degree.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section close in 4 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. HESELTON].

Mr. HESELTON. Mr. Chairman; throughout the day I have been considering offering an amendment similar to the one offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. JENSEN]. I decided not to do so upon the advice of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN], because I sincerely support the obvious improvement in the organization and operation of Congress in this legislation as submitted by the committee. But I think this amendment would be most constructive. I call your attention to the fact that when this measure passed the other body, this language was not contained in the legislation. I would like to read the comments from the joint committee report, because it emphasizes another phase of this matter which I think is of real importance to all of the Members:

Reports of the full committee on major bills customarily reach the floor soon after committee approval. Under these circumstances, the findings and printed hearings on appropriation bills are usually not available for careful and sustained study by the membership at large before the bills are reported to the House for its action. The hearings are naturally massive in size and complex in detail. As a result, it is not easy for Members of the House fully to inform themselves on the complex contents of appropriation bills before they come up for final action on the floor.

In my judgment, if this same principle were applied to legislative bills, we would have far more efficiency and much better legislation in the House. I urge that the amendment be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MONRONEY].

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, in considering this matter there was a very well and carefully made case by the leaders on the Committee on Appropriations that they have to have some elbow room for urgent deficiencies. We recently had an emergency appropriation for the veterans; to pay within a day or two the fund necessary for unemployment compensation. If we nailed down tightly the proposition for 3 days on all appropriations, those urgent matters would be delayed.

The section that has just been adopted does exactly what the gentleman wants to do in discouraging deficiencies. I am heartily in favor of reducing this practice. The bill provides that all appropriations will have to come in in the regular way, with a 3-day interim, and only excludes from this rule deficiency appropriations.

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MONRONEY. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. JENSEN. I knew the gentleman was going to bring that up and talk about the veterans, but if it is already taken care of, why not string this language out and then we will know it is taken care of.

Mr. MONRONEY. I do not think the 3-day elbow room on deficiencies is going to hurt or help particularly the thing that the gentleman seeks to accomplish.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MONRONEY. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. DIRKSEN. As as matter of fact, there have been occasions when we had to work fast and include deficiences and bring them in as an emergency measure.

Mr. JENSEN. That was during the war.

Mr. DIRKSEN. That was recently when General Bradley came before us and said that he ran out of money for the payment of unemployment money for soldiers. We had to bring that in here and get immediate action, so you have a bit of a flexible factor. I hope the amendment of my good friend will be voted down.

Mr. MONRONEY. The other section of the bill will help a lot by eliminating so many deficiencies, which is important, too.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. JENSEN].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. JENSEN) there were—ayes 86, noes 79.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Records of Congress

SEC. 140. (a) The Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives are authorized and directed, acting jointly, to obtain at the close of each Congress all of the noncurrent records of the Congress and of each committee thereof and transfer them to the National Archives for preservation, subject to the orders of the Senate or the House, respectively.

(b) The Clerk of the House of Representatives is authorized and directed to collect all of the noncurrent records of the House of Representatives from the First to the Seventy-sixth Congress, inclusive, and transfer such records to the National Archives for preservation, subject to the orders of the Senate or the House, respectively.

Preservation of committee hearings

SEC. 141. The Librarian of the Library of Congress is authorized and directed to have bound at the end of each session of Congress the printed hearings of testimony taken by each committee of the Congress at the preceding session.

Effective date

SEC. 142. This title shall take effect on January 2, 1947; except that this section and sections 140 and 141 shall take effect on the date of enactment of this act.

TITLE II—MISCELLANEOUS

PART 1—STATUTORY PROVISIONS RELATING TO CONGRESSIONAL PERSONNEL

Stenographic pool

SEC. 201. The Secretary of the Senate and Clerk of the House of Representatives shall establish a stenographic pool in each of the Senate and House Office Buildings for the use of Members during peak periods when their existing clerical facilities are inadequate to their needs, and shall make its facilities available, within proper limits, to the Members of Congress, under such rules and regulations as they may prescribe.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WHITTINGTON: On page 55, lines 6 to 14, inclusive, strike out section 201.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, I shall detain the Committee but a moment, and only to say that I favor the general purposes of the pending bill and am supporting it. This bill contemplates a reduction in the number of committees, more adequate staffs, clerical assistance, and stenographic service for the committees. The section under consideration, section 201, provides that the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House shall establish a stenographic pool in the Senate and in the House Office Buildings that shall be available to Members of Congress in periods of peak work. My amendment would strike out that section. It is stated that the pool is needed in the Senate. I answer that if we strike it out here it will still be in conference. It is said that stenographic pools are used in the departments of the Government. I answer that if they are, they are used under the general direction of the chief of the department. My thought is that it will not be satisfactory for the Clerk of the House and the Secretary of the Senate to be the supervisors of the offices of 435 Members of the House and 96 Members of the Senate. This bill makes no change in the allowances for clerk hire to each Member of Congress. All are treated exactly alike. If this pool remains in the bill, there will be discrimination that will be irritating and that will lead to worse than confusion and to great dissatisfaction. For that reason, I have offered this amendment to strike out the section. I trust the Committee will adopt the amendment.

Mr. MICHENER. I quite agree with the gentleman.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. COOLEY. How would the stenographers in the pool be compensated?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I understand they would be hired and compensated by appropriations from the Federal Treasury, but I do not know what they would be doing while they were waiting around to be assigned to Members. At all events, I think that all Members of the House should be treated alike.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. How would you allocate them? That is what we want to know.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I do not believe they could be allocated to all Members alike. There would be discrimination. I oppose the pool. I urge that the section be eliminated.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section close in 10 minutes, 2 minutes to be reserved to the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas [Mr. POAGE].

Mr. POAGE. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. POAGE as a substitute for the amendment offered by Mr. WHITTINGTON:

On page 55, lines 7 and 8, strike out the words "and clerk of the House of Representatives."

In line 9 strike out the words "each of" and the words "and House."

In line 13, strike out the word "Congress" and insert the word "Senate."

Mr. POAGE. Mr. Chairman, I had prepared an amendment identical to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi. But on further consideration it seemed to me there was no occasion for the House taking it upon itself to legislate regarding the prerogatives of the other body. The only difference between the substitute and the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi is simply that the substitute relates only to the prerogatives of this body and not to any other body.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Will not that matter be better promoted by striking out this section, thus allowing the Senate section to remain and the matter could then be adjusted if it is still insisted on in conference?

Mr. POAGE. I do not think so, else I would have accepted the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi. It is my opinion there is no occasion for us to do something that might be considered as an affront or lack of proper courtesy to the other body. I fully concur in the ideas of the gentleman from Mississippi that there is no occasion for this stenographic pool. I think it would be nothing but a source of irritation, annoyance, and trouble.

The proposal to reorganize many of the procedures and activities of the Congress is a worthy one. I am for it. Most of the Members of this House are for it. We want to wipe out useless committees and to make those which remain actually function. We want to provide the committees with adequate help to intelligently perform their duties. I believe this bill does that in a rather acceptable manner. But, important as committee work is, it falls far short of covering all of a Member's work.

Unless a Congressman has an adequate and efficient office staff, it becomes impossible to do any work satisfactorily. No Congressman is going to be able to do any outstanding work with regard to pending legislation if he knows that he is neglecteing fifty or a hundred letters about the OPA, housing, or the draft. Nor will he be able to give his best, either in the committee or on the floor, if he realizes that he has done nothing about the requests of dozens of veterans who each day ask for numerous contacts. In short, the work in our own offices is basic. This bill falls far short in caring for the ever-increasing load of individual office work—yet this work, particularly veterans' work—is sure to rapidly increase.

Originally it was suggested that each Member be given an executive assistant. Many Members do not like that name. That provision was stricken out. The only relief offered by this bill for your pressing office work is the creation of a stenographic pool. I do not believe that such a pool will be of any practical value. When one Member has extra work, most other Members are likely to have extra work. If the pool were large enough to provide help for all when it was needed, we might just as well assign extra help directly to each Member. In fact, this is the only way that the extra help will be at all efficient. I, therefore, ask that you adopt the substitute amendment and not offer gratuitous offense to anybody else. I ask you to abandon this stenographic pool.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. POAGE. I yield.

Mr. COOLEY. How will the pool be compensated? Will they be paid out of the general fund or will each Member have to pay for the services he gets?

Mr. POAGE. I assume it will be paid out of the general fund.

Mr. COOLEY. I agree with the gentleman that there is no reason for it.

Mr. POAGE. The bill is not clear on it and it seems to me we might as well wipe out that uncertainty.

If I can gain recognition, I shall follow this amendment with another to provide an extra clerk at $5,000 per year for each Member. This clerk would in my office, and doubtless in most offices, find that veterans' matters would consume practically his full time.

I have fixed the sum at $5,000 per year simply because I feel that it is the absolute minimum for which we can expect to secure the help we so clearly need. I have also taken into consideration the fact that the bill provides an increase of $5,000 in congressional salaries. I propose, if recognized, at the proper time to offer an amendment to strike out all of the provisions relative to an increase in salary for the Members. In short, I propose that we forego any increase in our own salaries in an effort to contribute to the maintenance of economic stability. On the other hand, I suggest that we devote the same amount of money to providing our constituents with a better service from our offices. I could use the salary increase just as well as the next Member. My expenses have gone up just as have yours. I know that Congressmen have had no increase for more than 20 years, but I also know that our action on our own salaries will be taken as a basis for other wage and salary adjustments. I do not want to be responsible for setting off a new wave of inflation. I believe that the national interest should control. At the same time the provisions for an extra clerk would not profit the Members at all. It would not set a precedent for higher wages and higher prices. It would, however, help each Congressman to serve his people and would, I feel sure, aid in making each Member a better legislator.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. STEFAN].

Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Chairman, I favor some reorganization of Congress in order to eventually bring about a balanced budget, but I cannot support this bill. I know that this is a rather unpopular position. This bill contains many provisions which in my opinion would eliminate overlapping work. There are provisions which would consolidate committees and save much time. There are provisions which would make better budgeting work. There are provisions which, in my opinion, would make better scrutiny of expenditures. But there are other provisions which do not belong in the bill. I feel that this bill should come to us with all of the provisions which would save the taxpayers' money and eliminate numerous committees which could be consolidated with others. But the retirement and salary-increase sections should be stricken out or brought up in some other bill and debated separately on their merits. It is one thing to say that we should streamline Congress in order to balance the budget and bring our legislative business up to date. But it is another thing when you put into the same bill two items which in my opinion would nullify the real purpose of the bill—mainly, balance the budget. I cannot see how you can start balancing the budget with this legislation when you include in it increase of salaries and also include retirement benefits. I fear, Mr. Chairman, this is just another addition to the salary-increase bills which have recently come before this House. I have not supported them all because they just add to inflation and merely build walls against any attempt to balance the budget. They just add to our tremendous public debt, which should be reduced instead of increased. The only place you can get this money is from the taxpayers, and their load is heavy enough.

This House recently passed a bill increasing the salaries of Federal employees. That added hundreds of millions of dollars annually to the taxpayers' burden. I did not support that measure. This House recently passed a bill increasing salaries of the Foreign Service. This bill gave $25,000 annually to some of these employees plus $25,000 a year for entertainment for each of them. I fought against this measure and voted against it. This House recently passed the British gift or loan which included $4,000,000,000. I opposed that measure because we do not have the money and because it was not a business loan. I felt it would add to our inflation. There was some other salary-increase legislation which I opposed for the same reasons. So I cannot consistently support this measure which will just add millions more toward our annual expenses.

What this Congress should do—and what I have been consistently trying to do for a long time is to stop this wild spending and cut down the number of Federal employees and cut down the number of these useless bureaus.

In spite of what some of us have been endeavoring to do toward cutting down the Federal pay roll; in spite of our continued demands for elimination of overlapping Federal work; in spite of our demands that the number of unnecessary employees be cut down, there are still about three million people on the Federal pay roll and demands are coming from them for still another wholesale increase in salary. At least 1,000,000 of these people should be eliminated at once. If that is done it would really be a contribution toward balancing the Budget and also a contribution toward putting some brakes on inflation.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, this is not just a casual amendment that was dropped in here. It was placed in after testimony was given by the organization of your secretaries, men who have to handle the mail and the inquiries from constituents and problems that come to every congressional office.

One of the criticisms against giving ourselves additional clerk hire is always true, that with part of the Members at certain times they are completely overloaded and swamped with correspondence from their home districts, when down the hall perhaps four or five or six Members are sitting almost idly, or with very little correspondence.

We are trying to reach the situation of furnishing additional help where peak loads occur so that we will not have to give every single Member an additional secretary at $2,500 or $3,000 a year, but give it only in the places where it is needed.

I think it is good, sound business practice and I think the Congress can make good use of this. If the Congress is afraid it would not work, then we must say it will not work because we lack the business and administrative ability to make it work.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MONRONEY. I yield.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Does the gentleman not think there should be some provision in there that there should be no discrimination because of race, color, age, or sex, or something like that?

Mr. MONRONEY. I had hoped we would be able to keep this on a functional basis.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. That is what I was trying to do, because who would want to function with some of the secretaries they would hire?

Mr. MONRONEY. I believe when the Members use this for a year they will find it is a great help to them in carrying on their business, instead of adding to their offices extra clerks that they might not need most of the time.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma has expired.

The question is on the perfecting amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. POAGE].

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTINGTON].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. WHITTINGTON) there were—ayes 141, noes 56.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

INCREASE IN COMPENSATION FOR CERTAIN CONGRESSIONAL OFFICERS

SEC. 202. (a) Effective January 1, 1947, the annual basic compensation of the elected officers of the Senate and the House of Representatives (not including the Presiding Officers of the two Houses) shall be increased by 50 percent; and the provisions of section 501 of the Federal Employees Pay Act of 1945, as amended by section 5 of the Federal Employees Pay Act of 1946, shall not be applicable to the compensation of said elected officers.

(b) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated annually for the "Office of the Vice President" the sum of $23,130; and there is hereby authorized to be appropriated annually for the "Office of the Speaker" the sum of $20,025.

(c) The Speaker, the majority leader, and the minority leader of the House of Representatives are each authorized to employ an administrative assistant, who shall receive basic compensation at a rate not to exceed $8,000 a year. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for the payment of such compensation.

Mr. POAGE. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to section 202.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. POAGE: On page 56, line 8, add a period and a new sentence to read as follows:

"Each Member of the House of Representatives is authorized to employ an extra clerk to assist on veterans' and other matters. He shall receive compensation at a rate not to exceed $5,000 a year."

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section close in 12 minutes, the last 2 minutes to be reserved to the committee.

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, will there be an opportunity to offer a substitute for the Poage amendment?

Mr. MONRONEY. I would think the Chair would recognize the gentleman to offer a substitute and recognize him for 5 minutes to be heard on the substitute. That would still leave 2 minutes to the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. POAGE] is recognized.

Mr. POAGE. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is the one I mentioned a few moments ago to provide an additional clerk at $5,000 a year for each Representative. It seems to me that in no manner can this House do a better thing for the people we represent than to give ourselves the assistance necessary to perform the duties that are daily becoming heavier. It seems to me that only in that way can we hope for any opportunity for the Members to devote more serious attention to vital public legislation.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. POAGE. I yield.

Mr. MICHENER. As a matter of fact, the gentleman's amendment would restore the executive assistant that was stricken from the Senate bill at a lesser salary and under another name.

Mr. POAGE. I think that is probably a fair statement. I think it was the name that was given in the original bill that brought about a good deal of unjustified criticism because a great many people did not like the title. If you do not like the title we will call him something else, call him a clerk. Call him what you will. What I want is to get some work done in our offices and to leave the Members some opportunity to devote more time to truly legislative matters. What I want is somebody I can call on to handle some of the details of the office. What I want and what I believe you want is someone who can do the job for the people of your districts. I do not care what you call him, whether you call him a clerk or whether you call him a messenger. The title is insignificant. The work is the thing that is important, and the work is for the people of your districts. If you think this work is not going to increase next year all you have to do is to see the number of veterans' cases that are building up for you. If you think these veterans' cases do not require a man somewhat learned in that work, you just try turning these cases over to somebody out of a stenographic pool. If you think that you can satisfy the veterans of your district by turning over their cases which mean so much to them to some $1,800 a year stenographer, just try doing it. I think it is perfectly clear that you must be able to employ somebody with some judgment and some experience and some ability, and I do not think you can get such a person for less than $5,000 a year. It is for that reason I believe it is good for the people we represent. In other words, I am trying to see to it that instead of simply aiding the Members of Congress that this bill should aid the people we represent. Therefore, if I can secure recognition when we come to the section of Members' salaries, I shall offer an amendment to strike out the proposed $5,000 per year increase. I realize that the gentleman from Ohio, a Member of the Rules Committee, has given notice that he will claim recognition on this item and that if he does, I will have no opportunity to offer my amendment, but I am sure that in one way or another we will get a chance to vote to reduce our own salary, and in view of the present effect that this increase may have on our national economy, I feel that we should vote against an increase in our own salary, but that we should use the same money to provide a better service for the people.

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Chairman, I offer a substitute amendment for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. POAGE].

The Clerk read as follows:

Substitute amendment offered by Mr. JUDD to the amendment of Mr. POAGE: On page 56, in line 8, insert the following: "Each Senator and Representative in Congress, Delegate from the Territories, and the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico is authorized to employ an administrative assistant whose duty it shall be to assist the Members in carrying out their departmental business and other duties in Washington. Each such administrative assistant shall receive compensation at a rate not to exceed $6,000 a year."

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Chairman, this substitute amendment is almost exactly the language that was in the bill passed by the Senate. There are only two changes. One is that I have specified that the administrative assistant must work "in Washington" because the objection was raised that some individuals conceivably might hire a man at $6,000, $7,000, or $8,000 a year—$8,000 was the original figure—to carry on political work in his own district; or that it might become just a patronage plum. That is not the purpose of the amendment, so I have modified it to read that it shall be the duty of the administrative assistant "to assist the Member in carrying out his departmental business and other duties in Washington." It would be permissible for the Member to send him to his district to investigate some problem, of course, but the primary obligation of the assistant would be to work not in the home district but in the Congressman's office in Washington. This should correct that objection by some.

The second change is that the basic compensation is reduced from a mandatory salary of $8,000 a year to "at a rate not to exceed $6,000 a year." A basic salary of $6,000 a year actually means $8,339.10. If you were to leave it at $8,000 as in the Senate bill, the individual would get $10,000, exactly the same salary a Congressman now gets. Eight thousand, three hundred and thirty-nine dollars and ten cents, it seems to me, is enough to get a top-notch assistant. Furthermore, I do not think the Member should be required to hire at the full amount or nothing. Probably one would not want to hire such an assistant at first at the full rate, without chance for increase. I would prefer to hire him at four or five thousand dollars base, and then raise him gradually to the full amount if and as he makes good.

Mr. Chairman, to me this is the single, most valuable part of the bill, from the standpoint of the Congressman's work. If the purpose of this bill is, as has been said, to save our time and to increase our efficiency, no single thing can do more toward that end than to enable us to get a capable high-grade individual who can do far more than clerical work. He can exercise initiative, prepare material for our use, and take responsibility, especially in handling matters with the executive departments, thereby freeing us for our primary responsibilities, namely, to study national problems and devise and enact wise legislation to deal with them.

Mr. MASON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JUDD. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. MASON. I have such an administrative assistant now, only she gets $5,000 a year, not $6,000, and every Member of this House could have done the same if they wanted to.

Mrs. WOODHOUSE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JUDD. I yield to the gentlewoman from Connecticut.

Mrs. WOODHOUSE. Would the gentleman agree that this will greatly improve our legislation by giving Members of Congress the opportunity to do what is really their job, that is, to understand our economic problems?

Mr. JUDD. I certainly do. The gentlewoman I know had prepared a similar amendment and I am glad that she and many others approve. I hope everyone will agree.

Mr. JACKSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JUDD. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. JACKSON. I want to compliment the gentleman for offering the amendment. I think it goes to the very heart of our problem here and that is to give the Members more opportunity to look after affairs on the floor of the House.

Mr. JUDD. I hope the Committee will accept the amendment, not for the sake of the Congressmen but for the sake of the country.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Minnesota has expired.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pending amendment.

Mr. Chairman, the committee as you know considered very carefully the question of an administrative assistant. That was in the bill when it passed the Senate. In an effort to bring this bill to the floor of the House, as I told you before, it was necessary not only for the members of the special committee to consider this, but to take it up with the leadership on both sides of the aisle.

They have considered the bill as carefully as we have, and it was their considered, conscientious opinion that we should not vote ourselves an administrative assistant at this time.

They felt that the matter was being tried out in the other body. Being only 96 of them, they have a great deal more administrative work per Member than we have to do. There was no question that they had to have it in order to remain on the floor to consider legislation. I feel if this plan works in the other body that the House can later adopt it.

The difficulty is in trying to handle the unequal work load that districts have. If you could be sure that only the Members who absolutely have to have this assistant would take it, then I would say it would be a very fine thing for the House to adopt the amendment. But I am afraid that would not be the case.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MONRONEY. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. REED of New York. I can see where you would have just about one potential candidate for Congress for every Member of the House and you would have to spend more time in your district to keep him from defeating you.

Mr. MONRONEY. I do not agree with the gentleman at all. I would hate to believe that Members of Congress could not choose a secretary or an assistant who would be loyal to him.

But, gentlemen, I believe we have a definite obligation because of the help and the cooperation that the leadership gave us in getting this bill to the floor. It has been carefully considered by them, and I do hope that you will give due weight to their suggestions as we consider the adoption of these other two amendments.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma has expired. All time has expired.

The question is on the substitute amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. JUDD] for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. POAGE].

The substitute amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. POAGE].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. POAGE) there were—ayes 32, noes 162.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

COMMITTEE STAFFS

SEC. 203. (a) Each standing committee of the Senate and the House of Representatives (other than the Appropriations Committees) is authorized to appoint by a majority vote of the committee not more than four professional staff members in addition to the clerical staffs on a permanent basis without regard to political affiliations and solely on the basis of fitness to perform the duties of the office; and said staff members shall be assigned to the chairman and ranking minority member of such committee as the committee may deem advisable. Each such committee is further authorized to terminate the services by a majority vote of the committee of any such professional staff member as it may see fit. Professional staff members shall not engage in any work other than committee business and no other duties may be assigned to them.

(b) The Committee on Appropriations of each House and each subcommittee thereof is authorized to appoint by a majority vote of the committee not more than four professional staff members in addition to the clerical staff on a permanent basis without regard to political affiliations and solely on the basis of fitness to perform the duties of the office; and said staff members shall be assigned to the chairman and ranking minority member of each Committee on Appropriations and each subcommittee thereof as the committee or subcommittee may deem advisable. Such committee or subcommittee is further authorized to discharge by a majority vote of the committee or subcommittee any such professional staff member as it may see fit. Professional staff members shall not engage in any work other than committee business and no other duties may be assigned to them. In addition to other duties, such professional staff members shall aid the chairmen and ranking minority members in making careful studies of budget requests with a view to eliminating unnecessary expenditures.

(c) The clerical staff of each standing committee, which shall be appointed by a majority vote of the committee, shall consist of not more than six clerks, to be attached to the office of the chairman, to the ranking minority member, and to the professional staff, as the committee may deem advisable; and the position of committee janitor is hereby abolished. The clerical staff shall handle committee correspondence and stenographic work, both for the committee staff and for the chairman and ranking minority member on matters related to committee work.

(d) All committee hearings, records, data, charts, and files shall be kept separate and distinct from the congressional office records of the Member serving as chairman of the committee; and such records shall be the property of the Congress and all members of the committee and the respective Houses shall have access to such records. Each committee is authorized to have printed and bound such testimony and other data presented at hearings held by the committee.

(c) The professional staff members of the standing committees shall receive annual compensation, to be fixed by the chairman, ranging from $6,000 to $8,000 and the clerical staff shall receive annual compensation ranging from $2,000 to $6,000.

(f) No committee shall appoint to its staff any experts or other personnel detailed or assigned from any department or agency of the Government, except with the written permission of the Committee on Rules and Administration of the Senate or the Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives, as the case may be.

(g) No individual who is employed as a professional staff member of any committee as provided in this section shall be eligible for appointment to any office or position in the executive branch of the Government for a period of 1 year after he shall have ceased to be such a member.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CANNON of Missouri:

Page 57, line 1, in lieu of the matter inserted as subsection (b), insert the following:

"Subject to appropriations which it shall be in order to include in appropriation bills, the Committee on Appropriations of each House is authorized to appoint such staff, in addition to the clerk thereof and assistants for the minority, as each such committee, by a majority vote, shall determine to be necessary, such personnel, other than the minority assistants, to possess such qualifications as the committees respectively may prescribe, and the Committee on Appropriations of the House also is authorized to conduct studies and examinations of the organization and operation of any executive agency (including any agency the majority of the stock of which is owned by the Government of the United States) as it may deem necessary to assist it in connection with the determination of matters within its jurisdiction and in accordance with procedures authorized by the Committee by a majority vote, including the rights and powers conferred by House Resolution No. 50, adopted January 9, 1945."

Page 58, line 15, strike out "$6,000" and insert "$5,000."

Page 58, line 17, strike out "$6,000" and insert "$8,000."

Page 58, line 18, after "(f)", insert "Except as otherwise provided in this act."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I have offered this series of amendments to section 203 after consultation with the gentleman in charge of the bill, the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MONRONEY], and his colleague on the committee, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN], to whom they are satisfactory.

The first, offered as a complete substitute for the text of subsection (b), provides for the staffing of the Committees on Appropriations of the House and Senate, in accordance with needs as determined by those committees, and makes permanent provision for the investigative system of the House Committee on Appropriations, which the House heretofore has approved through the medium of House resolutions. This system has been in operation since March 1943, and has proven to be highly effective. It has resulted in the saving of millions of dollars. One of its features is its small cost incident to the employment of experts only when there is work to be done and their prompt dismissal when the work is concluded. We employ a chief investigator continuously, and he recruits experts in matters assigned to him for investigation as and when authorized by the committee.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman agree to strike out the last item, on page 58, line 18? We will agree to the others without argument, but we cannot agree to that last one.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be modified to exclude the last item.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri as modified.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I offer a further amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CANNON of Missouri: On page 59, after line 3, insert the following new subsection:

"(h) Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions—

"(1) The committee employees of the existing Committee on Appropriations of the Senate and of the existing Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives shall be continued on the rolls of the respective appropriations committees established under title I of this act during the fiscal year 1947, unless sooner removed for cause.

"(2) Committee employees of all other existing standing committees of each House shall be continued on the pay rolls of the Senate and House of Representatives, respectively, through January 31, 1947, unless sooner removed for cause by the Secretary of the Senate or the Clerk of the House, as the case may be.

"(3) The appropriations for the compensation of committee employees of standing committees of the Senate and of the House of Representatives contained in the Legislative Branch Appropriation Act, 1947, shall be available for the compensation of employees specified in paragraph (2) of this subsection and of employees of the standing committees of the Senate and House of Representatives succeeding to the jurisdiction of the standing committees specified in such Appropriation Act; and in any case in which the legislative jurisdiction of any existing standing committee is transferred to two or more standing committees under title I of this act, the Committee on Rules and Administration of the Senate, with respect to standing committees of the Senate, and the Committee on House Administration, with respect to standing committees of the House, shall allocate such appropriations in an equitable manner."

On page 67, line 14, strike out "and (f)" and insert in lieu thereof "(f), and (h)."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, this is to continue in status quo the items carried in the annual appropriation bills as to standing committees, except those to be abolished, as to which special provision is made.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, the committee agrees to that amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

LEGISLATIVE REFERENCE SERVICE

SEC. 204. (a) The Librarian of Congress is authorized and directed to establish in the Library of Congress a separate department to be known as the Legislative Reference Service. It shall be the duty of the Legislative Reference Service—

(1) upon request, to advise and assist any committee of either House or any joint committee in the analysis, appraisal, and evaluation of legislative proposals pending before it, or of recommendations submitted to Congress, by the President or any executive agency, and otherwise to assist in furnishing a basis for the proper determination of measures before the committee;

(2) upon request, or upon its own initiative in anticipation of requests, to gather, classify, analyze, and make available, in translations, indexes, digests, compilations and bulletins, and otherwise, data for or bearing upon legislation, and to render such data serviceable to Congress, and committees and Members thereof, without partisan bias in selection or presentation;

(3) to prepare summaries and digests of public hearings before committees of the Congress, and of bills and resolutions of a public general nature introduced in either House.

(b) (1) A director and assistant director of the Legislative Reference Service and all other necessary personnel, shall be appointed by the Librarian of Congress without regard to the civil-service laws and without reference to political affiliations, solely on the ground of fitness to perform the duties of their office. The compensation of all employees shall be fixed in accordance with the provisions of the Classification Act of 1923, as amended: Provided, That the grade of senior specialists in each field enumerated in paragraph (2) of this subsection shall not be less than the highest grade in the executive branch of the Government to which research analysts and consultants without supervisory responsibility are currently assigned. All employees of the Legislative Reference Service shall be subject to the provisions of the civil-service retirement laws.

(2) The Librarian of Congress is further authorized to appoint in the Legislative Reference Service senior specialists in the following broad fields: Agriculture; American government and public administration; American public law; conservation; education; engineering and public works; full employment; housing; industrial organization and corporation finance; international affairs; international trade and economic geography; labor; mineral economics; money and banking; price economics; social welfare; taxation and fiscal policy; transportation and communications; and veterans' affairs. Such specialists, together with such other members of the staff as may be necessary, shall be available for special work with the appropriate committees of Congress for any of the purposes set out in section 204 (a) (1).

(c) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the work of the Legislative Reference Service the following sums: (1) For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, $550,000; (2) for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1948, $650,000; (3) for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, $750,000; and (4) for each fiscal year thereafter such sums as may be necessary to carry on the work of the Service.

OFFICE OF THE LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL

SEC. 205. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the work of the Office of the Legislative Counsel the following sums:

(1) For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, $150,000;

(2) For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1948, $200,000;

(3) For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, $250,000;

(4) For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, $250,000; and

(5) For each fiscal year thereafter such sums as may be necessary to carry on the work of the Office.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I will not be in politics any more and I have no personal interest in this matter, but we of the proletariat do not like this bill. I think it is a heads-I-win tails-you-lose proposition. You go to the country and you say, "What you do not like about what the Congress has been doing is all the fault of the way the Congress was run. It is not going to be run that way any more. From now on it is going to be economical, because we passed a law making Congress economical."

Then if the people believe it and you win, you come back and get $15,000 a year for 6 months' work, and that is all right providing it improves the breed, which it may not, probably will not, and at the same time means raising the salaries of bureaucrats inevitably. But if you get defeated in spite of all that, what happens? If you have been here 6 years, and most Members have, and in view of the legislation that has been passed they ought to come back—it seems they have passed laws to give anybody who has a vote something in the last 6 years—but if you are defeated and you have been here 6 years then you are put on a pension. It seems to me that is unfair to the people. I personally do not want to speak against it and I have nothing against it personally. I notice it is as difficult to separate Members from this bill as it is to separate a dog from a bone.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. As long as the gentlewoman is not coming back, it does not make any difference to her.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. No; not to me personally, but as a taxpayer. I am a member of the so-called proletariat.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. I know the gentlewoman is, and a very capable one, and I expect to be some time. I only wish she had consented to stand for reelection. Under this bill I will have to bet that an old man like myself will live 4 years in order to get his money back.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. The gentleman is smart; he will get along.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. I thank the lady. I do not expect to live that long but I do expect to be able to take care of myself as long as I live.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. I will pay you a compliment. I think you are all smart enough to get along without that pension of $3,000 a year or whatever it is for a few years. It is a challenge to start out at that age and try to make good. After all, this ought to be the kind of a country where there is no place for a man of leisure. If we get too many people from the bureaucracy and the Congress—and this bill just makes the Congress a sort of bureaucracy, and we seem to be heading in that direction—if we get too many people spending all their active life in politics and then the balance of their days on a pension, it certainly is not America. It is just too much like Russia or Germany or whatever you call it, the kind of a state where the government owns and controls everything and everybody and the rest of us poor worms have to pay for it.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. I yield.

Mr. EBERHARTER. You see this pension is only to go to those who have reached 62 years of age and, of course, many think a man or woman is not of very much use in a business sense after that age, generally speaking, and that is when the pension is payable.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. Well, after all, what is wrong with 62 years of age? It has always been the case in government that the wise men were the old men. You remember what Plato said in the Republic that the old men were the ones with wisdom and experience. I, for one, if this bill would bring such a thing about, am not for any bill that would root out the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DOUGHTON]. I think he is worth 100 of the young fry. It ought to be a suspicious circumstance to you that the big drive for this bill has come from the same people and the same magazines and the editors who were for all this legislation that has caused the disintegration of the Government and of the Congress.

The Clerk read as follows:

Studies by Comptroller General

SEC. 206. The Comptroller General is authorized and directed to make a full and complete study of restrictions placed in general appropriation acts limiting the expenditure of specified appropriations therein, with a view to determining the cost to the Government incident to complying with such restrictions, and to report to the Congress his estimate of the cost of complying with such restrictions and such other recommendations with respect thereto as he deems necessary or desirable.

Expenditure analysis by Comptroller General

SEC. 207. The Comptroller General is authorized and directed to make an expenditure analysis of each agency in the executive branch of the Government (including Government corporations), which, in the opinion of the Comptroller General, will enable Congress to determine whether public funds have been economically and efficiently administered and expended. Reports on such analyses shall be submitted by the Comptroller General, from time to time, to the Committees on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, to the Appropriations Committees, and to the legislative committees having jurisdiction over legislation relating to the operations of the respective agencies, of the two Houses.

Correction of military and naval records

SEC. 208. The Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, and the Secretary of the Treasury with respect to the Coast Guard, respectively, under procedures set up by them, and acting through boards of civilian officers or employees of their respective departments, are authorized to correct any military or naval record where in their judgment such action is necessary to correct an error or to remove an injustice.

PART 2—STATUTORY PROVISIONS RELATING TO COMMITTEES OF CONGRESS

Improvement of Congressional Record

SEC. 221. The Joint Committee on Printing is authorized and directed to provide for printing in the daily RECORD the legislative program for the day, together with a list of congressional committee meetings and hearings, and the place of meeting and subject matter and to cause a brief résumé of congressional activities for the previous day to be incorporated in the RECORD, together with an index of its contents. Such data shall be prepared under the supervision of the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives, respectively.

Joint Committee on Printing

SEC. 222. Section 1 of the act entitled "An act providing for the public printing and binding and the distribution of public documents," approved January 12, 1895 (28 Stat. 601), is amended to read as follows: "That there shall be a Joint Committee on Printing, consisting of the chairman and two members of the Committee on Rules and Administration of the Senate and the chairman and two members of the Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives, who shall have the powers hereinafter stated."

Joint Committee on the Library

SEC. 223. The Joint Committee of Congress on the Library shall hereafter consist of the chairman and four members of the Committee on Rules and Administration of the Senate and the chairman and four members of the Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives.

Transfer of functions

SEC. 224. The functions, powers, and duties imposed by statute, resolution, or rule of either House of Congress on the effective date of this section on a standing committee of the Senate or the House of Representatives (or the chairman thereof) are, insofar as they are consistent with this act, hereby transferred to that standing committee created by this act (or the chairman thereof) to which is transferred the legislative jurisdiction over the subject matter to which such functions, powers, and duties relate; except that the respective chairmen of the Committees on Civil Service of the two Houses created by this act shall be members of the National Archives Council.

Joint Committee on the Economic Report

SEC. 225. Section 5 (b) (3) (relating to the time for filing the report of the Joint Committee on the Economic Report) of the Employment Act of 1946 is amended by striking out "May 1" and inserting in lieu thereof "February 1."

Economic report of the President

SEC. 226. Section 3 (a) (relating to the time for filing the economic report of the President) of the Employment Act of 1946 is amended by striking out "within 60 days after the beginning of each regular session" and inserting in lieu thereof "at the beginning of each regular session."

PART 3—PROVISIONS RELATING TO CAPITOL AND PAGES

Remodeling of caucus rooms and restaurants

SEC. 241. The Architect of the Capitol is authorized and directed to prepare plans and submit them to Congress at the earliest practicable date for the remodeling (a) of the caucus rooms in the Senate and House Office Buildings to provide improved acoustics and seating facilities and for the presentation of motion picture or other visual displays on matters of national interest; and (b) of the Senate and House restaurants to provide for more convenient dining facilities.

Assignment of Capitol space

SEC. 242. The President pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives shall cause a survey to be made of available space within the Capitol which could be utilized for joint committee meetings, meetings of conference committees, and other meetings, requiring the attendance of both Senators and Members of the House of Representatives; and shall recommend the reassignment of such space to accommodate such meetings.

Senate and House pages

SEC. 243. (a) The Secretary of the Senate and the clerk of the House of Representatives, acting jointly, are authorized and directed to enter into an arrangement with the Board of Education of the District of Columbia for the education of congressional pages and pages of the Supreme Court in the public-school system of the District. Such arrangement shall include provision for reimbursement to the District of Columbia for any additional expenses incurred by the public-school system of the District in carrying out such arrangement.

(b) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to reimburse the District of Columbia in accordance with the arrangement referred to in subsection (a).

(c) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsections (a) and (b) of this section, said page or pages may elect to attend a private or parochial school of their own choice: Provided, however, That such private or parochial school shall be reimbursed by the Senate and House of Representatives only in the same amount as would be paid if the page or pages were attending a public school under the provisions of paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer a committee amendment on page 67, line 10.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MONRONEY: On page 67, line 10, insert:

"SEC. 244. All necessary funds required to carry out the provisions of this act by the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House are hereby authorized to be appropriated, and the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House are hereby further authorized to employ such administrative assistants as may be necessary in order to carry out the provisions of this act, under their respective jurisdictions."

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, this simply authorizes the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House to carry out the provisions of this act.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Effective date

SEC. 244. This title shall take effect on the date of its enactment; except that sections 203 (a), (b), (c), (e), and (f), 222, 223, 224, and 243 shall take effect on the day on which the Eightieth Congress convenes.

TITLE III—REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT

Short title

SEC. 301. This title may be cited as the "Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act."

Definitions

SEC. 302. When used in this title—

(a) The term "contribution" includes a gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money or anything of value and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make a contribution.

(b) The term "expenditure" includes a payment, distribution, loan, advance, deposit, or gift of money or anything of value, and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make an expenditure.

(c) The term "person" includes an individual, partnership, committee, association, corporation, and any other organization or group of persons.

(d) The term "Clerk" means the Clerk of the House of Representatives of the United States.

(e) The term "legislation" means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House.

Detailed accounts of contributions

SEC. 303. (a) It shall be the duty of every person who shall in any manner solicit or receive a contribution to any organization or fund for the purposes hereinafter designated to keep a detailed and exact account of—

(1) all contributions of any amount or of any value whatsoever;

(2) the name and address of every person making any such contribution of $500 or more and the date thereof;

(3) all expenditures made by or on behalf of such organization or fund; and

(4) the name and address of every person to whom any such expenditure is made and the date thereof.

(b) It shall be the duty of such person to obtain and keep a receipted bill, stating the particulars, for every expenditure of such funds exceeding $10 in amount, and to preserve all receipted bills and accounts required to be kept by this section for a period of at least 2 years from the date of the filing of the statement containing such items.

Receipts for contributions

SEC. 304. Every individual who receives a contribution of $500 or more for any of the purposes hereinafter designated shall within 5 days after receipt thereof render to the person or organization for which such contribution was received a detailed account thereof, including the name and address of the person making such contribution and the date on which received.

Statements to be filed with clerk of House

SEC. 305. (a) Every person receiving any contributions or expending any money for the purposes designated in subparagraph (a), (b), or (c) of section 307 shall file with the Clerk between the first and tenth day of each calendar quarter, a statement containing complete as of the day next preceding the date of filing—

(1) the name and address of each person who has made a contribution of $500 or more not mentioned in the preceding report; except that the first report filed pursuant to this title shall contain the name and address of each person who has made any contribution of $500 or more to such person since the effective date of this title;

(2) the total sum of the contributions made to or for such person during the calendar year and not stated under paragraph (1);

(3) the total sum of all contributions made to or for such person during the calendar year;

(4) the name and address of each person to whom an expenditure in one or more items of the aggregate amount or value, within the calendar year, of $10 or more has been made by or on behalf of such person, and the amount, date, and purpose of such expenditure;

(5) the total sum of all expenditures made by or on behalf of such person during the calendar year and not stated under paragraph (4);

(6) the total sum of expenditures made by or on behalf of such person during the calendar year.

(b) The statements required to be filed by subsection (a) shall be cumulative during the calendar year to which they relate, but where there has been no change in an item reported in a previous statement only the amount need be carried forward.

Statement preserved for 2 years

SEC. 306. A statement required by this title to be filed with the Clerk—

(a) shall be deemed properly filed when deposited in an established post office within the prescribed time, duly stamped, registered, and directed to the Clerk of the House of Representatives of the United States, Washington, D. C., but in the event it is not received, a duplicate of such statement shall be promptly filed upon notice by the Clerk of its nonreceipt;

(b) shall be preserved by the Clerk for a period of 2 years from the date of filing, shall constitute part of the public records of his office, and shall be open to public inspection.

Persons to whom applicable

SEC. 307. The provisions of this title shall apply to any person (except a political committee as defined in the Federal Corrupt Practices Act, and duly organized State or local committees of a political party), who by himself, or through any agent or employee or other persons in any manner whatsoever, directly or indirectly, solicits, collects, or receives money or any other thing of value to be used principally to aid, or the principal purpose of which person is to aid, in the accomplishment of any of the following purposes:

(a) The passage or defeat of any legislation by the Congress of the United States.

(b) To influence, directly or indirectly, the passage or defeat of any legislation by the Congress of the United States.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I reluctantly trespass on the patience of the Committee at this late hour, but I thought I should do so because the antilobbying title is quite an important title and there has been some concern about it in certain quarters.

This has been examined by a good many organizations to see whether or not it would be actually restrictive. As a matter of fact, a number of suggestions were made to the committee and those suggestions were carefully considered. Later on, some of the organizations which suggested amendatory language thought it was just as well not to have it included.

The gist of the antilobbying provision is contained in section 307. What this is designed to do is to bring about registration, and a statement of receipts and expenditures on the part of a person who is employed for the principal purpose of accomplishing two things. First, the passage or defeat of any legislation by the Congress of the United States; the second is to influence, directly or indirectly, the passage or defeat of any legislation by the Congress of the United States.

The question has been raised as to whether or not an organization that pays a man to be vigilant upon legislation here would have to schedule all of their assets and all of their receipts and probably file a very long administrative record with the Clerk of the House. That is certainly not the intent of the committee. There are some clarifying sections and some exclusions which you will find in section 308. I thought some word should be addressed to that point at this time.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. VORYS of Ohio. Is not this the situation, that the definition of "person," which includes both a person, association, or corporation, makes it perfectly clear that while an association might not be principally engaged in that work and would therefore not have to make a report, its employee who was principally engaged in that kind of work would have to make a full report?

Mr. DIRKSEN. That was my own conception of what is intended.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. CURTIS. Would the representative of a chamber of commerce or a manufacturers' association or the farm bureau or labor union have to register? They are created for broad general purposes.

Mr. DIRKSEN. If he comes here and appears before committees, you will find excluding language on page 73, which says the provisions of this section shall not apply to any person who merely appears before a committee of the Congress of the United States in support of or in opposition to legislation. I raised the question whether or not if the representative of an industry in my area came down here and appeared before a committee and then went back home and struck off some mimeographed data or appeared on the radio in support of or opposition to legislation, it could be inferred that he was a lobbyist within the meaning of this title. There was some additional language as that bill left the Senate. If he went home and in furtherance of that activity carries on any kind of endeavor then he would come within the purview of the section. That language has been stricken out.

What we are trying to do here is to reach those whose principal purpose, not incidental purpose, but whose principal purpose is to come here and endeavor to influence the passage of legislation either by bringing about its defeat or its enactment.

Mr. CURTIS. What is the situation in reference to the executive department of the Government lobbying?

Mr. DIRKSEN. With reference to the Government lobby, as the gentleman refers to it, there is a provision here that that shall not apply to an official of the Government who comes here in his official capacity. Certainly if they are going to send a lot of folks up here who do not come in their official capacity we are going to find it out quickly and we know what to do with them through the instrumentality of an appropriation bill.

Mr. CURTIS. Just one more question: The lobbying that takes place at the present time is not approaching the Congress directly but it is radio appeals that causes thousands if not millions of people to contact their Congressmen or somebody else in connection with the Government. What does this bill do to reach that situation?

Mr. DIRKSEN. If it is anywhere in the country and the principal purpose is to bring about the influencing of legislation then the person would come within the purview of this legislation.

Now at this point, I want to insert the comment contained in the House report on this title so that it may have wide circulation and come to the attention of those who are particularly interested in this title:

TITLE III—REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT

This title deals with a subject that has frequently been before the Congress, in the form of bills to regulate lobbying activities. In order that there may be no misunderstanding of the purposes of this title it is desirable to make a statement as to what the title does and what it does not do. There follow some of the things that the title does not do:

First. It does not curtail the right of free speech or freedom of the press or the right of petition.

Second. It has no application to the publishers of newspapers, magazines, or other publications, acting in the regular course of business.

Third. It has no application to persons who merely appear, openly and frankly, before the committees of Congress.

Fourth. It does not require any reports of any persons or organizations now required to report under the provisions of the present Corrupt Practices Act.

Fifth. It does not apply in any manner to persons who appear voluntarily without compensation.

Sixth. It does not apply to organizations formed for other purposes whose efforts to influence legislation are merely incidental to the purposes for which formed.

On the other hand the title applies chiefly to three distinct classes of so-called lobbyists:

First. Those who do not visit the Capitol but initiate propaganda from all over the country in the form of letters and telegrams, many of which have been based entirely upon misinformation as to facts. This class of persons and organizations will be required under the title, not to cease or curtail their activities in any respect, but merely to disclose the sources of their collections and the methods in which they are disbursed.

Second. The second class of lobbyists are those who are employed to come to the Capitol under the false impression that they exert some powerful influence over Members of Congress. These individuals spend their time in Washington presumably exerting some mysterious influence with respect to the legislation in which their employers are interested. The title in no wise prohibits or curtails their activities. It merely requires that they shall register and disclose the sources and purposes of their employment and the amount of their compensation.

Third. There is a third class of entirely honest and respectable representatives of business, professional, and philanthropic organizations who come to Washington openly and frankly to express their views for or against legislation, many of whom serve a useful and perfectly legitimate purpose in expressing the views and interpretations of their employers with respect to legislation which concerns them. They will likewise be required to register and state their compensation and the sources of their employment.

Section 301. Short title: This section provides a short title, namely, the "Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act."

Section 302. Definitions: This section contains definitions and for convenience of reference the definitions of "contribution," "expenditure," and "legislation" are included herein as follows:

"(a) The term 'contribution' includes a gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money or anything of value and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make a contribution.

"(b) The term 'expenditure' includes a payment, distribution, loan, advance, deposit, or gift of money or anything of value, and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make an expenditure.

"(e) The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House."

Section 303. Detailed accounts of contributions: This section makes it the duty of every person soliciting or receiving contributions (as defined above) to any organization or fund for the purposes defined in section 307 (post) to keep a detailed and exact account of all contributions; the name and address of every person making a contribution of $500 or more and the date thereof; all expenditures made by or on behalf of the organization or fund; and the name and address of every person to whom any expenditure was made, and the date thereof. It is further made the duty of such person to keep receipted bills for expenditures in excess of $10, and to preserve the receipted bills and accounts required to be kept for at least 2 years from the date of filing of the statement containing such items.

Section 304. Receipts for contributions: This section requires every individual who receives a contribution of $500 or more for the purposes specified in section 307 (post) within 5 days after receipt, to render to the person or organization for which it was received a detailed account thereof, including the name and address of the person making the contribution and the date on which received.

Section 305. Statements to be filed with Clerk of House: This section requires every person receiving any contributions or expending any money for the purposes specified in section 307 (post) to file with the Clerk of the House a statement showing the names and addresses of persons contributing $500 or more; the total sum of the contributions made to or for such person during the calendar year and not stated under the foregoing requirement; the total sum of all contributions made to or for such person during the calendar year; the name and address of each person to whom an expenditure of $10 or more has been made within the calendar year by or on behalf of such person and the amount, date, and purpose of such expenditure; the total sum of all expenditures made by or on behalf of such person during the calendar year and not stated under the foregoing requirement, and the total expenditures made by or on behalf of such person during the calendar year. Statements required to be filed hereunder shall be cumulative during the calendar year to which they relate.

Section 306. Statement preserved for 2 years: Statements required to be filed with the Clerk must be preserved for a period of 2 years from the date of filing, shall constitute part of the public records of his office, and shall be open to public inspection.

Section 307. Persons to whom applicable: This section defines the application of the title and includes any person who by himself or through any agent or employee or other person in any manner whatsoever, directly or indirectly, solicits, collects, or receives money or any other thing of value to be used principally to aid, or the principal purpose of which person is to aid, in the accomplishment of any one of the following purposes:

(a) The passage or defeat of any legislation by the Congress of the United States. It will be noted in this connection that under the definition set forth above "legislation" means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House.

(b) To influence, directly or indirectly, the passage or defeat of any legislation by the Congress.

Section 308. Registration with Secretary of Senate and Clerk of House: This section requires any person who engages himself for pay or for any consideration, for the purpose of attempting to influence the passage or defeat of legislation, to register with the Clerk of the House and the Secretary of the Senate giving full details of his employment, and to report each calendar quarter details concerning money received and expended by him during the preceding calendar quarter in carrying on his work. There are excepted from the provisions of this section persons who merely appear before committees in support of or in opposition to legislation; public officials acting in their official capacity; and newspapers and periodicals acting in the regular course of business. All information required to be filed with the Clerk and Secretary shall be compiled by them, acting jointly, and printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Section 309. Reports and statements to be made under oath: This section requires all reports and statements to be made under oath.

Section 310. Penalties: This section makes it a misdemeanor to violate any of the provisions of the title and provides punishment by fine of not more than $5,000 or imprisonment for not more than 12 months, or both. In addition to these penalties any person convicted of the misdemeanor specified above is prohibited for a period of 3 years from attempting to influence directly or indirectly the passage or defeat of any proposed legislation or from appearing before a committee of the Congress in support of or in opposition to proposed legislation; and any person who violates this provision is guilty of a felony and subject to punishment by a fine of not more than $10,000 or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

Section 311. Exemption: This section provides that the title shall not apply to practices or activities regulated by the Federal Corrupt Practices Act nor be construed as repealing any portion of said act.

Now, Mr. Chairman, by way of further clarification, I want to follow with that portion of the Senate report accompanying this bill, which deals with the lobbying title.

It should prove helpful in a determination of those cases and persons to whom the title does not apply and then specifies three broad groups who would be required to comply with its provisions.

TITLE III—REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT

This title deals with a subject that has frequently been before the Congress, in the form of bills to regulate lobbying activities. In order that there may be no misunderstanding of the purposes of this title the committee desires to make a statement as to what the title does and what it does not do. There follow some of the things that the title does not do:

First. It does not curtail the right of free speech or freedom of the press or the right of petition.

Second. It has no application to the publishers of newspapers, magazines, or other publications, acting in the regular course of business.

Third. It has no application to persons who appear openly and frankly before the committees of Congress and engage in no other activities to influence legislation.

Fourth. It does not require any reports of any persons or organizations now required to report under the provisions of the present Corrupt Practices Act.

Fifth. It does not apply in any manner to persons who appear voluntarily without compensation.

Sixth. It does not apply to organizations formed for other purposes whose efforts to influence legislation are merely incidental to the purposes for which formed.

On the other hand the title applies chiefly to three distinct classes of so-called lobbyists:

First. Those who do not visit the Capitol but initiate propaganda from all over the country in the form of letters and telegrams, many of which have been based entirely upon misinformation as to facts. This class of persons and organizations will be required under the title, not to cease or curtail their activities in any respect, but merely to disclose the sources of their collections and the methods in which they are disbursed.

Second. The second class of lobbyists are those who are employed to come to the Capitol under the false impression that they exert some powerful influence over Members of Congress. These individuals spend their time in Washington presumably exerting some mysterious influence with respect to the legislation in which their employers are interested, but carefully conceal from Members of Congress whom they happen to contact the purpose of their presence. The title in no wise prohibits or curtails their activities. It merely requires that they shall register and disclose the sources and purposes of their employment and the amount of their compensation.

Third. There is a third class of entirely honest and respectable representatives of business, professional, and philanthropic organizations who come to Washington openly and frankly to express their views for or against legislation, many of whom serve a useful and perfectly legitimate purpose in expressing the views and interpretations of their employers with respect to legislation which concerns them. They will likewise be required to register and state their compensation and the sources of their employment.

Section 301. Short title: This section provides a short title, namely, the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act.

Section 302. Definitions: This section contains definitions and for convenience of reference the definitions of "contribution," "expenditure," and "legislation" are included herein as follows:

"(a) The term 'contribution' includes a gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money or anything of value and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make a contribution.

"(b) The term 'expenditure' includes a payment, distribution, loan, advance, deposit, or gift of money or anything of value, and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make an expenditure.

* * * * *

"(e)) The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House."

Section 303. Detailed accounts of contributions: This section makes it the duty of every person soliciting or receiving contributions (as defined above) to any organization or fund for the purposes defined in section 307 (post) to keep a detailed and exact account of all contributions; the name and address of every person making a contribution of $500 or more, and the date thereof; all expenditures made by or on behalf of the organization or fund; and the name and address of every person to whom any expenditure was made, and the date thereof. It is further made the duty of such person to keep receipted bills for expenditures in excess of $10, and to preserve the receipted bills and accounts required to be kept for at least 2 years from the date of filing of the statement containing such items.

Section 304. Receipts for contributions: This section requires every individual who receives a contribution of $500 or more for the purposes specified in section 307 (post), within 5 days after receipt, to render to the person or organization for which it was received a detailed account thereof, including the name and address of the person making the contribution and the date on which received.

Section 305. Statements to be filed with Clerk of the House: This section requires every person receiving any contributions or expending any money for the purposes specified in section 307 (post) to file with the Clerk of the House a statement showing the names and addresses of persons contributing $500 or more; the total sum of the contributions made to or for such person during the calendar year and not stated under the foregoing requirement; the total sum of all contributions made to or for such person during the calendar year; the name and address of each person to whom an expenditure of $10 or more has been made within the calendar year by or on behalf of such person and the amount, date, and purpose of such expenditure; the total sum of all expenditures made by or on behalf of such person during the calendar year and not stated under the foregoing requirement, and the total expenditures made by or on behalf of such person during the calendar year. Statements required to be filed hereunder shall be cumulative during the calendar year to which they relate.

Section 306. Statement preserved for 2 years: Statements required to be filed with the Clerk must be preserved for a period of 2 years from the date of filing, shall constitute part of the public records of his office, and shall be open to public inspection.

Section 307. Persons to whom applicable: This section defines the application of the title and includes any person who by himself or through any agent or employee or other person in any manner whatsoever, directly or indirectly, solicits, collects, or receives money or any other thing of value to be used principally to aid, or the principal purpose of which person is to aid, in the accomplishment of any one of the following purposes: (a) The passage or defeat of any legislation by the Congress of the United States. It will be noted in this connection that under the definition set forth above "legislation" means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House. (b) To influence, directly or indirectly, the passage or defeat of any legislation by the Congress.

(c) To influence, directly or indirectly, the election or defeat of any candidate for any elective Federal office.

SEC. 308. Registration with Secretary of Senate and Clerk of House: This section requires any person who engages himself for pay or for any consideration, for the purpose of attempting to influence the passage or defeat of legislation, to register with the Clerk of the House and the Secretary of the Senate, giving full details of his employment, and to report each calendar quarter details concerning money received and expended by him during the preceding calendar quarter in carrying on his work. There are excepted from the provisions of this section persons who merely appear before committees in support of or in opposition to legislation but who engage in no further or other activities in connection with the passage or defeat of such legislation, public officials acting in their official capacity, and newspapers and periodicals acting in the regular course of business. All information required to be filed with the Clerk and Secretary shall be compiled by them, acting jointly, and printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

SEC. 309. Reports and statements to be made under oath: This section requires all reports and statements to be made under oath.

SEC. 310. Penalties: This section makes it a misdemeanor to violate any of the provisions of the title and provides punishment by fine of not more than $5,000 or imprisonment for not more than 12 months, or both. In addition to these penalties any person convicted of the misdemeanor specified above is prohibited for a period of 3 years from attempting to influence directly or indirectly the passage or defeat of any proposed legislation or from appearing before a committee of the Congress in support of or in opposition to proposed legislation; and any person who violates this provision is guilty of a felony and subject to punishment by a fine of not more than $10,000 or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

SEC. 311. Exemption: This section provides that the title shall not apply to practices or activities regulated by the Federal Corrupt Practices Act nor be construed as repealing any portion of said act.

I believe I can say for members of the committee that we have no desire to restrict in the slightest way the right of a citizen to petition his Government for a redress of grievances by urging the passage or defeat of legislation that might be prejudicial or harmful or adverse to his interests. It is not the desire of the committee to place upon any citizen a brand that is sometimes regarded as sinister. Nor is it the intent of the committee to cause undue inconvenience or hardship for bona fide organizations who must necessarily keep in close touch with all varieties of legislation because of the impact of such legislation upon their legitimate activities. After all, government having moved so deeply into the whole business, economic, and social field that the many fine organizations which represent various economic interests would be almost remiss in their obligations if they failed to keep abreast of developments in the legislative field.

But where men are engaged and paid for the primary and principal purpose of encompassing the defeat or enactment of legislation it is not asking too much that such persons register and file a statement. Many States have such acts upon the statute books today and these do not appear to have imposed undue hardships on any person, group, or organization.

Note particularly the language in section 308. It says:

> Any person who shall engage himself for pay or for any consideration for the purpose of attempting to influence the passage or defeat of any legislation * * *.

That I believe is the key to this title.

Mr. VURSELL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, with the centralization of government which has grown up in the past number of years, it is almost necessary for organizations like the Grange and the Farm Bureau Federation to have their representatives here practically all the time to try to keep them apprised as to legislation affecting millions of farmers throughout the Nation.

I am not in favor of corrupt lobbyists, yet at the same time when you bring about a condition where all of the activities controlling the Government of this country and the industry of this country is lodged here in Washington, if you estop the people of this country from being able to come down here in decent form and under the Constitution petition this Congress you are doing a great disservice to this country and you are playing right into the hands of those people who are trying to subvert the better purposes of government, the radio commentators who have been trying to destroy the confidence of the people in representative government by berating the Members of Congress. I do not know what the answer to this is but I do not want to exclude the right of the people to petition, guaranteed to them in the Constitution of this country, and bring about a condition that will deprive them of their constitutional rights.

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this section do now close.

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Registration with Secretary of the Senate and Clerk of the House

SEC. 308. (a) Any person who shall engage himself for pay or for any consideration for the purpose of attempting to influence the passage or defeat of any legislation by the Congress of the United States shall, before doing anything in furtherance of such object, register with the Clerk of the House of Representatives and the Secretary of the Senate and shall give to those officers in writing and under oath, his name and business address, the name and address of the person by whom he is employed, and in whose interest he appears or works, the duration of such employment, how much he is paid and is to receive, by whom he is paid or is to be paid, how much he is to be paid for expenses, and what expenses are to be included. Each such person so registering shall between the first and tenth day of each calendar quarter, so long as his activity continues, file with the Clerk and Secretary a detailed report under oath of all money received and expended by him during the preceding calendar quarter in carrying on his work; to whom paid; for what purpose; and the names of any papers, periodicals, magazines, or other publications in which he has caused to be published any articles or editorials; and the proposed legislation he is employed to support or oppose. The provisions of this section shall not apply to any person who merely appears before a committee of the Congress of the United States in support of or in opposition to legislation; nor to any public official acting in his official capacity; nor in the case of any newspaper or other regularly published periodical (including any individual who owns, publishes, or is employed by any such newspaper or periodical) which in the ordinary course of business publishes news items, editorials, or other comments, or paid advertisements, which directly or indirectly urge the passage or defeat of legislation, if such newspaper, periodical, or individual, engages in no further or other activities in connection with the passage or defeat of such legislation, other than to appear before a committee of the Congress of the United States in support of or in opposition to such legislation.

(b) All information required to be filed under the provisions of this section with the Clerk of the House of Representatives and the Secretary of the Senate shall be compiled by said Clerk and Secretary, acting jointly, as soon as practicable after the close of the calendar quarter with respect to which such information is filed and shall be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word to make a few comments on the subject of lobbyists.

Mr. Chairman, in my opinion, we are violating the Constitution. It is directly implied in the Constitution that we have no right to intimidate people or to make any effort to intimidate them so that they cannot petition the Congress. What is this but intimidation? It is the same sort of curb you put on enemy agents during the war. Registration—do you remember? It is the same curb you put on enemy agents during the war.

Mr. Chairman, this is not intended to prevent corruption. It would be very simple to put in here language providing for a heavy fine or a heavy jail sentence for anyone who tried to bribe or who offered a job to a Congressman or indulged in any of the ways that are known as corrupt. If that were the intention it would be the easiest thing in the world to insert language in this section. You can see what this is.

How have the damaging bills that have come through this Congress heretofore been brought up? They have been brought here by a group of financiers in New York who see somebody down here in the bureaucracy and start these things like Bretton Woods, the British loan, and all of these other things that are unconstitutional. The bureaucracy sees all these CIO's, women's clubs, business groups, and so forth, and lines them up; then day after day we are bombarded with letters. We have seen that in the committees. Of course, they do not register because everybody knows they are around and that they are influencing legislation.

What does this bill do? It says that if the man whose business is going to be taken by the OPA or the Bretton Woods agreement or the British loan or some of the rest of this iniquitous legislation hires a lawyer, the lawyer has to register exactly the same as an enemy agent registered during the war.

Mr. Chairman, the people are going to soon rise up and stop this totalitarian way into which this Government has fallen recently.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentlewoman from Illinois has expired.

The Clerk read as follows:

Reports and statements to be made under oath

SEC. 309. All reports and statements required under this title shall be made under oath, before an officer authorized by law to administer oaths.

Penalties

SEC. 310. (a) Any person who violates any of the provisions of this title, shall, upon conviction, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000 or imprisonment for not more than 12 months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

(b) In addition to the penalties provided for in subsection (a), any person convicted of the misdemeanor specified therein is prohibited, for a period of 3 years from the date of such conviction, from attempting to influence, directly or indirectly, the passage or defeat of any proposed legislation or from appearing before a committee of the Congress in support of or opposition to proposed legislation; and any person who violates any provision of this subsection shall, upon conviction thereof, be guilty of a felony, and shall be punished by a fine of not more than $10,000, or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Exemption

SEC. 311. The provisions of this title shall not apply to practices or activities regulated by the Federal Corrupt Practices Act nor be construed as repealing any portion of said Federal Corrupt Practices Act.

TITLE IV—FEDERAL TORT CLAIMS ACT

PART 1—SHORT TITLE AND DEFINITIONS

Short title

SEC. 401. This title may be cited as the "Federal Tort Claims Act."

Mr. FOLGER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I am very glad to see this part of the bill, but there is one situation I desire to call to the attention of the chairman of the special committee as well as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN]. There are a good many claims that have been investigated by Government authority and have been approved by the Committee on Claims. We had a call of bills on the Private Calendar this morning. The one I was especially interested in has passed, so far as that is concerned, but there are some that have not.

Yet the Government has gone to great expense in investigating these claims. They have sent certain members of the War Department, in cases of tort, to different parts of the country. Many cases have been decided. They have reported some favorably and on others acted unfavorably. If this act takes effect as of the date of its enactment, as it does do, and if these claims are not disposed of, you have to drive these people back into the courts, and you have lost all the expense that the Government has gone to. It seems to me that there ought to be some method by which the claims that have at least been favorably acted upon by the committee should not be covered by the provision, having to go back into the court and over the whole thing again and, if there is cost to be added, the Government will have to pay the cost if the claimants succeed in these suits.

What I am getting at is this: It does seem to me that there ought to be an amendment that this provision should not apply to claims or bills that have been filed and favorably acted upon by the Committee on Claims. We have a great many cases now in that situation. Some have been there for a year and a half before the Army ever got around to it, and they spent a good deal of time investigating whether these claims were just or not. They finally made their report to the Claims Committee, and the Claims Committee heard the evidence and approved it, and it passed the House this morning, but it is not by the Senate. There might be a race between the two.

The rest of it relates to further claims that may be on the calendar or in committee. There are some statutes of limitation put in here, too, that might interfere. I do not think the bill ought to apply to claims that have been favorably reported.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, as the gentlewoman from Illinois was speaking, I felt that I agreed with her very heartily. I know the Members of Congress join me in being very glad that the amputees have felt that they were welcome in the Congress to plead the cause that they ought not to have to plead, but it is their Capitol; it is their country; the country that they were wounded for. I know Members have made them welcome.

Mr. Chairman, there has been brought to my attention a fact that I am loath to believe and I cannot believe, because it is no laughing matter, that the request of amputees who have been to see their Congressmen on Capitol Hill has been ridiculed. They have asked for legislation to provide an automobile as a means of locomotion to make up for their lost mobility. Several Members introduced bills for that purpose. They felt their idea sound and would serve a useful and greatly needed purpose.

I know that 176 or more Members signed the petition to bring that bill out of committee. With more names pledged I know that some of the members of our Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation have been working very hard to bring out a bill from that committee. In order to aid them other Members have worked tirelessly on the floor. Also Members on the subcommittee worked very hard to perfect a bill.

I would like to tell the House that one of the amputees is Sergeant Andrew Martin, of Long Island. He was in the Army 6 years and 10 months and had not had a furlough. He got a 45-day furlough from Walter Reed Hospital, through the kindness of the commanding officer, General Beach, and on December 21, this last Christmas, he went to the Union Station to take the 2 o'clock train. Sergeant Martin was knocked down and trampled and finally rescued and taken back to Walter Reed when, after 6 months he was again able to travel and finally got his first furlough after 7 years and 4 months. You remember how the newspapers of the Nation and the world were filled with the story of how Sergeant Martin was trampled at the Union Station in the Nation's Capital.

I hope you will join me in voting to give these amputees anything they need, and if that be a new automobile, I am for it. Certainly they deserve it in order to prevent them from being trampled and knocked down and injured. They have suffered too much already. The chairman of the World War Veterans' Committee promised me to hold another meeting.

The Clerk read as follows:

Definitions

SEC. 402. As used in this title, the term—

(a) "Federal agency" includes the executive departments and independent establishments of the United States, and corporations whose primary function is to act as, and while acting as, instrumentalities or agencies of the United States, whether or not authorized to sue and be sued in their own names: Provided, That this shall not be construed to include any contractor with the United States.

(b) "Employee of the Government" includes officers or employees of any Federal agency, members of the military or naval forces of the United States, and persons acting on behalf of a Federal agency in an official capacity, temporarily or permanently in the service of the United States, whether with or without compensation.

(c) "Acting within the scope of his office or employment," in the case of a member of the military or naval forces of the United States, means acting in line of duty.

PART 2—ADMINISTRATIVE ADJUSTMENT OF TORT CLAIMS AGAINST THE UNITED STATES

Claims of $1,000 or less

SEC. 403. (a) Subject to the limitations of this title, authority is hereby conferred upon the head of each Federal agency, or his designee for the purpose, acting on behalf of the United States, to consider, ascertain, adjust, determine, and settle any claim against the United States for money only, accruing on and after January 1, 1945, on account of damage to or loss of property or on account of personal injury or death, where the total amount of the claim does not exceed $1,000, caused by the negligent or wrongful act or omission of any employee of the Government while acting within the scope of his office or employment, under circumstances where the United States, if a private person, would be liable to the claimant for such damage, loss, injury, or death, in accordance with the law of the place where the act or omission occurred.

(b) Subject to the provisions of part 3 of this title, any such award or determination shall be final and conclusive on all officers of the Government, except when procured by means of fraud, notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary.

(c) Any award made to any claimant pursuant to this section, and any award, compromise, or settlement of any claim cognizable under this title made by the Attorney General pursuant to section 413, shall be paid by the head of the Federal agency concerned out of appropriations that may be made therefor, which appropriations are hereby authorized.

(d) The acceptance by the claimant of any such award, compromise, or settlement shall be final and conclusive on the claimant, and shall constitute a complete release by the claimant of any claim against the United States and against the employee of the Government whose act or omission gave rise to the claim, by reason of the same subject matter.

Reports

SEC. 404. The head of each Federal agency shall annually make a report to the Congress of all claims paid by such Federal agency under this part. Such report shall include the name of each claimant, a statement of the amount claimed and the amount awarded, and a brief description of the claim.

PART 3—SUITS ON TORT CLAIMS AGAINST THE UNITED STATES

Jurisdiction

SEC. 410. (a) Subject to the provisions of this title, the United States district court for the district wherein the plaintiff is resident or wherein the act or omission complained of occurred, including the United States district courts for the Territories and possessions of the United States, sitting without a jury, shall have exclusive jurisdiction to hear, determine, and render judgment on any claim against the United States, for money only, accruing on and after January 1, 1945, on account of damage to or loss of property or on account of personal injury or death caused by the negligent or wrongful act or omission of any employee of the Government while acting within the scope of his office or employment, under circumstances where the United States, if a private person, would be liable to the claimant for such damage, loss, injury, or death in accordance with the law of the place where the act or omission occurred. Subject to the provisions of this title, the United States shall be liable in respect of such claims to the same claimants, in the same manner, and to the same extent as a private individual under like circumstances, except that the United States shall not be liable for interest prior to judgment, or for punitive damages. Costs shall be allowed in all courts to the successful claimant to the same extent as if the United States were a private litigant, except that such costs shall not include attorneys' fees.

(b) The judgment in such an action shall constitute a complete bar to any action by the claimant, by reason of the same subject matter, against the employee of the Government whose act or omission gave rise to the claim. No suit shall be instituted pursuant to this section upon a claim presented to any Federal agency pursuant to part 2 of this title unless such Federal agency has made final disposition of the claim: Provided, That the claimant may, upon 15 days' notice given in writing, withdraw the claim from consideration of the Federal agency and commence suit thereon pursuant to this section: Provided further, That as to any claim so disposed of or so withdrawn, no suit shall be instituted pursuant to this section for any sum in excess of the amount of the claim presented to the Federal agency, except where the increased amount of the claim is shown to be based upon newly discovered evidence not reasonably discoverable at the time of presentation of the claim to the Federal agency or upon evidence of intervening facts, relating to the amount of the claim. Disposition of any claim made pursuant to part 2 of this title shall not be competent evidence of liability or amount of damages in proceedings on such claim pursuant to this section.

Mr. SCRIVNER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, before addressing my remarks to this particular section to ask a question, I think it should be stated in all fairness that I am quite sure in answer to the statement by the gentlewoman from Massachusetts that not a single one of these disabled American veterans has ever been ridiculed for his attempts to procure legislation by any Member of Congress. I will say further that the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation has been giving this subject a great deal of serious consideration, and that this committee is the best friend the disabled veterans of this country have.

Mr. Chairman, as a member of the Committee on Claims, I for one have no objection whatsoever to this legislation taking away part of its duties. The Members of Congress may be aware of the fact that almost half the bills introduced in this House are private bills. May I ask whether or not any consideration was given to limiting the amount of awards that may be made by the Federal courts in various types of cases?

Mr. MONRONEY. In this bill we are placing jurisdiction in the Federal courts to determine the amount of the awards.

Mr. SCRIVNER. The reason I asked the question is this. As the gentleman well knows, the Committee on Claims has for a number of years followed the practice of limiting the amounts in death cases to $5,000, and other types of cases are likewise limited. If I read this language correctly, the recovery will be against the Government just exactly as against the private individual. I say frankly that you are opening the doors of the Treasury in all of these suits, and thousands of them will be filed every year. In all fairness to the Nation and to the taxpayers of the Nation there should be some limitation on the amounts to be recovered in these actions, and no one knows that better than the objectors on both sides of the aisle. Without such limitation I cannot support this measure.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCRIVNER. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana, one of the objectors.

Mr. SPRINGER. The provision is also contained in section 410 that these trials must be had before the district court without a jury. What is the gentleman's thought on that subject?

Mr. SCRIVNER. There are advantages in trial before the court without a jury, namely, that the cases can be much more expeditiously handled than they can in the case of a jury trial. There is another advantage in that quite often, inasmuch as the Government is the defendant and the money comes out of the Treasury, the juries will decide cases with their hearts rather than their heads, just as they do when an insurance company is the defendant, so the awards in jury trials would probably be much larger, in view of the sympathy the jurors might have, than they would be in trials before the court. If these cases are to be tried by the Federal courts, they should be court trials rather than jury trials, in my opinion.

Mr. MONRONEY. The committee discussed putting a limitation on these awards, and one of the reasons such a limitation was not adopted is that we might be setting a pattern for making larger awards on claims. If we put a $25,000 limitation in the bill, we would be inviting such awards rather than limiting them.

Mr. SCRIVNER. Yes; but we have had that limitation in the Committee on Claims on private bills during all these years. The danger is not that you will do that but that you will open up the floodgates for inroads on the Federal Treasury by unlimited judgments, which might run as high as $50,000, $75,000, or $100,000.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCRIVNER. I yield.

Mr. CELLER. I am glad the gentleman makes that statement because the Committee on the Judiciary has already approved my bill which provides for the settlement of Federal tort claims in the district courts and we have placed a limitation upon judgments in the district courts of $10,000.

Mr. SCRIVNER. I think such a limitation should be in this bill, and if the House were in a mood to consider amendments, which it has shown it is not, I would offer an amendment to limit the amount of recovery.

The Clerk read as follows:

Procedure

SEC. 411. In actions under this part, the forms of process, writs, pleadings, and motions, and the practice and procedure, shall be in accordance with the rules promulgated by the Supreme Court pursuant to the act of June 19, 1934 (48 Stat. 1064); and the same provisions for counterclaim and set-off, for interest upon judgments, and for payment of judgments, shall be applicable as in cases brought in the United States district courts under the act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. 505).

Review

SEC. 412. (a) Final judgments in the district courts in cases under this part shall be subject to review by appeal—

(1) in the circuit courts of appeals in the same manner and to the same extent as other judgments of the district courts; or

(2) in the Court of Claims of the United States: Provided, That the notice of appeal filed in the district court under rule 73 of the Rules of Civil Procedure shall have affixed thereto the written consent on behalf of all the appellees that the appeal be taken to the Court of Claims of the United States. Such appeals to the Court of Claims of the United States shall be taken within 3 months after the entry of the judgment of the district court, and shall be governed by the rules relating to appeals from a district court to a circuit court of appeals adopted by the Supreme Court pursuant to the act of June 19, 1934 (48 Stat. 1064). In such appeals the Court of Claims of the United States shall have the same powers and duties as those conferred on a circuit court of appeals in respect to appeals under section 4 of the act of February 13, 1925 (43 Stat. 939).

(b) Sections 239 and 240 of the Judicial Code, as amended, shall apply to cases under this part in the circuit courts of appeals and in the Court of Claims of the United States to the same extent as to cases in a circuit court of appeals therein referred to.

Compromise

SEC. 413. With a view to doing substantial justice, the Attorney General is authorized to arbitrate, compromise, or settle any claim cognizable under this part, after the institution of any suit thereon, with the approval of the court in which such suit is pending.

PART 4—PROVISIONS COMMON TO PART 2 AND PART 3

One-year statute of limitations

SEC. 420. Every claim against the United States cognizable under this title shall be forever barred, unless within 1 year after such claim accrued or within 1 year after the date of enactment of this act, whichever is later, it is presented in writing to the Federal agency out of whose activities it arises, if such claim is for a sum not exceeding $1,000; or unless within 1 year after such claim accrued or within 1 year after the date of enactment of this act, whichever is later, an action is begun pursuant to part 3 of this title. In the event that a claim for a sum not exceeding $1,000 is presented to a Federal agency as aforesaid, the time to institute a suit pursuant to part 3 of this title shall be extended for a period of 6 months from the date of mailing of notice to the claimant by such Federal agency as to the final disposition of the claim or from the date of withdrawal of the claim from such Federal agency pursuant to section 410 of this title, if it would otherwise expire before the end of such period.

Exceptions

SEC. 421. The provisions of this title shall not apply to—

(a) Any claim based upon an act or omission of an employee of the Government, exercising due care, in the execution of a statute or regulation, whether or not such statute or regulation be valid, or based upon the exercise or performance or the failure to exercise or perform a discretionary function or duty on the part of a Federal agency or an employee of the Government, whether or not the discretion involved be abused.

(b) Any claim arising out of the loss, miscarriage, or negligent transmission of letters or postal matter.

(c) Any claim arising in respect of the assessment or collection of any tax or customs duty, or the detention of any goods or merchandise by any officer of customs or excise or any other law-enforcement officer.

(d) Any claim for which a remedy is provided by the act of March 9, 1920 (U. S. C., title 46, secs. 741–752, inclusive), or the act of March 3, 1925 (U. S. C., title 46, secs. 781–790, inclusive), relating to claims or suits in admiralty against the United States.

(e) Any claim arising out of an act or omission of any employee of the Government in administering the provisions of the Trading with the Enemy Act, as amended.

(f) Any claim for damages caused by the imposition or establishment of a quarantine by the United States.

(g) Any claim arising from injury to vessels, or to the cargo, crew, or passengers of vessels, while passing through the locks of the Panama Canal or while in Canal Zone waters.

(h) Any claim arising out of assault, battery, false imprisonment, false arrest, malicious prosecution, abuse of process, libel, slander, misrepresentation, deceit, or interference with contract rights.

(i) Any claim for damages caused by the fiscal operations of the Treasury or by the regulation of the monetary system.

(j) Any claim arising out of the activities of the military or naval forces, or the Coast Guard, during time of war.

(k) Any claim arising in a foreign country.

(l) Any claim arising from the activities of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MONRONEY: On page 84, line 1, before the word "activities" insert the word "combatant."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Attorneys' fees

SEC. 422. The court rendering a judgment for the plaintiff pursuant to part 3 of this title, or the head of the Federal agency or his designee making an award pursuant to part 2 of this title, or the Attorney General making a disposition pursuant to section 413 of this title, as the case may be, may, as a part of the judgment, award, or settlement, determine and allow reasonable attorney's fees, which, if the recovery is $500 or more, shall not exceed 10 percent of the amount recovered under part 2, or 20 percent of the amount recovered under part 3, to be paid out of but not in addition to the amount of judgment, award, or settlement recovered, to the attorneys representing the claimant. Any attorney who charges, demands, receives, or collects for services rendered in connection with such claim any amount in excess of that allowed under this section, if recovery be had, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to a fine of not more than $2,000 or imprisonment for not more than 1 year, or both.

Exclusiveness of remedy

SEC. 423. From and after the date of enactment of this act, the authority of any Federal agency to sue and be sued in its own name shall not be construed to authorize suits against such Federal agency on claims which are cognizable under part 3 of this title, and the remedies provided by this title in such cases shall be exclusive.

Certain statutes inapplicable

SEC. 424. (a) All provisions of law authorizing any Federal agency to consider, ascertain, adjust or determine claims on account of damage to or loss of property, or on account of personal injury or death, caused by the negligent or wrongful act or omission of any employee of the Government while acting within the scope of his office or employment, are hereby repealed in respect of claims cognizable under part 2 of this title and accruing on and after January 1, 1945, including, but without limitation, the provisions granting such authorization now contained in the following laws:

Public Law No. 375, Sixty-seventh Congress, approved December 28, 1922 (42 Stat. 1066; U. S. C., title 31, secs. 215–217).

Public Law No. 267, Sixty-sixth Congress, approved June 5, 1920 (41 Stat. 1054; U. S. C., title 33, sec. 853).

Public Law No. 481, Seventy-fourth Congress, approved March 20, 1936 (49 Stat. 1184; U. S. C., title 31, sec. 224b).

Public Law No. 112, as amended, Seventy-eighth Congress, approved July 3, 1943 (57 Stat. 372; U. S. C., title 31, secs. 223b, 223c, and 223d).

Public Law No. 182, as amended, Sixty-fifth Congress, approved July 1, 1918 (40 Stat. 705; U. S. C., title 34, sec. 600).

Section 4 of Public Law No. 18, Sixty-seventh Congress, approved June 16, 1921 (42 Stat. 63), as amended by Public Law No. 456, Seventy-third Congress, approved June 22, 1934 (48 Stat. 1207; U. S. C., title 31, sec. 224c).

(b) Nothing contained herein shall be deemed to repeal any provision of law authorizing any Federal agency to consider, ascertain, adjust, settle, determine, or pay any claim on account of damage to or loss of property or on account of personal injury or death, in cases in which such damage, loss, injury, or death was not caused by any negligent or wrongful act or omission of an employee of the Government while acting within the scope of his office or employment, or any other claim not cognizable under part 2 of this title.

TITLE V—GENERAL BRIDGE ACT

Short title

SEC. 501. This title may be cited as the "General Bridge Act of 1946."

Mr. LEA. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LEA: Beginning at the top of page 87, strike all of title 5: General Bridge Act.

Mr. LEA. Mr. Chairman, the effect of this amendment if adopted would be to leave the granting of permits for bridges over navigable streams as the situation stands at present. I would not ask the Committee of the Whole of the House to consider this matter from the standpoint of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce which has jurisdiction of the subject. If there is any reason why the law should be left as it is, the reason is that Members of Congress may have the benefit of securing bridge permits through the committee of Congress instead of going to the War Department for that purpose. Every Member of Congress realizes there are two distinct lines of work of the Members of the House. One is as to their legislative duties and the other is a very important part of a Congressman's work, and that is contact with the executive departments of the Government. Whether we like it or not, in the last 40 or 50 years there has been an accumulation of Federal activities that frequently bring the Members of Congress in contact with the departments of Government. Whether you adopt the provisions that are in this bill or stay with the existing law, that responsibility will rest upon the Members very much as it is now so far as securing bridge permits for their district is concerned. This year, for instance, there have been over 100 Members of Congress who have come to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce to handle these measures. We have found frequently that it has been a great advantage to Members of the House to have this body to which they can apply in securing permits for their districts.

We feel it is probably true that our committee can be of service to the Members of this House, that justifies retaining jurisdiction where it is.

I will be followed by our colleague, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CHAPMAN], who for a great many years has had charge of this work as chairman of the subcommittee. I think he will give you substantial reasons why the House might determine it would be to the advantage of the Membership of the House and to the country if this jurisdiction should be maintained in the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. LEA] has expired.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section close in 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

Mr. CHAPMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, as the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce has said, this amendment was introduced not to preserve the jurisdiction of a committee but to safeguard the proper functions of the Congress.

This is another of the constantly recurring attempts to induce the Congress to abdicate its power and prerogative to the executive branch of the Government. It is a proposal that Members of Congress surrender their rights in the enactment of bridge bills at the behest of the War Department. Such proposals have been sent more than once by the War Department to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce in the form of bills. No action has ever been taken in favor of such a proposal, and no one has ever been found to introduce such a bill.

We took the position that no officer in the War Department knows as much about the need for a bridge, its proper location, its relation to the highway system, its financing, and its feasibility as does the Member of Congress from that district. A city, a county, a State—sometimes two cities, counties, or States—desire construction of a bridge. They would rather secure the authority through their Congressman than through some bureaucrat in the War Department. The Congressman takes justifiable pride in piloting a bridge bill through for the benefit of his constituents. It is an important bill to them; frequently to that constituency it is the most important bill pending in Congress. The Congressman knows local conditions. He and members of the committee having jurisdiction speak the same language and understand one another's problems. No Member of Congress desiring to expedite the construction of a needed bridge with a sound financial structure has ever failed to receive sympathetic and cordial cooperation from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. Within the last few days, on the eve of adjournment, several Members have introduced bridge bills and have received favorable reports. I wonder if they would not prefer to continue to bring their bills to a committee of their colleagues rather than depend on the caprices of some autocratic bureaucrat, who was not elected by the people, and has no feeling of responsibility to the people.

The Congress, through the years, has authorized a fine system of bridges as a part of the highway system. We have practically eliminated private toll bridges, which would be revived if this title should become law. We have eliminated many privately owned ferries, dangerous bottlenecks to modern highway traffic. We authorize free bridges and publicly owned toll bridges, which, at the expiration of a reasonable amortization period, become free bridges—just as free to traffic as any other part of the highway. This bill would fix a definite amortization period of 20 years. That is the usual period, but we have found situations in which it was necessary in the public interest to establish a different period of amortization. The bridge program will be more satisfactory if left to the discretion of the Congress than if placed in a bureaucratic strait-jacket.

If this title becomes a law the Member of Congress will have no part in authorizing a bridge in his district; but woe unto the highway commissioner, the mayor, city councilman, the county judge, or member of the fiscal court, who fails to obey implicitly every rule and order promulgated by some major or captain in the War Department who will hold the power of life or death over the desire of a city, county, or State for a bridge, because failure to comply with any order or specific condition imposed by the Secretary of War or Chief of Engineers—and that means the functionary or martinet in charge of the bridge bureau—will be punishable by a fine not to exceed $5,000, or by imprisonment for not more than a year, or both.

The enactment of bridge bills has never clogged the legislative machinery; it has never slowed the legislative processes. Bridge bills have been handled expeditiously and efficiently and, I believe, to the satisfaction of the Congress and the country. Beginning with the Seventieth Congress, 112 who are now Members of the House have introduced bridge bills which have been reported by the committee and passed by the House. There has never been the slightest degree of partisanship in reporting bridge bills. No Member can say that he has ever failed to receive fair and courteous treatment by that committee.

Scores of Members have bridges in their respective districts that are pointed out by their constituents as monuments to the public service of the Congressman who introduced the bills that authorized their construction.

Not only has there been a constantly increasing tendency to concentrate power in the Federal Government at the expense of the local governments, but the executive department has continued to encroach upon numerous prerogatives of the legislative department. Even worse than the arrogation of power by the executive department is the abdication by Congress of its rights and the abandonment of its obligations.

* * * * *

We witness the shameful, pitiful spectacle of the Congress of the United States, clothed by the Constitution with all legislative power, invested with all legislative responsibility, year after year, in session after session, bowing more and more obsequiously to the dictates of a bureaucratic clerk.

* * * * *

Unless we stop drifting as we have been drifting, and are drifting now, representative government will be undermined and destroyed, and on its ruins will rise an autocratic, arrogant, paternalistic, centralized bureaucracy. Then constitutional government will be dead. Let us get back to the principles of the fathers, maintain this Government as an "indissoluble Union of indestructible States," as a "government of laws and not of men," preserve the separation of powers under a dual form of government, and restore the equipoise which, as the result of executive usurpation and legislative abdication, has been destroyed.

Those words which I uttered in this Chamber May 18, 1928, were true then.

They are truer now. Let us stop this supine surrender of legislative prerogatives; this shameless abdication of legislative responsibility.

The bridge program will be more satisfactory if left to the discretion and judgment of Congress than if placed in a bureaucratic strait-jacket.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky has expired.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I am quite confident every Member of the House who may be interested in the construction of a bridge across a navigable stream would be genuinely delighted to enjoy the fellowship of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, but this was the most ingenious argument I have ever heard for striking out a title of this bill. It was for all practical purposes nothing more than an argument to preserve the little opportunity for the Member of Congress to enjoy the fellowship that goes along with presenting a bridge bill before the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

You could introduce a thousand bills, you could fill this Chamber with bills and never get a bridge until after the War Department had explored every engineering aspect of it. It has got to go there anyway, it has to have the approval of the War Department engineers, so why have the Consent Calendar of this House cluttered from one year's end to the other with a hundred bridge bills when the work has to be done by the War Department engineers?

I hope that the amendment offered by the gentleman from California will be voted down by a resounding vote.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the gentleman from New York who has had a great deal to do with this bridge business.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I used to be on the bridge subcommittee of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce; and it was a nuisance.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Did you hear that? The gentleman was a member of the subcommittee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce dealing with bridges; and the distinguished gentleman from New York says it is a nuisance.

Now let us eliminate this nuisance by voting down this amendment by a good vote.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

Consent of Congress

SEC. 502. (a) The consent of Congress is hereby granted for the construction, maintenance, and operation of bridges and approaches thereto over the navigable waters of the United States, in accordance with the provisions of this title.

(b) The location and plans for such bridges shall be approved by the Chief of Engineers and the Secretary of War before construction is commenced, and, in approving the location and plans of any bridge, they may impose any specific conditions relating to the maintenance and operation of the structure which they may deem necessary in the interest of public navigation, and the conditions so imposed shall have the force of law.

(c) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsections (a) and (b), it shall be unlawful to construct or commence the construction of any privately owned highway toll bridge until the location and plans thereof shall also have been submitted to and approved by the highway department or departments of the State or States in which the bridge and its approaches are situated; and where such bridge shall be between two or more States and the highway departments thereof shall be unable to agree upon the location and plans therefor, or if they, or either of them, shall fail or refuse to act upon the location and plans submitted, such location and plans then shall be submitted to the Public Roads Administration and, if approved by the Public Roads Administration, approval by the highway departments shall not be required.

Tolls

SEC. 503. If tolls shall be charged for the transit over any interstate bridge of engines, cars, streetcars, wagons, carriages, vehicles, animals, foot passengers, or other passengers, such tolls shall be reasonable and just, and the Secretary of War may, at any time, and from time to time, prescribe the reasonable rates of toll for such transit over such bridge, and the rates so prescribed shall be the legal rates and shall be the rates demanded and received for such transit.

Acquisition by public agencies

SEC. 504. After the completion of any interstate toll bridge constructed by an individual, firm, or corporation, as determined by the Secretary of War, either of the States in which the bridge is located, or any public agency or political subdivision of either of such States, within or adjoining which any part of such bridge is located, or any two or more of them jointly, may at any time acquire and take over all right, title, and interest in such bridge and its approaches, and any interest in real property for public purposes by condemnation or expropriation. If at any time after the expiration of 5 years after the completion of such bridge the same is acquired by condemnation or expropriation, the amount of damages or compensation to be allowed shall not include good will, going value, or prospective revenues or profits, but shall be limited to the sum of (1) the actual cost of constructing such bridge and its approaches, less a reasonable deduction for actual depreciation in value; (2) the actual costs of acquiring such interests in real property; (3) actual financing and promotion costs, not to exceed 10 percent of the sum of the cost of constructing the bridge and its approaches and acquiring such interests in real property; and (4) actual expenditures for necessary improvements.

Statements of cost

SEC. 505. Within 90 days after the completion of a privately owned interstate toll bridge, the owner shall file with the Secretary of War and with the highway departments of the States in which the bridge is located, a sworn itemized statement showing the actual original cost of constructing the bridge and its approaches, the actual cost of acquiring any interest in real property necessary therefor, and the actual financing and promotion costs. The Secretary of War may, and upon request of a highway department shall, at any time within 3 years after the completion of such bridge, investigate such costs and determine the accuracy and the reasonableness of the costs alleged in the statement of costs so filed, and shall make a finding of the actual and reasonable costs of constructing, financing, and promoting such bridge. For the purpose of such investigation the said individual, firm, or corporation, its successors and assigns, shall make available all of its records in connection with the construction, financing, and promotion thereof. The findings of the Secretary of War as to the reasonable costs of the construction, financing, and promotion of the bridge shall be conclusive for the purposes mentioned in section 504 of this title, subject only to review in a court of equity for fraud or gross mistake.

Sinking fund

SEC. 506. If tolls are charged for the use of an interstate bridge constructed or taken over or acquired by a State or States or by any municipality or other political subdivision or public agency thereof, under the provisions of this title, the rates of toll shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay for the reasonable cost of maintaining repairing, and operating the bridge and its approaches under economical management, and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to amortize the amount paid therefor, including reasonable interest and financing cost, as soon as possible under reasonable charges, but within a period of not to exceed 20 years from the date of constructing or acquiring the same. After a sinking fund sufficient for such amortization shall have been so provided, such bridge shall thereafter be maintained and operated free of tolls. An accurate record of the amount paid for acquiring the bridge and its approaches, the actual expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same, and of the daily tolls collected, shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested.

Applicability of title

SEC. 507. The provisions of this title shall apply only to bridges over navigable waters of the United States, the construction of which is hereafter approved under the provisions of this title; and the provisions of the first proviso of section 9 of the act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. 1151; U. S. C., title 33, sec. 401), and the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906, shall not apply to such bridges.

International bridges

SEC. 508. This title shall not be construed to authorize the construction of any bridge which will connect the United States, or any Territory or possession of the United States, with any foreign country.

Eminent domain

SEC. 509. There are hereby conferred upon any individual, his heirs, legal representatives, or assigns, any firm or corporation, its successors or assigns, or any State, political subdivision, or municipality authorized in accordance with the provisions of this title to build a bridge between two or more States, all such rights and powers to enter upon lands and acquire, condemn, occupy, possess, and use real estate and other property in the respective States needed for the location, construction, operation, and maintenance of such bridge and its approaches, as are possessed by railroad corporations for railroad purposes or by bridge corporations for bridge purposes in the State in which such real estate or other property is situated, upon making just compensation therefor to be ascertained and paid according to the laws of such State, and the proceedings therefor shall be the same as in the condemnation or expropriation of property for public purposes in such State.

Penalties

SEC. 510. Any person who fails or refuses to comply with any lawful order of the Secretary of War or the Chief of Engineers issued under the provisions of this title, or who fails to comply with any specific condition imposed by the Chief of Engineers and the Secretary of War relating to the maintenance and operation of bridges, or who refuses to produce books, papers, or documents in obedience to a subpena or other lawful requirement under this title, or who otherwise violates any provisions of this title, shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not to exceed $5,000 or by imprisonment for not more than 1 year, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Rights reserved

SEC. 511. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this title is hereby expressly reserved as to any and all bridges which may be built under authority hereof.

TITLE VI—COMPENSATION AND RETIREMENT PAY OF MEMBERS OF CONGRESS

Compensation of Members of Congress

SEC. 601. (a) Effective on the day on which the Eightieth Congress convenes, the compensation of Senators, Representatives in Congress, Delegates from the Territories, and the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico shall be at the rate of $15,000 per annum each; and the compensation of the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the Vice President of the United States shall be at the rate of $20,000 per annum each.

(b) The sentence contained in the Legislative Branch Appropriation Act, 1946, which reads as follows: "There shall be paid to each Representative and Delegate, and to the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico, after January 2, 1945, an expense allowance of $2,500 per annum to assist in defraying expenses related to or resulting from the discharge of his official duties, to be paid in equal monthly installments.", is hereby repealed, effective on the day on which the Eightieth Congress convenes.

(c) The sentence contained in the Legislative Branch Appropriation Act, 1947, which reads as follows: "There shall be paid to each Senator after January 1, 1946, an expense allowance of $2,500 per annum to assist in defraying expenses related to or resulting from the discharge of his official duties, to be paid in equal monthly installments.", is hereby repealed, effective on the day on which the Eightieth Congress convenes.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BROWN of Ohio: In line 18, page 93, after the word "of", strike out "$15,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$12,500."

Beginning with line 22 on page 93 strike out all of the following matter up to and including line 13 on page 94 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"(b) Effective on the day on which the Eightieth Congress convenes there shall be paid to each Senator, Representative in Congress, Delegate from the Territories, Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico, an expense allowance of $2,500 per annum to assist in defraying expenses relating to, or resulting from, the discharge of his official duties, for which no tax liability shall incur, or accounting be made. Such sum to be paid in equal monthly installments.

"(c) The sentence contained in the Legislative Branch Appropriation Act, 1946, which reads as follows: 'There shall be paid to each Representative and Delegate, and to the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico, after January 2, 1945, an expense allowance of $2,500 per annum to assist in defraying expenses related to, or resulting from, the discharge of his official duties, to be paid in equal monthly installments.', is hereby repealed, effective on the day on which the Eightieth Congress convenes.

"(d) The sentence contained in the Legislative Branch Appropriation Act, 1947, which reads as follows: 'There shall be paid to each Senator after January 1, 1946, an expense allowance of $2,500 per annum to assist in defraying expenses related to, or resulting from, the discharge of his official duties, to be paid in equal monthly installments.', is hereby repealed, effective on the day on which the Eightieth Congress convenes."

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, earlier today when I first read this amendment that I said I would introduce at this time, the amount of annual salary for Members of Congress in the amendment was fixed at $12,000 and the expense account at $3,000. Since that time, however, I have had a number of conferences with different Members of the House and, as a result, we have arrived at a compromise arrangement which will reduce the salary as given in the bill from $15,000 to $12,500 per year for each Member of the House and Senate and will provide that the expense allowance shall remain as it has been for the past 2 or 3 years, namely, $2,500 per year, with this single exception: The amendment does fix without any question the fact that the expense allowance shall be tax-free; in other words, that there shall be no tax liability incurring on this particular expense allowance, or accounting made thereon.

That is done for the reason that every expense allowance made in business or industry or in a profession is a deductible item for tax purposes. There is no question about that. But there is a question under the internal-revenue laws of the United States with reference to the tax-allowance arrangement we now have as the result of a section of a bill recently passed. There is a question as to whether or not a Member of Congress has the right to claim and to obtain an exemption for the money that he actually expends in the conduct of his work, his official work as a Member of Congress, because it has been held in some cases that a Member of Congress is not engaged in a business or a profession, therefore he cannot claim a deduction as a business expense or as a professional expense. So we fixed that very firmly in this amendment.

I want to call attention to one other thing, and I especially would like to get the attention of the Speaker and of the minority leader, that in my amendment I do not reduce in any way the salaries fixed for the Speaker of the House or the Vice President of the United States. I think they are worthy of receiving $25,000 each, and I am glad that the committee put that provision in the bill.

We have debated this question. I think everyone understands it. I think this is the direct and the honest and the honorable way to do this thing. I do not believe that anyone can contend that a Member of Congress is not entitled to a reasonable expense allowance, just as every other public official in the United States is given a reasonable expense allowance. This money is to be spent, of course, on official business, and there is no Member of Congress worthy of his salt that does not spend more than $2,500 a year in transacting the affairs of his constituents and the public business of the United States. I think we are being honest not only with the public but with ourselves. The reason I offered this amendment is because the bill provided that you would receive $15,000 salary, out of which you pay your own expenses on official business, and there is no other public official in the country, and I know of none in private business, that is required to pay his expenses on official business out of his own pocket.

Therefore, I hope this amendment will be adopted.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Members of the Committee, let us understand just exactly what we are doing. We are talking about $15,000 that will come to every Member of the House and Senate, and whether we should go about it by saying $15,000 is our salary, or $12,500 plus $2,500 for expenses, is a matter for the House to determine, but I believe that every Member of the House and Senate should realize that the board of directors of the Federal Government cannot continue to get men of the ability needed to face the problems that we face today at far below the going rate in business or industry or in other lines. Government service will not keep a man here if he is losing money. I had occasion to investigate the amounts of time that Members of Congress have spent on the job. Since 1925, when the congressional salary was raised from $7,500 to $10,000, until 1938, the Congress spent 47.4 percent of the time in those years on the job in Washington. Since 1938 until 1946 we have spent 94 percent of the time on the job in Washington; just almost exactly double the amount of time.

You can also consider with this the cost-of-living increase, which in all of these statistics, considering the much higher Washington living costs, does come up to about the 50-percent increase that we are considering at this time—either in the committee bill or in the amendment.

You can consider the Federal pay increase we have granted almost all other Federal employees, which approaches and almost equals, since 1925, 50 percent.

So I think if you measure it on any index and on the average weekly earnings of workers in industry, it might be interesting, because that has been the yardstick. Since 1925, it has increased 76.9 percent up to the present time.

So I believe if we are honest with the people we will say that it should require the payment of $15,000 to keep the type of men that Congress must have on the job. I do not mean to say that you cannot get 435 men to sit in the House for $10,000, or for $8,000, or for $5,000, or for $4,000. But government, like everybody else, is going to get just exactly what it pays for, and year after year you are going to see your top men dropping out, men that we can ill afford to lose, and go into other types of business.

Neither of these provisions, either the committee bill nor the Brown amendment, apply to Members of this Congress. The people themselves will decide in the November elections just who will receive this increased pay. We do have the responsibility of placing the salary on the job which will be held by the people who the people select to represent them.

Congress must make this decision, for there is no other agency which can set the salary of Members of Congress. I wish there could be a separate board or some other means to relieve us of this onerous task.

But if you are aiming at a stronger Congress, and we are in this bill, then I feel you must consider whether the salary will be great enough to keep your best men in Congress—and attract the best men in the district to seek the job.

Although I differ, I have no quarrel with the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BROWN]. I feel that the committee recommendation saying that it is a $15,000 job is a clean-cut statement, on top of the table, it is direct, it makes it a fixed sum for the job, and it hires the Congressman for a definite salary for the year.

I do not like the $2,500 expense allowance because I think every Member within range of my voice knows that the $2,500 does not come within a fraction of paying the additional expense that it costs to sit in this body.

I do not want to have it go out to my constituents and the people of this country that I am receiving $12,500 net with all expenses paid. I believe that is our principal difference. I believe the Congress would stand in a far better light to say that it is a $15,000-a-year job and that we are paying that definite and certain amount.

On the deductibility, I believe the approach that is being made by the committee in an amendment to be offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MCCORMACK] is a correct one.

It would put a Member of Congress in exactly the same position as a businessman coming to Washington. It would reverse, by the amendment the gentleman from Massachusetts will offer, an old Tax Court decision that holds for some reason, I know not what, that our place of residence for Federal income-tax purposes is in Washington.

Does any Member think he could come here and serve his district in Washington and not retain a residence in his home district? I am sure you realize that no Member could do that. So this amendment will be offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MCCORMACK] to permit income-tax deductibility for one of the duplicating residences that a Congressman must maintain. He can deduct only then up to $2,500 a year for this. The matter is in your hands. I feel it is a more straightforward step to say it is a $15,000-a-year job rather than to adopt the Brown amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma has expired.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto do now close.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BUCK: On page 93, line 13, strike out section 601, paragraphs (a) and (b).

Mr. POAGE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCK. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. POAGE. This amendment is word for word the amendment I intended to offer. I shall support the gentleman's amendment, and shall not offer my amendment.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. O'NEAL. It is my understanding that the language in the bill has been amended. The amendment offered by the gentleman from New York is to strike out the original language, which has been amended. Therefore, the language of the amendment is not in proper form.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment is to strike out the section as amended. The point of order is overruled.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Chairman, I offer this amendment with considerable reluctance. I know that every Member of the Congress earns, is entitled to, and in many instances needs a higher salary and expense allowance. On the other hand, I have continuously advocated a curtailment in Government expenses to the end that the Federal budget be balanced as an essential safeguard against rampant inflation. To be consistent, I must therefore advocate that these well-merited increases be postponed until a balanced budget is an accomplished fact. Such postponement is the purpose of my amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. BUCK].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have permission to extend their remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. BRYSON. Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to the enactment of the so-called Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, insofar as it would raise the salaries of Members of Congress.

It behooves all of us and especially the lawmakers to prevent insofar as is possible to do so all trends toward inflation. With millions of people struggling at their present income to meet increased costs of living, it certainly appears to be a bad example if Congress raises their own pay.

While it is generally admitted that it is difficult to make ends meet on present legislative salaries, nevertheless, I find it possible to do so.

It has been necessary for our Government to involve itself in unprecedented debt by reason of the war. Until such time as our country is in better financial condition I cannot justify a vote increasing the salary of Members of Congress.

I am also opposed to that provision in the measure which provides for retirement pay to Members of Congress. I believe it a bad policy to have elected officials participating in any plans for retirement benefits.

Mr. BENNETT of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, on various occasions in the past I have spoken and voted against Treasury grabs by the bureaucrats and Congress. I shall do so again today on the pending measure. It is unfortunate that many worth-while proposals have been lumped in with pay increases and pensions for Congressmen. I would like to have the opportunity to vote for a congressional streamlining bill without these objectionable features in it. That opportunity is not presented today. I want my position on this matter to be clear in case this bill is passed without a roll call.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Chairman, on a previous occasion when this matter of increasing the salary of Members of Congress was up for consideration a few months ago, I stated then that I was opposed to increasing the salary of Members either directly or indirectly. I further pointed out on the matter of so-called pensions for Congressmen that Members of Congress were in a different category from Federal employees. They are elected by the people and occupy positions of trust. Moreover I stated on the occasion when this pension matter was being considered here on the floor a few months ago this country has the greatest national debt of any country in the history of the world and it is therefore more appropriate that we, as Members of Congress, set the pace by tightening our belts and voting for economy rather than increasing our salaries, either directly or indirectly. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I shall vote against both the salary increase and the pension provision.

Mr. HOEVEN. Mr. Chairman, I see much good in this reorganization bill. The Congress is very much in need of reorganization. However, I cannot support the section of the bill which would increase the salary of a Member of Congress or grant him retirement benefits. The cry throughout the country is for economy in government and Members of Congress therefore should set the example. Under the circumstances I feel duty bound to vote against the bill.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, I understand that the congressional pay was increased in 1925 from $7,500 to $10,000. It has remained at this figure until 2 years ago we voted a $2,500 expense account to each Member. I do feel that increase is sufficient and the additional increase of $2,500 suggested by the Brown amendment is not needed. Men who come to Congress have great responsibility. It does not seem that with the unbalanced budget that the additional increase is now justified. The increased-pay amendment should be defeated.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Chairman, heretofore, when legislation of this character was presented to the House, I spoke against its passage, and I voted against it. I took the position then, as I now take that same position, because our Nation is involved in the greatest debt that any nation has faced; our people are bowed down in debt; this is not a proper time for increases in salaries, and this is not a proper time to think of retirement. I am opposed to it, and I will vote against this measure.

Mr. Chairman, while I am in full accord with streamlining Congress when it can be done properly, yet there are many items in this plan to reorganize Congress with which I cannot agree. Yet, with great care—and with ample time—a plan of reorganization can be worked out, but I cannot subscribe to this plan. I will cast my vote against this bill. I will vote for the best interest of the people I represent and against any increase of taxes upon the people for this proposed plan.

We must quit spending. We must begin paying our debt. We cannot pay if these programs are continued.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Chairman, I expect to vote against this bill and I am opposed to the increase in salary provided in this legislation. I am also opposed to the retirement plan commonly known as a congressional pension.

I favor a reorganization of Congress but not in the manner attempted by this legislation.

Mr. ANGELL. Mr. Chairman, I regret that I cannot vote for an increase in the salary of Members of Congress and the pension program for Congressmen. I realize that our compensation is too low and that our official expenses here in Washington and at home are heavy and take a good part of our salaries. However, I cannot vote to increase my own salary without giving increases to our low-income workers. I also feel we should make adequate provision for our old folks before increasing our own pay. I therefore am voting against increase in pay and pensions for ourselves.

Mr. DOLLIVER. Mr. Chairman, I support the amendment of the gentleman from New York. With the Federal budget in its present situation this Congress should consider its duty to the taxpayers. I cannot support legislation to raise the salaries of Congress, nor can I support pensions for Congress.

Mr. BARRETT of Wyoming. Mr. Chairman, I am in entire agreement with many provisions of this bill. I think the streamlining of the Congress is long overdue. However, I cannot agree with the section under consideration wherein the compensation of the Members is increased. Nor can I agree with the retirement benefits to the legislative branch of the Government. Just yesterday we had under consideration the increase in the Federal contribution for old-age assistance and while I voted for that legislation I felt then and feel now that we did not go far enough. It seems to me that a Member of Congress is in a far different position than an employee in the civil service and for that reason I shall vote against the retirement section. Everyone knows the country faces a tremendous debt and if we are to insist upon economy in others we must practice it ourselves and for that reason I shall vote against the increase in salaries to Members of Congress.

Mr. ROBERTSON of North Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I congratulate the committee for their excellent work on this bill, the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946. In it are many needed reforms. I should like to vote for these separately. Inasmuch as the salary increases and security features are all part of the same bill, I cannot with good conscience support it. I feel it to be the first duty of Congress to balance the Nation's budget. All expenses should be held down until this has been accomplished.

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, this is no time for Congressmen to vote themselves a salary increase. If there is one organ in our whole social and economic structure rather than any other which ought to set an example for staying the pending inflationary forces, that organ is the Congress of the United States. It is this body which primarily the public must look to for the adoption of measures to prevent the further progress of inflation. Since the raising of our salary would be in principle definitely inflationary, we would by such act entirely destroy the basis without which no conduct on our part could possibly effectuate any control over inflation.

One frequently hears the contention advanced that all except Congressmen have received increases in their income. Nothing could be further from the truth. There are still a great many people whose income has not been increased since 1939 and a great many more whose income has by no means kept pace with rising living costs. Should the Congress now raise the salary of its Members, those groups would be forced to pay, out of their inequitably low income, taxes to meet this increase. A legislative body cannot violate such a principle as this and still retain that independence which is essential for the maintenance of its integrity, self-respect, and even its very preservation.

One more important point should not be overlooked. Congress possesses the arbitrary power to raise the salary of its Members. This alone should deter us. Argue as we may that our services are worth more than $10,000 a year, this cannot be proven. In saying this I am not contending that the work we do may not be worth more than the compensation we now receive, but I, for one, want to make my own position clear. I am not sure that the services which I render to my constituents and to my country are worth more than $10,000, if even that much. Were I to vote for this proposed increase I could find no other reason to satisfy my conscience and answer to my constituents except that I simply happen to occupy a position which gives me arbitrary power to do this.

Mr. TALLE. Mr. Chairman, I shall vote against this bill. There are certain features in it relating to reorganization of the Congress which I believe to be constructive. Those features I favor. There are, however, other features which I find myself unable to support. Those features have to do with salaries and annuities. My vote will, therefore, be in the negative when the bill comes up for final passage.

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Chairman, I am heartily in favor of all the provisions of this bill, save one. In fact I wish it went still further in some respects, in streamlining congressional procedures. I am sorry the committee did not see fit to accept my amendment to restore the provision for an administrative assistant that would free us more for our primary duties as legislators. I hope that the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MONRONEY] will help, as he suggested, in making this change at a later date.

Probably the most important provisions are first, the reduction of House committees from 47 to 19, eliminating overlapping and giving each Member a real job to do on a major committee as soon as he is sent here by his constituents; and, second, the legislative budget provision that those who raise the Government's money and those who spend it get together to do over-all planning and keep within our means—cut the garment of our appropriations to the cloth of our income.

I heartily support the inclusion of Members of Congress in the retirement allowance system long in effect for other Government employees. It is not a grant. It is a sound annuity system to which a Member contributes 6 percent of his salary and receives a retirement allowance after reaching 62 years of age, the amount depending directly on the number of years he has contributed. In my judgment this provision is far more valuable from the standpoint of leading to better government than the 25 percent increase in salary that has been voted. The retirement allowance does two very important things: First, it gives the Member a degree of economic security for his old age which inevitably enables him to be more independent in his voting, to make up his mind more on the basis of the rightness or wrongness of a piece of legislation, rather than on the possible political effect, good or bad, on himself. Second, it enables him to quit when he is through—when he is no longer able to function at his best. After a man has been here 25 or 30 years, what can he do for a living? His professional skill, his clientele, his business are gone. It is almost impossible to start over. So the inevitable tendency is to hang on, term after term, because economic necessity requires it. So I say that it is long overdue for Members of Congress to be made eligible for our regular civil-service retirement allowance system—not primarily for their sake, but for the sake of the country's welfare.

One major change I am strongly opposed to at this time—that is the 25 percent raise in salary. I have for 3 years consistently counseled against general wage increases for labor. I have maintained that we ought not to increase our purchasing power widely until our production could be turned to civilian goods and more adequate supplies of commodities could be made available. Just as soon as it is clear that we are over the hump on these inflationary pressures, just as soon as supply approximates demand so that prices are stabilized, or even decline a little because of natural forces, then I shall urge the raising of wages wherever it can be done without increasing prices to consumers, and I shall then favor increasing the salaries of Members of Congress which have remained unchanged since about 1927, even though the time spent in Washington has doubled, our work has at least trebled, and the cost of living has advanced greatly for us as for everyone.

But it does not seem to me wise or justifiable to raise our salaries just at this time when prices have risen sharply, when there are strong pressures by some to start another series of strikes to get further wage increases. I cannot ask others to hold steady a few more months, until we have achieved full production and ended the threat of inflation, and at the same time vote for a salary increase for ourselves, even though I recognize fully the necessity of higher remuneration if the Congress is to hold and to attract the ablest men in our country, which it so badly needs.

Mr. COLE of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by my distinguished colleague the gentleman from New York [Mr. BUCK]. Let me remind you that section 132 of this bill, which has already been adopted by this Committee, provides that Congress adjourn sine die not later than the last day of July each year. This means that hereafter the Congress will be in session 7 months or less each year. How, may I ask, can you justify the 50 percent increase in salary provided in section 601 of this bill? Should this provision remain in the bill would not all other Government employees be entitled to a similar increase? Could they not justly present this as a basis for their demands? Only yesterday we passed the social-security bill allowing the old-age pensioners an increase of only $5 per month, which amounts to 20 percent. What are we to say to them if we pass this? How can we ever contend that we are practicing economy and trying to reduce Government spending and balance the budget when we do things like shortening our session by almost half and yet increase salaries by 50 percent? Gentlemen, 75 percent of the people of my district earn less than $2,500 per year. They are the ones who pay the taxes that in turn pay our salaries. Do you think they will approve this provision? I am sure they will not.

The Buck amendment strikes this provision from the bill and I hope it will be adopted.

I am also opposed to the provisions of section 602 of this bill. This section provides retirement pay for Members of Congress. I shall support an amendment, which I understand is to be offered, to strike this section from the bill. Should sections 601 and 602 remain in this bill I will vote against its final passage even though I favor most of its other provisions.

Mr. SCHWABE of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, in a few minutes we shall vote on the question of raising our own salaries and also pensions for Congressmen. I hope enough of us will demand a record vote rather than pass the bill by a standing vote only.

My experience in Washington, nearly 4 years, has shown that while the cost of living is high, yet if one is content to live on about the same scale to which he was accustomed back home he can not only get along but save a considerable portion of $10,000 per year. My observation is that those Members who attend to business and work hard have less time for Washington society and consequently less opportunity for spending money.

I oppose pensions for elected officials not that the amount involved in this instance will break the country but it is the wrong principle. We should be an example for the whole country. We propose to fight inflation on the one hand with the silly OPA and then turn right around and vote ourselves increased salaries plus lifetime pensions. How then are we going to refuse every other group that comes along requesting handouts? Surely we can wait until the Budget is balanced and the scare of inflation has passed. By our action today we symbolize and put our stamp of approval on the Government spending orgy which is wrecking our economy.

With nearly 3,000,000 Federal civilian employees drawing many billions of dollars per year the purchasing power of our dollar is being slowly but surely destroyed. It is one way of robbing the old-age pensioner, the veteran, and all holders of Government bonds as well as other money contracts. Their meager income and savings buy less and less of goods and commodities.

If the good people of this country ever awaken to the way they are being plundered by their own spendthrift Government their wrath and righteous indignation will mount to unknown heights. Mr. Chairman, my voting record will show that I have refused to open the Treasury of the United States to all comers and I do not propose to abandon that course today.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on this section do now close.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Retirement pay of Members of Congress

SEC. 602. (a) Section 3 (a) of the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended, is amended by inserting after the words "elective officers" the words "in the executive branch of the Government."

(b) Such act, as amended, is further amended by adding after section 3 the following new section:

"SEC. 3A. Notwithstanding any other provision of this act—

"(1) This act shall not apply to any Member of Congress until he gives notice in writing, while serving as a Member of Congress, to the disbursing officer by whom his salary is paid of his desire to come within the purview of this act. Such notice may be given by a Member of Congress within 6 months after the date of enactment of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 or within 6 months after any date on which he takes an oath of office as a Member of Congress.

"(2) In the case of any Member of Congress who gives notice of his desire to come within the purview of this act, the amount required to be deposited for the purposes of section 9 with respect to services rendered after the date of enactment of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, shall be a sum equal to 6 percent of his basic salary, pay, or compensation for such services, together with interest computed at the rate of 4 percent per annum compounded on December 31 of each year; and the amount to be deducted and withheld from the basic salary, pay, or compensation of each such Member of Congress for the purposes of section 10 shall be a sum equal to 6 percent of such basic salary, pay, or compensation.

"(3) No person shall be entitled to receive an annuity as provided in this section until he shall have become separated from the service after having had at least 6 years of service as a Member of Congress and have attained the age of 62 years, except that any such Member who shall have had at least 5 years of service as a Member of Congress may, subject to the provisions of section 6 and of paragraph (4) of this section, be retired for disability, irrespective of age, and be paid an annuity computed in accordance with paragraph (5) of this section.

"(4) No Member of Congress shall be entitled to receive an annuity under this act unless there shall have been deducted and withheld from his basic salary, pay, or compensation for the last 5 years of his service as a Member of Congress, or there shall have been deposited under section 9 with respect to such last 5 years of service, the amounts specified in paragraph (2) of this section with respect to so much of such 5 years of service as was performed after the date of enactment of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 and the amounts specified in section 9 with respect to so much of such 5 years of service as was performed prior to such date.

"(5) Subject to the provisions of section 9 and of subsections (c) and (d) of section 4, the annuity of a Member of Congress shall be an amount equal to 2½ percent of his average annual basic salary, pay, or compensation as a Member of Congress multiplied by his years of service as a Member of Congress, but no such annuity shall exceed an amount equal to three-fourths of the salary, pay, or compensation that he is receiving at the time he becomes separated from the service.

"(6) In the case of a Member of Congress who becomes separated from the service before he completes an aggregate of 6 years of service as a Member of Congress, and who is not retired for disability, the total amount deducted from his basic salary, pay, or compensation as a Member of Congress, together with interest at 4 percent compounded as of December 31 of each year shall be returned to such Member of Congress. No such Member of Congress shall thereafter become eligible to receive an annuity as provided in this section unless the amounts so returned are redeposited with interest at 4 percent compounded on December 31 of each year, but interest shall not be required covering any period of separation from the service.

"(7) If any person takes office as a Member of Congress while receiving an annuity as provided in this section, the payment of such annuity shall be suspended during the period for which he holds such office; but, if he gives notice as provided in paragraph (2) of this section, his service as a Member of Congress during such period shall be credited in determining the amount of his subsequent annuity.

"(8) Nothing contained in this act shall be construed to prevent any person eligible therefor from simultaneously receiving an annuity computed in accordance with this section and an annuity computed in accordance with section 4, but in computing the annuity under section 4 in the case of any person who (A) has had at least 6 years' service as a Member of Congress, and (B) has served as a Member of Congress at any time after the date of enactment of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, service as a Member of Congress shall not be credited.

"(9) No provision of this or any other act relating to automatic separation from the service shall be applicable to any Member of Congress.

"(10) As used in this section, the term 'Member of Congress' means a Senator, Representative in Congress, Delegate from a Territory, or the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico; and the term 'service as a Member of Congress' shall include the period from the date of the beginning of the term for which a Member of Congress is elected or appointed to the date on which he takes office as such a Member."

Mr. RIZLEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. RIZLEY: On page 94, line 14, strike out all of the line and all of the remaining lines of the paragraph on said page and all of pages 95, 96, 97, and 98.

Mr. RIZLEY. Mr. Chairman, I suggested to the committee this morning that I would at the proper time offer this amendment. All this amendment does is to strike out all of the provisions of the bill with reference to retirement benefits or, as it is commonly called throughout the country, pensions for Congressmen. As I suggested in my remarks this morning, I do not believe that Members of the legislative branch of the Government who must necessarily pass upon retirement benefits and social security for civil-service employees and all other people in that category should include themselves in the same category and become pensioners of the Federal Government and themselves try to pass upon the claims of these other people that must come before them.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RIZLEY. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I compliment the gentleman for offering his amendment. I concur in his arguments. There is a vast difference between Congressmen who are elected and who have to pass on the claims of employees and the employees themselves. We should hold ourselves independent by not approving this for ourselves.

Mr. RIZLEY. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RIZLEY. I yield.

Mr. MUNDT. The gentleman will also agree with me that those of us who have consistently voted against pensions for Congressmen should not be put in position of having to vote "yes" or "no" on a bill for the streamlining of Congress which is used as a vehicle to provide pensions for Congressmen. There is no connection between the two. The two issues should not be mixed in this manner.

Mr. RIZLEY. I thank the gentleman and agree with him fully.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RIZLEY. I yield.

Mr. CHURCH. I compliment the gentleman for offering this amendment, which I support His amendment, if passed, takes out of this bill part of the stultifying part of the bill. I wanted to vote for the many fine reorganization features of the bill but I cannot vote for this section nor the tax-exempt salary increase part of the bill. I shall vote "no" on final passage of the bill.

Mr. FISHER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RIZLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. FISHER. I am in complete agreement with the gentleman's position on this amendment. I think it is a proper amendment. I certainly think the Members of Congress are in a different category from that of the civil-service employees and judiciary employees. I shall support the gentleman's amendment.

Mr. PICKETT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RIZLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. PICKETT. I expect to support the gentleman's amendment for the reasons heretofore stated by him.

Mr. SPRINGER. I wish to congratulate the gentleman upon his offering of this amendment. I intend to support the amendment.

Mr. BRYSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RIZLEY. I yield.

Mr. BRYSON. I also concur with the gentleman's views and intend to support the amendment.

Mr. RIZLEY. Mr. Chairman, this amendment in nowise conflicts with the claims of the committee who purportedly are trying to streamline legislative procedure. I am perfectly willing to streamline the Congress but not to pension it. Members of Congress come here and at the end of 6 years, under this bill, they can have the Federal Government join in a plan and contribute to their retirement—of course they join in the plan too, but as the gentlewoman from Illinois [Miss SUMNER] stated a while ago—we then become a part of the Government bureaucracy. We all know that when the executive branch of this Government presents a program at the beginning of the year, every person working for the Federal Government, who is under civil service and who expects retirement, immediately becomes an ardent advocate for the program recommended by the executive branch of the Government. I will not vote for this bill with the pension benefits in it.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. RIZLEY] has expired.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section close in 15 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I object.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 15 minutes and that all Members may extend their remarks at this point in the RECORD.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, I am in favor of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. RIZLEY] I agree with him that elected officials are in a different category than those who make service in the Federal service a life career. All of us followed some other career or profession before we came to Congress. When we leave these halls either voluntarily or by action of our constituents we can, and most of us will, return to our former careers. In general I favor this reorganization bill. I think the committee has done a splendid job. I shall, however, vote for the Rizley amendment.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to pensions for Congress and I hope they will be eliminated from the bill.

Mr. NORRELL. Mr. Chairman, I am not in favor of any law providing pensions for Members of Congress. I have always voted against such proposed legislation. I wish I had time to mention a few of the reasons why I do not favor such legislation. However, I do concur in what has been said by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. RIZLEY] and I am going to vote for his amendment to strike from this bill title 6, providing pensions for us. If the amendment is not adopted I possibly may find myself unable, for this reason, to support the bill upon final passage in the House.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, I do not believe that the Members of Congress should become a part of the pension system of the Government. If they accept this type of pension they become a part of the great Federal bureaucracy. The Congress should be free and have no taint of becoming a part of a Federal pension system so liberal that in 6 years' service you can participate. This part of the bill should not be retained.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment of the gentleman from Oklahoma, to strike the retirement provisions from this bill. I have always opposed retirement benefits for Members of Congress. Only a few weeks ago, I vigorously opposed similar legislation that was defeated on the floor of this House. This legislation should be stricken from the bill. If it is not stricken, then I shall vote against the entire measure. The motion of the gentleman from Oklahoma should prevail.

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, whatever we do here today let us not deceive ourselves or our constituents. This bill provides fat pensions for Congressmen. Make no mistake about that. Take my own case. I will have served 8 years at the close of this term. Suppose this provision is left in the bill and it passes and I should wish to avail myself of benefits provided therein.

I could retire at the end of this year, pay to the Government $4,030 to make up certain back contributions and receive a pension of $2,000 per year. If I were to live my normal life of expectancy, 15 years, I would receive a total of pensions amounting to $30,000, or approximately $26,000 net. Should I die before receiving an amount equal to the $4,030 back contributions paid in, the difference plus 4-percent interest would be paid to my widow or estate. I would be risking nothing.

Take the case of a Congressman who has served 10 years and retires at the age of 62. He would pay in back contributions $5,026 and if he lived to the age of expectancy, according to mortality tables, he would receive a total of $37,500 or approximately $32,500 net.

A Congressman who has served 14 years and retires at the age of 62 and lives to the age of expectancy would draw a total net of $44,700.

A Member who had served 20 years, retired at 62 and lived to the age of expectancy, would receive a total net of more than $63,000.

A Member having served 30 years and retiring at 62, if he lived to the age of expectancy, would draw a total net amount of approximately $90,000.

All these cases are predicated on the assumption that the full amount of back contributions would be paid in.

There is an alternative where a less amount is paid in, covering 5 years of back contributions instead of 8 years, but I shall not discuss that phase of the program now.

Mr. Chairman, this is the fourth time this question has been considered by this body. We all recall the unpleasant, and in my opinion unfortunate, experience we underwent several years ago when, having passed a bill providing pensions for Congressmen, this body was forced by an adverse public opinion to reverse its position and repeal the act which set up that program. I recall that much was said at that time and has been uttered since to the effect the public did not understand the measure granting Congressmen pensions which had been passed; that if it had understood it would not have taken the position it did. When that bill was passed I followed its provisions very closely, and I must repeat what I have said on previous occasions—that the public was not misinformed in respect to the provisions of that bill. It did understand, and, in my opinion, it was justified in taking the position it did.

Only a few months ago this same question was before this body and was voted down overwhelmingly.

Now we are at it again, seeking for ourselves a pension. And what is the argument for it? Everybody else is getting a pension, why should not we. That is one of the compelling reasons why the National Legislature should not vote pensions for its Members. How, possibly, can this body unbiasedly treat the big problem of pensions in general if it itself becomes a participant in this program? How can it possibly be expected that the Legislature could equitably represent the many and varied pension systems if its Members have an interest in this field?

Mr. ANGELL. Mr. Chairman, now that the committee has voted to retain the increase of salary and the pension provision for Congressmen in the bill, I will be obliged to vote against the bill and hope we may have a recorded vote thereon. I do this with reluctance as I am in favor of the reorganization of the Congress to provide greater efficiency in our work.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MONRONEY].

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] is recognized.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I trust the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. RIZLEY] will be voted down.

We have had a long day and I think we have accomplished a splendid job in piloting an integrated bill right up to the last section. Let us not spoil that handiwork that has had a lot of time and attention by acceding to this amendment and striking out the retirement provisions of this bill.

It is so easy to characterize this as a pension, but is it? Under the proposed plan we ask you to go into your pockets for 6 percent every year on your base salary. We ask you, before you become eligible, to pay back for all of your service since 1920 or for 5 years. This is nothing other than an insurance annuity. The participation of the Federal Government is nothing more than what it is for every one of the hundreds of thousands of civil-service employees on the rolls today.

We have covered millions of people by social security. There are over 100 Federal district judges in the country today who can retire at a substantial annuity without having contributed one dime while they were on the bench. In the course of World War II, there were probably over 1,800 brigadier generals and probably 450 major generals, and the day will come when they can retire at a very substantial annuity and not have expended a single dime out of their pockets for an annuity that shall be paid out of the Treasury of the United States. They are public servants also. Now we put ourselves in this position, therefore, instead of taking an annuity like a Federal judge without contribution, or a general officer of the Army or Navy without contribution, we require that you pay 6 percent every year during your service. If you have been here for 6 years, then you are eligible for retirement at age 62, but in every case you are buying your retirement annuity which has been carefully worked out with the actuaries of the Civil Service Retirement Board. Every dollar that will be required by them now and in the future will be amortized under this system in a period of about 20 years. It is one of the finest things in this bill, and I hope the House will not succumb to some of the unfounded statements that have been made on this matter. I hope you will complete the good work that has been going on since high noon of today and finally put the capstone on this bill and provide the kind of retirement system every Member of Congress is so richly entitled to by reason of the feverish effort they have made over the years.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SMITH] is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I can only tell you what this will do for me. I will be 62 years old this week sometime. I could retire at the end of this term paying in $4,000, or a little more than that, and if I lived the normal expectancy, I would draw a net pension from this bill amounting to $26,000.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. I yield.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. With this provision in the bill you would have more old, broken-down politicians trying to run for Congress so they can get this pension.

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. Others, of course, will receive in proportion.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. VURSELL] is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. VURSELL. I am glad to note a few minutes ago that the amendment to provide an assistant to each Congressman at $5,000 a year was defeated. Such extra help is not necessary and in most instances would be a waste of that amount of money.

Now we are considering an amendment to increase the salary of the Congressmen by $2,500 a year. This amendment will be followed by a section in the bill which will provide retirement benefits for a Congressman after he has served 5 years upon his paying in a certain percent of his salary. Some will refer to this provision as a pension for Congressmen.

It is true that it is a retirement benefit which requires the Congressmen to pay more for such retirement than any other Federal employee pays to secure retirement. It will be argued that over 100 Federal judges are provided with retirement after a certain length of service without paying anything into the Federal Government.

I am opposed at this time to the increase of the salary for Congressmen and I am unalterably opposed to the retirement provision for Congressmen after they have left the service.

I am opposed to the increase in salary because I believe that one who aspires to come to Washington to represent the people of his district in the greatest legislative body of the world should be willing to make some financial sacrifice for the honor and opportunity of serving his country in this great body. I believe you will maintain here a higher type of men if you leave the salary at a level that will cause one to be willing to make some financial sacrifice in his public service. If you make the salary too attractive, you will encourage men who have not been successful in their own business to make a greater effort to be elected to Congress because they would be able to make more money here than they could in their own private business.

I am opposed to the retirement or pension section of this bill largely on the same grounds. One who aspires to represent the people in this Congress should by his ability be able to take care of his own financial conditions before, when, and after his services are concluded here. The Members of Congress, the board of directors so to speak, who managed the affairs of the business of this country so far as the Federal Government is concerned should not support a bill to provide Government retirement when they have concluded such services, even though they pay in a sufficient amount to such retirement fund as will make the financial load on the Government not of too great consequence.

I hope the House votes down both of these propositions, and on the final passage of the bill I hope that we may have a roll call so that those who are opposed to these two provisions of the bill may be able to register their vote expressing their opposition on the pages of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. I urge the Members to defeat both of these propositions.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. RAMEY] is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. RAMEY. Mr. Chairman, you remember the old adage "Slice it as thin as you please, it still is baloney." We congratulate the authors of this bill for it is, in most part, good. However, those skillful artisans of semantics, who on the floor today have coined phrases in regard to the latter sections of this bill, cannot make an annuity of those sections simply by calling it an annuity. As long as the taxpayers pay their part in it, that much is still a pension and to call it an annuity is a subterfuge. [Page Stuart Chase.] It has been stated by one of our most distinguished Members that a former Member of the House at one time spoke of a certain bug. Yes, it is a shame that a bill brought to us in good faith should be wrought out with such eel-like dexterity by allowing bugs to enter it. The good part of the bill tumbles a bug here and tumbles a bug there. Colleagues, do not shout "Vote, Vote" and then blindly pass the whole bill through mob psychology but let us vote on this bill section by section and stand up and be counted.

Some have stated that the judicial raise was passed like lightning; the raise for ambassadors was passed like lightning. That was not proper. We should streamline Congress and, above all, no bill should pass under suspension of rules. No legislation should be enacted unless each and every Representative of the people has the opportunity to stand up and be counted.

Originally, a pension was an allowance made by a government to retired public officers, disabled soldiers, and families of soldiers in the service. Recently, by reason of the complexity of our Government and by further reason of the fact that citizens through long unemployment are unable to provide for maintenance and sustenance during their declining years, a benevolent Government has accorded to those who have supported their country by taxation throughout the years, pensions. Is it right to pension those who have had opportunities and forget those who have not been able by reason of unemployment, illness, and otherwise to provide for those said declining years? Should we grant an allowance, call it by whatever name you please, to those who are able to provide for themselves and refuse it to those who are not? Just yesterday, the Ways and Means Committee succeeded in placing a gag rule before the House, thus preventing pension allowances for those who needed it the most. I grant, however, that this committee would match each State in the amount the State allotted by raising the monthly allowance for the blind $5 and the aged $5 provided each State should do the same, up to the amount of $25; that is, if any State should allow $25, the Government would match it for that much. However, the gag rule prevented the Representatives of the people from being heard at the proper time, of presenting the proper amendments and then allowing each Representative to stand up and be counted.

I concur in the judgment of those who have stated that Members of Congress many times leave this body in distress and without maintenance and sustenance. I further concur in the view of those who have stated that only those of means can afford to come to Congress and leave their professions. However, it does seem to me that this great body is a position of honor, that the man who seeks to represent the people in this, the most honorable body on the face of the earth, must completely forget himself, not thinking of material things and what his reward is—he has left a good name—what greater reward can there be? Yes, I understand that there are several ex-Members who have served honorably in this body, who are now in poorhouses of the United States. There are several in our State. But there are ex-members of every profession and every activity in those institutions. Would not the more honorable thing to do be to grant an allowance to each and every citizen in order that there be no such a thing as a poorhouse, that no longer would the words of Will Carleton, "Over the Hills to the Poorhouse," be known in this country, and when the peace of the world is wrought out that it be unknown in any country. There is enough in God's great world for everybody. Let us share, and, if there be pensions—call it what you will—let there be equal pensions allotted to each and all of the masses instead of just to classes.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

The gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. MUNDT] is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. RIZLEY] to strike the provision from this legislation which would provide pensions for Congressmen, as they are commonly called or the retirement provisions of this legislation as their supporter prefers to designate them. By either name, however, I am opposed to them. I have always voted against pensions for Congressmen and I shall vote against them again today.

During one of my first years in Congress, Mr. Chairman, I spoke and voted against pensions for Congressmen. So I am only being consistent in again urging the defeat of these pensions today.

I also voted to support the amendment of the gentleman from New York [Mr. BUCK] to strike out the salary increases, because I am opposed to the raising of congressional salaries at this time. Until we are able to balance the Federal Budget and until the present inflationary pressures have been effectively curbed, Mr. Chairman, I shall continue to oppose legislation to increase congressional salaries although under normal conditions I realize such salaries should be increased. However, at this particular juncture in our national economic existence, I believe it is a mistake to either vote pensions for Congressmen or congressional salary increases. I hope we can defeat the salary increases when this legislation gets in the House. I hope you will now join me in defeating the provisions of this bill which provide pensions for Congressmen.

Mr. Chairman, I was one of the early and active supporters of this move to streamline and modernize Congress. I am in hearty accord with most of the provisions of the present bill. I think it will tend to increase the efficiency of Congress. However, in my mind it is a mistake to mix pensions for Congress and salary increases with a bill primarily designed to remodel and modernize the legislative processes. For one, I refuse to be maneuvered into a position whereby my zeal for modernizing Congress must require me to vote for pension and salary provisions which I feel are both undesirable and untimely.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I am reluctantly compelled to announce that unless the pension and salary provisions are removed from this legislation, I shall have to vote against it, despite my approval of most of the reform provisions of the bill. Earlier today the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. HULL] rather effectively and clearly summarized my reasons for my decision.

Since there may not be a roll call on final passage of this bill—although I shall be among those standing up to ask for one—I take this means of announcing for the RECORD that I shall vote "no" on final passage if the salary increases and pension provisions remain in this bill. If they are not part of this bill, I shall vote "aye."

Finally, Mr. Chairman, I would like to point out that pensions for Congressmen are in a different class from pensions for civil-service employees, Army officers, or judges. We are in a very real sense the board of directors of the world's largest business institution. The country depends upon our collective judgment for its stability and security. Surely, if we have economic sense enough to manage the finances of the Government, we should have economic ability enough to manage our individual finances without benefit of a Government pension system. We can purchase private annuities and pension plans from commercial insurance companies. We can plan for our own retirement. We can show confidence in the private-enterprise institutions which our great Government is designed to preserve. Let us defeat this pension proposal and thus reaffirm our faith in the private-enterprise system which has made America great.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. RANDOLPH].

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Chairman, during the hearings on this legislation testimony in favor of optional retirement for Members of Congress was vigorously advocated by former Senator, now Justice Burton, of Ohio, Senator White, the minority leader of the Senate of the United States, Senator Bridges, of New Hampshire, Beardsley Ruml, and many other business and professional leaders of the country who realize that what has been beneficial in commerce and industry will be beneficial to the procedures and services of the Members of the Congress of the United States.

Senator BRIDGES stated:

I think just as other Government officials have the benefit of retirement provisions, that we of the Congress should have them.

Dr. Meyer Jacobstein, staff member, Brookings Institution, said:

A retirement plan plus a more liberal salary would go far toward giving Representatives and Senators that feeling of financial security which they deserve.

The then Senator Burton had this to say:

I think it is a good thing to have a pension for all kinds of Government service, but upon the basis of a contribution.

Mr. Rumi indicated that unlike most activities in life, being a Member of Congress does not lead to something else. There is no other Congress that you can get a job in for example. There is no way you can be promoted to chairman of the board of directors. I mean it has a peculiarly hazardous nature; it is a hazardous occupation from that point of view unlike a university president or professional man, or some one who is building from his experience, if it is meritorious, a future for himself.

I direct your attention to the words of Senator WHITE:

I personally have been very strongly in favor of a retirement system, a retirement system to which the beneficiary must make his contribution. I think a retirement system would make a contribution to independence of thought and independence of action, to a courageous attitude on the part of the Representative toward problems which are constantly confronting him.

Dean W. Reed West, of George Washington University had the following to say:

Retirement pay for Members based on age and long service would be a means of overcoming this almost inevitable tendency of individuals to weaken in their independence of the Executive.

The CHAIRMAN. The chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Illinois [Miss SUMNER].

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, there will be headlines in every newspaper tomorrow morning saying that the Congress worked overtime voting itself a pension. How are the people going to like that? They are not going to mind the fact that you handed yourselves $15,000 for 6 months' work. They will believe that perhaps they will be able to get good men to come here to represent them; but when they find out that you have voted yourself a pension so that after they fire you they have to go on paying you separate maintenance, it will be just too much.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTEN].

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Chairman, I supported the Buck amendment believing adequate pay is now provided for the Congress. True we must live within our income. Who does not? After all, work, hard work, if you please, of the individual American citizen, who lived within his means, set aside for his insurance and to take care of his own security is what has made American great. Today when we complain rightly, that everyone seems to be looking to the Federal Government for grants, for allocations, when we hear on this floor the complaints about the States wanting Federal grants at a time when the various States are in a much better financial condition than the Federal Government, certainly it will be a mistake to provide a pension for Members of Congress. Of course, you argue that the Member pays into such fund just as he would for an insurance annuity. Why not take the same money and buy such insurance annuity then?

If Members of Congress are not stable enough, if they do not have foresight enough to live within their own means and provide for their own security, who can the Congress expect to work, and provide for their own welfare?

Mr. Chairman, by all means this amendment should be adopted, and provisions of this bill providing for a pension, stricken out of the bill. If the bill is passed without this amendment what defense will this Congress have to the millions who came asking security at the hands of the Government without effort on their part. You will have opened the gates and instead of preaching individual enterprise, with individual attention to a man's own security, you say to everyone, "Look to the Government." The old, the incapacitated have a right to look for assistance. You invite all others to quit trying and to look to the Government. You say to them there is no need for you to be saving, there is no need to live within your means, there is no need for you to work, the Federal Government will look after you." There is too much of that attitude already. After all the Government is the people, and if all quit work and look to the Government, there will be no one to pay taxes and the promise of the Government will not be worth the paper it is written on.

This House should adopt this amendment, and strike out the pension features of this bill. Keep this Congress where is can say "No" to those who want the Government to provide everything. Keep a sound Government, and a sound Congress, an independent Congress if you please.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. WHITE].

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Chairman, there are a great many influences that flew around the individual Members of Congress—influence of departments and from other sources that we all know about. If there is one thing that the individual Congressman needs more than anything else, and that the people of the United States need, is those who represent them in Congress, it is stamina.

We pension our judges to keep them from temptation. Why should we not give security to Congressmen so that they might have a little independence to stand up and protect the interest of the American people; in considering and passing legislation?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. ABERNETHY].

Mr. ABERNETHY. Mr. Chairman, I favor the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. RIZLEY]. It is difficult to understand how Members of this body, men and women who have established themselves as successful in one field or another else they would not be honored as they are today, can vote a pension for Congressmen. Certainly, Congress could not pass fair judgment on similar calls if the law provides such pensions for its Members, even though the Member does pay toward such pension funds.

The principal object of this bill is to streamline the Congress. It is intended to eliminate bottlenecks, to promote efficiency, to speed up the business of the Congress that we might do a better job for our constituency and the country. What place or what part does a congressional pension feature play in such worthy objectives? It would contribute not one iota to the good causes for which this bill is intended.

The pension feature should be considered on its own merits. The same applies to salary increases for Members, which I opposed by voting for the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. BUCK].

I shall vote for the pending amendment. If it should not prevail, I shall vote against the bill, on which I hope we will have a roll-call vote.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WINSTEAD].

Mr. WINSTEAD. Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to this so-called pension for Congressmen and therefore for this amendment for many reasons. Many sound reasons have been offered by other Members here this afternoon. I also supported the Buck amendment to prevent the increase in salary for Congressmen.

It would be a mistake to provide for a congressional pension even though, as has been argued, payments are taken from the salaries of the Members just as they are from the salaries of the rural carriers, postmasters, and other Federal workers. Different from them, the Congress must sit as judges, we must pass on the requests of others and by bringing the Members of Congress into such a program, you almost make them interested parties. The aged and the infirm have a right to look to society to assist them, but I still believe that an able-bodied American citizen should look after himself, and provide for his own security. The retirement provisions of the Civil Service Act whereby the worker builds up the funds for his own retirement I believe are sound. But, Mr. Speaker, we are the judges, and I believe by providing for congressional pensions that the Nation will be weakened and the American people will be further led along the road of not working, but looking to the Federal Government for everything.

I hope this amendment will be adopted and the pension provisions stricken out of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN].

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, I do not care to indulge in debate on this amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma. I take the floor at this time to express the hope that when we get into the House the so-called Herter amendment will be defeated. That amendment says each standing committee of the Senate and of the House shall set aside time each month. I fear that if 20 out of the 435 Members in the House sa · a bill in the committee far down the line ahead of them they might introduce 20 bills and take up the time of the committee. I have faith and confidence in the chairmen of committees. Some of them may be a little autocratic, of course, but most of them respond to Members of Congress when they ask to be heard on a bill that is introduced by them. I can see implications in this that I think may be very harmful. I know that the gentleman from Massachusetts does not have that in mind, but having served many years on committees and 6 years as chairman of one committee, I do not think that amendment is necessary.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired. All time has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. RIZLEY].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. RIZLEY) there were—ayes 63, noes 166.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the committee substitute to the Senate bill.

The committee substitute was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. SMITH of Virginia, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee having had under consideration the bill (S. 2177) to provide for increased efficiency in the legislative branch of the Government, pursuant to House Resolution 717, he reported the bill back to the House with an amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment to the committee amendment?

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Speaker, I demand a separate vote on the so-called Herter amendment.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment on which a separate vote has been demanded.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HERTER: Page 49, after line 4, insert a new subsection to read as follows:

"(g) Each standing committee of the Senate and the House of Representatives shall set aside a regular period during each month to afford opportunity to Members who have introduced any bill or resolution to appear before the committee to explain the measure and outline the nature and character of the considerations which in their judgment support its passage."

The amendment was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the committee substitute for the Senate bill.

The committee substitute was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, and was read the third time.

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Tennessee rise?

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER. Does any member of the minority claim the right to offer a motion to recommit?

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. KNUTSON. In its present form, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. KNUTSON moves that the bill be recommitted.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion to recommit.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The motion to recommit was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee) there were—ayes 229, noes 61.

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee, Mr. ABERNETHY, and Mr. LECOMPTE demanded the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were refused.

So the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Clerk of the House be authorized and directed in the engrossing of the amendment to the bill (S. 2177) to provide for increased efficiency in the legislative branch of the Government, to make all necessary clerical and technical changes, including changes in section numbers and cross references, and changes in the table of contents.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

ATOMIC ENERGY BILL

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the conferees on the atomic energy bill S. 1717, have until midnight tonight to file a conference report.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

SURPLUS PROPERTY

Mr. MANASCO submitted a conference report and statement on the bill (H. R. 6702) to clarify the rights of former owners of real property to reacquire such property under the Surplus Property Act of 1944.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. Miller, one of his secretaries, who also informed the House that on the following dates the President approved and signed bills and joint resolutions of the House of the following titles:

On July 3, 1946:

H. R. 32. An act to amend the act entitled "An act to protect trade and commerce against interference by violence, threats, coercion, or intimidation," approved June 18, 1934;

H. R. 4512. An act to amend the Public Health Service Act to provide for research relating to psychiatric disorders and to aid in the development of more effective methods of prevention, diagnosis, and treatment of such disorders, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 5244. An act to authorize the appointment of additional Foreign Service officers in the classified grades.

On July 5, 1946:

H. R. 1654. An act to provide for the registration and protection of trade-marks used in commerce, to carry out the provisions of certain international conventions, and for other purposes;

H. R. 6056. An act making appropriations for the Departments of State, Justice, Commerce, and the Judiciary, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes; and

H. R 6516. An act to increase the salaries of the Metropolitan Police, the United States Park Police, the White House Police, and the members of the Fire Department of the District of Columbia.

On July 8, 1946:

H. R. 6496. An act making appropriations for the Navy Department and the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes.

On July 9, 1946:

H. R. 5990. An act making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of such District for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes.

On July 11, 1946:

H. R. 5258. An act granting a renewal of Patent Numbered 113,244 dated February 7, 1939, relating to the flag of the Church of God.

On July 12, 1946:

H. R. 6428. An act making appropriations for the Coast Guard, Treasury Department, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 6477. An act to amend section 32 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, as amended, and section 3 of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation Act, as amended, and for other purposes.

On July 13, 1946:

H. R. 6285. An act authorizing the State of Delaware, by and through its State highway department, to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Delaware River near Wilmington, Del.

On July 16, 1946:

H. R. 541. An act authorizing and directing the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to construct two 4-lane bridges to replace the existing Fourteenth Street or Highway Bridge across the Potomac River, and for other purposes;

H. R. 5356. On act to provide assistance to the Republic of China in augmenting and maintaining a Naval Establishment, and for other purposes;

H. R. 5641. An act to authorize the attendance of the Marine Band at the National convention of the United Spanish War Veterans, to be held in Milwaukee, Wis., August 4 to 10, inclusive, 1946;

H. R. 5933. An act to authorize and direct the Board of Public Welfare of the District of Columbia to establish and operate in the public schools and other suitable locations a system of nurseries and nursery schools for day care of school-age and under-school-age children, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 6837. An act making appropriations for the Military Establishment for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes.

On July 17, 1946:

H. R. 3424. An act to permit renewal of certain trade-mark registrations after expiry thereof, and for other purposes.

On July 20, 1946:

H. R. 5452. An act making appropriations for the Treasury and Post Office Departments for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 6777. An act making appropriations for Government corporations and independent executive agencies, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes.

On July 23, 1946:

H. R. 6885. An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, to provide appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for other purposes.

On July 24, 1946:

H. R. 3533. An act to authorize revisions in the boundary of the Hopewell Village National Historic Site, Pennsylvania, and for other purposes;

H. R. 3821. An act to amend sections 4 and 8 of the act of September 2, 1937, as amended;

H. R. 3993. An act to authorize the Secretary of War to sell and convey to the Southern Pacific Railroad Co. a right-of-way and easement for railroad purposes across a portion of Camp Booke Military Reservation, Calif.;

H. R. 4180. An act to amend the law relating to larceny in interstate or foreign commerce;

H. R. 4484. An act relating to the construction and maintenance of building and improvements for banking purposes on the Fort Ord Military Reservation, Calif.;

H. R. 4651. Ar act to amend section 6 of the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended;

H. R. 4701. An act granting the consent of Congress to the States of Utah, Idaho, and Wyoming to negotiate and enter into a compact for the division of the waters of the Bear River and its tributaries;

H. R. 4917. An act for the relief of the Western Union Telegraph Co.;

H. R. 5800. An act to authorize school districts in Alaska to issue bonds for school construction, and for other purposes;

H. R. 5820. An act relating to mail service on Lake Winnepesaukee, N. H.;

H. R. 5831. An act to include the heads of executive departments and independent agencies within the purview of the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930;

H. R. 6041. An act authorizing the State of Indiana to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Wabash River at or near Montezuma, Ind.;

H. R. 6065. An act authorizing the Indiana State Toll Bridge Commission to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge or a free bridge across the Ohio River at or near Canelton, Ind.;

H. R. 6081. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Iowa State Highway Commission to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Des Moines River at or near the town of Eddyville, Iowa;

H. R. 6222. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Calcasieu River at or near Lake Charles, La.;

H. R. 6407. An act authorizing the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes;

H. R. 6515. An act to amend the act entitled "An Act authorizing the Nebraska-Iowa Bridge Corp., a Delaware corporation, its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Missouri River between Washington County, Nebr., and Harrison County, Iowa," approved March 6, 1928;

H. R. 6597. An act authorizing the construction of certain public works on rivers and harbors for flood control, and for other purposes;

H. R. 6889. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a toll bridge across the Saint Louis River between the States of Minnesota and Wisconsin, and for other purposes;

H. J. Res. 336. Joint resolution relating to cotton marketing quotas under the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended;

H. J. Res. 359. Joint resolution relating to peanut marketing quotas under the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended; and

H. J. Res. 364. Joint resolution to provide for the establishment of an international animal quarantine station on Swan Island, and to permit the entry therein of animals from any country and the subsequent importation of such animals into other parts of the United States, and for other purposes.

On July 25, 1946:

H. R. 247. An act for the relief of E. D. Williams;

H. R. 271. An act for the relief of Eleanor McCloskey, also known as Evely Mary Mikalaukas;

H. R. 844. An act for the relief of John P. Hayes, postmaster, and the estate of Edward P. McCormack, former postmaster, at Albany, N. Y.;

H. R. 1331. An act for the relief of the Hatheway Patterson Corp.;

H. R. 1345. An act for the relief of David M. Matteson;

H. R. 1797. An act for the relief of Arcadio Saldana Agosto;

H. R. 1957. An act for the relief of the Ohio Valley General Hospital, Wheeling Clinic, Rosetta Snyder, Virginia Barron, Dr. Paul H. Cope, and Dr. J. E. Ricketts;

H. R. 2269. An act for the relief of Dr. William A. Schumacher and Magdalen M. Schumacher;

H. R. 2287. An act for the relief of Susan S. Wiseman;

H R. 2319. An act for the relief of J. B. Shropshire;

H. R. 2489. An act for the relief of Gaylon Dhu;

H. R. 2962. An act for the relief of Justin P. Hopkins;

H. R. 3145. An act for the relief of A. C. McMeans;

H. R. 3341. An act for the relief of J. E. and Minerva Mitchell, and Rosie Monroe;

H. R. 3360. An act for the relief of Mrs. W. H. (Agnes) Holmes;

H. R. 3397. An act for the relief of Claude S. Crouse;

H. R. 3827. An act for the relief of Fred W. Grant;

H. R. 3848. An act for the relief of the legal guardian of Johnnie Pollock, a minor;

H. R. 3857. An act for the relief of Warren H. Thompson and Madeline Parent;

H. R. 4090. An act for the relief of Roy Hesselmeyer;

H. R. 4215. An act for the relief of Jane O'Malley;

H. R. 4247. An act for the relief of Jesus Lassalle and Mrs. America Bonet Medina;

H. R. 4357. An act for the relief of the estate of the late Alberto Lopez Ramos;

H. R. 4492. An act for the relief of Charles Marvin Smith;

H. R. 4577. An act for the relief of Dolores Joyce;

H. R. 4673. An act for the relief of Mrs. Minnie Jenkins Ward;

H. R. 4834. An act for relief of the estates of Katherine Delores Booth and Agnes Jane True;

H. R. 4862. An act for the relief of Walter R. Newcomb, Sr., Corbin A. Newcomb, and Walter R. Newcomb, Jr.;

H. R. 4919. An act for the relief of Archibald J. Alcorn;

H. R. 4996. An act for the relief of the legal guardian of Joan Esther Hedin, a minor;

H. R. 5026. An act for the relief of the estate of Drury Lee Jordan;

H. R. 5030. An act for the relief of Mrs. Lim Shee Chang;

H. R. 5178. An act for the relief of Marian Antoinette McCloud;

H. R. 5228. An act for the relief of Stephen Lisay;

H. R. 5351. An act for the relief of Charles Booker;

H. R. 5352. An act for the relief of Joseph Ippolito;

H. R. 5510. An act for the relief of Newton William Lowery;

H. R. 5538. An act for the relief of Mae Maxine Stone;

H. R. 5539. An act for the relief of Andrew M. Halvorsen;

H. R. 5541. An act for the relief of F. B. Sweat;

H R. 5722. An act for the relief of Charles L. Cannon;

H. R. 5739. An act for the relief of Frances Fitzgerald;

H. R. 5806. An act for the relief of Etta Yoakam;

H. R. 5872. An act for the relief of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Keaton.

H. R. 5878. An act for the relief of Elsie Elmhorst;

H. R. 5884. An act for the relief of Frances Krzys;

H. R. 6213. An act for the relief of Brevet First Lt. Margaret Utinsky;

H. R. 6459. An act to extend the period within which the Secretary of Agriculture may carry out the purposes of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act by making payments to agricultural producers;

H. R. 6472. An act for the relief of John E. Peterson, James M. Hiler, Vivian Langemo, Floy Sibrie, and Ross Lee Brown; and

H. R. 6627. An act for the acquisition of buildings and grounds in foreign countries for the use of the Government of the United States of America.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. McGLINCHEY asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. GREEN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances, in one to include a speech and in the other to include a speech made by John Stelle, commander of the American Legion.

Mr. PATTERSON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

SPECIAL ORDER GRANTED

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Monday next, after the disposition of business on the Speaker's desk and the conclusion of special orders heretofore entered, I may address the House for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HOOK asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a speech he made on June 1, and in another instance to insert a radio speech he made last week.

MINERAL LEASING ACT

Mr. FERNANDEZ submitted the following conference report and statement on the bill (S. 1236) to amend the Mineral Leasing Act of February 25, 1920, as amended, in order to promote the development of oil and gas on the public domain, and for other purposes:

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. GRANAHAN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an article from the National Legionnaire.

Mr. BARRETT of Pennsylvania asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. HOCH asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and insert an address made by the gentleman from Delaware [Mr. TRAYNOR].

Mr. FLOOD asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks and include a resolution.

Mr. DOYLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include a memorial address. I am informed by the Public Printer that the extension will cost $80. Notwithstanding the cost, I ask unanimous consent that the extension may be made.

The SPEAKER. Notwithstanding the cost and without objection, the extension may be made.

There was no objection.

REORGANIZATION OF RAILROADS

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (S. 1253) to enable debtor railroad corporations expeditiously to effectuate reorganizations of their financial structures, to alter or modify their financial obligations, and for other purposes, with House amendments thereto, insist on the House amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and appoints the following conferees: Messrs. SUMNERS of Texas, HOBBS, GORSKI, REED of Illinois, and GWYNNE of Iowa.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. NEELY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an article entitled "15,000,000 Will Die," which appears in Roger Babson's report for the 4th of March 1946. I also ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a poem entitled "A Ballade of the Peace," by Robert Permar, of West Virginia.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROWAN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include an article from the Chicago Tribune.

COSTS OF LIVING MUST BE ACCURATELY TABULATED—BILL IS PRESENTED TO ACCOMPLISH THIS NECESSARY SERVICE

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes and revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, the President of the United States today signed the bill to continue the Office of Price Administration for another year. Of great importance to American citizens is the knowledge of the facts relative to economic data with reference to food, rents, and many other items.

Unquestionably the most efficient organization in keeping the country informed on this subject is the Bureau of Labor Statistics in the United States Department of Labor. This Bureau has received many, many commendations on the accuracy and value of its reports to the Nation. It can certainly be relied on to point out true facts in relation to our economy. There are regular indexes issued of basic commodities and the wholesale prices weekly, but its service has been necessarily limited to some degree under its powers. Never has there been a time when information such as is published by this great Bureau of Labor Statistics is more needed.

It will be, Mr. Speaker, perhaps 4 months before any other rent surveys, for example, can be made. It is important that we have reports on the rents charged the American public as well as many other items.

I am today introducing a joint resolution authorizing the Bureau of Labor Statistics to carry forward the studies necessary for the emergency or reconversion period.

This joint resolution provides that for the purpose of furnishing information and reports to Congress, various Federal agencies, and private groups and individuals, the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the United States Department of Labor is authorized and directed to collect information and report on the prices of foodstuffs, rents, and other living essentials more frequently and in a larger number of cities than now covered in the Bureau's program to the extent necessary to describe the course of prices and living essentials and of rents in principal localities and on a nationwide basis.

The legislation is as follows:

Joint resolution to authorize the Bureau of Labor Statistics to collect price and rent information in additional cities and at more frequent intervals

Resolved etc., That for the purpose of furnishing information and reports to the Congress, various Federal agencies, and private groups and individuals during the price emergency, the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the United States Department of Labor is hereby authorized and directed to collect information and report on prices of foodstuffs, rents, and other living essentials more frequently and in a larger number of cities than now covered in the Bureau's program to the extent necessary to describe the course of prices of living essentials and of rents in principal localities and on a Nationwide basis.

For the purpose of making these studies, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated the sum of $250,000 to be available until expended.

SPECIAL ORDER GRANTED

Mr. LANE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on tomorrow, after the legislative business and any other special orders, I may address the House for 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. KELLEY of Pennsylvania asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a statement by Col. G. H. Rarey, United States Army, retired, upon the need for rehabilitation of those afflicted with Hansen's disease.

Mr. CORBETT asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. SCHWABE of Oklahoma asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in three instances and to include certain excerpts.

Mr. SHAFER asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances, in one to include a letter.

Mrs. LUCE asked and was given permission to extend her remarks in the RECORD in two instances and to include two newspaper editorials.

Mr. GWINN of New York asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a speech by Virgil Jordan of the Industrial Conference Board.

Mr. CARLSON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a statement by the Republican Postwar Tax Study Committee.

Mr. HOPE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a radio program in connection with the National Farm Safety Week.

Mr. HORAN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial from the Washington Star.

Mr. GAVIN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an article by Gould Lincoln.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and include two bills that I understand were sent to the Speaker today—one a bill for a permanent corps for the Army nurses and another for a permanent corps for the Wacs. I am delighted the Army appreciates the work of the Wacs and will continue them as a part of the Army.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have five legislative days in which to extend their remarks on the reorganization bill just passed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

Mr. JUDD asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances and include therewith certain articles.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM FOR TOMORROW

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I would like to inquire of the gentleman from Massachusetts, the distinguished majority leader, the program for tomorrow.

Mr. McCORMACK. The first order of business will be the atomic energy conference report.

Then there will be several suspensions.

S. 191, the hospital construction bill.

H. R. 6917, providing for site acquisitions and design of Federal buildings.

S. 1636 designating the State Department as disposal agency of surplus property abroad.

S. 2085, a bill to authorize the Federal Works Administrator to provide needed educational facilities other than housing, in relation to veterans.

A companion bill has passed the Senate and already an appropriation of $75,000,000 has been provided for. The passage of this bill is necessary to allow that appropriation to operate.

Then the bill H. R. 4502, the cancer control legislation, reported out of the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

S. 619, which I understand the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BARDEN] conferred with the gentleman from Massachusetts regarding. It is the Vocational Educational Act of 1946. If it is not passed by unanimous consent.

There is also a bill amending the War Powers Act, I think the first one, which relates to the Alien Property Custodian's Office. Unanimous consent for its consideration will be asked. I understand there is some objection to section 33 of an organic act which is the first section of that bill, but that has been stricken out by the Senate committee and I understood the request will be to pass what would be the Senate bill as amended eliminating the objectionable features of the bill as reported out of the House committee.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Is it quite probable all that will not be done tomorrow, in which event the rest will be taken up on Saturday?

The SPEAKER. Yes.

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield.

Mr. JUDD. Will the Philippine aid bill come up for consideration in the next day or two? Does the gentleman know whether a rule has been granted on it yet?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks in all probability some of those bills may be handled by consent. We are all very anxious to pass the Philippine bill.

Mr. McCORMACK. There is the Philippine loan bill reported out today; and there is a bill extending the RFC. Whether or not they can be considered by unanimous consent I am unable to state, but every effort will be made to bring them up.

The SPEAKER. If the gentleman from Massachusetts will permit, the Chair will also say that the Chair will recognize the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS] to ask consent to take up the so-called tidelands bill tomorrow and concur in the Senate amendment.

SUSPENSIONS IN ORDER TOMORROW, JULY 26, 1946

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it may be in order tomorrow for the Speaker to recognize for the purpose of suspending the rules.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

HOUR OF MEETING TOMORROW 12 O'CLOCK

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I also want to announce that we will meet tomorrow at 12 o'clock.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. BIEMILLER. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BIEMILLER. Did I understand the Chair correctly to say that consent would be asked to consider the tidelands bill?

The SPEAKER. Yes; consent will be asked to consider the Senate amendment to the House bill. It is a bill that passed the House several months ago.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES—PRICE CONTROL

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States which was read, and together with the accompanying papers referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency and ordered printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

I have today signed House Joint Resolution 371 amending the price-control laws and extending them for another year. I have signed this measure with reluctance.

I had hoped for a bill under which the Government could with full confidence assure the people that prices would remain generally stable in these last few critical months of the transition to a free economy. This bill falls far short of that hope. I am advised, however, that it is the best bill the Congress will now pass. It is clear, moreover, that it is a better bill than the one I was forced to veto on June 29. If that bill had become law, inflation would have been inevitable. While the present measure by no means guarantees that inflation can be avoided, it offers a sufficient prospect of success to warrant the making of a whole-hearted effort to keep our economy on an even keel until a flood of goods makes further controls unnecessary.

The behavior of prices and rents in the last 4 weeks has given the country a frightening foretaste of what would happen to the cost of living without price and rent control. Even though many factors were operating to restrain prices during this period, prices have nevertheless risen steadily and ominously.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics index of 28 basic commodities in the primary markets has shown an increase of 24.8 percent in the 26 days since June 28, 1946, as against an increase of only 13.1 percent in the 3 years and 42 days between the signing of the hold-the-line order on May 17, 1943, and June 28, 1946. Of this increase, only about 2 percent can be attributed to the removal of subsidies. These, it must be remembered, are prewholesale figures. The impact of the increases has not yet been fully felt by consumers. Retailers have for the most part held to their OPA prices so long as their old inventories lasted.

These increases have occurred in spite of the restraining influences at work to keep prices down. I had requested that the price line be held while the Congress considered the enactment of a workable law. Businessmen hesitated to build up inventories at high prices and thus risk serious loss if prices were rolled back to the June 30 levels. This risk was heightened by the prompt passage in the House of Representatives of a resolution which would restore the June 30 prices and rents. In addition, consumer resistance to increased prices developed immediately.

In view of the alarming rise in prices which took place under these conditions, it is not difficult to predict what would happen if a free market were operating without restraint.

These facts demonstrate that the continuance of effective price control is a vital necessity to our people. There are millions of families for whom a sharp rise in living costs means immediate suffering. There are others who can get along well enough for a while, but ultimately inflation exacts its toll from all.

The present legislation makes the task of staving off inflation even more difficult than it has been in the past. Clothing prices in particular will be difficult to hold at reasonable levels, and there are some other things that consumers will have to go without, or pay higher ceiling prices for them than they should. It is particularly unfortunate that many of these increases result from concessions to special interest pressures, rather than from the adoption of principles designed to expand production within a stable price structure.

The present bill, despite its inadequacies, is an improvement in many respects over the bill which I vetoed. In my veto message, I emphasized the disastrous consequences which would flow from the Taft amendment and its companion the Wherry amendment. These provisions are fundamentally changed in the present bill. A comparison of the two bills demonstrates this fact.

Although its professed objective was to increase production, the Taft amendment would have required prices to be increased for already profitable industries even where no increase in production was possible. While the present bill will require some price increases where there will be no substantial expansion in production, it reduces materially both the number and the size of these increases.

It was mandatory under the Taft amendment to increase prices so that all industries could earn the profits they earned in the year 1941 on every major item they make. This was a year of abnormally high profits. The base for measuring profits under the present bill is the year 1940, in which profits were more nearly representative of normal peacetime operations. At the same time, the use of 1940 margins of profit offers every incentive for full production because 1940 was a highly profitable year.

Another serious deficiency of the Taft amendment is corrected by the present bill. It is obvious that costs go down as volume of production goes up. Yet that amendment would have compelled the Price Administrator to base prices on current costs even though it was perfectly clear that in many industries volume would be increasing so rapidly that the use of current costs would result in exorbitant prices. The present bill permits adjustments to be made for increases in volume that can be reasonably anticipated to occur within 3 months. This change will cut down substantially the price increases on consumer goods which were out of production during the war.

Another major objection to the Taft amendment was the damage it would have done to compliance and enforcement. OPA has developed uniform dollar-and-cent prices for many important products. This is the most readily understood and easily enforced kind of pricing. Since prices under the Taft amendment were based on each individual manufacturer's own 1941 price, uniform prices could not have been maintained in any case where prices in 1941 varied. The present bill cures this defect. The formula works from the average price for the industry in the base period, and this permits the continuance of enforceable dollar-and-cent prices.

The Wherry amendment would have restored to wholesalers and retailers the percentage mark-ups which prevailed on January 1, 1946. In the months since that time OPA has not passed on to consumers all the increases granted to manufacturers. Instead, the distributors have been required to absorb some of the increases. This was a fair policy because the sales volume was so high that even with reduced mark-ups distributors were generally faring far better than in any recent peacetime year. The present bill gives to distributors the mark-ups which prevailed on March 31, 1946. This change in date means that, without hardships to distributors, consumers are assured of considerably lower prices than would have been required under the Wherry amendment.

Thus, price increases will be far fewer, and those that occur will be far smaller, under the present bill than under the vetoed measure. The saving will be most significant in the basic industries, like steel. Since price increases in basic materials mean price increases in all the industries using those materials, an alarming upward spiral of costs and prices on a wide front seemed inescapable under the vetoed bill. Now there is a sound basis for the hope that such a spiral can be prevented.

Furthermore, by drastically reducing the number and size of required price increases, the present bill minimizes two other dangers inherent in the vetoed bill. First, the administrative burden on the Office of Price Administration, while still serious, is not impossible, as it was under the vetoed measure. Secondly, the danger of widespread interruptions of production while industry is waiting for price increases is materially lessened. Unless, however, the Congress promptly provides OPA with an adequate appropriation there are bound to be serious delays in the granting of required price adjustments. These delays would in turn mean slow-downs in production. And it is maximum production that will hasten the day when price control can safely be abandoned.

Finally, the vetoed bill contained a clause which would have destroyed wage stabilization by requiring the inclusion of unapproved wage increases as costs in the price-increase formula. That clause has been omitted from the present bill. The invaluable work of the Wage Stabilization Board can therefore be continued.

I regret that the Congress did not comply with my request to refrain from compelling administrative changes that will make our task more difficult. Good government requires that a law be administered consistently in all the fields where it is applicable. Consistency of policy is difficult to achieve when, as in the present bill, the Congress has provided for division of responsibility. I am confident, however, that the Price Administrator and the Secretary of Agriculture will work closely together to maintain unified policies.

I shall proceed promptly to appoint the Price Decontrol Board provided for by this statute. We are all anxious, on the one hand, not to cling to these controls too long and, on the other hand, not to release them too soon. The standards prescribed by the Congress for removing and restoring controls are reasonable standards. As I said in my veto message, I have not been opposed to the creation of an independent board to resolve these difficult questions of timing the removal of controls. I propose to appoint as members of the Board men in whose judgment and fairness the Congress and the country will have complete confidence.

Price control is but one of the means of combatting inflation. Under the best of circumstances price control alone could not preserve economic stability. Because of the defects in the present legislation and because of the months of delay in its enactment, it is all the more apparent that more extensive use of the power to allocate scarce materials may be required and that sterner fiscal and monetary measures than would otherwise be called for may prove to be necessary.

In order to bring spendable income more closely in balance with the supply of goods, attention must be given to strong anti-inflationary policies such as further reduction of Federal expenditures. If, despite such measures, inflation still threatens, consideration must then be given to the formulation of a more vigorous tax policy Such a tax program would, I realize, be unpalatable at a time when we are doing our utmost to increase production, but if it is the only alternative to the ravages of inflation, we would have no choice.

I pledge the administration to do its full part in this struggle, but it must not be forgotten that the battle against inflation is not the Government's battle alone—it is the people's battle as well. Consumers must vigorously resist exorbitant prices. Black markets cannot be suppressed solely by enforcement measures. Businessmen must, as controls are progressively removed, exercise self-restraint and forego the opportunity for short-run gain from profiteering in favor of the long-run advantage of stable prices and fair profits.

If it appears that all the efforts of the Government and the people will not be enough under the present legislation, I shall have no alternative but to call the Congress back in special session to strengthen the price control laws and to enact such fiscal and monetary legislation as we need to save us from the threat of economic disaster.

HARRY S. TRUMAN.

THE WHITE HOUSE, July 25, 1946.

The SPEAKER. Under previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from California [Mrs. DOUGLAS] is recognized for 30 minutes.

THE HUMAN BUDGET MUST BE BALANCED FOR PEACE

Mrs. DOUGLAS of California. Mr. Speaker, now, when we were about to go home to take part in the first peacetime political campaign and election in 4 years, it seems worth while to ask ourselves some searching questions. If we do so, perhaps we will be better able to answer the very searching questions that the voters will put to us between now and November 5. Some of us will survive and pass that examination, that supremely democratic test; some of us will flunk out and be replaced.

I do not propose today to recall in detail the specific legislative issues. On those the record has been made, even on those that by one means or another have been stored away in the deep-freeze locker for the new Congress to thaw out and bring to life.

Each one carries home his own record and his own conscience.

I propose to state some very basic questions. They are questions which, I believe, are deeply troubling to the people of my State and to the whole American people.

They are questions to which answers must be given. Upon finding the right answers—and in time—depend the survival and further flowering of our American democracy. Upon the answers depend the very survival of civilization itself. To those who have ears to hear, brains to understand, and hearts to care, the whirring of the atomic bomb is louder and more compelling than the ticking of any clock. Even those who may try to escape the tension by hysterical attempts at humor betray the fact that, as part of the human race, they, too, are involved and concerned about the answers.

Yes, many questions hang over us, too many of them unanswered as we prepare to leave.

The answers I shall give may not be the right answers, or not complete answers. But they are answers in which I believe and for which I propose to speak and fight and pray until the polls close on election day.

What is the issue in this political campaign? Is it peace, or world organization, or full employment, or free enterprise, or balance the budget?

The issue is peace, not peace at any price, but a peace for which we are willing to work and think and vote here at home and in the United Nations. It must be a peace, not of capitulation which is no peace, but of cooperation and accommodation.

With power goes responsibility. We who have the power of the atomic bomb, unmatched today but perhaps surpassed tomorrow as history is counted, have the heaviest responsibility for the making of such a peace.

All the other issues are part of, and effect, the big issue.

Today, as we prepare to adjourn for 5 months, we have been too late with too little in preparing for peace. God grant us time to catch up when we come back, those who do come back.

"Peace, it's wonderful." But how do you get it?

There is nothing miraculous nor instantaneous about peace. It does not just happen. It develops, grows, or withers from day to day. We can get it by creating such conditions here at home and helping to create such conditions abroad as will make sure that there will never again be war.

Never?

That is right. This time there is no fooling. I quote from the findings of the Senate Special Committee on Atomic Energy, April 19, 1946, page 5: "It turns out that the real protection against the atomic bomb lies in the prevention of war."

And, at page 6, the final sentence summarizing the testimony of the scientists, military officials, industrialists, and others who had been closely connected with the Manhattan district—atomic bomb—project:

> Since the only real solution to the whole problem (created by the development of atomic energy) lies in continued world peace, legislation should be directed in specific terms toward that end and should contain a practical expression of our desire for international cooperation.

As an American citizen, I am proud of the report of that committee, of the bill passed by the Senate, of the Lilienthal report and recommendations, of the Baruch proposal to the United Nations, all made with the support and approval of President Truman. As a Member of this House, I am not proud of the atomic-energy bill passed by this body. I hope it will be improved in conference. I hope that the new Congress may further improve its provisions.

Let us look at that final sentence again. If we fail to heed its warning it may become the epitaph of civilization. Note that it says "the only real solution." Is what? "Continued world peace." Note the word continued. That means that peace cannot be broken, suspended, and resumed later. Peace must be continuous from now on.

It recommends legislation in specific terms and finally "a practical expression of our desire for international cooperation."

Who says so? Are these words, "the only real solution * * * lies in continued world peace," the words of the Congresswoman from California? Oh, no. Not at all. They are the words of a Senate committee, summarizing the testimony of the men who split the atom and who know how the release of atomic energy, which is now going on, can split and destroy our world.

Who are they?

Let me read their names. I read from the Senate report:

> Dr. Alexander Sachs, economist.
>
> Maj. Gen. L. R. Groves, United States Army, Director, Manhattan engineering district.
>
> Dr. Harold C. Urey, professor of chemistry, University of Chicago.
>
> Dr. Irving Langmuir, associate director of research laboratory, General Electric Co.
>
> Dr. Vannevar Bush, Director, Office of Scientific Research and Development.
>
> Dr. J. R. Oppenheimer, professor of physics, California Institute of Technology.
>
> Dr. Hans A. Bethe, professor of physics, Cornell University.
>
> Dr. Philip Morrison, physicist, Los Alamos Laboratory.
>
> Dr S. A. Goudsmit, professor of physics, University of Michigan.
>
> Dr. Leo Szilard, staff member, metallurgical laboratory, University of Chicago.
>
> Dr. John A. Simpson, physicist, University of Chicago.
>
> Dr. Clarke Williams, physicist, College of the City of New York.
>
> Dr. Alvin M. Weinberg, physicist, Clinton Laboratories, Oak Ridge.
>
> Dr. Ross Gunn, Naval Research Laboratory.
>
> Commodore W. S. Parsons, Assistant to the Deputy Chief, Naval Operations for Special Weapons.
>
> Vice Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, Deputy Chief, Naval Operations for Special Weapons.
>
> Rear Adm. William R. Purnell, Assistant Chief of Naval Operations for Matériel.
>
> Rear Adm. Lewis L. Strauss, Deputy Chairman of the Army-Navy Munitions Board and special assistant to the Secretary of the Navy.
>
> Frank R. Creedon, formerly with Stone & Webster Engineering Corp.
>
> H. E. Thompson, vice president, Carbide & Carbon Chemicals Corp.
>
> H. A. Winne, vice president, General Electric Co.
>
> Edwin H. Brown, vice president, Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co.

Mr. Speaker, we are all too apt to make negative, defensive statements about matters that are very important and very dear to us. Instead of saying "peace" we say "not war," or "no more war" or "a warless world."

I prefer to make it positive, to take the offensive, to say a world full of peace is what we must have. As a woman, I know how deep is the instinct and the desire for peace, for the conserving, for the saving and the cherishing and the infinite improvement of human life. In a Nation and a world still too much controlled by fear, it is also true that peace does keep breaking out all over. It is part of the divine optimism of mankind. Today, living on a planet that is small and getting smaller, it is literally true that we must have a world full of peace or no world at all. Man's destiny demands it.

"What do you mean, a peaceful world? Why not get down to earth, to brass tacks?"

Bigger profits, higher wages, a new washing machine, two chickens in every pot, lower taxes—are these the conditions of peace? They are all desirable. Yes; and they are all possible in a Nation as rich as ours. We can even have bigger profits and higher wages at the same time—if we manage to keep our vast economic and productive machine rolling out goods in capacity volume for ready sale.

We want all these things and we can have them. But is that all we want? Is that our ultimate goal, our deepest concern, our inmost yearning as we bend over our children and think of the years ahead?

No; beyond and beneath and before and after everything else, we want a warless world, a peaceful world, a world full of peace—all of us, men and women alike, farmer, wage earner, businessman, big and small, veteran and nonveteran, those who went and those who stayed home and waited, Democrat and Republican. That is our goal. Peace. Not a cold marble shaft, a remote ideal, honored in the breach more than in the observance, but a lively, active, all-pervasive sense of economic and political and social good health running through all our communities, our Nation, and other nations. With this goal always in mind all other issues, which are part and parcel of the big issue, will fall into their proper place.

"How about balancing the Budget?" Is it not true that unless we stop increasing the national debt, begin living within our income, and start reducing the enormous debt we shall have neither peace nor prosperity, but loss of confidence in our money, our Government, and finally a break-down and another war? Why not be practical and start with the budget and taxes?"

With this cry of "balance the budget," especially at campaign time, the very strong suggestion is made that the candidate who pledges to work toward that end first, last, and always, putting that goal above all else, is the candidate who alone has the real interest of the people at heart. "Balance the budget and all will come out all right." "Balance the budget and put our house in order." "Balance the budget and save ourselves from all the dangers in the catalog of horrors."

Well, let us make this issue hold still a moment while we look at it. (Never mind the political danger of having to suggest to homeless veterans that they put their house in order. What house? is likely to be their very apt reply.) Let us talk about taxes. None of us likes to pay taxes. But there are many things we dislike a whole lot more. Death, the loss of dear ones, bloodshed and horror, the slow readjustment to what we call peace for those who have lived years in weeks of war—there is no need to belabor the point. But there is no excuse for forgetting or omitting it.

The fact is that, even if we balance the budget and there is World War III, the balanced budget will bring no happiness, the balanced budget will prove no shield against danger. (France had billions in gold when the Nazis took Paris.) There may not even be anyone around to enjoy or record a balanced budget if there is World War III. A balanced budget, in and of itself, is no guaranty of happiness and no guaranty of future life.

A balanced budget is desirable, of course, but we can go on eating and sleeping, working, loving our dear ones, raising our families, whether we as a Nation add the column on the deficit or the plus side. We can do this as long as we are not afraid of ourselves as a people, a nation, and a race.

Why is this possible? Because we are a rich nation, the richest in the world in money and goods and the equal of any nation in raw materials. Our budget is unbalanced, but we are in debt to no one. We have borrowed from ourselves.

I recall the words of a very prominent Republican, a former Senator, now an employee, I believe, of the Republican National Committee, to the effect that, if you feel you have had your money's worth, the budget can be said to have been balanced. I believe the American people—even those who have paid the highest taxes—think they have had their money's worth in the past 14 years of peace and war. We are free and strong, stronger internally and abroad than in 1932. I do not believe we are afraid, even of bookkeeping. I do not believe we can be scared by bookkeepers' talk that puts dollars first and people second.

If we keep the individual's budget balanced so that every family in America is well-housed, well-clothed, and well-fed, the national budget will take care of itself when the time comes to cast up accounts. We are not keeping books for the sake of keeping books, or of making money, but of saving lives, saving our national strength.

The issue, the great overriding national issue, is Peace, peace within this Nation and among nations. We balance the budget now if we contribute our full share to peace. Nothing less is enough.

If we find that health, Federal aid to equalize education throughout the 48 States, housing, and scientific research are the real foundations of peace here and abroad, we will be balancing the bugget by laying those foundations.

If the use of fiscal policy in credit, taxation and expenditures for useful public works and services is helpful in substituting steady and rising employment and incomes for another and more violent boom and bust, then I say, let us use it. Let us keep the national ledger free of the blood and tears that smudged the figures for 1929 to 1933.

I mention these minor issues to emphasize the fact that, if we are not to bring our civilization down in ruins, we must fit every act into a pattern that permits of a future. As with nuclear fission, so with politics and economics. Chain reactions are inevitable. They happen all the time. They can be good or bad. Our job, if we want to survive, is to make them good, and to relate each of them to the others and to the whole structure and habit of peace.

Every principle, every struggle is senseless from here out if there is to be no future. Therefore, for each of us who sometimes must meet a child's trusting eyes, every act must fit into a pattern that permits of a future.

Mr. Speaker, in my opinion it is the human budget that we must balance first. As never before, people must be mobilized, not as slaves or puppets, but as free, healthy, aspiring, working, enjoying and friendly individuals, unafraid of each other, tomorrow or themselves. This is a great country, in those terms. It must be made a better country, more healthy, more optimistic, with more security and opportunity for the individual man and woman and young person. That is the way to mobilize to make peace. The same all-out vigor and determination that we put into the war must be invested in the peace.

From here out, human values must be put first. They must be the test in weighing every issue, budget balancing, taxes, whatever it is.

"But where do human values get us? We cannot run a world WPA," the hard-boiled realists will be saying in the next few months. "Let us shut down on all this relief. Take care of our own first and let the rest pay cash on the barrel head."

Oh, Mr. Speaker, such realism is no realism at all.

We have Bretton Woods, a World Bank, Food and Agriculture Organization, UNESCO, the United Nations, but unless we continue to go to the rescue of a starving world, this year and the next at least, those fine brave plans for a world of peace can go for nothing. Money and trade, learning, culture, and scientific programs will never have a chance to be worked out and used by mankind. We simply cannot build anything lasting as long as 500,000,000 people face starvation. Peace and misery cannot live together.

It is people, remember, with whom we are primarily and ultimately concerned—not governments but people, Russian people, Polish people, Dutch people, French people, English people, Italian people, Chinese people, hungry, sick, homeless people—people with war-shocked nerves, people suffering for years during German occupation and the disaster of war from malnutrition. It is with these people we must live and work and play and build, not only commerce, trade, air travel, international organizations, but friendship, sympathy, understanding, trust—the essential ingredients of a happy family life—whether it be on main street or the world family along the international highways and airways that lace the earth together in one great neighborhood.

And what of human values at home? There is a lesson to be learned from the war. We had a 15,000,000-man Army. It was a great Army. It helped to win a great victory. It routed the forces of evil, winning freedom and a chance for greater freedom—losing would have meant slavery for all the people of the world—slavery to the Axis nations.

"But what did we win when we won the war?" ask the self-styled realists.

Let no one tell you this war was fought for nothing. We won freedom. Every town in Germany had its slave battalion, made up of the conquered people of Europe. Every town had its stinking concentration camps with their human furnaces heated for the slaves in case they did not perform to suit their masters.

Let no one ever tell you we gained nothing when we won this war.

A 15,000,000-man army it took for us to do the job. But it took more—for war demands courage and a spirit and a will to win. It demands intelligence and a physical hardihood, a capacity of man's body to measure up to his spirit and his intellect. It took the best that we had. We spent our finest manhood.

There is a shameful fact connected with the building of that great 15,000,000-man army which does not at first appear. We discarded because of mental or physical defects almost as many men as we took into the Army.

The shameful story is told in the record of the Selective Service. It is a stark incontrovertible story of unequal educational opportunities, the story of malnutrition here at home, of the ravages of disease and physical defects because of lack of medical attention, the story of low wages in cities, low incomes on farms and insecurity, like a malaria eating into the blood and the bones of our people. It is the story of human erosin, unnecessary and preventable in the richest of all countries. It all showed up in the records of the Selective Service when we had to choose only the sound and healthy to win the war.

This story must not continue if we are to build a sound healthy society, free from the germs of war—healthy enough to give the world leadership that is asked of us. If in war, courage and the will to win must be fortified by intelligence backed up by a healthy sturdy body, I declare that these things are doubly needed now.

Is it too much to ask that all Americans, Democrat or Republican, look at economic and social legislation in this light? A job at a living wage on the farm, in the factory, in the offices of America with reasonable hours, a fair wage to keep the machinery of our Government going—for the Federal worker and postal employee—are the foundations of a healthy mind and body. They are likewise the insurance to business of enough customers with enough money to buy the plenty our economy can and must produce year in and year out.

Business and agriculture can and must be free from fear of monopoly, free for all, free so that initiative and imagination can flower, so that healthy, normal ambition is something for the many and not for the few—so that there is an ever-widening horizon for all. This does not just happen. Government must make and enforce the rules of the road, of commerce, of fair competition, and give help to small business in its contest with big business.

I think in a government of the people—our Government—we, the elected representatives, must ever fight the deadening hand of monopoly, recognize it for what it is—the real enemy of free enterprise, and, finally, if allowed to grow, the death of democracy itself.

A man's spirit and courage expand in a society where the rules are fair and just, where the same rules apply to all, where the only limit on one's advancement is one's own application and ability.

Health is not the pious dream of welfare workers and Senator MURRAY. Health is the heavy bomber of peace. Doctors, nurses, hospitals—we must not stop until we have the number we need to insure health for all.

Playgrounds, recreation centers, parks contribute to health.

A decent home with enough room where children can grow up normally, happily; where grownups can rest their bodies, relax, restore their strength for the job they have chosen to do, is fundamental to healthy minds and healthy bodies and to a sound spirit.

Senior citizens must be provided for adequately in a society that is secure.

Science must be used as an instrument to open the doors of business opportunity for all, not just a special few.

Science must be used to bring about better working conditions, better health and new communities. Science must be used for all the people to develop greater resources.

The opportunities are limitless if we keep the goal in mind, if we remember what we are trying to do.

To achieve our goal, to build a world full of plenty and peace and empty of want and war, we can no longer afford old prejudices, old hates. We are so blind—all of us—so unfeeling, so unknowing when it comes to the science and art of human relations. We must master that science.

We must hand in hand learn to walk and see and feel and work together, each a part of whatever future there will be. We must be vigilant daily of ourselves.

We must measure our own action, search our own hearts, test every proposal, every act, by the question that is the sum of all questions, all issues:

Will it help or harm the making of real peace within our Nation and among nations?

Mr. Speaker, that is the issue, the test in the months and years to come.

We have won the war. We must prove ourselves worthy of peace.

The SPEAKER. Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. REES] is recognized for 10 minutes.

INVESTIGATION OF LOYALTY IN GOVERNMENT

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I have asked for permission to speak at this time to make a rather brief statement in support of my supplemental report as a member of the subcommittee of the House Civil Service Committee, appointed, among other things, to investigate the problem of loyalty of employees in Government. I shall also make a few brief observations.

Mr. Speaker, it is of extreme importance to our country at this time that people employed in all departments of Federal service be of the highest integrity and unquestioned loyalty. The people of this country are entitled to that consideration. Employment in Government should at all times be respected as a high privilege. Very unfortunately, there is no uniform, consistent policy among our agencies with regard to investigating and removing employees who are known to be disloyal. Right now we have employees in Government who have been rejected on loyalty grounds by one agency but who are accepted for employment in another agency. The Civil Service Commission is responsible for permitting hundreds of employees to remain on the pay roll, even though their loyalties have been challenged. In dealing with these cases the policy of "reasonable doubt" on questions of loyalty has not been carefully followed. Too much attention and susceptibility is given to outside influences, not only in civil service, but in other agencies of Government, in making final decisions with respect to fitness of many employees.

Mr. Speaker, conditions that are inexcusable with respect to this problem were brought to the attention of the subcommittee, even during the few days investigations were being held. These conditions will not be cured entirely by mere changes in technique or issuance of directives. I am informed that the Civil Service Commission is giving consideration to new directives with regard to investigation of applicants for employment. I have no objection to these new directives, but little will be accomplished thereby with respect to those who are already on our pay rolls. We ought to determine who is responsible for permitting any person with doubtful loyalty to remain in Government and then see to it that such persons, after careful examination, are immediately removed.

Mr. Speaker, after all, this Congress is responsible to the people to see to it that our national security is preserved and the most important place to start up to do it is within the Government itself.

Mr. Speaker, we ought to do that as a matter of fairness to the hundreds of thousands of loyal, patriotic employees in Government. They are entitled to that protection and consideration.

Mr. Speaker, the Committee on the Civil Service ought to continue its investigations and hearings with respect to this entire question of loyalty. It should not be a witch-hunting proposal, but it should be a careful, firm, and constructive investigation in the various agencies so that we can find out not only who are the people that are being held in Government with questionable loyalties, but also who is responsible for their being in such positions. And, furthermore, see that action is taken by legislation or otherwise to deal with this problem.

My attention has just recently been called to an agency where a number of people have been employed whose loyalty is questioned, but who claim they cannot be released except by going through civil service. The Civil Service Commission claims it is not in position to take any action with respect to an employee after he has once been investigated and placed permanently on the pay roll. This situation should be definitely solved. Let us fix the responsibility and see that that responsibility is carried out.

Of course, the Civil Service Commission is entitled to sufficient funds to make proper investigation, but more important it must have the will to see that those already in service who do not belong there are removed. If the Civil Service cannot remove them, then they ought to recommend removal to the agency where they are employed. We need more definite action and less directives in civil service.

Mr. Speaker, our attention has just been called to a glaring situation of a man named Jacobson, who was employed as a clerk for $1,200 or $1,400, and within a short time rose to a position of importance and responsibility so that he receives more than $9,000 per year. That is a case of sheer neglect on the part of officials in our Government. It was not difficult to find out about this man's record. He had been recommended for disbarment. His record was not good, and yet he was not only approved for employment, but further approved for advancement to which common sense would tell anyone he was not entitled. Somebody is responsible for permitting that thing to happen. Not only should Jacobson have been thrown out of the Government before now, but those who recommended him should be held accountable.

Mr. Speaker, if we are going to deal with this question, we cannot do it by just appointing interdepartmental committees. We have got to take action, and we have got to fix responsibility.

Mr. Speaker, I am disappointed in the lack of many agencies of Government in their lack of interest and support in cooperating with our committee and Congress in dealing with this question. Mr. Speaker, the problem of subversive activities in Government ought to be investigated from top to bottom. A committee of this Congress should make investigation, and in doing so it ought to have the loyal and complete cooperation of every agency and department of Government. If they hesitate to cooperate, we should know the reason why. The problem is too serious and too important to the American people to permit vacillation or "buck passing" on the part of anyone or any agency. We can solve it if we have the will and the courage to do it.

THE HONORABLE JOHN J. COCHRAN

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, our distinguished and beloved colleague, and my close and valued friend, Hon. JOHN J. COCHRAN, after 11 consecutive terms of faithful, efficient service to his country, his State, and his constituency, has decided not to return to the Halls of Congress. The contemplation of the ending of my close relationship with him during all the years of my office as Member of Congress brings a feeling of personal sadness, not merely that our relations have been so pleasant and agreeable, or that our duties have been so mutually interwoven, as for the personal feeling of loss in not being able to look to him for aid and assistance in the many important legislative problems which are present and which only those with the knowledge, ability, and power of clear thought possessed by JOHN COCHRAN can properly solve. This present state of the world calls for men in public office who can meet the complex and difficult conditions of daily life with courage and vision. We can ill afford to lose the valued service of JOHN COCHRAN. We need pause but momentarily to consider the varieties and intricacies of legislative work to be absolutely convinced that integrity in government demands the effort of men of his first talents.

The future happiness of the world is dependent upon the wisdom, impartiality and independence of all who hold positions of public trust and confidence. JOHN COCHRAN, throughout his distinguished career as a Member of Congress has ever maintained the honor and dignity of his high office. His every thought and action has had one objective—the maintenance of constitutional government and the preservation of the rights of men, wherever resident or however situated. Tolerance has been his credo. Integrity is his shield. He has ever striven to protect the minority against unjust claims of the majority and to maintain peace and order in our Nation through legislation designed to guarantee the rights of the majority when threatened by the ill-advised aggression of any minority. America is today the greatest and the most powerful Nation in the world. JACK COCHRAN has contributed immeasurably to this national greatness and power.

JACK COCHRAN was secretary to Hon. William L. Igoe and Hon. Harry B. Hawes who represented St. Louis in Congress for 14 years. He was secretary to Senator William J. Stone, being with the Senator at the time of his death. While secretary to Senator Stone he acted as secretary to the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate. Elected to the Sixty-ninth Congress, he has served as Member of the House during each succeeding Congress. During his term of office he has served with distinction on many committees. His sagacity and devotion to duty has perhaps best been exemplified by his outstanding accomplishment in the cause of good government as chairman of the Committee on Accounts. His loyalty and fidelity to our late beloved President, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, is a matter of common knowledge. His fearless and sympathetic understanding of every problem which concerns the veteran has endeared him to all heroes of World War I and of World War II. The longer men associate with him, the deeper grows affection and admiration. Brilliant, faithful, courageous—he has won for himself the respect and confidence of all his associates. Fortunate indeed are those who enjoy his friendship.

Ever a valiant warrior for those principles of liberty, equality, and justice which are our most treasured heritage, JOHN COCHRAN has lived and fought for the attainment of his ideals—the high ideals of honor in government, security and happiness in America, permanent peace in the world. He has been untiring in his endeavor to bring social security to mankind. Stricken by physical infirmity which would have defeated all but the strong of heart, he has carried high, with unflinching courage, the standard of patriotic devotion to God, to country, to man. Wise counselor, patient adviser, keen and astute citizen, we will miss him and his inspirational example as a real American. It was once said that a king who is willing to be the man of his people is the greatest king in the world. "JACK" COCHRAN is truly the man of his people.

His absence from our deliberations will leave a vacant chair. His experience, integrity, loyalty to country, and fidelity to God, are attributes of his character which having endeared him to all, increase the sentiments of deep regret that he will no longer be among us.

With him go our heartfelt wishes for the best health possible and, above all, for happiness.

He has ably served his God and country—may he throughout his life enjoy the fruits of his undying service for his fellow man.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. REES of Kansas asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a magazine article.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. WASIELEWSKI, for 1 week on account of official business.

To Mr. HARE, for 3 days.

To Mr. BALDWIN of New York, for 10 days.

To Mr. BRYSON, for the period ending August 14, on account of official business.

To Mr. ROBERTSON of Virginia, for Friday and Saturday this week, on account of official business.

ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

Mr. ROGERS of New York, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled a joint resolution of the House of the following title, which was thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H. J. Res. 371. Joint resolution extending the effective period of the Emergency Price Control Act of 1942, as amended, and the Stabilization Act of 1942, as amended.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the Senate of the following titles:

S. 1426. An act to provide for the replanning and rebuilding of slum, blighted, and other areas of the District of Columbia and the assembly, by purchase or condemnation, of real property in such areas and the sale or lease thereof for the redevelopment of such area in accordance with said plans; and to provide for the organization of, procedure for, and the financing of such planning, acquisition, and sale or lease; and for other purposes;

S. 1466. An act authorizing rehabilitation on the island of Guam; and

S. 2246. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to acquire in fee or otherwise certain lands and rights in land on the island of Guam, and for other purposes.

JOINT RESOLUTION PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. ROGERS of New York, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee did on this day present to the President, for his approval, a joint resolution of the House of the following title:

H. J. Res. 371. Joint resolution extending the effective period of the Emergency Price Control Act of 1942, as amended, and the Stabilization Act of 1942, as amended.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 7 o'clock and 44 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Friday, July 26, 1946, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1477. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a draft of a proposed bill to create the Medical Service Corps in the Medical Department of the Army, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

1478. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a draft of a proposed bill to establish the Women's Army Corps in the Regular Army in the Officers' Reserve Corps and in the Enlisted Reserve Corps, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

1479. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a draft of a proposed bill to establish the Army Nurse Corps, the Dietitian Corps, the Physical Therapist Corps, and the Occupational Therapist Corps in the Medical Department of the Regular Army and in the Officers' Reserve Corps, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

1480. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation in the amount of $20,000,000 for the payment of claims by employees and former employees of the Government for increased overtime, leave, and holiday compensation on the basis of night rates pursuant to certain decisions of the Comptroller General in accordance with the provisions of H. R. 6532, Seventy-ninth Congress (H. Doc. No. 716); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

1481. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation in the amount of $2,679,493,000 for the cost of terminal leave and accumulated leave in excess of 90 days for members of the armed forces in accordance with the provisions of H. R. 4051, Seventy-ninth Congress (H. Doc. No. 717); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

1482. A letter from the Chairman, Federal Trade Commission, transmitting the report of the Federal Trade Commission entitled "Distribution Methods and Costs, Part IX—Cost of Production and Distribution of Fish on the Pacific Coast" (H. Doc. No. 718); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and ordered to be printed, with illustrations.

1483. A letter from the President, United States Civil Service Commission, transmitting one set of the Commission's requests for personnel for the second quarter of the fiscal year 1947; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

1484. A letter from the Administrator, National Housing Agency, transmitting a draft of a proposed bill for the relief of Mr. Stephen S. Piaut and Mrs. Edith Anderson; to the Committee on Claims.

1485. A letter from the President, Board of Commissioners, District of Columbia, transmitting a draft of a proposed bill to amend the act entitled "An act to regulate within the District of Columbia the sale of milk, cream, and ice cream, and for other purposes," approved February 27, 1925; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

1486. A letter from the Administrator, National Housing Agency, transmitting a draft of a proposed bill for the relief of James E. Culbreth; to the Committee on Claims.

1487. A letter from the Archivist of the United States, transmitting report on records proposed for disposal by various Government agencies; to the Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers.

1488. A letter from the Archivist of the United States, transmitting report on records proposed for disposal by various Government agencies; to the Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers.

1489. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a record of judgment rendered against the Government by the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Kentucky, as submitted by the Department of Justice through the Treasury Department, and which requires an appropriation of $218.92, together with an indefinite appropriation to pay interest (H. Doc. No. 719); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

1490. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the fiscal year 1947 in the amount of $250,000 for the Price Control Board (H. Doc. No. 720); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

1491 A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the fiscal year 1947 in the amount of $26,000,000 for the Office of Price Administration (H. Doc. No. 721); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

1492. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the fiscal year 1947 in the amount of $750,000 for the Atomic Energy Commission (H. Doc. No. 722); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

1493. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the fiscal year 1947 in the amount of $375,000 for the Council of Economic Advisers (H. Doc. No. 723); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

1494. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting an estimate of appropriation under the Treasury Department for payment of certain claims allowed by the General Accounting Office, amounting to $30,591.32 (H. Doc. No. 724); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

1495. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting estimates of appropriation submitted by the several executive departments and independent offices to pay claims for damages to or losses of privately owned property, in the sum of $1,425.57 (H. Doc. No. 725); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

1496. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a schedule of judgments rendered by the Court of Claims which has been submitted by the Treasury Department and requires an appropriation for payment, amounting to $70,738.47 (H. Doc. No. 726); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

1497. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting an estimate of appropriation submitted by the Public Roads Administration to pay claims for damage to roads and highways of States or their subdivisions, in the sum of $21,012.64 (H. Doc. No. 727); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

1498. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting estimates of appropriation amounting to $506,223.53, to cover claims allowed by the General Accounting Office and for the services of the several departments and independent offices (H. Doc. No. 728); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. SMITH of Virginia: Select Committee To Investigate Executive Agencies submits a report pursuant to House Resolution 88 (79th Cong., 1st sess.), for the continuation of the Special Committee To Investigate Acts of Executive Agencies Which Exceed Their Authority (Rept. No. 2659). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. POAGE: Committee on Agriculture. S. 1198. An act to authorize the Secretary of Commerce to sell certain property in the State of Michigan now occupied by the Weather Bureau and to acquire land in the State of Michigan for the erection of a Weather Bureau station; without amendment (Rept. No. 2660). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Joint Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 2661. Report on the disposition of certain papers of sundry executive departments. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. KELLEY of Pennsylvania: Committee on Labor. H. R. 3922. A bill to provide for the general welfare by enabling the several States to make more adequate provision for the health and welfare of mothers and children and for services to crippled children, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 2662). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. BLAND: Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries. H. R. 5892. A bill providing for a medal for service in the merchant marine during the present war; with amendment (Rept. No. 2663). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. BLAND: Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries. H. R. 6910. A bill relating to the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury to exchange sites at Fort Lauderdale, Brownard County, Fla., for Coast Guard purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 2664). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. PHILLIPS: Committee on Agriculture. H. R. 7101. A bill to protect American agriculture, horticulture, livestock, and the public health by prohibiting the unauthorized importation into, or the depositing in the territorial waters of, the United States of garbage derived from products originating outside of the continental United States, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 2665). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. FLANNAGAN: Committee on Agriculture. H. R. 6043. A bill to provide support for wool, to amend the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937 by including wool as a commodity to which orders under such act are applicable, to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to fix wool standards and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 2666). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. SPENCE: Committee on Banking and Currency. Senate Joint Resolution 156. Joint resolution to extend the succession, lending powers, and the functions of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; with amendments (Rept. No. 2667). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BENDER:

H. R. 7140. A bill to provide for the reduction of appropriations to the extent necessary to balance the Budget for the fiscal year 1947; to the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.

By Mrs. NORTON:

H. R. 7141. A bill to promote the general welfare of the people of the United States by establishing a publicly supported labor extension program for wage and salary earners, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. BARTLETT:

H. R. 7142. A bill to increase the compensation of the Governors of Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands; to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. RANDOLPH (by request):

H. R. 7143. A bill to exempt certain interns, student nurses, and other student employees of hospitals of the Federal Government from the Classification Act and other laws relating to compensation and benefits of Federal employees; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. HAND:

H. R. 7144. A bill to amend the act of April 14, 1930, to provide increased retired pay for certain members of the former Life Saving Service; to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. HOOK:

H. R. 7145. A bill to suspend deportation of Indonesians; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. PATTERSON:

H. R. 7146. A bill to amend the act of May 18, 1928, so as to authorize a per capita distribution of certain funds to the Indians of California; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. HOBBS:

H. R. 7147. A bill to repeal certain statutes relating to the war and emergencies; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DE LACY:

H. R. 7148. A bill granting the consent of Congress to the State of Washington to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across Port Washington Narrows between Bremerton, Wash., and Manette, Wash., and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. DOUGHTON of North Carolina:

H. R. 7149. A bill to amend Public Law No. 291, the International Organization Immunities Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HINSHAW:

H. R. 7150. A bill to repeal an act granting certain public lands situated in Mono County in the State of California, to the city of Los Angeles; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. LEA:

H. R. 7151. A bill to amend section 12 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended, for the purpose of affording protection to investors in certain unregistered securities; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. MUNDT:

H. R. 7152. A bill providing for the conveyance to the city of Canton, S. Dak., of the Canton Insane Asylum, located in Lincoln County, S. Dak.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. WEICHEL:

H. R. 7153. A bill to provide for the issuance of a special postage stamp in commemoration of Thomas Alva Edison; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. SPENCE:

H. J. Res. 388. Joint resolution to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to render financial aid to the Republic of the Philippines, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. RANDOLPH:

H. J. Res. 389. Joint resolution to authorize the Bureau of Labor Statistics to collect price and rent information in additional cities and at more frequent intervals, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan:

H. Res. 740. Resolution requesting information from the War Department; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ALLEN of Illinois:

H. R. 7154. A bill for the relief of Freda Wahler; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. DWORSHAK:

H. R. 7155. A bill for the relief of Dionisio R. Trevino; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. KEARNEY:

H. R. 7156. A bill for the relief of Giuseppe Antonio Saraco; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. KLEIN:

H. R. 7157. A bill for the relief of Alex Bail; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. KEEFE:

H. R. 7158. A bill for the relief of Neal E. Will; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. LESINSKI:

H. R. 7159. A bill for the relief of Georgios Ekaterinis; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. LEA:

H. R. 7160. A bill for the relief of Walter R. and Kathryn Marshall; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SADOWSKI:

H. R. 7161. A bill for the relief of George Elly Vasu; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. ROWAN:

H. R. 7162. A bill for the relief of Tsuyoshi Matsumoto; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

2124. By the SPEAKER: Petition of Federal Bar Association of New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut, petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to requesting Congress to appoint an appropriate committee to investigate all questions of fact, law, and public policy arising out of the public charges made by Mr. Justice Jackson, of the United States Supreme Court, against Mr. Justice Black; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2125. Also, petition of the Common Council of the City of Rome, N. Y., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to their endorsement of adequate price control; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

2126. Also, petition of Southwest Shippers Advisory Board, petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to their opposition to railroad retirement bills S. 93 and H. R. 1362; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

SENATE

FRIDAY, JULY 26, 1946

(Legislative day of Friday, July 5, 1946)

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m., on the expiration of the recess.

Rev. Ralph C. John, S. T. M., assistant minister, Foundry Methodist Church, Washington, D. C., offered the following prayer:

O God, most merciful Father, our beginning is with Thee; our continuation—to live and to serve—is a gift of Thy providence; and our hope for the near and the far reaches of time is engendered through Thy divine love. We would not accept the challenge of the high tasks to which we look except for the assurance that in matters great and small we do not stand in a feigned self-sufficiency, but that supporting in infinite power are the everlasting arms. Make us conscious of Thy presence in that which Thou hast given us to accomplish; and may every fruit of labor find its roots in a wisdom which Thou dost bestow.

Incline Thine ear unto us as the supplications of our hearts ascend in the dear Redeemer's name. Amen.

DESIGNATION OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The Chief Clerk read the following letter:

UNITED STATES SENATE,
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,
Washington, D. C., July 26, 1946.

To the Senate:

Being temporarily absent from the Senate, I appoint Hon. ALBEN W. BARKLEY, a Senator from the State of Kentucky, to perform the duties of the Chair during my absence.

KENNETH MCKELLAR,
President pro tempore.

Mr. BARKLEY thereupon took the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. WHITE, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Thursday, July 25, 1946, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. WHITE. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Hayden	Overton
Andrews	Hill	Pepper
Austin	Hoey	Radcliffe
Ball	Huffman	Reed
Barkley	Johnson, Colo.	Revercomb
Bilbo	Johnston, S. C.	Russell
Brewster	Kilgore	Shipstead
Brooks	Knowland	Smith
Buck	La Follette	Stanfill
Burch	Langer	Stewart
Bushfield	Lucas	Swift
Capper	McCarran	Taft
Carville	McClellan	Taylor
Connally	McFarland	Thomas, Okla.
Cordon	McKellar	Thomas, Utah
Donnell	McMahon	Tobey
Downey	Magnuson	Tunnell
Eastland	Mead	Vandenberg
Ferguson	Millikin	Wagner
Fulbright	Mitchell	Walsh
George	Moore	Wheeler
Gerry	Morse	Wherry
Green	Murdock	White
Guffey	Murray	Wiley
Gurney	Myers	Willis
Hart	O'Daniel	Young
Hawkes	O'Mahoney

Mr. HILL. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] and the Senator from Idaho [Mr. GOSSETT] are absent because of illness.

The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. MAYBANK] is absent because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Missouri [Mr. BRIGGS] and the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ] are detained on public business.

The Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] is absent on official business.

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH] is absent on official business, having been appointed a member of the President's Evaluation Commission in connection with the test of atomic bombs on naval vessels at Bikini.

The Senator from Louisana [Mr. ELLENDER] and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] are absent on official business, having been appointed to the commission on the part of the Senate to participate in the Philippine independence ceremonies.

Mr. WHERRY. The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] is necessarily absent.

The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BUTLER] is absent on official business, being a member of the commission appointed to attend the Philippine independence ceremonies.

The Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART] and the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. ROBERTSON] are absent by leave of the Senate.

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HICKENLOOPER] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business as a member of the Special Committee on Atomic Energy.

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL] is absent on official business, having been appointed a member of the President's Evaluation Commission in connection with the test of atomic bombs on naval vessels at Bikini.

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON] is absent on official business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Eighty Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may be absent from the Senate until some time about the middle of next week. It is imperative that I be absent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, leave is granted.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. President, at the conclusion of today's session I ask unanimous consent that I may be absent for the following week.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, leave is granted.

Mr. BUSHFIELD. Mr. President, I ask consent to be absent from the Senate for 1 week.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, leave is granted.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Miller, one of his secretaries.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Swanson, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed, without amendment, the following bills of the Senate:

S. 162. An act for the relief of Walter S. Faulkner;

S. 496. An act to make it a criminal offense for certain escaped convicts to travel from one State to another;

S. 1235. An act to authorize the use of the funds of any tribe of Indians for insurance premiums;

S. 1549. An act for the relief of the legal guardian of Duane N. Thompson;

S. 1561. An act to amend the act entitled "Compensation for injury, death, or detention of employees of contractors with the United States outside the United States," as amended, for the purpose of making the 100-percent earning provisions effective as of January 1, 1942;

S. 1573. An act for the relief of James H. Wilkinson;

S. 1640. An act to provide for the acquisition by the United States of certain real property in the District of Columbia;

S. 1674. An act for the relief of Michael Joseph Bennett, a minor;

S. 1731. An act for the relief of Lester A. Dessez;

S. 1751. An act for the relief of Wayne Parker;

S. 1880. An act for the relief of the Crosby Yacht Building & Storage Co., Inc.;

S. 1910. An act for the relief of George D. King;

S. 2036. An act granting the consent of Congress to the State of Rhode Island to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Sakonnet River between the towns of Tiverton and Portsmouth in Newport County, R. I.;

S. 2247. An act to permit the Secretary of the Navy to delegate the authority to compromise and settle claims against the United States caused by vessels of the Navy or in the naval service, or for towage or salvage services to such vessels, and for other purposes;

S. 2253. An act to further amend the act of January 16, 1936, as amended, entitled "An act to provide for the retirement and retirement annuities of civilian members of the teaching staff at the United States Naval Academy and the Postgraduate School, United States Naval Academy";

S. 2259. An act to amend the Philippine Rehabilitation Act of 1946, for the purpose of making a clerical correction;

S. 2260. An act for the relief of Roy M. Davidson;

S. 2349. An act to permit the Secretary of the Navy to delegate the authority to compromise and settle claims for damages to property under the jurisdiction of the Navy Department, and for other purposes;

S. 2369. An act for the relief of Col. S. V. Constant, General Staff Corps; and

S. 2405. An act to define the area of the United States Capitol Grounds, to regulate the use thereof, and for other purposes.

The message notified the Senate that Mr. DURHAM, of North Carolina, had been appointed a manager on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1717) entitled "An act for the development and control of atomic energy," vice Mr. BROOKS, of Louisiana, excused.

The message also announced that the House insisted upon its amendments to the bill (S. 1253) to enable debtor railroad corporations expeditiously to effectuate reorganizations of their financial structure; to alter or modify their financial obligations; and for other purposes, disagreed to by the Senate; agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. SUMNERS of Texas, Mr. HOBBS, Mr. GORSKI, Mr. REED of Illinois, and Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

The message further announced that the House had disagreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 783) for the relief of Karl E. Bond; asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. FERNANDEZ, Mr. HEDRICK, and Mr. JENNINGS were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following letters, which were referred as indicated:

LEGISLATION PASSED BY LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL OF ST. THOMAS AND ST. JOHN, V. I.

A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, pursuant to law, a copy of legislation passed by the Municipal Council of St. Thomas and St. John, V. I. (with an accompanying paper); to the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs.

REPORT ON COST OF PRODUCTION AND DISTRIBUTION OF FISH ON PACIFIC COAST

A letter from the Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, transmitting a report of that Commission entitled "Distribution Methods and Costs, Part IX: Cost of Production and Distribution of Fish on the Pacific Coast" (with an accompanying report); to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

AUDIT REPORT OF UNITED STATES SPRUCE PRODUCTION CORPORATION

A letter from the Comptroller General of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, an audit report of the United States Spruce Production Corporation for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1945 (with an accompanying report); to the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.

REPORT OF RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION ON SMALL BUSINESS ACTIVITIES

A letter from the Chairman of the Board of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the bimonthly report of that Corporation's small business activities during the period April 1 through May 31, 1946 (with an accompanying report); to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

PETITION

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the City Council of the City of Boston, Mass., praying for the enactment of the bill (S. 1592) to establish a national housing policy and provide for its execution, which was ordered to lie on the table.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following reports of committees were submitted:

By Mr. HUFFMAN, from the Committee on the Judiciary:

S. 2378. A bill to amend the First War Powers Act, 1941; with amendments (Rept. No. 1839).

By Mr. MAGNUSON, from the Committee on Commerce:

S. 2318. A bill to amend the act of May 11, 1938, for the conservation of the fishery resources of the Columbia River, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 1837).

By Mr. McCARRAN, from the Committee on the District of Columbia:

S. 2374. A bill authorizing the appointment of three additional judges of the municipal court for the District of Columbia, prescribing the qualifications of appointees to the municipal court and the municipal court of appeals, and for other purposes; with amendments (Rept. No. 1838).

By Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado, from the Committee on Finance:

S. 2477. A bill to authorize the Veterans' Administration to reimburse State and local agencies for expenses incurred in rendering services in connection with the administration of certain training programs for veterans, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 1840).

By Mr. MILLIKIN, from the Committee on Banking and Currency:

H. R. 2377. A bill to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in commemoration of the one-hundredth anniversary of the admission of Iowa into the Union as a State; without amendment (Rept. No. 1841).

By Mr. HART, from the Committee on Commerce:

H. R. 6030. A bill to amend the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938, as amended, so as to improve international collaboration with respect to meteorology; without amendment (Rept. No. 1842).

By Mr. RUSSELL, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

H. R. 6932. A bill to provide for further research into basic laws and principles relating to agriculture and to improve and facilitate the marketing and distribution of agricultural products; with amendments (Rept. No. 1843).

By Mr. WHEELER, from the Committee on Indian Affairs:

H. R. 4114. A bill to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to sell certain land of Alice Scott White on the Crow Indian Reservation, Mont.; without amendment (Rept. No. 1844).

By Mr. LA FOLLETTE, from the Committee on Indian Affairs:

H. R. 6141. A bill to provide funds for cooperation with the school board of Hunter school district for the construction and equipment of a new school building in the town of Hunter, Sawyer County, Wis., to be available to both Indian and non-Indian children; without amendment (Rept. No. 1845).

By Mr. WAGNER, from the Committee on Banking and Currency:

S. J. Res. 181. Joint resolution to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to render financial aid to the Republic of the Philippines, and for other purposes; with amendments (Rept. No. 1846).

By Mr. RADCLIFFE, from the Committee on Commerce:

S. 2236. A bill providing for a medal for service in the merchant marine during the present war; with an amendment (Rept. No. 1847);

H. R. 1519. A bill relating to marine insurance in the case of certain employees of the War Department who suffered death, injury, or other casualty prior to April 23, 1943, as a result of marine risks; without amendment (Rept. No. 1848); and

H. R. 3973. A bill to amend the act entitled "An act to provide reemployment rights for persons who leave their positions to serve in the merchant marine, and for other purposes," approved June 23, 1943 (57 Stat. 162), and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 1849).

By Mr. BILBO, from the Committee on the District of Columbia:

S. 2479. A bill to amend the act entitled "An act to regulate within the District of Columbia the sale of milk, cream, and ice cream, and for other purposes," approved February 27, 1925; without amendment (Rept. No. 1850); and

H. R. 5756. A bill for the retirement of public-school teachers in the District of Columbia; without amendment (Rept. No. 1851).

By Mr. THOMAS of Utah, from the Committee on Military Affairs:

S. 2480. A bill authorizing the appointment of Robert Sprague Beightler as permanent brigadier general of the line of the Regular Army; without amendment (Rept. No. 1852).

REPORT ON DISPOSITION OF EXECUTIVE PAPERS

Mr. BARKLEY, from the Joint Select Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers, to which was referred for examination and recommendation a list of records transmitted to the Senate by the Archivist of the United States that appeared to have no permanent value or historical interest, submitted a report thereon pursuant to law.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

As in executive session,

The following favorable reports of nominations were submitted:

By Mr. GUFFEY, from the Committee on Finance:

George H. Taylor, of Pennsylvania, to be a member of the Advisory Board, Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion, vice O. Max Gardner.

By Mr. WALSH, from the Committee on Naval Affairs:

Sundry officers for appointment in the United States Marine Corps.

By Mr. McCARRAN, from the Committee on the Judiciary:

Richard Seymour Rodney, of Delaware, to be United States district judge for the district of Delaware.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. THOMAS of Utah:

S. 2481. A bill to establish the Army Nurse Corps, the Dietitian Corps, the Physical Therapist Corps, and the Occupational Therapist Corps in the medical department of the Regular Army and in the Officers Reserve Corps, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

(Mr. MORSE (for himself, Mr. AIKEN, Mr. LANGER, Mr. MURRAY, Mr. MITCHELL, Mr. TAYLOR, Mr. KILGORE, and Mr. YOUNG) introduced Senate bill 2482, to establish a consistent and coordinated antimonopoly program, prevent or eliminate monopoly and monopolistic practices, and protect the public interest, wherever necessary, through effective methods of public control over monopoly and monopolistic practices, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and appears under a separate heading.)

By Mr. MITCHELL:

S. 2483. A bill to amend section 23 of the Internal Revenue Code to permit deductions from gross income by corporations that turn over their facilities for a period of time to veterans' organizations; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. GREEN:

S. 2484. A bill to provide annuities under section 1 (e) of the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended, to certain officers and employees under the age of 55; to the Committee on Civil Service.

(Mr. WALSH introduced Senate bill 2485, to increase the subsistence allowances for veterans receiving educational benefits under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended, which was referred to the Committee on Finance, and appears under a separate heading.)

By Mr. WHERRY:

S. 2486. A bill to provide for the relief of Mr. Eric Seddon; to the Committee on Immigration.

By Mr. MURRAY:

S. 2487. A bill for the relief of H. C. Bierling; to the Committee on Claims.

(Mr. MURRAY (for himself and Mr. MORSE) introduced Senate Joint Resolution 182, to authorize the Bureau of Labor Statistics to collect price and rent information in additional cities and at more frequent intervals, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor, and appears under a separate heading.)

SUBSISTENCE ALLOWANCES FOR VETERANS RECEIVING EDUCATIONAL BENEFITS

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to introduce for appropriate reference a bill to increase the subsistence allowances for veterans receiving educational benefits under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended, and I request that a statement by me explaining the bill be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the bill will be received and appropriately referred, and the statement presented by the Senator from Massachusetts will be printed in the RECORD.

The bill (S. 2485) to increase the subsistence allowances for veterans receiving educational benefits under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Finance.

The statement presented by Mr. WALSH is as follows:

At the request of veterans who are in educational institutions under the GI bill, I am introducing in the Senate today a bill to amend the GI bill of rights to provide for a $25 increase in the monthly subsistence allowance for veterans attending college under the GI bill. Should the bill giving terminal leave to the veterans be passed, providing for a cash payment, instead of in bonds, the increase sought in the bill would not be so necessary and urgent at this time.

In pointing out the need for the $25 increase, typical student budgets indicate that $45 a month is required for meals and an average of $30 a month or more for room rent. Thus, in paying for only room and meals, the average student has already exceeded his subsistence allowance by $10 or more. In addition, of course, the student must meet the costs of laundry, clothing, haircuts, transportation, recreation, and numerous incidentals. The problem is even more acute with respect to married veteran students and their families.

Part-time jobs would give relief, but part-time jobs for students are difficult to find. Moreover, part-time jobs are affecting the scholastic work of many veteran students who are taking intensified speed-up courses.

Reports indicate that many students are becoming discouraged because of their financial status. I am of the opinion that, if many of these promising students and potential leaders are forced to give up their education, the cost to the country in wasted talent would be immeasurable.

COLLECTION OF PRICE AND RENT INFORMATION BY BUREAU OF LABOR STATISTICS

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, on behalf of the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MORSE] and myself, I ask unanimous consent to introduce a joint resolution and make a brief statement explaining it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 182) to authorize the Bureau of Labor Statistics to collect price and rent information in additional cities and at more frequent intervals, and for other purposes, introduced by Mr. MURRAY (for himself and Mr. MORSE), was received, read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, aside from the war itself, no problem with which the Nation has been confronted has been of greater concern to the American people and the Congress than the regulation and control of prices and their effect upon our economy. This is only natural since, like the war, it affects each and every individual in the Nation.

The cost of living and the changes in the prices of commodities have been front-page news for the past few months. The people are extremely concerned as to the facts. However, there has been much controversy as to what the facts really are. There is even more controversy as to what will happen to prices in the future. The people are entitled to the best current and reliable information on this very important subject. The one agency in the Government that can do the job is the Bureau of Labor Statistics in the United States Department of Labor.

Time and time again widely recognized experts and scholarly organizations and the public generally have praised the Bureau of Labor Statistics for its impartiality and efficiency in reporting accurately the economic data with which the Nation is so vitally concerned. It is therefore unnecessary for me to detail why the Bureau of Labor Statistics can be relied upon to do the job as it should and must be done.

During this emergency the demand upon the Bureau has been extremely heavy. Not only has it issued its regular indexes of basic commodities daily and of wholesale prices weekly, but it has also obtained telegraphic reports on food prices for 15 foods in 12 large cities and made them available within 48 hours. However, all of us recognize that 12 large cities cannot at this time be typical of the whole United States. They are certainly not typical of what has happened in small towns. At a time like this, it is especially important to know about many cities, not just a few, because practices have been very different in different parts of the country. I am informed that this service cannot be maintained much longer without severe delay to two other important reports which the Bureau is providing to the country, namely, the regular monthly consumers' price index—which gives the picture of the price rise for the whole family budget—and the estimates of the dollar cost of living for a workingman's family now in preparation. For some time at least it will be very important to have these prompt weekly reports on food prices from more cities than the Bureau's present program provides, and in my opinion the Congress' wish should be clearly expressed that these facts are desired.

There is another very serious aspect of the situation about which the public will need facts in the coming months, and that is rents. Information on rents also is collected only by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. It is available for a limited group of only 34 large cities—not for any small- or medium-sized towns on a current basis—and this information, because of continued rent control over a long period, has been collected only twice a year. A partial survey for August rather than September is now planned. Therefore, it will be another 4 months before any other rent surveys will be made. It is of the utmost importance for us all to have up-to-the-minute reports on the rents charged the American public.

On behalf of the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MORSE] and myself, I am therefore introducing a joint resolution authorizing the appropriation of $250,000 to enable the Bureau of Labor Statistics to carry on the studies required for the emergency period. This will enable the Bureau to incur a deficiency for which we can make an appropriation in the next session of Congress.

AMENDMENT OF FIRST WAR POWERS ACT, 1941—AMENDMENT

Mr. WALSH submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 2378) to amend the First War Powers Act, 1941, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

AMENDMENT OF SOCIAL SECURITY ACT AND INTERNAL REVENUE CODE—AMENDMENT

Mr. FULBRIGHT submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 7037) to amend the Social Security Act and the Internal Revenue Code, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Finance, and ordered to be printed.

PRINTING OF REVIEW OF REPORT ON GREAT LAKES TO HUDSON RIVER WATERWAY (S. DOC. NO. 252)

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, I present a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report dated April 14, 1942, from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, together with accompanying papers and an illustration, on a review of the report on the Great Lakes to Hudson River Waterway, and I ask unanimous consent that it may be referred to the Committee on Commerce and be printed as a Senate document, with an illustration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PRINTING OF REVIEW OF REPORTS ON NEWARK BAY, N. J. (S. DOC. NO. 250)

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, I present a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report dated May 20, 1942, from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, together with accompanying papers and an illustration, on a review of reports on Newark Bay, N. J., with a view to determining whether or not deepening of the channel in the bay between Kill van Kull and the city docks of Newark is advisable, and I ask unanimous consent that it may be referred to the Committee on Commerce and be printed as a Senate document, with an illustration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PRINTING OF LEGISLATIVE HISTORY OF ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEDURE ACT (S. DOC. NO. 248)

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, some months ago there was passed by both Houses and signed by the President what is known as the Administrative Procedure Act (Public Law 404, 79th Cong.). The American Bar Association and the entire bar of the country are very anxious to have copies of this law. Copies, when produced, will be sold at 50 cents each, so we know that the sales will more than pay for printing. I therefore ask that the manuscript, which is the act together with the legislative history thereof, be printed as a Senate document. Copies may be purchased from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., at 50 cents per copy.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

LIGHT ON THE MEXICAN WATER TREATY FROM RATIFICATION PROCEEDINGS IN MEXICO (S. DOC. NO. 249)

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a report to the Colorado River Water Users' Association, February 11, 1946, Salt Lake City, Utah, by Northcutt Ely, Washington, D. C., entitled "Light on the Mexican Water Treaty From the Ratification Proceedings in Mexico," be printed as a Senate document.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PRINTING OF REVIEW OF REPORTS ON THE MIAMI (FLA.) HARBOR (S. DOC. NO. 251)

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, I present a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report dated June 24, 1942, from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, together with accompanying papers, on a review of reports on Miami Harbor, Fla., with a view to determining the advisability of additional improvements in the interest of air commerce and national defense, and I ask unanimous consent that it may be referred to the Committee on Commerce and be printed as a Senate document, with illustrations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE CONSTITUTION, DEMOCRACY, AND LABOR—STATEMENT FROM THE CONNECTICUT ECONOMIC COUNCIL

Mr. HART. Mr. President, the last time the railroads were particularly in our minds was in connection with a very paralyzing transportation strike. Much has been said about the right to strike, and in connection with that question I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the Fortnightly Letter of the Connecticut Economic Council, which has a bearing on that question.

There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE CONSTITUTION, DEMOCRACY, AND LABOR

There is no simple cure for the recurrent wave of strikes which have recently been afflicting our Nation. This cure can only be found by resting it upon the spirit as well as the letter of our democratic ideals and Constitution.

The founders of our Nation set up in the Constitution a trio of checks and balances by which they hoped to control the political power of government. There was nothing our founders feared more than unlimited or totalitarian power.

Congress was to be a check upon the power of the President, the President upon that of Congress, and the Supreme Court upon that of both. Throughout our 165 years of history, these checks on the three independent branches of the Government have worked, in the main, effectively. These curbs, plus the Bill of Rights added to the Constitution, were thought to be all that was necessary to restrain the Government from imperiling the public welfare.

Our recent experiences have proved the contrary. The development of powerful political parties with their political machines and of pressure groups with huge political funds has made it possible to control the electorate, so that minorities have come to exercise an unlimited balance of power. They have shown themselves able to overrule both the President and Congress and, through the President's power of appointment, to control the Supreme Court. How, then, are we going to devise a political curb which will effectively restrain these minorities from becoming the oppressors of all of the people? Our respect for justice has been so lowered as to give to certain pressure groups the power to impose monopolies and agreements in restraint of trade upon the whole people to the complete disruption of our way of life.

The recent crippling strikes, as is recognized by all, were not really strikes against management, capital, or government. They were assaults against the public which so imperiled the health, safety, and welfare of the people as to create one of the gravest political crises we have been confronted with. It is plain that this condition has resulted in a denial of the very foundation of our Constitution—equal justice for all. This inequality must be removed if we are to avoid national disaster and chaos.

Superficial cures hastily applied to the symptoms of a disease are generally found to be as disastrous in their results as the evils they seek to cure. We must get down to the underlying causes. What are they?

Democracy is based upon a conviction of the worth of every human being and of his right to determine his own future and to choose his own course of action, provided only, and this is most important, that he shall not injure his fellow citizens. Democracy must guarantee the right of every individual to choose his own job; to lead his own life; to elect his own magistrates and governors; to have a part in the passage of the laws which they administer; and to secure such equal justice as the courts will enforce for the protection of all. Herein is the very A B C of democracy. It is the basis of our political faith. We must continue to fight for it. But we must never forget that the blessings of freedom which democracy has given to individuals must be so limited as to do no injury to the community at large. This is not only of the essence of democracy, but of the essence of religion and morality. Democracy, like an individual, must recognize the moral law as its guide. While affording the highest degree of personal liberty, it must provide the highest degree of protection to all in the enjoyment of that liberty.

We all agree that a constitutional democracy must survive in America. How, then, can unionism conform with the principles of our democratic Constitution? It is frequently proclaimed by labor leaders that any limitation upon the right to strike is a violation of the Constitution and will result in a condition of labor peonage and slavery. We assume that the claim of unconstitutionality refers to that article of the Constitution covering involuntary servitude.[1]

None of the amendments proposed to the Wagner Act nor the recent Case bill denies the right of anyone as an individual to work or not to work as he pleases. Why not turn the argument around and assert that the right to strike constitutes a flat denial of liberty, in that it undertakes to prevent great numbers of individuals from working? Recent strikes are obviously an attempt on the part of unions to prevent hundreds of thousands from working. If that is not a violation of the Constitution, a limitation on the right to strike is not a violation.

There is no inalienable right to strike or to do anything else. The Government has recognized that under certain conditions strikes are legal. Equally the Government has the right to limit this right to strike or to lock-out, when the conditions are such as to do an injury to the public interest and the life and welfare of us all. There can be no valid claim that a limitation in the general interest on the right to strike is a violation of the Constitution. On the other hand, it can be forcibly argued that the establishment of the closed shop, which denies the right to work to any but members in good standing of a union, is a plain violation of the Constitution, in that it deprives a man of his property in the wages earned by his labor.[2]

[1] Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as punishment for crime whereof the parties shall have been duly convicted, shall exist in the United States or any place subject to their jurisdiction (amendment 13).

[2] Constitutional amendment No. 5: "No person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law."

The Wagner Act, the Anti-Picketing and Anti-Injunction Acts, must be so amended as to protect the property rights of the Government, of the employers, of labor, and of nonunion members, from being invaded and put to loss contrary to the spirit and letter of our Constitution. This applies even more vitally to the protection of persons than to that of property.

Our recent experience has proved that strikes on the part of monopolistic labor unions result in more economic injustice to labor as a whole than to any other class of our people.

THE CONNECTICUT ECONOMIC COUNCIL.

UNIFICATION OF THE ARMED SERVICES—EDITORIAL FROM THE WASHINGTON POST

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the RECORD, as part of my remarks, an editorial appearing in this morning's Washington Post concerning the unification of the armed services.

It is generally known by all Senators that the Military Affairs Committee and a special committee of that committee, consisting of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL], the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN], and myself, have for months been working on a unification bill, that such a bill has been reported and is on the Senate Calendar, and that suggested amendments growing out of the President's recommendations are also available to us whenever the Senate gives its permission for us to consider the bill. I say that because, in fairness to everyone, it should be stated that our committees are not behind schedule and are ready to act.

That unification will ultimately come in our country is a certainty, in my opinion. Yesterday the House of Representatives accepted the unification of Committees on Armed Services. The Pearl Harbor Investigation Committee, as the editorial states, has made it plain that unity in the administration is essential. The recommendation of the Special Committee on the Effects of Bombing of Enemy Lands draws the same conclusion. If, for example, the Air Forces had no place in the atomic-bomb experiment but had to be included because of rivalry between commands, we have another startling incident that division of command is costly.

Mr. President, this is no time to argue the point and to get into controversy over it, but out of fairness to those who have worked hard but who, on account of pressure of other important business, find it impossible to get the right-of-way to proceed, this much at least should be said.

I repeat, Mr. President, my unanimous-consent request that the editorial be made part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MERGER NOW

Any regard for the Nation's security would keep Members of Congress in town till action had been taken on the Army and Navy merger bill. The latest spur is furnished by the majority report of the joint committee set up to investigate the Pearl Harbor disaster. Unfortunately, however, the majority, in a verbose 250,000-word report, did not spell out the sum total of their recommendations. All the 25 "supervisory, administrative, and organizational deficiencies" which are held to require correction add up to one basic need, viz, unification. They have to do with human frailties, but all of them could be traced to traditional loyalties to department or branch springing from the separation and competition of the armed services. Why the majority did not advocate the over-all reform specifically instead of allowing it to arise out of the report is beyond our comprehension. The neglect leaves the recommendations up in the air, as, for instance, when the committee proposes "immediate action be taken to insure that unity of command is imposed at all military and naval outposts."

How is it possible to have unity of command in the field and divided command at home? This is a question which is much more intriguing than the question which, the majority members say, intrigued them, Why was it possible for a Pearl Harbor to occur? No matter what machinery is set up outside Washington, division at the top is bound to reappear all the way down the line, if only out of personal or service loyalty. There would be the same lack of intercommunication which frustrated service relations before Pearl Harbor and brought about disaster. It is to end this sort of thing that the single department bill has been proposed. The reform is held up mainly by a moss-backed clinging to tradition on the part of Congress, aided and abetted by the disinclination to change which is part of the human equation.

These obstacles have proved insurmountable for the last 30 years. Twenty years before Pearl Harbor, Billy Mitchell, encountering precisely the same situation of noncoordination at Pearl Harbor that the Japanese encountered, told a congressional committee, "I have never seen anything like it." A unified command in Hawaii, in Mitchell's opinion, was the first step to general unification. Congress was so impressed by Mitchell's warnings that it almost enacted reform. President Harding, thinking the step was coming, had the appointees ready for a single department of defense. Indeed, it is said that John W. Weeks and Edwin Denby had accepted appointments as Under Secretaries in the combined department. But the change never came off. The reason was that the brass hats, appalled over the prospective overturn of their vested interests, threatened to resign, and Congress lacked the courage to apply the counsel of common sense that Billy Mitchell provided.

The disaster that Billy Mitchell envisaged as the result of lack of coordination duly occurred. And the Pearl Harbor Committee, both in the majority and minority reports, duly apportions the blame among the men upon whom the Nation relies for its security. The report, however, says not a word about the failure of Congress, in the face of such warnings as Mitchell gave, to change the divisive organization in which our commanders operate. But the legislative arm cannot escape some responsibility. And now, with the lessons of Pearl Harbor so clear that the most distinguished voices in the armed services have joined that of the departed Mitchell, action is required primarily from Congress to put those lessons into effect. Our security cannot afford any more procrastination. The state of armed peace which is now our condition requires a streamlining of our national defense system which the merger bill affords. It must be top-to-bottom reorganization. "Since the basic principle of success in war is unity of command under leaders trained in, and selected for their knowledge and skill in, the use of all arms," says an officer who is both a sailor and a statesman, Admiral H. E. Yarnell, "it seems logical to assume that there should be the same unity in the military departments and general staffs of the Government." The onus is upon Congress to put our security ahead of the kind of traditions which are simply the safeguards of vested interests.

OPERATING SUBSIDIES AND CONSTRUCTION LOANS AWARDED BY UNITED STATES SHIPPING BOARD

[Mr. McKELLAR asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a statement entitled "An Index to Certain Matters Bearing on Operating Subsidies and Construction Loans, Awarded by the United States Shipping Board Under the Merchant Marine Act of 1928," which appears in the Appendix.]

TRANSFER OF JEWISH REFUGEES—ADDRESS BY EARL G. HARRISON

[Mr. VANDENBERG asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address entitled "Unfinished Business," by Earl G. Harrison, dean of the law school of the University of Pennsylvania and United States representative on the Intergovernmental Committee on Refugees, at Detroit, Mich., on July 10, 1946, which appears in the Appendix.]

NEED FOR CONSTRUCTIVE STATESMANSHIP IN WASHINGTON—ADDRESS BY LOUIS JOHNSON

[Mr. TUNNELL asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD excerpts from an address delivered by Hon. Louis Johnson before the Thomas Jefferson Club of Wood County, at Parkersburg, W. Va., on April 13, 1946, which appears in the Appendix.]

EQUAL RIGHTS—EDITORIAL FROM WASHINGTON POST

[Mr. MURRAY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial entitled "Equal Rights," published in the Washington Post of July 21, 1946, which appears in the Appendix.]

TERMINAL PAY FOR ENLISTED MEN—EDITORIAL FROM THE BOSTON POST

[Mr. WALSH asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial entitled "Treat All Alike," published in the Boston Post of date July 25, 1946, which appears in the Appendix.]

ADDRESS BY SENATOR MURDOCK BEFORE LIBERAL PARTY OF NEW YORK CITY

[Mr. MURDOCK asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address delivered by him before the Liberal Party of New York City, June 5, 1946, which appears in the Appendix.]

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA HOSPITAL CENTER

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to Senate bill 223.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 223) to provide for the establishment of a modern, adequate, and efficient hospital center in the District of Columbia, which was to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That in order to provide more adequate hospital facilities in the District of Columbia the Federal Works Administrator is authorized to acquire land and construct buildings and to these ends is empowered:

(a) to acquire prior to the approval of title by the Attorney General (without regard to secs. 1136, as amended, and 3709 of the Revised Statutes) improved or unimproved lands or interests in lands in the District of Columbia by purchase, donation, exchange, or condemnation (including proceedings under the acts of August 1, 1888 (25 Stat. 357), March 1, 1929 (45 Stat. 1415), and February 26, 1931 (46 Stat. 1421)), for such hospital facilities;

(b) by contract or otherwise (without regard to secs. 1136, as amended, and 3709 of the Revised Statutes, and sec. 322 of the act of June 30, 1932 (47 Stat. 412)), prior to approval of title by the Attorney General, to make surveys and investigations, to plan, design, and construct hospital facilities in the District of Columbia on lands or interests in lands acquired under the provisions of subsection (a) hereof or on other lands of the United States which may be available (the transfers of which for this purpose by the Federal agency having jurisdiction thereof are hereby authorized notwithstanding any other provision of law), provide proper approaches thereto, utilities, and procure necessary materials, supplies, articles, equipment, and machinery, and do all things in connection therewith to carry out the provisions of this act; and

SEC. 2. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, whether relating to the acquisition, handling, or disposal of real or other property by the United States or to other matters, the Federal Works Administrator, with respect to any hospital facilities acquired or constructed under the provisions of this act, is authorized to enter into leases with private agencies for the operation and maintenance of such hospital facilities or usable separable portions thereof upon such terms, including the period of any such leases, annual rentals, provision for joint use of facilities, provisions for operation, maintenance, repair, and replacement of buildings, equipment, machinery, and furnishings and appropriate security to assure the performance of any such leases, and to sell for cash or credit or to convey in exchange for other properties any such hospital facilities or usable separable portion thereof to private agencies on such terms as may be deemed by the Administrator to be in the public interest: Provided, That all hospitals participating in such center shall be required either to convey to the Government, free and clear of all incumbrance, the land and buildings now held by them or to sell the same at such prices as is agreed to and approved by the Federal Works Administrator and to pay the proceeds thereof to the Government at the option of the Federal Works Agency.

SEC. 3. In carrying out the purposes of this act, the Federal Works Administrator shall provide a hospital center of such size and design as he shall deem feasible and economical of operation.

SEC. 4. In carrying out the provisions of this act the Federal Works Administrator is authorized to utilize the services of or to act through the United States Public Health Service in the Federal Security Agency, the Federal Works Agency, and any other department or agency of the United States, and any funds appropriated pursuant to this act shall be available for transfer to such department or agency in reimbursement thereof.

SEC. 5. Thirty percent of the net amount expended by the Federal Works Administrator under this act shall be charged against the District of Columbia and shall be repaid to the Government by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia at such times and in such amounts, without interest, as the Congress shall hereafter determine. The District of Columbia shall be entitled to 30 percent of the sale price of any of the properties sold by the Federal Works Administrator under section 2 of this act, other than properties the value of which is deducted from the gross amount expended to determine the net amount upon which the 30 percent to be charged against the District of Columbia is computed, and the District of Columbia shall also be entitled to receive 30 percent of any rentals received from the leasing of any of the hospital facilities acquired or constructed by the Federal Works Administrator under this act. The amounts which may be due the District hereunder shall be credited on the amount owed the Government by the District of Columbia until such obligation of the District is discharged in full.

SEC. 6. For carrying out the purposes of this act, including administrative expenses, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated during the period ending June 30, 1952, the sum of $35,000,000 to be appropriated at such times and in such amounts as the Congress shall determine.

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, I may say that, in order to obtain unanimous consent on this matter, I referred it to the District of Columbia Committee that handled it originally, and, after a full hearing, it was the opinion of the committee, possibly with the exception of one Senator, who I do not think now objects, that I should move that the Senate concur in the House amendment. I now make that motion.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, I desire to understand the situation a little more clearly. This is the hospital bill for the District of Columbia, so-called, is it not?

Mr. BILBO. It is.

Mr. WHITE. And it comes back to the Senate with a House amendment?

Mr. BILBO. Yes.

Mr. WHITE. The Senator is not proposing to ask for a conference?

Mr. BILBO. No.

Mr. WHITE. But is asking that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

Mr. BILBO. Yes.

Mr. WHITE. I think there is some opposition, though I am not sure.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, let me say that I have just been in conference with the distinguished Senator from Mississippi and other members of the committee. We have discussed this matter, and have heard from various authorities in the District of Columbia. So far as I am concerned, the questions I raised as to the difference between the bills have been answered satisfactorily, and I join with the distinguished Senator from Mississippi, the chairman of the committee, in asking that the House amendment be concurred in.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, I took occasion to consult with the minority members of the District of Columbia Committee about this matter, and I found only two—I think, perhaps, I should say only one, who had any real question about it, and that one was the Senator from New Jersey. If the Senator is now satisfied, personally I have no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Mississippi that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

A PROGRAM FOR AMERICAN ATOMIC DEFENSE

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, we are so deeply mired in a vast number of important domestic issues that I think we may be losing sight of what I feel can be the most significant American front of all—American defense in this atomic age.

In recent months, since our resounding victory over the Axis, our vigilance has dropped, and I feel that we may be unwittingly inviting another Pearl Harbor. Everywhere there is to be seen a certain smugness over our simple, temporary possession of the secrets of the atomic bomb. It rivals the smugness that we felt before December 7, 1941, when we were actually asleep at the switch, as I believe we are now, without knowing it.

ATOMIC DEVELOPMENTS

On Wednesday the fifth atomic bomb in history was exploded in Bikini Lagoon. The same day Mr. Andre Gromyko, Soviet representative on the Control Committee of the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission, flatly rejected the Baruch plan for international control of atomic energy. Today, Mr. Gromyko is proposing the Russian plan for control of atomic energy before the committee.

Mr. President, the Senate, in spite of its constitutional right to confirm or reject by two-thirds vote all treaties entered into by the President, has actually been treated as a fifth wheel in the machinery for atomic arrangements. The Senate was never consulted on the Baruch plan. If Russia had accepted that plan and the United Nations had subsequently confirmed it, the people of the United States would find that an entering wedge for the revealing of our vital secrets had been driven into American national defense. This would have been done without their Senators having had a chance to decide upon this most vital issue.

No doubt the administration leaders in the executive branch prefer to play a lone hand in atomic arrangements, but the American people do not trust any single United States representative, no matter who he is, or any single member of the executive branch, to have complete charge of their destiny on atomic control.

I therefore renew at this time, with all the vigor at my command, my plea for the enactment of Senate Resolution 297, which I submitted on July 2, 1946, and which was referred to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. This resolution would state the sense of the Senate that any arrangement entered into by a United States representative regarding international control of atomic energy should be considered a treaty, which could go into effect only after ratification by the United States Senate.

It is well to note, Mr. President, that yesterday, the State Department, through the President, withdrew from the "five freedoms of the air" agreement written at Chicago. It acknowledged, in effect, that this agreement, negotiated only by executive agreement, instead of as a treaty, needed Senate ratification for validity. Is a world air agreement a treaty while a world atomic agreement is not? Of course not. Both are treaties and should have Senate consent or rejection by a two-thirds vote.

The American people do not want any single American to bind us to an atomic agreement, particularly while the Senate is in recess. The American people demand that the Senate shall have a voice in the writing and approval of an atomic treaty.

THE RED JIGSAW PUZZLE

Mr. President, we are playing for incalculable stakes in this matter—particularly with the Soviet Union.

I wish to group together some further pieces in the "Russian jigsaw puzzle" which point, I believe, to the tremendous need for our vigilance in this atomic age. In doing so, I am not indulging in scare mongering, Red baiting, or witch hunting.

The welfare of our country is very dear to me. I point out that in our relations with the Russians—they with their centuries of espionage, of power politics or poker politics, we with our naïveté, our gullibility, our openness—we have been acting like unsuspecting children.

It is merely stating facts when I say that two worlds are today in ideological conflict—the Russian world of dictatorship and the American world of freedom. Russia with her new strength, her new vitality, her tightly integrated races as a result of her victory in the war, has shown her fanatical devotion to the idea of world communism. She has an international intelligence service which makes our own inadequately equipped, underpaid, undermanned Service look like a toy bunch of junior G-men. Our great public servants such as J. Edgar Hoover have been denied the opportunity to develop an intelligence service which would make ours the match of any in the world.

Let me point out a few pieces of the Russian jigsaw puzzle. They all add up to sinister implications:

First. The sole Communist member of the Canadian Parliament has been convicted of stealing atomic secrets for transmittal to Russia.

Second. On February 20, 1945, the Moscow radio in a broadcast frankly admitted that members of the Russian military staff had obtained secret information in Canada, including data on atomic energy and radar. But the broadcast said that the information was "of no value." The broadcast further criticized the Canadians, of all things, for indulging in an anti-Russian campaign.

Third. On March 18, 1946, Mr. Frank Waldrop, the eminent writer, wrote in the Washington Times-Herald that:

> More than 50 Russian scientists are loose right now in a certain laboratory not far from Washington, D. C., to learn the very innermost secrets of our most crucial military weapons.

Mr. Waldrop is not given to exaggeration. No development since has refuted his report, and indeed it has been confirmed by subsequent facts. Needless to say, the Russians have never granted to us a similar opportunity to obtain any Russian military data.

Fourth. On July 19, 1946, the War Department disclosed that it had fired five civilian employees at the Aberdeen, Md., Ordnance Proving Grounds, main site for testing top-secret electronic weapons, guided missiles, and anti-atom-bomb devices. These five employees, four men and one woman, were all chemists, physicists or statisticians, and comprised officers and members of the United Public Workers Association. This is the Communist-dominated organization which had previously asserted its right to strike against the Government.

Fifth. We know that there are a minimum of 50,000 formal Communists in America. There are, in addition, hundreds of thousands of others—Reds, pinks, and other sympathizers. We know, too, that the Communists' first and last devotion is to Mother Russia rather than to our own land, just as the Canadian Communists' first devotion is apparently to Russia rather than to Canada. We may little doubt that this Communist fifth column would, given the opportunity, be ready, willing, and eager to betray vital defense secrets of America if these were to go for the offense or defense of Russia.

Mr. President, I repeat, this is not witch hunting. These are not scare tactics. These are the plain, unvarnished facts. So what? What are we going to do about them?

PROGRAM FOR AMERICAN DEFENSE

I submit the following points in an American program of atomic defense:

First. Enact Senate Resolution 297 before the Senate recesses so that our defense secrets are not betrayed by any foolhardy plan for international control of atomic energy at the present time.

Second. Insure adequate atomic safeguards in the atomic-energy bill.

Third. Build an international intelligence service which is the equal and superior to that of any in the world.

Fourth. Speak, write, and think eternal vigilance, which is the price of liberty.

Fifth. Test and insure the absolute loyalty to our American way of life of United States Government employees. The laxity in civil-service loyalty examining is shocking.

Sixth. Impress upon the War and Navy Departments the absolute necessity for forward-thinking planning instead of backward-thinking planning for the most up-to-date scientific and technological weapons of offense and defense. We need men of Billy Mitchell's caliber in our Army and our Navy.

GOVERNMENT DECENTRALIZATION

In this connection, Mr. President, recently I inquired of Secretary of War Patterson whether the War Department had considered the decentralization of the War and Navy Departments from their congested sites in Washington, D. C.

Just contemplate for one moment what would happen if one of the atomic bombs should be exploded inside the Pentagon Building, in Arlington. With one stroke the very brain of American military defense would be shattered.

I am not revealing any secrets when I report that Secretary of War Patterson responded as follows:

> WAR DEPARTMENT,
> Washington, D. C., July 22, 1946.
> Hon. ALEXANDER WILEY,
> United States Senate.
>
> DEAR SENATOR WILEY: With further reference to your recent letter concerning War Department plans for defense of the Nation against possible atomic-bomb attack, our representatives are collaborating with representatives of the Navy Department on the matter and have drawn up in a tentative form a broad defense plan for the United States in which defense areas are blocked out. These plans, when completed, will be presented to the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and upon approval, detailed plans for each area will be formulated. It is anticipated that the plans for the Washington area will include the detailed decentralization considered necessary for the War and Navy Departments as well as for other governmental agencies.

The plans have not yet progressed to the point where definite recommendations have been made to the Bureau of the Budget.

Your considerate interest in this matter is appreciated, and I assure you that careful attention is being given to decentralization of governmental agencies in connection with these defense plans.

Sincerely yours,

ROBERT P. PATTERSON,
Secretary of War.

Mr. President, it seems to me that decentralization of our Government forces from Washington, D. C., is absolutely essential both from a military and a governmental standpoint. However, this, I repeat, is but one element of an all-out program of atomic defense which we must follow.

AMENDMENT TO RAILROAD RETIREMENT ACTS, ETC.

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill (H. R. 1362) to amend the Railroad Retirement Acts, the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, and subchapter B of chapter 9 of the Internal Revenue Code; and for other purposes.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, last evening in the course of the discussion relative to the proposed concurrent resolution to be presented subsequent to the approval by this body of House bill 1362, the Senator from Utah [Mr. MURDOCK] had the following to say, among other things, as is reported at page 10013 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD:

I wanted to call the Senator's attention to the fact that when we had under consideration the Export-Import Bank bill, the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] called the attention of the Senate to the fact that the Philippine Islands should be included in the bill. They were not included. A concurrent resolution was submitted and adopted by the Senate and sent to the House. I do not remember whether it was agreed to by the House. But I call the attention of the Senator from Missouri, if the Senator from Kentucky will indulge me, to the fact that as he will remember, I objected very strenuously, and argued, or expostulated, whichever is the right term, to the effect that the Congress could not by concurrent resolution amend a law nor could it, as was attempted by Concurrent Resolution 50, amend or modify a decision of the court.

Then there is a further observation by the Senator from Utah.

Then we find that the following remark was made by the distinguished majority leader the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY], as shown on page 10013:

Mr. BARKLEY. I appreciate the reference of the Senator from Utah to the situation which existed when the Senator from Maryland submitted the concurrent resolution instructing the enrolling clerk to include in the bill the Philippine Islands, which had not been included in either House. I do not recall whether it was done, but I think it was. And when the bill went to the President it carried in it the Philippine Islands just as though it had been in the bill when it was introduced.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I wonder whether the Senator sees any difference in what is now being attempted to do by employment of a concurrent resolution, and what was done in the case the Senator from Utah speaks of?

Mr. BARKLEY. There is no difference in principle, of course.

Mr. President, I submit it is obvious that last evening the Senators who made statements in favor of the concurrent resolution idea, as illustrated by the action taken by this body in connection with the Export-Import Bank bill, were treating that action as a precedent; and the Senator from Kentucky appreciated, and expressed his appreciation of, the reference of the Senator from Utah to the situation which existed when the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] submitted the concurrent resolution instructing the enrolling clerk to include in the bill a provision including the Philippine Islands. Further, the majority leader, in response to the question of the Senator from Illinois as to whether there was a difference or whether the Senator saw any difference, I should say, between what is now being attempted to be done by the employment of a concurrent resolution in the case of the Railroad Retirement Act and what was done in the case mentioned by the Senator from Utah, the majority leader instantly responded, "There is no difference in principle, of course."

Mr. President, I think it of importance, in view of the reliance thus placed last evening both by the Senator from Utah and by the majority leader, who read the proposed concurrent resolution and argued as to its advisability and propriety, that we recur for a moment to just what did transpire with reference to the concurrent resolution to which the Senator from Maryland gave his adherence back in July 1945.

For that purpose, I call attention first to certain portion of the RECORD of July 20, 1945, beginning at page 7835, where it will be observed that the senior Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] called attention to the fact that—

The question occurred to me that the pending bill as drafted does not permit loans to the Philippine Islands, and I think the sponsors of the bill might wish to consider an amendment to make such loans available, although there will be other legislation, I understand, to assist the Philippine Islands.

A little later in the colloquy the Senator from Maryland had this to say:

Mr. TYDINGS. I think the Senator's position is an accurate one with reference to the Philippines. It certainly is doubtful whether they would be within the purview of the act. I have submitted to the Senator in charge of the bill an amendment which I have asked him to favor, which would remove any doubt about the ability of the Filipinos to take advantage of the operations of the Export-Import Bank. I agree with the Senator that at the present time it is not clear whether or not they could come in under it. They certainly ought to have as much right as any other nation to come in under it.

After that the distinguished Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] said:

They have a primary right. If we have any obligation abroad, it starts in the Philippines.

Mr. President, I shall not read the remaining portion of the colloquy which was participated in by several Senators, including the distinguished Senator from Utah who spoke last evening.

I now call attention to page 7847 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for the same date, July 20, 1945. Here is what the Senator from Maryland had to say:

A while ago the Senate passed the Export-Import Bank bill.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. Does that indicate that the concurrent-resolution idea of the Senator from Maryland for making a correction came after the bill was passed, or before?

Mr. DONNELL. I may say to the Senator that I am not able at the moment to answer the question. I shall have to search the RECORD further, and I shall do that.

Mr. FERGUSON. Does the Senator believe that it make any difference whether the discovery was made before or after.

Mr. DONNELL. What discovery?

Mr. FERGUSON. The discovery concerning the necessity of correcting the bill. In other words, if a discovery is made of something which should be corrected before the bill is passed, it must be done in the regular way, by amendment; but if a discovery is made of a clerical mistake or something of that nature after the bill has been passed, the correction might be made by a concurrent resolution. I have in mind an instance of an enrolled bill being amended by a concurrent resolution. On August 5, 1909, a message was received by the House from the Senate transmitting Senate Concurrent Resolution 8, authorizing the Committee on Enrolled Bills of the two Houses to amend the House bill 1348, the tariff bill, which had passed both Houses and been enrolled. That was an example of a bill having been passed by both Houses and enrolled. Immediately upon the receipt of the concurrent resolution in the House, on motion of Mr. Sereno E. Payne, of New York, by unanimous consent the concurrent resolution was taken from the Speaker's table and agreed to. In the course of the debate on the concurrent resolution Mr. John J. Fitzgerald, of New York, said:

Mr. Speaker, an examination of the precedents disclose that there has not been a similar incident in the history of the country in which bills were amended in the identical way proposed here. Clerical errors and corrections have been made after bills have reached the enrolling clerks, but no substantial change or radical correction has been authorized except where the discovery was after the bill had passed both Houses, and then only to make the bill conform to the proposals of the conference committees. If it were not for the very comprehensive language of Judge Harlan in Field v. Clark (143 U. S.), I doubt very seriously whether it could be held that the boot-and-shoe amendment as proposed in the concurrent resolution had passed both Houses of Congress.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, will the Senator be kind enough to indicate the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD references?

Mr. FERGUSON. Yes. I am reading from page 5088 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of the Sixty-first Congress, first session. The language there would indicate that it is possible to make an amendment. I have sent for One Hundred and Forty-third United States, and I wish to examine the opinion which is referred to in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Mr. DONNELL. I may say that I have that volume in my office, and I have sent for it. As soon as it arrives, both the Senator and I may use it.

Mr. FERGUSON. The question which I wish to ask the Senator is this: Does it make any difference whether we know of these mistakes and these proposed amendments before we pass the bill, or, knowing of the mistakes and failing to correct them by amendments, can we then wait until the bill gets into the hands of the enrolling clerk, that is, in the Committee on Enrolled Bills of the two Houses, and then amend by a concurrent resolution?

Mr. DONNELL. I think there is a great difference between the two situations. I invite the attention of the Senator to that very significant language of Mr. Fitzgerald, from which the Senator quoted a few minutes ago during the course of the debate, as appearing on page 5089 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, as follows:

> Clerical errors and corrections have been made after bills have reached the enrolling clerks, but no substantial change or radical correction has been authorized except where the discovery was after the bill had passed both Houses, and then only to make the bill conform to the proposals of the conference committees.

I may say to the Senator that, in my opinion, if we pass House bill 1362, and deliberately undertake to say that after passing it we shall then take the position that there were certain errors in the bill, and attempt to cure those errors by amendments through the medium of a concurrent resolution, it would represent a very decided difference from a situation in which, after the passage of the bill we, for the first time, discover some clerical errors involving punctuation or figures, or the like. To my mind, for us to pass House bill 1362 and deliberately put into it certain provisions which we know we will attempt 15 minutes later to correct by a concurrent resolution, and undertake to amend, change, and define on the theory that there is something which needs clarification in the bill which has been passed, is to present a situation which differs entirely from that in which, having discovered after the bill had been passed that there had been an inadvertent clerical error of omission or commission, we undertake to make a correction by adopting a concurrent resolution.

I may say to the Senator that I have now the case of Field v. Clark, (143 U. S. 649). It is a very celebrated case.

Mr. FERGUSON. I thank the Senator.

It is not clear that we cannot accomplish our purpose by this method, that is, by a concurrent resolution. Until a bill is signed by the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate and sent to the President it is in the hands of the Congress. Both Houses may, by a majority vote of the respective bodies, change their rules and may pass laws by a majority vote. This being true, they may change a law by amendments made in the regular way, and also by concurrent resolution change a law before it is signed by the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House to be sent to the President.

Let us analyze the situation from this point of view: The Senate passes a certain bill. Until it is enrolled and reaches the President it would appear to me that, by a majority vote, we could add an amendment. Does it make any differene whether we do that while the bill is before the Senate, whether we do it before it leaves the Senate, or while it is in the hands of the Committee on Enrolled Bills for the purpose of enrolling it and sending it to the President? If both Houses see fit to pass by a majority vote half of a bill and place it in the hands of the enrolling clerk, and see fit to pass the other half of the bill and send it there, will not the Supreme Court say that those two matters were passed by a majority vote in each House, and that when it reached the President it was signed, and therefore the requirements for the making of law in this Republic were complied with?

Mr. DONNELL. I may say to the Senator, first, that it would appear to me that what he is talking about is obviously an amendment to the existing bill.

Mr. FERGUSON. I believe that we would have to consider it as such.

Mr. DONNELL. Yes. In the Senator's reference to the passage of such an amendment by a majority vote, I may say that under rule 15 of the Senate, when a bill or a joint resolution shall have been ordered to be read the third time, it is not in order to propose amendments unless by unanimous consent. So, Mr. President, I take it that if this concurrent resolution is to be considered as an amendment, it cannot even be proposed in the Senate unless by unanimous consent.

I may say further to the Senator that, in my judgment, in passing H. R. 1362 we would be passing a measure which would require the signature of the President, in order to make it law, unless it laid on his desk the requisite length of time and became law without his signature. The concurrent resolution, by which it is proposed to amend the bill, will not be submitted to the President for his signature. In other words, we shall have passed a bill requiring the approval of both Houses of Congress and of the President, and at the same time shall have undertaken to amend it by adopting a concurrent resolution which will never be signed by the President at all.

It is true that he would sign the bill (H. R. 1362) which would incorporate the contents directed by a concurrent resolution to be placed therein by the enrolling clerk, but the document itself, the concurrent resolution, cannot create law. I think that is too well settled to require other precedent than the one which I read from last night in One Hundred and Fifty Federal, second series, at page 857, F. H. E. Oil Co. against Commissioner of Internal Revenue, where, referring to Resolution No. 50, with which the Senator from Michigan is familiar, because, as I recall, like the Senator from Utah and the present speaker, he protested against Resolution No. 50, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit said:

> The resolution is not an act of Congress approved by the President or passed over his veto. It does not make law or change the law made by a previous Congress and President. It does not alter the statutes as they existed when the taxes in controversy accrued.

I submit that here is an attempt, if this concurrent resolution plan is adopted, to take an instrument—that is, a bill requiring the approval of both Houses of Congress and the President—and amend it by an instrument which itself will not receive the signature of the President and never will be submitted to him. Under the decision of the court and on well-established principles of law, it seems to me, it does not make law or constitute law.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield to the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. FERGUSON. I have just had a moment to look at the opinion in the case of Field against Clark, which is found in One Hundred and Forty-third United States, page 649. The syllabus which seems to be borne out by the opinion, says:

> The signing by the Speaker of the House of Representatives and by the President of the Senate, in open session, of an enrolled bill is an official attestation by the two Houses of such bill as one that has passed Congress; and when the bill thus attested receives the approval of the President and is deposited in the Department of State according to law, its authentication as a bill that has passed Congress is complete and unimpeachable.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator, if he has had time in his examination of the case of Field against Clark to observe whether or not it involved a situation such as we have here, where a bill, duly passed by both Houses of Congress, was amended by a concurrent resolution adopted by one House?

Mr. FERGUSON. I think it did, but I should like to read a little further from the syllabus.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield to the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. CORDON. Is it not a fact that in that case what was attempted to be done was by concurrent resolution to change the legal effect of a measure which not only had been passed by both Houses but which had been signed by the President?

Mr. DONNELL. I may say to the Senator that I have not read the case of Field against Clark, but I am familiar with it as a very well known authority, and it is cited in Cannon's Precedents, volume 7, page 151, in an excerpt from the remarks of Mr. Fitzgerald in the House of Representatives on August 5, 1909. It will be recalled that the Senator from Michigan read from the remarks of Mr. Fitzgerald the words which I now quote:

> If it were not for the very comprehensive language of Judge Harlan in Field v. Clark, (143 U. S.) I doubt very seriously whether it could be held that the boot and shoe amendment as proposed in this concurrent resolution had passed both Houses of Congress.

I may say that I should like a little further time during the course of the day to examine the case of Field against Clark, which I have not thus far examined, having noted its reference to this particular matter only last evening.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Missouri yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield to the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. CORDON. I should like to ask the distinguished Senator from Missouri to give me an opinion as to whether or not if the pending measure were passed and thereafter a concurrent resolution were adopted by the Senate by unanimous consent, as is required for amendment of a law, and if a similar proceeding or whatever proceeding meets with the rules of the House were had, that would represent an appropriate legal procedure for amendment of the pending legislation?

Mr. DONNELL. I do not think that it would represent an appropriate method of amendment. I have not had sufficient time to study the case of Field against Clark to answer the question, but it may be that if the two Houses were to agree upon a concurrent resolution and the concurrent resolution were to be inserted it might be that no collateral attack could be made upon the validity of the entire act. I am not prepared, however, at this moment to concede, without further study, whether that is or is not a fact.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, I think that is exactly what this case holds, because it says in the syllabus which is borne out by the opinion:

> It is not competent to show from the journals of either House of Congress, that an act so authenticated, approved and deposited, did not pass in the precise form in which it was signed by the presiding officer of the two Houses and approved by the President.

Then it goes on to another matter and says:

> Congress cannot, under the Constitution, delegate its legislative power to the President.

It seems to hold that once the measure is signed in that form by the Speaker and by the President of the Senate and it goes in that way to the President of the United States, if he puts his signature on it, one cannot go back of that and say it was not amended in a proper way.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, in the first place, as I have said, I wish to ask the indulgence of the Senate until some time later in the discussion to comment further upon the case of Field against Clark. I observe, however, that on pages 668 and 669 appears this language:

> The contention of the appellants is, that this enrolled act, in the custody of the Secretary of State, and appearing upon its face, to have become a law in the mode prescribed by the Constitution, is to be deemed an absolute nullity, in all its parts, because—such is the allegation—it is shown by the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of proceedings, reports of committees of each House, reports of committees of conference, and other papers printed by authority of Congress, and having reference to House bill 9416, that a section of the bill, as it finally passed, was not in the bill authenticated by the signatures of the presiding officers of the respective Houses of Congress, and approved by the President. The section alleged to have been omitted was as follows.

So, Mr. President, from a very hasty glance at the opinion of Mr. Justice Harlan I do not thus far understand it to be a case in which there was inserted something in the bill which was passed after the bill itself was passed, but rather that the contention was made that a section of the bill as it finally passed was not in the bill authenticated by the signatures of the presiding officers. It may make a very vast deal of difference as to the applicability of this particular decision.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield on that point?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. CORDON. Did the Senator read there also, "the bill authenticated by the signatures of the presiding officers of the respective Houses of Congress and approved by the President"?

Mr. DONNELL. I did; that is correct.

Mr. CORDON. In other words, that represents an attempt to amend existing legislation, which has been fully enacted, whereas we have here an attempt to amend legislation which is still in process of making, and before signed, of course.

Mr. DONNELL. I shall undertake to have something further to say upon the case of Field against Clark after further study of it during the day.

Mr. President, this was not what I started out to develop. What I was undertaking to develop was with respect to the matter that was discussed last evening, of the applicability of the action taken in the case of the Export-Import Bank bill as a precedent for the case before us at this time.

I called attention to the fact a few minutes ago—and I shall take the liberty of restating it for a moment, because I assume some Senators are here now who were not present then—that on July 25, 1945, the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] suggested a question that had occurred to him, "that the pending bill as drafted does not permit loans to the Philippine Islands," whereupon the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] said:

> It certainly is doubtful whether they would be within the purview of the act.

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] said:

> They—
>
> Meaning the Philippines—
>
> have a primary right. If we have any obligation abroad, it starts in the Philippines.

Mr. President, I was going to develop further what happened on that day. A question was asked of me a few minutes ago as to whether the Export-Import Bank Act, which was then under discussion, was passed before or after the Senator from Maryland made his suggestion as to the inclusion of the contents of a concurrent resolution. Since the question was asked I have learned, from page 7841 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of July 20, 1945, that between the time the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] raised the question on that same day, and the time of what transpired when the Senator from Maryland participated, which I shall mention in a moment, "The bill (H. R. 3771)"—as appears at page 7841—"was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed."

Mr. President, continuing further with the history of this particular matter, and as to its applicability as a precedent, I called the attention of the Senate a little while ago to the comments made last evening by the distinguished majority leader, in which, after the Senator from Utah [Mr. MURDOCK] called to my attention, or possibly to the attention of the Senator from Kentucky and myself, the facts relating to the Tydings concurrent resolution in connection with the Export-Import Bank bill, the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] immediately said:

> I appreciate the reference of the Senator from Utah to the situation which existed when the Senator from Maryland submitted the concurrent resolution instructing the enrolling clerk to include in the bill the Philippine Islands, which had not been included in either House.

He then said:

> I do not recall whether it was done, but I think it was.

I digress to state that the information I received only a few minutes ago is to the effect that the House did not include the contents of the concurrent resolution submitted by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], and I have before me a copy of Public Law 173, being H. R. 3771, in which it appears, on page 1, that words included in the concurrent resolution of the Senator from Maryland were not in the bill as it was finally approved.

The senior Senator from Kentucky obviously last evening undertook to use—and I know he intended to do it in the greatest sincerity—the concurrent resolution of the senior Senator from Maryland as to the Philippines as a precedent for our proposed action in this case.

The Senator from Illinois [Mr. LUCAS] inquired of the majority leader as to whether he, the Senator from Kentucky, "sees any difference in what is now being attempted to do by employment of a concurrent resolution, and what was done in the case the Senator from Utah speaks of," namely, the Tydings incident relative to the Philippines. Whereupon the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] said:

> There is no difference in principle, of course.

So, Mr. President, I submit that we are now confronted with a situation in which the Tydings matter of July 20, 1945, is being submitted to us as a precedent.

What are the facts, as they further progressed? After there was called to the attention of the Senator from Maryland the fact that the loans would not be permitted to be made to the Philippine Islands, and after he stated, "It certainly is doubtful whether they would be within the purview of the act," this occurred, as appears at page 7847 of the RECORD:

> Mr. TYDINGS. A while ago the Senate passed the Export-Import Bank bill. While the bill was pending before the Senate it was brought out that perhaps the Philippine Islands would not be entitled to participate with other foreign nations in receiving the benefit of the bill. It was suggested that an amendment to the bill including the Philippine Islands be adopted. Because the adoption of such an amendment would have taken the bill to conference and would thus perhaps delay or kill the whole legislation, the Senator from Maryland did not offer the amendment, but on this subject he would like to offer a concurrent resolution and call for its immediate consideration. I believe it would bring on no debate. It would correct the situation referred to, so that when the bill is finally enacted the desired result relative to the Philippine Islands may be obtained.

In response to which the distinguished majority leader made the statement:

Mr. President, it is likely that the Senate will be in sesison practically all afternoon. The measure for which I am about to move consideration by the Senate has been on the calendar for some time, and farmers and farm groups in the United States are interested in having action taken on it. I think we should proceed to its consideration now.

So, Mr. President, it was not until later in the day that the Tydings matter again came up.

This is what transpired, and I think it is of particular interest, in view of the fact that we are now confronted with this Tydings incident as a precedent justifying the action requested at the present time. I read from page 7851 of the RECORD:

Mr. TYDINGS. I ask the Senator's pardon for interrupting his address, but the Export-Import Bank bill passed by the Senate earlier today may be in the process of enrollment, and if the concurrent resolution which I hold in my hand is not quickly acted on it would be of no value, even if Congress were to adopt it. As was brought out by the Senator from Ohio and the Senator from Michigan in discussing the bill earlier today, the Philippine Islands were left out of the scope of the Export-Import Bank. The bill has gone to the House and I am afraid, unless action is taken immediately, it will be enrolled before the correction I propose is made.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Does the Senator wish to proceed with the concurrent resolution he speaks of?

Mr. TYDINGS. I should like to ask unanimous consent to have a correction—

It will be observed that he treats this as a correction—

I should like to ask unanimous consent to have a correction made in the Export-Import Bank bill, simply to have the Philippine Islands included in the scope of the bill which was passed earlier today. I do not think any Senator is opposed to it. If the proposal should result in debate I will withdraw it immediately.

Mr. REVERCOMB. I am glad to yield to the Senator for the purpose he has in mind, with the understanding that the present procedure may be transposed, so as not to appear in the midst of the discussion which has been taking place.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

This is what the majority leader then said:

Mr. President, I wish to make a statement. It is a little unusual to instruct the enrolling clerks of the two Houses by way of correction to put something in a bill which was not in the bill as it passed either House and was not intended to be in the bill.

We frequently instruct the enrolling clerks to put something in a bill that was left out by oversight. That is not the case in this matter. No effort was made to get this provision into the bill in the House or the Senate, and it is not by way of correction, because the bill as it is now, in process of or ready for enrollment, is not incorrect. There is no error committed in the enrollment.

I am not going to object, but—

Mr. President, I call this to the especial attention of the Senate:

But I want it distinctly understood that it is an unusual thing to amend a bill by way of correcting the enrollment when neither House considered the item or acted upon it.

And may I ask Senators to listen intently to the next sentence from the majority leader, the Senator from Kentucky?

With the understanding that it establishes no precedent, Mr. President, in that regard I shall not object.

I pause to say, Mr. President, that the majority leader last evening, and the distinguished Senator from Utah [Mr. MURDOCK] were clearly treating this action taken back in 1945 as a precedent.

Now let us see what was said by other Senators immediately following the majority leader's statement that—

With the understanding that it establishes no precedent, Mr. President, in that regard I shall not object.

The distinguished leader of the minority [Mr. WHITE] stated:

I simply want to echo what the Senator from Kentucky has said. I think it does establish a precedent, and, I think, an unhappy one, but I am not going to object.

And then, Mr. President, may I read what the Senator from Maryland said?

Mr. President, I want to reecho what both Senators have said, and I hope what is proposed to be done will not establish a precedent. I hope the concurrent resolution will be adopted.

And then a few lines below that we find:

There being no objection, the concurrent resolution was considered and agreed to.

I say Mr. President, we have here an illustration of a course of procedure which the majority leader himself indicated is unusual, or, to quote him exactly:

It is a little unusual to instruct the enrolling clerks of the two Houses by way of correction to put something in a bill which was not in the bill as it passed either House and was not intended to be in the bill.

And distinctly stating, Mr. President:

With the understanding that it establishes no precedent, Mr. President, in that regard I shall not object.

Then, the minority leader, stating that he was echoing what the majority leader said, said that it did establish a precedent and, he thought an unhappy one, whereupon the Senator from Maryland reechoed the statement and caused it to be reverberated on down through the corridors of the Senate, when he said:

I want to reecho what both Senators have said, and I hope what is proposed to be done will not establish a precedent.

Mr. President, I submit that this type of procedure recognized both by the majority leader and the minority leader and the proponents of the concurrent resolution on July 20, 1945, is an unwholesome type of procedure, and should not be encouraged, and I think those Senators were very wise in making distinctly the reservation or suggestion that the action should not constitute a precedent; but I believe, Mr. President, that the soundness of judgment of the minority leader in saying that he thought it did establish a precedent is borne out by the fact that here upon the floor last night, notwithstanding this utterance made by the majority leader a year ago, we now find that this particular procedure, this particular incident on July 20, 1945, is taken as a precedent.

Mr. President, that is all I have to say at the moment on this proposition, but I shall address myself doubtless later during the day to further cases, including the case of Field against Clark.

Mr. MORSE obtained the floor.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MORSE. I yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. At this point in the RECORD I think I should read some of the language from the case of Field against Clerk which we discussed earlier, as to whether or not the c urts will go back of the congressional acts and look into the Journal and ascertain whether or not the law has been properly passed. I read from One Hundred and Forty-third United States Reports, page 671, as follows:

In regard to certain matters, the Constitution expressly requires that they shall be entered on the Journal. To what extent the validity of legislative action may be affected by the failure to have those matters entered on the Journal, we need not inquire. No such question is presented for determination. But it is clear that, in respect to the particular mode in which, or with what fullness, shall be kept the proceedings of either House relating to matters not expressly required to be entered on the Journals; whether bills, orders, resolutions, reports, and amendments shall be entered at large on the Journal, or only referred to and designated by their titles or by numbers; these and like matters were left to the discretion of the respective Houses of Congress. Nor does any clause of that instrument, either expressly or by necessary implication, prescribe the mode in which the fact of the original passage of a bill by the House of Representatives and the Senate shall be authenticated, or preclude Congress from adopting any mode to that end which its wisdom suggests. Although the Constitution does not expressly require bills that have passed Congress to be attested by the signatures of the presiding officers of the two Houses, usage, the orderly conduct of legislative proceedings and the rules under which the two bodies have acted since the organization of the Government, require that mode of authentication.

The signing by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and by the President of the Senate, in open session, of an enrolled bill, is an official attestation by the two Houses of such bill as one that has passed Congress. It is a declaration by the two Houses, through their presiding officers, to the President, that a bill thus attested, has received in the due form the sanction of the legislative branch of the Government, and that it is delivered to him in obedience to the constitutional requirement that all bills which pass Congress shall be presented to him. And when a bill, thus attested, receives his approval, and is deposited in the public Archives, its authentication as a bill that has passed Congress should be deemed complete and unimpeachable. As the President has no authority to approve a bill not passed by Congress, an enrolled act in the custody of the Secretary of State, and having the official attestations of the Speaker of the House of Representatives, of the President of the Senate, and of the President of the United States, carries on its face, a solemn assurance by the legislative and executive departments of the Government, charged, respectively, with the duty of enacting and executing the laws, that it was passed by Congress. The respect due to coequal and independent departments requires the judicial department to act upon that assurance, and to accept, as having passed Congress, all bills authenticated in the manner stated, leaving the courts to determine, when the question properly arises, whether the act, so authenticated, is in conformity with the Constitution.

Then the opinion cites what happens in England under the law, and it says, quoting Mr. Justice Sawyer:

If the enrollment of the statute is in existence, the enrollment itself is the record, which is conclusive as to what the statute is, and cannot be impeached, destroyed, or weakened by the journals of Parliament or any other less authentic or less satisfactory memorials; and that there has been no departure from the principles of the common law in this respect in the United States, except in instances where a departure has been grounded on, or taken in pursuance of, some express constitutional or statutory provision requiring some relaxation of the rule, in order that full effect might be given to such provisions; and in such instances the rule has been relaxed by judges with great caution and hesitation, and the departure has never been extended beyond an inspection of the journals of both branches of the legislature.

In other words, Mr. President, unless the legislature or a constitutional provision requires that the court look behind the act itself and the authentication of the act by the respective officers, no court can go behind it, and the law is as it is written.

The court sums up the situation in this language:

We are of the opinion, for the reasons stated, that it is not competent for the appellant to show from the journals of either House, from the reports of the committee, or from other documents printed by authority of Congress, that the enrolled bill designated H. R. 9416 as finally passed contained a section that does not appear in the enrolled act in the custody of the State Department.

This case goes even further than what is now proposed, as I read the language of the decision. State cases are also cited. With few exceptions they all follow the rule of the United States Supreme Court in Field against Clark.

As I see it, the only question presented here is, Do we wish to establish a new method of legislating? I believe it would be well for Congress to hesitate, to think twice as to whether or not we can afford to legislate in this manner, whether or not we can afford to have the enrolling clerk, the President of the Senate, and the Speaker of the House of Representatives certify as to the passage of a law, which is in effect the regular way of doing business, and send it to the President, knowing full well that when we do that, no court is competent to go behind our act. If we establish this precedent, I think we can look forward to similar cases in the future. I think we have the constitutional power to do it. We can pass a part of the bill today and a part tomorrow, and if a majority passes upon those parts and we put them together before they are attested and signed by the President, no court can go behind our action. But I say again that we should think twice—and probably more times than that—before we undertake to pass legislation in that manner. We have the constitutional authority to do it. The question is, Should we do it?

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oregon yield to me so that I may ask the Senator from Michigan a question?

Mr. MORSE. I yield.

Mr. DONNELL. Should we pass House bill 1362, as we now find it, it would become law if signed by the President in that form, would it not?

Mr. FERGUSON. I should say so.

Mr. DONNELL. Therefore, in order that we may enact the further provisions set forth in the concurrent resolution, it would be necessary, in order to be valid, that the concurrent resolution be first approved by both Houses. Is not that correct?

Mr. FERGUSON. That is correct.

Mr. DONNELL. So if we pass House bill 1362 in its present form, those of us in this body who may think that the provisions contained in the concurrent resolution should have been incorporated in House bill 1362 would be running the risk of whether or not the House of Representatives would join and pass the concurrent resolution.

Mr. FERGUSON. I think that is correct. I think the question goes further than that. Senators who vote for the original bill must do so with the understanding which the able Senator from Missouri now states, that if the concurrent resolution is not adopted by both the House and Senate, it will never become a part of this legislation.

Mr. DONNELL. So if we pass House bill 1362 in its present form, it becomes law when signed by the President in that form, unless the House of Representatives shall join with the Senate in the enactment of the concurrent resolution.

Mr. FERGUSON. I should say that that states the situation exactly correctly.

Mr. DONNELL. Therefore Members of the Senate who deem it important that House bill 1362 have within it the contents of the concurrent resolution would not have those contents incorporated in it if the House of Representatives should not join in the concurrent resolution.

Mr. FERGUSON. I think that is an absolutely correct statement of the law.

Mr. DONNELL. And although the Senate of the United States did approve the concurrent resolution which was submitted by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], assuming that my statement of a few minutes ago was correct, that the House of Representatives did not adopt the concurrent resolution, the contents of that resolution did not become a part of the Export-Import Bank act.

Mr. FERGUSON. I think that is correct.

Mr. DONNELL. I should like to ask a further question: Does the Senator from Michigan know of any legal impediment against the incorporation into House bill 1362, by the ordinary processes of amendment before the passage of the bill, of the contents of the concurrent resolution?

Mr. FERGUSON. In answer to that question, I will say that I know of no legal impediment. It has been stated by the able majority leader that there is a parliamentary impediment. The parliamentary situation is such that it is not desired to refer the bill to a committee in the House. If it were so referred, the chances would be great that it would never become law. So there is no legal impediment. There is a parliamentary or time impediment.

Mr. DONNELL. Therefore, if we pass House bill 1362, Members of the Senate who deem it advisable and important to have the provisions set forth in the concurrent resolution incorporated in House bill 1362 would not have what they consider important to be incorporated therein if the House of Representatives should fail to concur in the concurrent resolution.

Mr. FERGUSON. I believe that is correct.

Mr. DONNELL. I thank the Senator.

CONTROL OF MONOPOLY AND MONOPOLISTIC PRACTICES

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I rise to discuss a subject which is foreign to the subject matter of the bill now pending. I assure the Senate that is a practice in which I am very hesitant to engage, but the statement which I propose to make happens to involve a subject and a bill which I shall introduce, in regard to which I made an announcement some days ago, stating that I would introduce the bill today and would make a speech upon it. So it seems to me that early in today's session is the best time to discuss the proposed bill rather than to break in as we approach a vote on the railroad retirement bill late this afternoon.

I also wish to say that because of the fact that the bill I am going to introduce is highly controversial, and will undoubtedly involve the Senate in considerable debate at the next session, and because to yield during my presentation of the bill today might start a running debate which would last for a considerable length of time, therefore, I shall not yield, Mr. President, during the course of my explanation and statement of my point of view on this bill. I shall follow that course, not only in the interest of saving as much time as possible for the Senate, so as to leave the maximum amount of time for the consideration of the unfinished business, but also in order to assure a continuity of my remarks on the bill as they will appear in the RECORD.

Mr. President, the most neglected economic problem in American life today is the problem of monopoly and monopolistic practices. While the Federal Government has long been aware of the need for effective action on this problem, it has done little but sit idly by while monopoly has increased its power over American life and created a dire threat to the continuation of our private-property system. What little the Government has done in recent years to combat monopoly has usually been halfhearted, inconsistent, and ill-considered.

Yet the great majority of the American people have a deep-seated antipathy for monopoly and monopolistic practices. Businessmen in particular know that the only hope of the continued existence of our private-property system is the maintenance of competitive private enterprise. They know that further growth of monopoly power or monoplistic practices is the greatest threat to our present economic system. This viewpoint is shared by American agriculture, which has long been suffering the effects of the monopolistic practices of the railroads and the manufacturers of farm machinery. It is shared by American labor, which has too often been forced out on strike by monopolistic companies which are in such a strong economic position that they have little or nothing to lose by a prolonged period of inactivity.

In recent years the campaign platforms of both the Republican and Democratic Parties have outlined a strong position against monopoly. In 1936, for example, the Republican platform made the following statement:

> A private monopoly is indefensible and intolerable. It menaces and, if continued, will utterly destroy constitutional government and the liberty of the citizen.
>
> We favor the vigorous enforcement of the criminal laws against monopolies and trusts and their officials, and we demand the enactment of such additional legislation as is necessary to make it impossible for private monopoly to exist in the United States.

The Democratic platform statement set forth the following antimonopoly plank:

> Monopolies and the concentration of economic power, the creation of Republican rule and privilege, continue to be the master of the producer, the exploiter of the consumer, and the enemy of the independent operator. This is a problem challenging the unceasing effort of untrammeled public officials in every branch of the Government. We pledge vigorously and fearlessly to enforce the criminal and civil provisions of the existing antitrust laws, and to the extent that their effectiveness has been weakened by new corporate devices or judicial construction, we propose by law to restore their efficacy in stamping out monopolistic practices and the concentration of economic power.

Mr. President, one might think that with such apparent agreement between the two major parties, the path to effective action would have been short and easy, and that immediately following the 1936 election, a vigorous antimonopoly program would have been developed. After the election, however, practically all that happened was that a new committee was set up to study the problem—the Temporary National Economic Committee.

The hearings, reports, and recommendations of the Temporary National Economic Committee under the brilliant leadership of the Senator from Wyoming, [Mr. O'MAHONEY], represent a landmark in the history of Congressional investigations. Nevertheless, the recommendations of the TNEC were ignored by the Congress. Two years of intensive work yielded 31 volumes of hearings and 43 monographs, but resulted in nothing but inaction on the part of the Congress in attempting to deal with the monopoly problem.

During the war, in the interests of expediting war production, Government turned to big business, and ignored for the most part the antitrust laws. As a result of receiving the bulk of the new war plants and of war contracts for both production and research, monopolistic enterprises emerged from the war stronger than ever before in the history of our country.

As soon as the war was over, the monopoly problem won official recognition in the first Presidential message to Congress on the state of the Union. In his message of January 14, 1946, President Truman told the Congress that we must have a coordinated over-all antimonopoly policy. The President stated that we must have such a policy—but he did not propose such a policy. To my knowledge, neither he nor any other official of the administration has yet mapped out such a policy.

However, the Government's activities since the end of the war have had a very definite effect upon the concentration of economic power—the effect of accelerating the trend toward increased concentration. I am referring specifically to what has happened in the disposal of Government-owned war plants. For example, more than one-third of all Government war plants have been disposed of to 22 companies, all of which are among the largest in the United States. Two-thirds of all these plants have gone to a group of big companies who represent only fourtenths of 1 percent of all the manufacturing enterprises in the country.

On July 14, 1946, the able and distinguished chairman of the Senate Small Business Committee, the Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY], presented to the Senate a report entitled "Economic Concentration and World War II." This report summarized all the available statistics on the growing concentration of economic power that took place during World War II. It pointed out that in 1939, firms with over 1,000 employees accounted for 36 percent of the total pay roll for all American trade and industry; by 1943, this figure had risen to 53 percent. It was pointed out that by the end of 1945, the rate of mergers and acquisitions, particularly in manufacturing industries, was higher than at any time in the previous decade and a half.

The report from which I have quoted was prepared for the Senate Small Business Committee by the Smaller War Plants Corporation which has now been transferred to the Department of Commerce. It is interesting to note that in submitting this report the SWPC recommended no specific program for doing anything about the concentration of economic power.

Mr. President, we have had too much empty talk on this vital matter.

The time has come for action.

The time has come for all true believers in economic and political freedom to join together behind a specific legislative program designed to cope with the entire problem of monopoly and monopolistic practices.

Accordingly, Mr. President, I have sent to the desk a new measure entitled "The Antimonopoly Act of 1947." This measure represents the first comprehensive antimonopoly measure to be submitted to the Congress since the Sherman antitrust law was enacted in the last days of the nineteenth century.

This bill is being introduced on behalf of the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AIKEN], the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. LANGER], the Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY], the Senator from Washington [Mr. MITCHELL], the Senator from Idaho [Mr. TAYLOR], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. KILGORE], and myself.

I may announce also, Mr. President, and I ask the press to take note, that since the manuscript was released to the press the distinguished junior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. YOUNG] has also become a sponsor of the bill.

The sponsors of this measure do not regard it as the last word on the problem. We shall welcome amendments to it which do not destroy its sound objectives. We believe that its basic approach is fundamentally sound, but we recognize that there may be still considerable room for improvement on many of the details. We hope that before the bill is shaped into final legislation, there will be a careful study and investigation by the appropriate congressional committee into the character and extent of monopoly and monopolistic practices. It is our hope that this study will be initiated in January 1947. Hence, the short title of the bill "Antimonopoly Act of 1947."

The antimonopoly bill lays out a threefold strategy of attack on monopoly and monopolistic practices.

The first principle of the bill is that the Government must have a consistent and coordinated program for dealing with monopoly and monopolistic practices.

In the past, the Federal Government has never had a genuine antimonopoly program; it has merely engaged in a series of isolated activities dealing with separate aspects of the problem. On the one hand, the Antitrust Division and the Federal Trade Commission have been making sporadic attempts to break down monopolies and eliminate monopolistic practices. On the other hand, the various regulatory boards and commissions have operated on the assumption that monopolies and monopolistic practices in certain industries were to be regulated instead of eliminated. There has never been a real attempt to develop an integrated program for the Antitrust Division of the Justice Department and the Federal Trade Commission, an integrated program for the various regulatory boards and commissions, or a program to coordinate the activities of the Antitrust Division and the Federal Trade Commission with activities of the various regulatory boards and commissions.

Second. The antimonopoly bill sets forth a broad plan for the prevention or elimination of monopoly and monopolistic practices. This plan deals with cartels, discriminatory freight rates, patents, credit assistance for small and competitive business enterprises, adequate enforcement of antitrust laws, and the functions of the Federal Trade Commission.

Third. The bill addresses itself to the entire problem of obtaining effective public control, wherever necessary, of monopoly and monopolistic practices. It provides for coordination of the general policies of the various regulatory agencies, boards, and commissions that have already been established to regulate monopoly or monopolistic practices. It also provides for the Presidential submission to Congress of additional plans for public control, either through regulation or ownership, whenever the President finds that a monopoly or a monopolistic practice cannot be eliminated and should instead be subjected to public control.

I should now like to summarize briefly the major provisions of the bill.

Title I is entitled "A Consistent and Coordinated Antimonopoly Program." It deals with various subjects.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks a summary of the bill. By having it printed in the RECORD I will save the time of the Senate, and the Members may read the summary in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

There being no objection, the summary was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Sections 101 and 102—Presidential formulation of antimonopoly program: The President is directed to develop a consistent and coordinated antimonopoly program which is to be transmitted to Congress at the beginning of every session as part of his economic report under the Employment Act of 1946.

Section 103—Annual survey of monopoly and monopolistic practices: Through the facilities of the various agencies of Government, the President is to make an annual study of the extent to which monopoly and monopolistic practices exist in industry, trade, and agriculture. The results of this study are also to be transmitted to the Congress as part of the economic report.

Section 104—Reorganization power: The President is authorized to submit such reorganization plans as he deems necessary to obtain the most effective administration of the antimonopoly program.

Titles II to VII, inclusive, relate to the prevention or elimination of monopoly and monopolistic practices. Let me refer to each title briefly:

Title II. Prohibition of cartels: Participation by American business in cartels is prohibited. Any arrangements to control international markets must be based upon international commodity agreements officially entered into by the United States Government.

Title III. Elimination of discriminatory freight rates: In order to encourage the development of competitive enterprise in the West and the South, the Interstate Commerce Commission is directed to prepare uniform class rates for railroad transportation.

Title IV. Patents: The Justice Department is authorized to participate in patent suits. Agreements relating to patents are to be filed with the United States Patent Office. Patent licensing agreements which limit production, control prices, or otherwise further monopolistic purposes are made illegal.

Title V. Credit assistance for small and competitive business enterprises: The Federal Loan Administration is given a clear-cut policy mandate to make intermediate and long-term capital available to small and competitive business enterprises. Terms are to be commensurate with the terms available to big business. Interest rates are not to exceed 4 percent. The emphasis is to be on guaranteed loans handled through private banks.

Title VI. More adequate enforcement of Sherman and Clayton Antitrust Acts: The Justice Department is given an appropriation of $6,000,00 0a year to enable it to carry on its activities more adequately. Officers and directors of corporations violating the Sherman and Clayton Antitrust Acts are made liable to penalties under these acts.

Title VII. The Federal Trade Commission as master in chancery: The Federal Trade Commission is authorized, at the Attorney General's request, to serve as master in chancery in any antitrust proceedings—that is, to bring finding of fact and recommendations to the court.

Title VIII is entitled "Where Necessary, Effective Public Control of Monopoly and Monopolistic Practices." Its major provisions are as follows:

Sections 801 and 802. Presidential review of regulatory activities: The President is directed to review the operations of regulatory agencies, boards, and commissions and direct the curtailment or correction of policies that fail to protect the public interest effectively against monopoly or monopolistic practices.

Section 803. New proposals for control: Where the President deems it necessary, he shall submit to Congress specific proposals for additional public control, whether through regulation or ownership.

Title IX provides definitions for such terms as "monopoly" and "monopolistic practices."

Mr. MORSE. I particularly wish to call attention to title II of the bill which prohibits American business from participating in cartels, except in accordance with the provisions of the bill. I desire to emphasize that if we really are going to establish a one world of permanent peace, we must recognize the economic interrelationships between and among the nations of the world. History shows that out of such relationships have sprung many of the causes of war. One need not argue the point that the price of war—misery and suffering and death, as well as economic loss—is always paid by the rank and file of the people of the countries at war. Hence, I think we must face fearlessly a great economic reality, namely, that international economic "deals" among powerful economic forces in this country and in other countries have contributed some of the causative factors leading to war in the past. In my judgment, the American people have the fundamental right, under our form of government, to say to American business combines, "Thou shalt not enter into cartels which ultimately will lead to the killing of our sons and daughters, through war." Ample evidence exists that economic cartels have been disruptive of relationships between nations and have been causative of international misunderstandings and ill will. Hence, I believe that the prohibitions placed upon cartels in title II of this act should highly commend it to the rank and file of the American people. I think it will greatly strengthen the movement for the development of a one world under the United Nations.

I am aware of the fact that powerful economic forces in this country will oppose this bill. However, it is to be noted that powerful economic forces opposed the Sherman Antitrust Act and the Clayton Act. Powerful economic interests, like all human institutions, are made up of human beings with all the frailties and selfish motives which characterize man. The development of the private property economy system in this country has been a constant struggle involving the necessity of protecting the economic weak from the exploitation of the economic strong.

I would be the first to insist that the great capitalistic forces of this country have played a mighty important role in developing this thing we call the American private-property economy. I do not favor, and I never shall favor, the supplanting of our private-property economy with a socialistic order, or any other form of economic totalitarianism, because any form of economy other than our private-property economy is bound to lead to a loss of our rights as individuals to the guaranties of a political democracy as set out in our Constitution and its Bill of Rights.

However, I refuse to blind myself to the fact that private-property economy does not entitle great combinations of capital to a license to make unreasonable profits and exercise unreasonable controls over the public at the expense of the rank and file of the American people. I refuse to ignore the fact that if we are to maintain a private-property economy in this country then the individual citizen who wishes to exercise economic initiative must be able to do it in a free competitive economic system. I insist that we cannot maintain our private-property economy if greater and greater controls over competitive opportunities for our people become more and more vested in fewer and fewer combines of financial and economic power in this country. Such a monopolistic trend, if allowed to continue, is bound to result in some form of economic fascism in America.

I wish to take this opportunity of saying to the farmers of this country that in my judgment the future standard of living of our farm population is going to be determined in a large measure by the extent to which we check monopolistic forces which at the present time exercise a much greater control over the returns which the farmer receives for his produce than most people living in our cities suspect. I think most of our farmers have come to understand the relationship between monopolistic control of our economy and the price they have to pay for the goods they have to buy as contrasted with the prices they receive for produce they sell.

Since coming to the Senate in January, 1945, I have endeavored to point out that if we are to retain and develop to its richest potentialities the American system of political and economic democracy we must do it within the framework of the American Constitution and in accordance with a sound middle-of-the-road liberal political and economic course of action. We must do it by recognizing at all times that great lesson of history, namely, that the society of mankind moves forward, not backward and that it never stands still. Thus I have tried to point out in speech after speech in the Senate, and in the bills and resolutions which I have sponsored, that a liberal program can be defined only in terms of specific issues.

When people say to me, "You call yourself a liberal but what we would like to know is what do you stand for?" I am pleased to refer them to the specific things which I have stood for both before and since coming to the Senate. Through the speeches, bills and resolutions which I have presented on the floor of the Senate I have endeavored to build what I consider to be a very sound liberal platform that can sustain and perpetuate the American economic system of private property. The bill I am offering today is the last plank that I propose to add to that platform in this session of Congress.

I have no hesitancy in saying that the issue of controlling monopolies in this country is a clear-cut political issue as well as an economic problem. I feel that both the Republican and the Democratic parties must meet that issue in the 1946 and 1948 campaigns. Hence, I offer this bill in an attempt to place that issue on the record.

I am confident that once the American people come to understand the vital importance to their daily lives and their standard of living, and most important of all to the preservation of world peace, of controlling monopolies, they will wholeheartedly support the position taken by those of us who are willing to face the type of opposition which I have no doubt this will stir up.

Further, I am convinced that the rank and file voters of this country, both Democratic and Republican, are basically progressive and liberal in their political philosophy. They want neither reactionarism nor leftism. As I have said on another occasion, it is interesting to note that one of the contrasts between the liberals and the leftists is that the liberal fights for the rights of the individual in maintaining self-government in keeping with the framework of our Constitution and its Bill of Rights, whereas the leftist seeks to develop an all-powerful Federal Government because he knows that his best chance of accomplishing the leftist's ultimate aim—namely, that of a governmental dominated economy—is through the development of an all-powerful central government exercising control of the economy. It was such a pattern that the leftists sold to the people of Italy and Germany when they fell the victims of fascism, and it was the same type of pattern which the leftists developed in Russia under communism.

May I say in passing that the greatest partner the leftist has in America today is the reactionary in both parties because the leftist well knows that if the type of emphasis on material things and laissez-faire economy of the rightist or reactionary ever prevails in this country then the pendulum swing to the left, shortly after the reactionaries come into power, will become so sweeping as to lead directly into some form of State control of the economy. It is a great mistake, I believe, to think of the liberal as seeking only economic advantages for the people. That is the main objective, I think, of the leftist as contrasted with the liberal and of the reactionary as contrasted with the liberal except that the reactionary seeks economic advantages not for the people but for the privileged few.

Let us consider the leftist; for the liberal is anything but a leftist. The leftist is seeking a State economy; he is constantly thinking in terms of material welfare for the people. He is not thinking primarily, as is the liberal, in terms of political democracy's being hitched to economic democracy. He places the economic advantages uppermost. That is also true of the reactionary except he seeks to serve his own selfish interests.

The American people in the decade ahead must make a choice from among three types of candidates. The first type must offer the political and economic program of the reactionaries bottomed upon a laissez-faire economy which history shows is characterized by two outstanding economic phenomena: First, the exploitation of natural resources and human beings by the privileged few in the interests of profit dollars, and second, the business cycle of boom and bust with periodic depressions and mass unemployment. It is under such an economy that monopoly develops its strangle hold over the economic rights and interests of the people.

The second type of candidate is from among the leftists. The program of the leftists seeks to establish a State-controlled economy in this country. The Communist and National Socialist is not concerned with protecting the civil liberties and individual rights, including private-property rights guaranteed to every citizen in this country under our Constitution with its Bill of Rights. Rather these leftists seek to destroy those rights and seek to substitute for individual liberty in this country State control and domination of the life of every person. I shall always oppose that totalitarian philosophy with all the vigor that I can muster.

The third type of political candidate in American politics today is the liberal. As I have said, I feel that liberalism can be defined only in terms of specific issues. I do not mean, however, that I feel that liberalism does not have a very clear idealistic meaning. Let me put it this way: One of the objectives, for example, of a liberal government is to protect the economic weak from the exploitation of the economic strong and to do it within a private-property economy. That type of definition is similar to the one which Lincoln used when he pointed out that one of the purposes of government is to promote the "greatest good for the greatest number" and to do it within the framework of our American economic system. When we take that approach to the definition of liberalism, then we must think in terms of specific issues and test our liberalism by our votes on those issues.

To strike the balance between too little government and too much, to protect the economic weak from the exploitation of the economic strong within the framework of our private-property economy, to defend and guarantee at all times to the individual, the civil and property rights set forth in our Constitution and its Bill of Rights, to keep the government an effective servant and not a dictatorial master of our people, to promote the greatest good for the greatest number and to do it by maintaining the dignity of the individual, are some of the basic objectives of the political liberal.

I offer this antimonopoly bill as meeting another specific test of liberalism and as being in keeping with that great objective of representative government, namely, promotion of the greatest good for the greatest number.

Mr. President, I now ask unanimous consent to introduce the bill.

There being no objection, the bill (S. 2482) introduced by Mr. MORSE (for himself, Mr. AIKEN, Mr. LANGER, Mr. MURRAY, Mr. MITCHELL, Mr. TAYLOR, Mr. KILGORE, and Mr. YOUNG) to establish a consistent and coordinated antimonopoly program, prevent or eliminate monopoly and monopolistic practices, and protect the public interest, wherever necessary, through effective methods of public control over monopoly and monopolistic practices, was received, read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Maurer, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed the following bills of the Senate, each with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

S. 115. An act to modify sections 4 and 20 of the Permanent Appropriation Repeal Act, 1934, with reference to certain funds collected in connection with the operation of Indian Service irrigation projects, and for other purposes; and

S. 1547. An act to provide for the disposition of vessels, trophies, relics, and material of historical interest by the Secretary of the Navy, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills of the Senate, severally with amendments, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

S. 1277. An act conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of William S. Brown;

S. 1733. An act for the relief of Desmark Wright; the estates of Alberta Wright, Desmark Wright, Jr., and Harold Evans; and the legal guardians of Bobby Dennis Wright and Irvin Lee Wright, minors;

S. 1917. An act to enact certain provisions now included in the Naval Appropriation Act, 1946, and for other purposes; and

S. 2210. An act to provide for the return of certain securities to the Philippine Commonwealth Government.

The message further announced that the House had severally agreed to the amendments of the Senate to each of the following bills of the House:

H. R. 6004. An act to provide authorization for the village of Cahokia, Ill., to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Cahokia, Ill., and for other purposes; and

H. R. 6533. An act to authorize certain administrative expenses in the Government service, and for other purposes.

The message also anounced that the House had agreed to the concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 74) providing for the printing of additional copies of the report of the Joint Committee on the Investigation of the Pearl Harbor Attack.

AMENDMENT TO RAILROAD RETIREMENT ACTS, ETC.

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill (H. R. 1362) to amend the railroad retirement acts, the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, and subchapter B of chapter 9 of the Internal Revenue Code, and for other purposes.

Mr. WHITE. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Hayden	Overton
Andrews	Hill	Pepper
Austin	Hoey	Radcliffe
Ball	Huffman	Reed
Barkley	Johnson, Colo.	Revercomb
Bilbo	Johnston, S. C.	Russell
Brewster	Kilgore	Shipstead
Brooks	Knowland	Smith
Buck	La Follette	Stanfill
Burch	Langer	Stewart
Bushfield	Lucas	Swift
Capper	McCarran	Taft
Carville	McClellan	Taylor
Connally	McFarland	Thomas, Okla.
Cordon	McKellar	Thomas, Utah
Donnell	McMahon	Tobey
Downey	Magnuson	Tunnell
Eastland	Mead	Vandenberg
Ferguson	Millikin	Wagner
Fulbright	Mitchell	Walsh
George	Moore	Wheeler
Gerry	Morse	Wherry
Green	Murdock	White
Guffey	Murray	Wiley
Gurney	Myers	Willis
Hart	O'Daniel	Young
Hawkes	O'Mahoney

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HOEY in the chair). Eighty Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I wish to speak regarding the general character of the bill which is before the Senate. It is a bill to change and expand the so-called railroad retirement system, which is a special social-security system extending only to railroad employees, except as the coverage of this bill may extend it further.

We have a general social security system, which, of course, covers most other people in the United States, but at the time the railroad retirement system was set up it was set up as a special system for the railroad employees. That, however, is a Government system. The Government is responsible for paying the benefits under that system. It is not like many of the private pension systems which exist in the United States. It is a special Government system covering these particular employees, and not covering anyone else in the United States, while the general social security system covers other employees.

I think it is very doubtful whether there should be a special social-security system set up by the Government for certain special groups of employees, and it is the tremendous difference between the benefits and the treatment under the two systems which leads to the violence of the feeling regarding the question of coverage, whether an employee shall be under one system or the other. I do not particularly object, however, to there being a separate system for the railroad employees, nor do I object to that system being somewhat more liberal than the general system.

There is one thing which follows, however, if we have such a system. It must be actuarially sound. We have set up the social security system, and we recognize that under that system a great many of the benefits are going to have to be paid by the Government, with respect to which the tax levy today amounts to only 2 percent, outside of the unemployment-compensation tax. We realize that the Government is going to pay a very fair part of the total, on the theory that we might as well pay as we go when everyone in the United States is involved. There is not much point in anyone building up a so-called reserve of Government bonds when the group of beneficiaries and the group of taxpayers are just about the same people. However, when we have this kind of a system we must have an actuarially sound system, or the whole system will break down.

The House committee received this bill when it was introduced in the form in which we have it. It made an extensive study of the whole system. The study covered a period of more than 3 months. It employed special actuaries to make the necessary calculations, and then rewrote the bill and reported it.

Under the existing system there is a tax levy to pay the expenses of the system. The tax today is 3½ percent from the employer and 3½ percent from the employee, or a total of 7 percent. To that is added the special unemployment compensation fund tax, which is 3 percent, just as it is in various States. So there is now a total tax of 10 percent levied on the wages of railroad employees. That is to go up slightly in 1949, under the present law.

The House committee found that to be actuarially sound the tax should be 4½ percent on the employer and 4½ percent on the employee, or nearly 2 percent more than is now being paid under that system. The new bill proposes an increased tax of 5¾ percent on the employee and 5¾ percent on the employer, or a total of 11½ percent. To that is added 3 percent for unemployment compensation. So the bill provides immediately for a tax of 14½ percent, 5¾ of which is to come from the employee, and 8¾ from the employer. That rate will be increased in 1949 to a total of 15 percent, and in 1952 to a total of 15½ percent. The House committee finds that that will be actuarially insufficient by at least 1½ percent. In the opinion of the House committee a total tax of 17 percent on the pay roll would be required to cover the benefits provided in the bill.

That does not cover so-called health insurance. If we had the Murray-Wagner-Dingell bill we should have in addition a tax of 3 or 4 percent. So this looks toward a total tax on wages, in the case of the railroads, of 20 percent.

It seems to me that the employees do not really understand what is being imposed upon them. I do not believe that they realize what the tax will amount to. When we see what doubt there is in our minds as to these pensions, and whether it is worth while to deduct 5 percent from the pay roll in order to pay a future pension, certainly any railroad employee who had a free choice might well doubt whether he wanted to pay as much as 5¾ percent and have the employer pay the additional amount. I doubt very much if the employees understand what is being done. It is our responsibility, because we are imposing that tax.

It is all very well to say that the railroad employees want a special fund. Perhaps they do. Yet I do not believe that, aside from the leaders, any of them realize the extent of the burden which is being imposed in order to bring about the result which they seek. Furthermore, I think they might well realize that in order to have a special system they must pay the whole cost of it whereas if they were under the social-security system, under our present theory the Government would pay a considerable part of the burden out of general taxes. Aside from the men at the top, I have not heard any railroad employee say that he was particularly interested in increasing the tax which is now levied in connection with the railroad unemployment fund. I have talked with conductors and brakemen who very seriously doubt whether this kind of an increase is desirable.

We must consider this question also from the standpoint of the railroads. It is all very well to say that the tax pays itself. It does so far as the Government is concerned, if it is actuarially sound. I think it is within 1½ percent of being actuarially sound. But this tax is really a tax imposed on the shippers of the country, because this burden, whether it is placed on the employer or the employee, is to a large extent reflected in increased costs to the railroad industry; and under the law the Interstate Commerce Commission must increase the rates charged by the railroads in order to compensate them for that additional expense. That means that we are imposing an indirect tax on the shippers of the United States and on all the industries of the United States, as well as the farmers, who cannot get as much for their wheat and corn because the cost of getting it to the central markets becomes greater by reason of the increase which we are imposing on the railroads through this tax on pay rolls. On the present basis, when we get through, the total tax will amount to 15½ percent. The present pay roll is approximately $4,000,000,000. So in one way or another we are taxing the railroad industry to the extent of more than $600,000,000 a year in order to raise the money necessary for this scale of benefits.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TAFT. I yield.

Mr. WHEELER. Of course what the Senator says is true, that half of the tax will come from the railroads, and, in turn, from the general public. That is true of social security. After all, it is not a tax on the farmer alone. It is a tax on every class of people who buy anything.

Mr. TAFT. I was only raising the question as to whether it is desirable to have this particular scale of benefits, which represents a higher scale of benefits than social security, and a higher scale of benefits than the present railroad retirement. Is it right for us to set up that scale of benefits when we must tax the people of the country in order to pay for it? I am perfectly willing to say that there should be some such payment, but I think we have a duty beyond merely saying, "This is their affair. They are going to pay for it." We have the duty to examine into the question and determine whether the scale of benefits is reasonable so that we can properly tax the shippers of the United States in order to pay for it. That is the only point I make.

Mr. WHEELER. Of course, the shipper passes it on to the consumer. After all, it is the consuming public which pays the tax.

Mr. TAFT. That is correct. It is passed on to everyone else.

Mr. WHEELER. Some persons have the idea that when we place a tax upon the railroads we place a tax upon some wealthy manufacturer who is paying it. Of course, it must ultimately be paid by the consumer and the producer, regardless of who pays it in the first instance.

Mr. TAFT. The Senator is entirely correct. My point is simply that we have an obligation to do more than merely say, "This is their affair. They are paying for it; therefore, they can have any benefits they want." We have an obligation to the individual railroad employee, who is not being consulted about whether he wishes this additional tax imposed upon him; and also an obligation to the shipper, who in the end pays the other tax. We also have an obligation to the general population, to determine whether it is proper to levy such a tax in order to increase the benefits to a particular group of the population.

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TAFT. I yield.

Mr. HAWKES. In order to emphasize the point which the Senator from Ohio is making, let us remember that the consumers, the group about which the Senator from Montana was speaking, who ultimately pay this bill, include among their ranks the great mass of workers who are under social security and who are receiving a different form of security, and a lesser amount than the railroad employees now receive. I believe that there is a fundamental question involved. Have we the right, considering the increase in rail rates and transportation charges which is necessarily involved, to raise the cost of everything to the great mass of workers who get one form of social security, in order to pay a different type of social security to a different group? I am in favor of doing the sound, fair thing, so far as we can, for the railroad workers; but I think we must always correlate the two groups and see that justice and equity is done as between them.

I thank the Senator.

Mr. TAFT. I agree with the Senator.

What the House committee did was to adopt the substitute bill giving to the railroad workers about one-half of what is provided in this bill. It also increased the tax to take care of what was actuarially necessary in order to get the money required to meet that system.

The House committee went further. Whereas the part of the tax which is levied on employer and employee in order to obtain the money for the annuity payments—the old-age pension part of the plan, so to speak—is apparently insufficient actuarially to meet the demands on it, under the present law or under the terms of the bill, the part which is levied for unemployment compensation, the 3 percent which is paid by the railroads, is far more than is necessary for the purpose of handling unemployment in the railroad industry. Like most public utility industries, the railroad industry affords fairly stable employment, and consequently the unemployment compensation fund reserve has been built up to more than $700,000,000. That is in lieu of State unemployment compensation. The 3-percent tax is like the State unemployment compensation tax. In view of the excess in this fund, the bill adds to the ordinary payment for unemployment-compensation payments for unemployment resulting from sickness and payments for unemployment resulting prom maternity.

That is an extension of unemployment compensation which has never been made, so far as I know, in any State of the Union. To a certain extent unemployment compensation is an invitation to idleness. Today we see that the GI payment of $20 a week is apparently very acceptable to many persons in lieu of work, so they are not looking very hard for work under those circumstances, and they draw the $20 a week as a matter of course. If in addition there is unemployment compensation for unemployment resulting from sickness, we shall find so many sick persons that the railroads will hardly be able to operate. It is inevitable. Many persons who may be sick are still able to work. But with the promise that if they stay at home for a certain length of time and the doctor says they are sick they will draw unemployment compensation, many of them will accept it.

I think that is utterly unsound, and I think it is also utterly unsound to pay it for maternity benefits. I do not believe there should be, in either case, any payments for unemployment compensation. If there is to be anything of the kind, it should be in connection with some kind of health insurance fund, either a voluntary or a compulsory health-insurance fund, if any State wishes to provide for one. But certainly it should not be done in connection with unemployment compensation.

The obviously sound thing to do, Mr. President, is to reduce the 3-percent tax, if a tax of that amount is not necessary for unemployment-compensation payments in connection with the railroads, and to use the difference to provide for some of the increase in the other tax which will be necessary. Obviously, that is what the House committee did. The House committee, when it got through, had a tax of 12½ percent, instead of 15½ percent, on the pay roll of the workers; and, in addition, it had an actuarily sound bill. It gave, in the way of increased benefits, only about one-half of the increased benefits provided by this bill, I believe. That is a very rough estimate, and I do not wish to state positively exactly how much it will be. But, roughly speaking, I estimate that it increases the annual benefits by approximately $37,500,000 a year, instead of $75,000,000 or $100,000,000, as under the existing bill.

The House committee recommended that to the House. The House voted on the amendments, and approved them in the Committee of the Whole. Then they got into a jam and voted on all the amendments en bloc. Why the rule is that way, I do not know. But that was done, and the House rejected all those amendments, all the corrective amendments, and all the amendments which now have been proposed to the Senate, by the Senator from Kentucky in the form of a concurrent resolution. Then the House recurred to the original bill, which then was passed. But all the work done by the House committee was thrown away.

Yesterday the Senator from Kentucky said that those who proposed the coverage amendment were really engaged in an attempt to kill the bill. I say that those who are insistent on having the bill pass without amendment are saying, "We want this or nothing." I say now that if the railroad employees and the proponents of this bill are willing to sit down with the House committee and work out a compromise by which they can get a better bill, and by which they can agree with the House committee to provide for more benefits, if they wish to have them, than were granted in the bill as proposed by the House committee, they will have to make some kind of compromise with the House committee; and I believe that if such a compromise is made, the bill can go back to the House and be passed by the House with the amendments, and without imposing upon the people of the United States who, in the end will have to pay this special form of security benefits, the total burden proposed by this bill, which seems to me to be entirely unreasonable.

This bill provides for a number of additional benefits. The benefit which I think is peculiarly desirable and which I think should be made is the one which extends the old age pension feature, the annuity feature, to survivors. The social security system has always paid something to the widows of the workers who die, but the railroad retirement system for some reason, has not done so. Of course, that should be done, and the provision for it should remain in the bill. The bill increases the disability payments. I have no objection to that. The bill reduces to 60 years the age limit as to women, if they have had 30 years service. As I understand the bill, it also gives benefits for total disability, under certain circumstances. In some respects perhaps, it may go a little far, because it may provide payments for disability which has no relation to railroad work. Nevertheless, in general I believe that the extension as to disability payments is a proper one to be made, and I believe it will have to be made, to the extent that it does not now exist in the social-security law.

The minimum annuities are somewhat increased by the bill.

But in general, the important feature of it and, I think, the important feature to the railroad men, is the provision for the payment of survivor and death benefits in a more liberal way than is provided by the present law.

I have already referred to the extension of unemployment compensation payments to cases involving sickness and maternity, which I think is completely unjustifiable and should never have been made.

Let me say that our subcommittee went into this whole question in the hearings, and then submitted a report, which is very interesting and which says that the subcommittee does not propose to pass on the question. The report was submitted in March; and it says, in part:

> The questions of policy needing decision are of such great importance that the full committee will find, after study and deliberation, that it will of necessity have to make the decisions itself; and the subcommittee therefore felt that no useful purpose would be served by deciding such questions and reporting them in the form of a finished bill to the full committee. A comprehensive and important report has been pending before the Committee on Ways and Means.

The report from the subcommittee to the full committee then outlines the major changes, and states what the various questions are. The report covers approximately nine different problems, which the subcommittee says are controversial. But the report does not purport to pass on what the decision in those cases should be.

The full committee gave no consideration whatever to those controversial questions. There was no vote in the committee on those questions. There was no attempt to consider them. There was no attempt to weight the bill against the House bill or to consider whether any of the amendments of the House committee were proper ones to be made, even though they had been rejected en bloc by the House of Representatives.

So we have here a bill which, insofar as it has received any consideration by the House of Representatives, has been rejected or at least fundamentally changed; it has been changed in important respects. The House expressed the feeling that this tax should be at least 3 percent less than that provided by the current bill; that there should be that much less of a burden.

I can see no justification whatever for the position taken by the majority leader, namely, that the Senate is now foreclosed from considering fundamental amendments dealing with the whole matter of social security. Let me say that in the unemployment-compensation field the bill increases straight unemployment-compensation payments to $25 for 26 weeks. An attempt to do that under the social-security law was rejected by the Senate less than a year ago. The in-between effect of increasing unemployment-compensation payments to $25 a week for 26 weeks at the present time will, it seems to me, be a demand, and perhaps a proper demand, that all the GI payments be increased from $20 to $25 a week, and it is very doubtful whether that policy was a very wise one, even at the $20 rate.

Undoubtedly it will lead to an increase in the amount provided under the State laws. I myself think that in the end the $25 rate is coming. But I think this is an inappropriate time to increase the unemployment-compensation payments to $25 for a period of 26 weeks. I understand that when those payments are combined with the sickness-insurance payments, the total will mean that some persons may actually draw the $25 for nearly an entire year.

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TAFT. I yield to the Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. HAWKES. I thank the Senator from Ohio.

I wish to call attention to the fact that it is only a few months—I do not know how many; but, as I recall, not more than 4 or 5—since we took up in the Finance Committee the question of increasing unemployment compensation payments to $25 for 26 weeks, under an arrangement by means of which the Federal Government was to contribute, and it was hoped the States would raise their contributions. The Senator from Ohio remembers that, I am sure.

Mr. TAFT. Yes.

Mr. HAWKES. The Senate, after mature consideration, decided that that was an unwise thing to do at that time.

Later, when the bill came to the Senate, the majority leader again offered an amendment to include in the bill provision for payment of the $25 for 26 weeks. That amendment, offered by the majority leader just a few months ago, was defeated by a vote of 51 to 29, which shows what the sentiment was at that time; and I think nothing has happened since then to change it.

Mr. TAFT. I thank the Senator. I think I should point out that, if we put all benefits on the basis proposed in this bill, namely, a pay-roll tax of 15½ percent, we would come very close to imposing a total tax bill for social security on the people of the United States of approximately $15,000,000,000 a year, which is supposedly the tax covered by the Beveridge plan, if that were imposed throughout the entire country.

Mr. President, I think the tremendous size of this tax is evidence of why the coverage question has become so important. I may say that, in my opinion, the coverage provision is not ambiguous. There is no question of clearing up an ambiguity. It seems to me very clear that ice companies and warehouse companies, as well as others, are covered, and that there can be no question as to how a court would interpret the law.

Paragraph (2), on page 2 of the bill, reads:

> Any person, other than a carrier regulated under part I of the Interstate Commerce Act, which, pursuant to arrangements with a carrier or otherwise, performs, for hire, with respect to passengers or property transported, being transported or to be transported by a carrier, any service included within the term "transportation" as defined in section 1 (3) of the Interstate Commerce Act, whether or not such service is offered under railroad tariffs.

The term "transportation" as defined in the Interstate Commerce Act is as follows:

> The term "transportation" as used in this part shall include locomotives, cars, and other vehicles, vessels, and all instrumentalities and facilities of shipment or carriage, irrespective of ownership or of any contract, expressed or implied, for the use thereof, and all services in connection with the receipt, delivery, elevation, and transfer in transit, ventilation, refrigeration or icing, storage, and handling of property transported.

I do not see how clearer language could be written. I repeat:

> and all services in connection with the receipt, delivery, elevation, and transfer in transit, ventilation, refrigeration or icing, storage, and handling of property transported.

It was argued that the Interstate Commerce Act had never covered these various services, although they are defined as "transportation" in the act. But the Interstate Commerce Act does not give the Interstate Commerce Commission power over all transportation as so defined. It gives the Interstate Commerce Commission authority only over common carriers by railroad which are engaged in transportation. Of course, they have not extended their authority over the icing and refrigeration service of companies that are not common carriers. So that has nothing to do with the question. The bill deliberately states that any person, other than a carrier, is covered by it if the service which he performs is included within the term "transportation." I do not see how there could be any question about the fact that such companies as have been mentioned are included. There is no question of ambiguity in connection with the inclusion of those services.

Paragraph 4 of the bill is very vague and general. It reads:

> Any person engaged in rendering, pursuant to any arrangement for one or more carriers, any service, which (i) is of such a nature as to be susceptible of indefinitely continuous performance—

Which includes icing which must be ready at any time in the day, and in connection with warehousing, the railroads must be taken into consideration.

I continue reading:

> (ii) constitutes a part of or is necessary or incidental to the operation or maintenance of way, equipment, or structures devoted to transportation use—

Certainly icing is included in that language—> or constitutes a clerical, sales, accounting, protective, or communications service necessary or incidental to the conduct of transportation carried on by a carrier—

And so forth. I cannot see why those terms are not sufficiently broad to include all persons who are afraid that they may be or may not be included. I do not see why every telegram which has been received regarding this subject was not justified on the basis of the language included in the bill.

Incidentally, it is said that these amendments are merely to clear up ambiguities. The Interstate Commerce Act has been in effect for 8 years. Like any act which is subjected to continuous rulings and decisions of the courts, it has been ruled on so many times that we have come to a definition of who is in and who is out. There is no substantial dispute today as to that question, but if we pass this bill it will be 10 years before it will be determined through further decisions of the Railroad Retirement Board who is in and who is out. We add to the difficulties of classification if we include the words which are in the pending bill. Certainly we should return to the existing system. There is no reason why A should be under the Railroad Retirement Act and B should be under the Social Security Act. They are both covered by one or the other. As a matter of fact, I believe that the railroad unions want to be included. They are included. They have said themselves that they do not care to extend the coverage of the bill to their activities, and I do not see any reason why they should be.

There is another change which was rejected by the House committee, as it should have been rejected. I refer to the change which transfers to the railroad retirement system the collection of the tax of some 12 percent of the pay roll. It amounts to approximately $400,000,000 or $500,000,000 a year. It is now being collected by the Treasury of the United States. They are the tax-collecting agency. They should be. They should determine on a purely impartial basis whether the particular persons covered by the bill shall pay the tax or shall not pay it. That question should be determined by the Treasury. There should not be two separate tax-collecting agencies. We should not take away the power from the Treasury, hand it over to the Railroad Retirement Board, and give them authority to decide all these questions with reference to whom the tax applies or does not apply.

The original House bill refused to make that change and left the administration of the act in the Treasury, where it should remain. The effect of the change will be to give the Railroad Retirement Board a great deal more to say with reference to what is covered and what is not. If they are like any other agency of which I know, they will want to cover everything in the world, and include everything they can include so as to enlarge their authority. They will want to include all the people they can bring under their control so that they can collect taxes and build their organization up to greater strength, instead of allowing the authority and power to reside in the Treasury of the United States. So I feel that a transfer of the tax collecting authority from the Treasury to the Railroad Retirement Board should not be made. An amendment to do that is one which we should consider and pass upon.

Mr. President, it seems to me that the proposal of the distinguished majority leader is, in the first place, a complete mistake because it assumes that the only thing at issue is the question of coverage. It is an important issue, but it seems to me it is not nearly so important as are the other questions which I have discussed, namely unemployment compensation, the collection of taxes, and the size of the tax which is to be levied.

To say that we cannot adopt amendments is to suggest something new in legislative procedure. I never heard of enacting legislation by proposing that a concurrent resolution, which includes some 50 separate amendments, shall be adopted after the bill is passed, on the theory that we will be correcting clerical mistakes which we have not yet made, and which we are perfectly able to correct by amendments under the ordinary rules of the Senate. If we legislate in that way we will prostitute the whole process of the Senate. I think that clerical mistakes and minor errors have been corrected by adopting concurrent resolutions; but it never has been done without unanimous consent. I think that the Senator from Missouri read to the Senate Rule XV. It provides as follows:

When a bill or resolution shall have been ordered to be read a third time, it shall not be in order to propose amendments, unless by unanimous consent—

And so forth. What the majority leader has proposed to do is amend this bill by adopting a concurrent resolution after the third reading of the bill has been ordered. If that can be done it seems to me that it can be done only under rule XV, or by unanimous consent. So far as I know it has never been done except by unanimous consent. Certainly, if the majority leader offers such a concurrent resolution I shall object to its consideration on the ground that it would be in violation of rule XV of the rules of the Senate. I do not know what the ruling of the Chair will be, but certainly it seems to me that the ruling of the Chair should be in accordance with the rule of the Senate. To offer a concurrent resolution such as the one which the majority leader has proposed, would be an attempt to amend the bill after the bill had reached the third reading. If any Senator is relying on that procedure, he cannot be certain that any such resolution can ever be passed through the Senate of the United States even if a majority is in favor of what seems to me to be a perfectly ridiculous procedure.

So, Mr. President, I urge very strongly, in the first place, that the Senate has a right to vote its sentiments, and should do so, not on any imaginary theory about what is going to happen to the bill. If the advocates of the bill are willing to take something less than is included in the bill, if they are willing to agree with the House Members, who are the only ones who really studied this matter, in reaching a compromise bill, I believe they can reach such a compromise, perhaps somewhat more liberal than that proposed by the House committee, but in any event giving more than half the additional demands which are made in the bill. I believe that can be done, if it is desired.

The position taken by the majority leader is that we must have this bill or nothing, that if we do not have this, we are to get nothing, so that we have to take this. I say there is a middle course.

The Social Security System requires revision much more than does the railroad retirement system. We heard this morning in the Finance Committee of a great many amendments proposed to that system, and the committee is considering them. It is far more important, and important to a far greater number of people in the United States, that that system be revised and brought up to date and made more liberal. The present railroad retirement system is more liberal than that system, except in the one respect of survivorship annuities. But that system should be brought up to date. We put off the revision of the social security system until next year.

If the pending bill should fail, certainly we could pass a proper bill next year. I think the present system should be made to do. I think we can work out a sound system, and I believe we can do it with a less expensive burden than is proposed in the bill before us.

But I do not think we should start out with this bill and set a precedent for something which, if applied to social security generally, would mean, in my opinion, taxes in excess of $17,000,000,000 a year on the people of the United States.

I think we should consider these questions, and I believe very strongly that in relation to coverage it is perfectly clear that unless we do what the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HOEY] is proposing, we will include all kinds of services which are not included, which do not want to be included, which the railroad men say now they do not want included, yet which in my opinion are included, beyond the shadow of a doubt, in the present language of the bill.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr. President, will the Senator from Ohio yield?

Mr. TAFT. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. I wish to get into the RECORD a statement with regard to the maximum unemployment payments which might be made under the pending bill and the maximum paid under the present law.

The Senator is correct in a way, but I do not think the whole story has been told. Twenty dollars is now the maximum, but that maximum is applicable only to men receiving $1,600 a year in salary. In other words, a person receiving from $150 to $199.99 gets under the present law and under the proposed law at daily benefit rate of $1.75. If he receives up to as high as $1,599.99, he gets $3.50 a day for a 5-day week, which would mean a total of $17.50 a week under the proposed law and under the existing law.

Mr. TAFT. I quite agree that when we say $20 or $25, it is not a flat figure. That is true in regard to State unemployment compensation acts, too. Usually we simply characterize the maximum figure as the figure that sets the scale, so to speak. I did not mean to say that everyone would get $25 for 26 weeks, of course, but that is the maximum which could be received.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. That is the point I wanted to clarify. The Senator compared the proposed unemployment compensation with the veterans' unemployment compensation, and the latter, of course, is a flat compensation.

Mr. TAFT. The Senator is correct; of course, that is flat compensation. The straight compensation is not. That has the variations to which the Senator calls attention in the bill.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. The $25 maximum provided in the proposed law applies only to those who receive $250, or more than that.

One other point I wish to clarify, if the Senator will permit me, namely, the combination of unemployment-insurance provisions and sick benefits.

Only 91 employees out of over a million and a quarter employees would have received both types of unemployment benefits in the one benefit plan ending June 30, 1940.

Table 23 on page 80 of the hearings shows that in the benefit year ending June 30, 1940, 29,298 employees out of 1,284,000 exhausted their unemployment benefits. In terms of 1,000,000 eligibles, this is equivalent to 22,816, or 2.3 percent.

In order for this group to get also unemployment benefits for sickness for the remaining period in that benefit year, it would be necessary for all of them, 22,816 out of each million employees, to be ill for 6 months or longer in a 12-month period. But this is not so.

Table 54 on page 116 of the hearings indicates that 4 per 1,000 women and 3.9 per 1,000 men will have a disability in a year which lasts 6 months or more. Therefore, only 0.4 percent of any group of employees will be sick for more than 6 months or more in a year, and only that portion can draw the maximum sickness benefits. Assuming that persons who suffer from extended unemployment are not sick any more frequently than those who are not so employed, only 0.4 percent of the 29,298 employees who exhausted their unemployment benefits in the benefit year ending June 30, 1940, or 91 employees, would here have been sick for 6 months or more in the same benefit year.

Even if the rate of sickness among those who are unemployed for long periods is twice as high as for the average of the number drawing the benefits for lack of work for a full year, the number unemployed for 6 months and sick the other 6 would be 182 per 1,000,000 eligibles, or 0.0182 percent.

Making the same assumption as to the sickness rate for the succeeding fiscal years, 154 per 1,000,000 would draw both benefits for 6 months each in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941; 64 per 1,000,000 in the next fiscal year; 12 per 1,000,000 in the next; and 2 per 1,000,000 eligibles in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1944.

Mr. President, I ask that a table and a statement concerning it be inserted in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the matters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Column I, total compensation	Column II, daily benefit rate
$150 to $199.99	$1.75
$200 to $474.99	2.00
$475 to $749.99	2.25
$750 to $999.99	2.50
$1,000 to $1,299.99	3.00
$1,300 to $1,599.99	3.50
$1,600 to $1,999.99	4.00
$2,000 to $2,499.99	4.50
$2,500 and over	5.00

The amount of benefits payable for the first 14 days in each maternity period, and for the first 14 days in a maternity period after the birth of the child, shall be one and one-half times the amount otherwise payable under this subsection. Benefits shall not be paid for more than 84 days of sickness in a maternity period prior to the birth of the child. Qualification for and rate of benefits for days of sickness in a maternity period shall not be affected by the expiration of the benefit year in which the maternity period will have begun unless in such benefit year the employee will not have been a qualified employee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SWIFT in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HOEY], which will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to strike out all of section 1, and renumber the remaining sections of the bill; and on page 60, it is proposed to strike out lines 18 through 20.

Mr. HOEY. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. TAFT. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Hayden	Overton
Andrews	Hill	Pepper
Austin	Hoey	Radcliffe
Ball	Huffman	Reed
Barkley	Johnson, Colo.	Revercomb
Bilbo	Johnston, S. C.	Russell
Brewster	Kilgore	Shipstead
Brooks	Knowland	Smith
Buck	La Follette	Stanfill
Burch	Langer	Stewart
Bushfield	Lucas	Swift
Capper	McCarran	Taft
Carville	McClellan	Taylor
Connally	McFarland	Thomas, Okla.
Cordon	McKellar	Thomas, Utah
Donnell	McMahon	Tobey
Downey	Magnuson	Tunnell
Eastland	Mead	Vandenberg
Ferguson	Millikin	Wagner
Fulbright	Mitchell	Walsh
George	Moore	Wheeler
Gerry	Morse	Wherry
Green	Murdock	White
Guffey	Murray	Wiley
Gurney	Myers	Willis
Hart	O'Daniel	Young
Hawkes	O'Mahoney

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HOEY].

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, for the benefit of those who are worrying about the construction to be placed upon section 1, I will say that I pointed out yesterday how the Interstate Commerce Commission had repeatedly interpreted this particular section on transportation, and how it had limited its application. I sent a telegram to William J. Kennedy, chairman of the Railroad Retirement Board, 844 Rush Street, Chicago, Ill., as follows:

I direct your attention to the second paragraph of page 7 of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee's report on H. R. 1362. If the Board or its counsel has had an opportunity to study this report with reference to the language of the bill, would appreciate knowing whether this paragraph is regarded as correctly stating the meaning and application of section 1 of the bill and whether this section, if enacted, would be administered accordingly.

The telegram was signed by me as chairman of the committee.

I received the following telegram this morning at 11 o'clock:

Our general counsel has studied the report of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee on H. R. 1362, particularly the second paragraph beginning on page 7. He advises me that in his opinion this paragraph correctly states the meaning and application of section 1 of the bill. The administration of section 1, if enacted, would be in accord with this advice and the intent of Congress as expressed in the committee report.

WILLIAM J. KENNEDY,
Chairman, Railroad Retirement Board.

Mr. President, I now wish to call to the attention of the Senate the language used in the second paragraph on page 7 of the committee report, as follows:

Many representations have been made to the committee indicating that persons (other than carriers subject to part I of the Interstate Commerce Act) engaged in manufacturing, harvesting, storing, distributing, selling, or delivering refrigeration or ice to or into equipment used for refrigeration purposes in connection with the transportation of passengers or property are included in the term "employer," and that therefore their employees will be considered to be railroad employees. The committee would like to state categorically that there is no purpose or intent to include such persons as employers under the act and that it is the unanimous understanding of the committee that such persons are not so covered. The committee also unanimously understands that notwithstanding the provisions of subsections (2) and (4) of section 1, there is no purpose or intent to include warehouse or trucking companies, or individuals carrying on either of such businesses, within the term "employer," if they are not owned or controlled, directly or indirectly, by, or under common control with, a carrier subject to part I of the Interstate Commerce Act.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at that point?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. KNOWLAND. The Senator has mentioned several different types of business which are not included. Would he also say that it was not the intent of the committee to include water carriers?

Mr. WHEELER. Oh, definitely. They are specifically excluded by the language of the bill.

Mr. President, I stated yesterday that my recollection was that in the hearings the Board itself had agreed with the interpretation contained in the language of the report of the committee. But to make sure about it, so that there could be no misunderstanding whatever with reference to it, I sent the telegram to the chairman of the Railroad Retirement Board to find out whether the Board placed on the section the same interpretation which the committee placed on it, and, secondly, whether in administering the act the Board would administer it in accordance with the views of the committee. In reply I received the telegram I have just read.

Mr. BALL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. BALL. The interpretation which the Senator has read is very interesting, but if that is the correct interpretation, what is the purpose of having section 1 in the bill if it is not to broaden the act?

Mr. WHEELER. I made an explanation of that point previously. I have read the language several times on the floor of the Senate. I pointed out yesterday on two occasions that the interpretation which was placed on that language by the Interstate Commerce Commission itself in five or six different decisions, which interpretation has been adopted by the courts of the country, has limited that language. The Interstate Commerce Commission itself has held that, notwithstanding that language, it does not have authority to regulate any of the services which have been mentioned, which it would be bound to do if it adopted the broad general language written into the Transportation Act.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. I entirely dispute that construction. The act does not give the Commission power over all transportation as defined in the act. It gives it authority only to regulate common carriers by railroad engaged in transportation. But the new law, the railroad retirement law, gives authority over persons who are not carriers at all, but who engage in what is defined as transportation.

Mr. WHEELER. I am sorry to have to disagree with the able Senator. Notwithstanding his views, the Interstate Commerce Commission has in five different decisions, which I read on the floor yesterday, disputed the statement which he has just made. In several decisions the Interstate Commerce Commission stated that it would not regulate icing companies unless they were controlled or owned by the transportation company itself.

Mr. TAFT. That is what I say. That is what the act provides. The act provides that the Interstate Commerce Commission shall not regulate someone who is not a common carrier by railroad simply because he is engaged in transportation. But there is no such limitation in the new law.

Mr. WHEELER. The Senator entirely misconstrues the law. If the ice company is owned by a railroad, then the definition of transportation covers icing, and all the other services. If the law were construed as broadly as the Senator suggests, the Interstate Commerce Commission would have not only the right but the duty to regulate them.

Mr. TAFT. To regulate what?

Mr. WHEELER. To regulate the icing companies.

Mr. TAFT. No. The law merely authorizes the Interstate Commerce Commission to regulate common carriers by railroad engaged in icing. It does not authorize it to regulate everyone engaged in transportation.

Mr. WHEELER. If the railroad were engaged in icing, the Commission would have a right to regulate that activity.

Mr. TAFT. I agree entirely.

Mr. WHEELER. Let me find the language of the decisions to which I refer.

Mr. BALL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Montana yield, and if so to whom?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. Recurring to the question asked by the Senator from Minnesota, as to why section 1 is in the bill——

Mr. BALL. It deals entirely with coverage. If the purpose is not to broaden the coverage, why is it in the bill?

Mr. BARKLEY. It has been explained over and over again that there are two categories included in section 1 which are not now covered; namely, freight forwarders and railroad-owned or controlled truck lines. Aside from that, all section 1 does is to clarify the present law so as to avoid the necessity of dealing with so many individual cases. Last night the Senator from Oregon pointed out that in the 9 years during which this section has been in operation the Retirement Board has been compelled to deal with more than 900 individual cases. In view of that fact, section 1 attempts to spell out in greater detail the present coverage and adds two classes, freight forwarders and railroad-owned truck lines and buses.

The Senator from Montana was about to read a telegram from the Retirement Board in that connection.

Mr. BALL. He read the telegram.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator from Minnesota interrupted him. I hope the Senator from Montana will read the telegram.

Mr. BALL. If the Retirement Board has decided in 900 cases what the present coverage is, it seems to me that it must be pretty well clarified by now. I do not see any reason for this section, except to reach out and cover more industries.

Mr. WHEELER. This is the language of the report:

> Many representations have been made to the committee indicating that persons (other than carriers subject to pt. 1 of the Interstate Commerce Act) engaged in manufacturing, harvesting, storing, distributing, selling, or delivering refrigeration or ice to or into equipment used for refrigeration purposes in connection with the transportation of passengers or property are included in the term "employer," and that therefore their employees will be considered to be railroad employees.

That is the question which confronts us.

> The committee would like to state categorically that there is no purpose or intent to include such persons as employers under the act and that it is the unanimous understanding of the committee that such persons are not so covered.

Mr. BALL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. BALL. If it is the unanimous opinion of the committee that they are not covered by this section, why is it that a member of the committee is offering the pending amendment, which is being supported by several other members of the committee? I do not believe that the language in the report makes any sense, in view of the parliamentary situation at the present moment.

Mr. WHEELER. I cannot account for what is in the mind of an individual Senator. I am simply reading from the report.

Mr. BALL. It is apparent that the minority members of the committee were not consulted when that language was placed in the report because it is perfectly clear, from the fact that they are offering these amendments, that they do not agree with that interpretation.

Mr. WHEELER. I do not know what is in their minds. I did not draft the report myself because I did not happen to be here. I do not know what is in the mind of any individual Senator. I am reading from the report itself.

Mr. BALL. Does not the Senator think that it is a little inconsistent for the report to say that the committee is unanimously of the opinion that the coverage is not extended by the language of section 1, when a member of the committee has offered an amendment to strike out the section because he does not want the coverage extended?

Mr. WHEELER. What difference does it make——

Mr. BALL. The Senator is proposing that we rely upon the courts and the Board accepting the language of a report which obviously on its face has misrepresented the facts as they were before the committee.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. Regardless of whether the report is meticulously accurate in the use of the word "unanimous," the question is what the language means, and what interpretation the Board would place upon it.

Mr. WHEELER. Let us say that only a majority of the committee agreed. After all, when the courts look into such a question as this—when there is any doubt—they always look at what the committee said about it, and what was said in the debates.

Mr. BALL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. BALL. I wonder if the Board will take into account the fact that yesterday on the floor of the Senate the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HAWKES] stated that when he asked the members of the committee present at the meeting at which it was voted to report the bill, he could find only two members who had even read the bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, that sort of a statement was obviously inaccurate.

Mr. BALL. The Senator from New Jersey made that statement, and it was not challenged. There were members of the committee present. He stated that in the meeting he asked every member of the committee who was present, and he found only two who had even read the bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. This particular member of the committee was not present when the Senator from New Jersey made that statement. I do not know how many members of the committee read the report, but I do not recall that anyone asked in the committee how many members had read the bill.

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. HAWKES. I certainly did inquire at the meeting. I do not know whether the majority leader was present when I spoke about this matter yesterday.

Mr. BARKLEY. I was not present.

Mr. HAWKES. I told the facts as to how the bill was put through the committee. I wish to say very definitely that I asked every member if he had read the bill. I do not know that I said that any member had stated that he had done so. I think the Senator from Minnesota was inadvertently incorrect.

Mr. BARKLEY. I was present——

Mr. HAWKES. May I finish my statement?

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course.

Mr. HAWKES. I think I stated very definitely that the Senator from Colorado [Mr. JOHNSON] and the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] had undoubtedly read the bill and read the hearings; but as to other Senators who were present, if there are any of them who wish to challenge that statement, I should like to have them rise and challenge it.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will certainly challenge it. I would have challenged it yesterday if I had been present when the Senator made the statement. I have read the bill.

Mr. WHEELER. The Senator from New Jersey was not the only member of the subcommittee. The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD] was a member of the subcommittee. The Senator knows that there were five members of the subcommittee who held hearings on the bill for a long period of time.

Mr. BARKLEY. And the hearings were held on the bill which is now before the Senate. The subcommittee held hearings on the Wheeler-Wagner-Crosser bill. It certainly would be an injustice to the members of the subcommittee to accuse them of not having read the bill during the whole time they were holding hearings on it. I was not a member of the subcommittee, but I have read the bill and the House report, as well as some of the hearings.

Mr. HAWKES. I do not wish to do an injustice to the majority leader. As I remember, this is the statement which I made: That no member of the committee stated that he thoroughly understood the bill except the chairman of the subcommittee, the Senator from Colorado [Mr. JOHNSON]. The Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] was not present, and my recollection is that every member of the committee stated that he had had no time to study the subject, and had not read the hearings or the report of the subcommittee.

Mr. WHEELER. There is nothing unusual about that. That is a common occurrence, because if we were to read all the reports and all the hearings on every piece of legislation that came before the Senate we could never find time to pass any legislation. Let me say to the Senator from New Jersey, with all due deference, that he does not thoroughly understand the bill, notwithstanding the fact that he has read it and studied it. I think he is placing an entirely erroneous construction on this section.

Mr. HAWKES. I do not believe that any member of the subcommittee understands the bill, and that is the reason why I do not think we are ready to pass it.

Mr. WHEELER. The Senate may not be willing to pass it. I do not know whether it is or not. At least I wish to get the facts before the Senate. There may be some question as to whether or not a certain member of the committee entirely agreed with the report. However, the majority of the committee reported the bill, and the majority of the committee approved the report. But that is not the important thing. The important thing is that I sent a telegram to the Board itself, and I wish to read it again:

> I direct your attention to the second paragraph on page 7 of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee's report on H. R. 1362. If the Board or its counsel has had an opportunity to study this report with reference to the language of the bill, would appreciate knowing whether this paragraph is regarded as correctly stating the meaning and application of section 1 of the bill and whether this section, if enacted, would be administered accordingly.

Let me read again the pertinent part of the committee report:

> Many representations have been made to the committee indicating that persons (other than carriers subject to pt. I of the Interstate Commerce Act) engaged in manufacturing, harvesting, storing, distributing, selling, or delivering refrigeration or ice to or into equipment used for refrigeration purposes in connection with the transportation of passengers or property are included in the term "employer," and that therefore their employees will be considered to be railroad employees. The committee would like to state categorically that there is no purpose or intent to include such persons as employers under the act and that it is the unanimous understanding of the committee that such persons are not so covered. The committee also unanimously understands that notwithstanding the provisions of subsections (2) and (4) of section 1, there is no purpose or intent to include warehouse or trucking companies, or individuals carrying on either of such businesses, within the term "employer," if they are not owned or controlled, directly or indirectly, by, or under common control with, a carrier subject to part I of the Interstate Commerce Act.

Now I read the answer which I received from the Board:

> Our general counsel has studied the report of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee on H. R. 1362, particularly the second paragraph beginning on page 7.

Mr. President, that is the identical paragraph which I have just read—

> He advises me that in his opinion this paragraph correctly states the meaning and application of section 1 of the bill. The administration of this section 1, if enacted, would be in accord with this advice and the intent of Congress as expressed in the committee report.
>
> WILLIAM T. J. KENNEDY,
> Chairman, Railroad Retirement Board.

Let me say that so far as I recall every person who came before the committee, representing the railroad brotherhoods or their counsel or the men themselves, testified exactly to what is contained in this report. So we not only have the statements of the railroad brotherhoods themselves and their counsel, but we also have the committee's report; and, in addition, we have the statement of the Board which must control the administration of the act. All of them agree.

Under those circumstances, it seems entirely impossible that any court would say that any other interpretation could be placed upon the proposed act, inasmuch as the proponents of the bill themselves claim that it does not include anything else and the Senate committee states that it does not include anything else, and the Board itself has said that its counsel so construes it.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. Does not the Senator think, however, that a court might take into consideration the fact that the majority leader offered a concurrent resolution in the nature of an amendment, stating what the interpretation would be? And if that concurrent resolution were rejected, the effect of its rejection would be to indicate that a contrary opinion regarding the interpretation of the act was held; would it not?

Mr. WHEELER. No; I do not agree.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. Does the Senator from Montana think that any court would be influenced by the fact that the Senator from Ohio objected to letting me present the concurrent resolution and have it read—following which I wished to have it printed, so that all Members of the Senate would be able to read it—and that the result was that I had to read it myself? I do not know whether a court would consider that; but if it did, that would tend to offset the fact that I offered it.

Mr. WHEELER. Of course, a lot of doubting Thomases were afraid that the concurrent resolution would have no valid effect.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I am suggesting that if the concurrent resolution failed of adoption in either the House or the Senate, a court would say that the Congress refused to take the action requested, and therefore all the statements of intention in regard to the interpretation of the bill, as they have been read to us by the Senator, would be of no value.

Mr. WHEELER. I am sure the Senator from Ohio does not advance that statement seriously as an argument.

Mr. TAFT. Yes; I advance it seriously. It is exactly what a court would say. Not only do I advance it seriously, but it is true. If the Senate attempts to correct something, but fails to do so, a court would say, "The Senate failed to correct it."

Incidentally, the language used is so plain that it does not matter what interpretation might be offered in connection with it; because when the language is plain, a court will not even refer to an interpretation.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if the Senator from Ohio were called upon to interpret an act, he certainly would give more weight to a committee report on it and to the attitude of the board which was charged with administering it, than he would to an unsuccessful attempt on my part to clarify its meaning in such a way that the board would not have to look at the committee report or the statement by the counsel for the board.

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. HAWKES. I know the Senator from Montana and I know what his purpose is, and I do not question it in any way. He believes in this bill and he wishes it to be enacted into law.

But I desire to read again to the Senator his statement of what he thought at the time when the hearings were held, as shown at page 305 of the hearings of the subcommittee:

> Senator WHEELER. Well, wouldn't the thing to do be to write a definition in, not leave it to a changing definition? In other words, the Interstate Commerce Commission might at some future time change their definition of what was transportation and so forth; whereas, if you wrote definitely into the act a definition, then you would have something that would be stable.

I shall not read any more of that, because what I have read gives the essence of the view which the distinguished Senator from Montana had at the time when the hearings were held before the subcommittee.

Let me ask the Senator whether, as chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee, he ever remembers calling a meeting of the committee to consider this bill in any way?

Mr. WHEELER. No; I do not. One reason why we did not call a meeting of the full committee was that the bill, being a revenue measure had to originate in the House of Representatives and had to pass the House of Representatives first.

Although I appointed a subcommittee to hold hearings on the bill, I did so in order that the subcommittee might study it, so that when the bill came from the House the subcommittee would be familiar with all its phases.

The Senator from New Jersey will recall that when the subcommittee reported to the full committee the members of the subcommittee were not able to agree among themselves. I said that they should get together and should agree, and should submit a report saying how the bill should be amended, if they thought it should be amended. The subcommittee never did that, but waited and waited until the bill came from the House.

When the bill came from the House I was absent in Montana, so I do not know what took place then.

Mr. HAWKES. I intend no criticism at all of the Senator.

Mr. WHEELER. I understand.

Mr. HAWKES. Because I know the Senator has been busy, and I know what he has been doing.

Mr. WHEELER. Well, I did not do it very successfully.

Mr. HAWKES. I regret that.

Mr. WHEELER. I thank the Senator.

Mr. HAWKES. But I say that the committee had the report of the subcommittee; and the chairman and the members of the committee knew that the subcommittee recognized that the situation was so complicated that they did not wish to take the responsibility of making a recommendation, even though for weeks they had studied the bill and had held hearings on it.

In the absence of the chairman of the committee, the majority leader called a meeting of the whole committee. The purpose of the meeting was to report the bill—not to study the bill, but to report it. If any member of the committee wishes to rise now and say that is not so I should like to have him do so.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I say it is not so, for the reason that the subcommittee debated the bill for an hour and a half, although it was not taken up section by section.

Objection to reporting the bill was made at the time by the Senator from New Jersey and other Senators. The situation was explained to the committee, just as it has been explained here. The bill was discussed for about an hour and a half, and then the committee voted to report the bill without amendment.

Mr. HAWKES. I differ with the Senator from Kentucky when he says that the committee spent an hour and a half debating the bill. It seems to me that the committee discussed the substitute motion to lay the bill on the table.

Mr. BARKLEY. At any rate, we discussed it.

Mr. HAWKES. If that amounts to discussing the bill paragraph by paragraph——

Mr. BARKLEY. I did not say that was done.

Mr. HAWKES. If what occurred amounts to discussing the bill as a bill, then I am not capable of understanding the English language or of understanding what happens in a committee meeting.

Mr. President, the committee voted to report the bill, and from my point of view, did so without giving any consideration to the bill. If any member of the committee wishes to disagree with me on that point, I should like to have him stand up and deny it.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I suppose it makes a good showing with the galleries for a Senator to attempt to take a poll of the Senate and to attempt to have Senators stand up and agree or disagree with him. But that is not a very fair way to proceed.

When the bill was before the committee, the Senator from Kansas [Mr. REED] offered a motion to have the committee postpone action on the bill for 2 days; but I held that that motion would not take precedence over the motion to report the bill. Subsequently, the committee did report the bill, and the committee is responsible for voting to report it.

Mr. REED. Mr. President——

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, I wish to reply to the Senator from Kentucky. I think what he has just said is entirely unacceptable to any Member of the Senate. He knows that I have never stood on this floor and made appeals to the galleries. He has done that many times, but I never have. No Member of the Senate will accuse me of having done that sort of thing.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the Senator from New Jersey now is trying to take a poll of the committee. He is attempting to point out a reason for not acting on the bill. He has asked the Members of the Senate to rise and deny the accuracy of his statement as to what happened in the committee. I say that is an unfair way to deal with the committee or with the report from the committee, and it has nothing whatever to do with the merits of the proposed legislation.

Mr. HAWKES. I differ very materially with the view taken by the majority leader.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, let me say that if an attempt is made to have Senators rise and be counted, one after another, in regard to what they believe was done or was not done in a committee hearing, that would create a very chaotic situation. We must take the words of the Senators who have had an opportunity to study the various bills. All of us know that it is impossible for every Senator to read every bill which comes before the Senate. In my judgment, such procedure only brings discredit upon the Senate itself, and I am sure the Senator from New Jersey does not want to do that. He knows, as I know, that an attempt is being made to break down the confidence of the people in the Congress of the United States. That is exactly the tactic which is being pursued in many quarters. It is exactly the tactic which was pursued by Mr. Hitler, Mr. Mussolini, and other persons who sought to tear down parliamentary government. Once parliamentary government is destroyed, no matter how bad it may be and how much it may be improved, there will be chaos and dictatorship. Members of the Senate, regardless of the party to which they belong, should be extremely careful about saying anything or doing anything which might besmirch the Congress of the United States.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I think it should be stated, as it was stated to the committee, that after years of study and after months of delay in regard to this legislation, the House finally passed the bill on July 3. The Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER], the chairman of the committee, had asked me to call a meeting of the committee in the event the House passed the bill so that the committee might consider it and pass upon it. The committee was called together at the earliest possible date. It discussed the bill for an hour and a half, and discussed the parliamentary situation as well. There were members of the committee who felt that the bill should be reported to the Senate, and there were those who felt that it should not be reported. However, it was reported on July 15. No minority views were filed by a single member of the committee, and no member objected to the bill or to the report, or to the fact that the bill had been reported by the committee.

Mr. WHEELER. I thank the Senator. I am perfectly willing to admit that the Congress of the United States is not perfect. Probably our courts are not perfect, and in all probability our executive departments are not perfect. But everything in this world is relative. All we need to do is to go to any other country on the face of the globe and compare its parliamentary government and executive and judicial branches with those of the United States of America. After doing so and returning to America, we may criticize the Congress of the United States as much as we may wish, or criticize the executive and juricial branches if we wish to; but we will have to admit that, with all its infirmities we still have the best form of government to be found anywhere in the world, and that we have abler Representatives and Senators in the Congress of the United States than are to be found in the parliament of any other country. I have been saying that for 24 years, or nearly a quarter of a century. I have seen Senators come and go in this body, but I still say that when we compare the Members of the Senate of the United States with the members of parliaments of the other countries of the world we will come to the conclusion that our elected Representatives and Senators stand far superior to all others.

Consequently, Mr. President, I feel keenly when someone tries to tear down our Government. I am sure that the Senator from New Jersey agrees with me in the statement I have made, and I am confident his suggestion was made inadvertently.

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, to what suggestion does the Senator have reference?

Mr. WHEELER. I have reference to the suggestion of the Senator from New Jersey that everybody should stand up.

Mr. HAWKES. No; I beg the Senator's pardon. I did not say that. I said that if there was present in the Chamber any member of the committee who disagreed with my statement, I wish he would stand up. I did not say everybody should stand up. That is perfectly absurd.

Mr. WHEELER. Very well. Perhaps I misunderstood the Senator. But if we say, in connection with every measure which comes to the floor of the Senate, "Anybody who has not read this bill, stand up," or "Any Senator who was present at the executive session of the committee who does not agree with my statement, stand up," the impression will be given to the country that the Members of the Senate are not conscientious in carrying out their duties. If members of the committee did not read or study the bill, it is their fault because the bill has been pending in the Congress for at least 2 years. If there be any Member of the Senate who did not read the bill, the fault is his because the bill has been available to him for a long time.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. Is it not true that the subcommittee held hearings and made a report, that it took no position but stated a number of controversial points? Since that time the committee never met for the purpose of considering the report. It was never called into session for that purpose, and it never discussed the report until last week when it was suddenly called together and reported the bill to the Senate. Is not that a correct statement?

Mr. WHEELER. I do not think it is entirely correct. The committee studied the bill and held hearings. I called the committee into session and the members could not agree. I suggested to them that they should make a report. I said that if they could not all agree, a majority report and minority views should be filed. But, neither was done. Finally, instead of making a report, they issued an analysis of the bill.

Mr. TAFT. It is called a report.

Mr. WHEELER. If the Senator will read it he will see that it is not a report.

Mr. TAFT. It states five or six major controversies involved in the bill.

Mr. WHEELER. It is an analysis of the bill. "A rose by any other name would smell as sweet." However, what I refer to is an analysis of the bill, and it includes a statement of the controversial points with reference to the bill. We did not call the committee together for the purpose of reporting the bill to the Senate because, as I have already said, that as a revenue bill the measure had to originate in the House of Representatives. It would have been idle and futile for the Interstate Commerce Committee to report the bill until after the House had acted. After the bill was acted upon by the House it was eventually referred to the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate where the controversial issues were taken up and considered. When the bill was messaged to the Senate I was absent and the majority leader later called the committee together. The majority of the members of the committee voted to report the bill.

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. HAWKES. I believe that nearly all Members of the Senate know that the vote in the Interstate Commerce Committee to report out the bill was 11 to 9, and that 3 proxies were used in making up the vote of 11 to report the bill. That fact shows that of the 16 or 17 Members who were present, the vote was evenly divided.

Mr. REED. The vote was 9 to 8.

Mr. HAWKES. No; it was not. Our group used the proxy of one member. The other group used three proxies, and the vote of the committee was evenly divided.

Mr. WHEELER. To what three members of the committee does the Senator refer? I was chairman, and I left my proxy. I was not present.

Mr. HAWKES. I am making no criticism.

Mr. WHEELER. No; but the Senator has given the impression that other Senators left their proxies. The Senator from Arizona [Mr. MCFARLAND] left his proxy, and so did the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD]. The Senator from Minnesota was a member of the subcommittee which considered the bill. I introduced the bill and I think I know something about the matter. I left my proxy with the majority leader. The Senator from Arizona studied the bill, I am sure, and knew something about it. I cannot say whether any of the other Members present knew anything about the bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not know that what I am about to say will add anything to the merits of the discussion, but the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] knew that if the House passed the bill it would subsequently come to the Senate. He specifically authorized me to vote his proxy, and he told me how to vote it. The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD] did the same, and so did the Senator from Arizona [Mr. MCFARLAND]. They knew how they wanted to be voted. They instructed me specifically how they were to be voted, and they were voted according to their instructions.

Mr. HAWKES. Did they leave their instructions with the Senator from Kentucky before they went away?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; they left their instructions with the Senator from Kentucky before they went away.

Mr. HAWKES. How did they know what kind of a bill the committee would consider?

Mr. BARKLEY. They knew that if the bill passed the House as it was being considered there—I refer to the original Crosser bill—they desired to be voted in favor of the report.

Mr. HAWKES. I will not argue with the Senator whether the practice of voting proxies is a good or a bad practice. I think it is a bad practice.

Mr. WHEELER. What does the Senator mean by "bad practice"?

Mr. HAWKES. I think it is bad practice for members of the committee not present to be voted by proxy in connection with important matters.

Mr. BARKLEY. It depends on which side they vote.

Mr. WHEELER. Yes. I have been a member of all the Senate committees, and there is no committee of the Senate of which I know which is not confronted with the necessity at times, in developing quorums, of using proxies. If that practice had not been followed during the past few years there would have been no quorums many times in some of the committees, and the custom of using proxies has been followed since time immemorial. It is a fine thing to have members of the committee present, and I should like always to have them present. But when the Senate of the United States is confronted with a legislative situation such as the one which has prevailed during the past few years, it is physically impossible for Members of the Senate to attend all important meetings of committees because there are frequently four or five separate meetings being held at the same time.

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Montana a question, because I am sure he does not want to leave the intimation in the RECORD that I am in any way trying to bring the Senate or the Congress into disrepute in the United States.

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. HAWKES. Does the Senator think that I am helping to build the Congress up by trying to have rules adopted which the common people, the ordinary man, believe are fair and sound, or does he think it is better to let them run along as they are, and let the feeling he has referred to, which is growing in the country, continue to grow?

Mr. WHEELER. I am stating that what the Senator suggested is a physical impossibility. If we required an absolute quorum at every meeting, and the committees could not vote proxies, the Senate would be tied up, and much essential legislation could not be enacted.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. KNOWLAND. I might say, in passing, that if the Senate, as I hope it will today, shall vote to adopt the conference report on the La Follette bill providing for the organization of the Congress, perhaps we will be able to eliminate some of these difficulties.

Mr. WHEELER. I hope we may be.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. DONNELL. Does the Senator think that under the existing rules of the Senate there is any provision for a quorum to be created other than by the actual physical presence of the persons who are required by the rules to constitute a quorum?

Mr. WHEELER. There was a quorum present. Proxies were not necessary to develop a quorum in connection with this particular measure. There was a quorum of the Members present. But let me say that I heard the question asked the other day as to whether there was anything in the Constitution regarding the counting of proxies. No; there is nothing in the Constitution about it.

Mr. DONNELL. I said, "the rules of the Senate."

Mr. WHEELER. The invariable rule of the Senate has been from the beginning down to the present moment that committees themselves make their own rules; and that practice has been followed. A definite rule may not be found in the rule book, but that has been the custom of the Senate of the United States.

Mr. DONNELL. May I respectfully place in the RECORD paragraph 3 of rule XXV, which I am sure is familiar to the Senator:

QUORUM OF COMMITTEES

3. That the several standing committees of the Senate having a membership of more than three Senators are hereby respectively authorized to fix, each for itself, the number of its members who shall constitute a quorum thereof for the transaction of such business as may be considered by said committee; but in no case shall a committee, acting under authority of this resolution, fix as a quorum thereof any number less than one-third of its entire membership, nor shall any report be made to the Senate that is not authorized by the concurrence of more than one-half of a majority of such entire membership.

Mr. WHEELER. What has that to do with the question before the Senate?

Mr. DONNELL. I understood the Senator to say that, regardless of whether there was a quorum present at the time the pending bill was voted upon, it has been the practice of the Senate to create a quorum by the use of proxies. I ask the Senator if there is anything in the rules of the Senate which, in the case of the committee having six as its requirement for a quorum, would authorize the chairman, acting with five proxies in his pocket, to assemble by himself in a room and constitute a quorum?

Mr. WHEELER. Committees hold hearings day after day when they do not have quorums actually present; but that is entirely beside the point, because there was a quorum present on this occasion, and it has not anything to do with the pending legislation. I do not want to enter into a discussion with the Senator from Missouri of the theory of constitutional government at this particular time, when we are discussing something that is before us for decision. What the Senator is arguing is pure dictum.

Mr. DONNELL. What the Senator said a little while ago, as I understood him, was that the Senate follows the practice of creating a quorum by the use of proxies. I was asking the Senator whether or not there is anything in the rules of the Senate which authorizes the creation of a quorum by the use of proxies.

Mr. WHEELER. I said that if it was necessary to have a quorum present every time a committee met the committees could not have hearings, because they could not get quorums present.

Mr. DONNELL. I do not wish to prolong the question, but I again ask the Senator if there is a rule of the Senate which authorizes the use of proxies in developing a quorum.

Mr. WHEELER. No.

Reverting to the subject under consideration, as I said a while ago, not only has the Interstate Commerce Commission in five different cases, to which I called attention, put an interpretation upon the provisions of the bill, but a committee of the Interstate Commerce Commission has interpreted it, the legal department of the Board which is going to pass upon it has interpreted it, and said how it would be guided by it. No one appearing before the committee opposing or advocating the bill has done anything else but accord with the report of the committee. Under those circumstances, for anyone to say that any court would interpret it otherwise seems to me to be without foundation.

Mr. REED obtained the floor.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, may I express the hope, before the Senator begins, that we may promptly get a vote on the pending amendment? We have been debating the bill since about this time yesterday, but we have not voted on a single amendment yet. I think the fate of the legislation will depend on whether any amendments are adopted, and I hope we may get a vote on the pending amendment without further delay.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I share the desire of the majority leader to have a vote on the pending amendment. I am a member of the committee. I have used no time in my own right, and I am going to take the next 10 minutes to clear up some misunderstandings.

As a member of the committee, I was present. I am sure the Senator from Kentucky did not mean to misrepresent when he said that a motion was made to delay the bill for 2 days so that the full committee could study it and have a recommendation of the subcommittee as to whether amendments should be adopted. Such a motion was never made.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President——

Mr. REED. If the Senator from Kentucky, who has used much time, will let me go forward——

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator did make the suggestion. I thought the motion was made. If he says it was not, I was mistaken; but the committee did not adopt the suggestion, whether it was in the form of a motion or otherwise.

Mr. REED. The Senator from Colorado rather unexpectedly, before the committee had fully discussed the matter, offered a motion to report the bill. That came more quickly than some of us thought it should have come. I offered a substitute for the motion, so as to hold the bill from the Friday when we were meeting over to the next Tuesday, as I recall. Then someone suggested that we might get it done by Monday—or it might have been the other way around.

The Senator from Kentucky, who was presiding in the absence of the chairman of the committee, the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER], refused to put my motion as a substitute for the motion of the Senator from Colorado, so it never was voted upon. The Senator from Kentucky put the motion of the Senator from Colorado, and it was adopted by a vote of 11 to 9, including three proxies.

Mr. President, I desire to correct one more thing. In this report there is a statement to which so much reference has been made, in the second full paragraph on page 7——

Mr. BARKLEY. Will the Senator yield for one correction? The Senator says I refused to put the motion. I held the motion out of order.

Mr. REED. The Senator refused. He said that the motion of the Senator from Colorado had priority over the motion of the Senator from Kansas. In the Senate, when one offers a substitute——

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield a moment?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. HAWKES. May I ask the Senator from Kentucky if the substitute was in order, or does he still hold that it was out of order?

Mr. BARKLEY. If I had not thought it was out of order, I would not have held it to be out of order.

Mr. HAWKES. I am not asking what the Senator thought then.

Mr. BARKLEY. I held it out of order because I regarded it as not being in order, and not a prior motion to the motion to report the bill, which the Senator from Colorado had made.

Mr. HAWKES. I might say to the Senator from Kentucky that I have asked the best parliamentarians around the Senate and the House, and they all agree it was not out of order.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not give a continental how many the Senator asked. I held it was out of order, and I still maintain it was not a prior motion to the motion to report the bill. No one appealed from the decision of the chair at the time, and I have not heard it questioned until now.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, if I may proceed, there has been a great deal of discussion, in which I have participated to a very slight extent, though I am a member of the committee and am cognizant of some of the facts. There is one thing to which I as a member of the committee take exception. In the second paragraph on page 7 of the report occurs this statement:

> The committee would like to state categorically that there is no purpose or intent to include such persons as employers under the act.

If the statement had stopped there it might have been accepted as reasonably correct. In other words, what we were doing in the committee was to talk about whether or not certain people should come under the bill, and the opinion was unanimous that they should not. Then the discussion went to the point of the intent, and what the committee thought should be done. The committee was unanimous that these persons should not be included. If the last statement had been left out of this sentence, I would not have objected to it so much but the committee proceeded:

> And that it is the unanimous understanding of the committee that such persons are not so covered.

There is no basis of fact for that statement, because a majority of the committee were of the mind that they should not be covered, and there was some opinion that there was no intention to cover them. In the committee that day the majority leader, who was presiding, asked the legislative counsel, who was present, whether or not we could take care of that situation in the report, and what I have read and other parts of the report represent an effort on the part of the person writing the report to take care of that situation. But it is only fair to say that in the committee meeting that day, the legislative counsel strongly intimated that it did not make much difference in what kind of language the report was couched, for the court might find that the language of the act was so plain that the court would take the language as written in the act, and not the language placed in the report by the committee. Of course if there were some ambiguity or obscurity, that would be different.

Mr. President, I desire to refer to what the Senator from Montana stated again today. I wish he would not continue to make the statement. The Interstate Commerce Act gives to the Interstate Commerce Commission one complete duty, and that is to regulate common carriers by railroad, and, so far as railroad transportation is concerned, the Interstate Commerce Commission has no jurisdiction to regulate anything but a carrier. In connection with the carriage of goods there are some incidental services performed, and the Interstate Commerce Commission has held over and over again that it has no power to regulate the agencies performing those services, such as warehousemen, those engaged in icing, and those engaged in refrigerating. The Commission has repeatedly held, indeed, has universally held, that it has no power to regulate any one but the carrier itself, and that it has no power to regulate warehousemen and others in the same category. There is no dispute on that point, and there is nothing in the Interstate Commerce Act which would give the Commission that power.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President——

Mr. REED. May I be permitted to proceed for a moment, and then I shall be happy to yield to the Senator from Montana.

The first time I ever saw in any bill language that would bring all these people under regulation and control, was the language on page 2 of House bill 1362. I dislike to take even this much time of the Senate, but there is a wrong impression left by what has been stated. The Interstate Commerce Act is clear. It gives the Commission power to regulate carriers, and nothing else, but in connection with transportation, incidental services are rendered. The Commission can regulate transportation by carriers. It cannot and never has even undertaken to regulate the people rendering incidental services.

In paragraph 3 of section 1 there appears this language:

> The term "transportation" as used in this part shall include locomotives, cars, and other vehicles, vessels, and all instrumentalities and facilities of shipment or carriage, irrespective of ownership or of any contract, express or implied, for the use thereof, and all services in connection with the receipt, delivery, elevation, and transfer in transit, ventilation, refrigeration or icing, storage and handling of property transported.

In the bill before us there is this language:

> (2) Any person, other than a carrier regulated under part I of the Interstate Commerce Act, which, pursuant to arrangements with a carrier or otherwise, performs, for hire, with respect to passengers or property transported, being transported, or to be transported by a carrier, any service included within the term "transportation" as defined in section 1 (3) of the Interstate Commerce Act, whether or not such service is offered under railroad tariffs.

Mr. President, under that language, which is clear, unambiguous, and refers to a provision of the Interstate Commerce Act, there is no question in the world that persons engaged in icing service, those engaged in trucking, and warehousemen will be brought within the provisions of this bill if it is enacted into law, and there is nothing the Interstate Commerce Commission has ever said, there is no report it has ever made, there is no case it has ever decided which allows room for a different understanding.

Mr. President, I agree with my good friend the Senator from Montana that the freedom, liberties, and rights of the people of the world are better preserved by a legislature or a parliament, by whatever name it may be called, than by any other means. No people in the world ever lost their liberty through a parliamentary body. Oppression, tyranny, and dictatorship have come from the executive branch of government; but, Mr. President, if there was ever anything that would tend to bring the Senate of the United States into disrepute, it is this instant proceeding. The whole thing is so fantastic in its violation of all sound parliamentary and legislative rules and practices that if this proceeding does not cause the people of the country to lose faith I do not know what will.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Megill, one of its clerks, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 2177) to provide for increased efficiency in the legislative branch of the Government, with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills and joint resolution, and they were signed by the President pro tempore:

H. R. 388. An act to amend section 201 (g) of the Nationality Act of 1940 (54 Stat. 1138-1139; 8 U. S. C. 601);

H. R. 2091. An act to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims of the United States to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim, or claims, of Joseph E. Bennett, doing business as Joseph E. Bennett Co.;

H. R. 2192. An act for the relief of Andre Dacharry;

H. R. 3543. An act for the relief of Elmer D. Thompson and the legal guardian of James Thompson;

H. R. 5311. An act to amend Revised Statutes, 4921 (U. S. C. A., title 35, Patents, sec. 70), providing that damages be ascertained on the basis of compensation for infringement;

H. R. 5590. An act to provide for the uniform administration of efficiency ratings;

H. R. 5911. An act to establish an Office of Naval Research in the Department of the Navy; to plan, foster, and encourage scientific research in recognition of its paramount importance as related to the maintenance of future naval power, and the preservation of national security; to provide within the Department of the Navy a single office, which, by contract and otherwise, shall be able to obtain, coordinate, and make available to all bureaus and activities of the Department of the Navy world-wide scientific information and the necessary services for conducting specialized and imaginative research; to establish a Naval Research Advisory Committee consisting of persons preeminent in the fields of science and research to consult with and advise the Chief of such Office in matters pertaining to research;

H. R. 6528. An act to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces to commemorate the life and perpetuate the ideals and teachings of Booker T. Washington; and

H. J. Res. 305. Joint resolution providing for membership and participation by the United States in the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization, and authorizing an appropriation therefor.

ORGANIZATION OF THE CONGRESS

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I ask that a message from the House announcing its action on Senate bill 2177 be laid before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SWIFT in the chair) laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2177) to provide for increased efficiency in the legislative branch of the Government, which was to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

SHORT TITLE

That (a) this act, divided into titles and sections according to the following table of contents, may be cited as the "Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946":

(Table of contents)

TITLE I—CHANGES IN RULES OF SENATE AND HOUSE

Sec. 101. Rule-making power of the Senate and House.

PART 1—STANDING RULES OF THE SENATE

Sec. 102. Standing committees of the Senate.
Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.
Committee on Appropriations.
Committee on Armed Services.
Committee on Banking and Currency.
Committee on Civil Service.
Committee on the District of Columbia.
Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.
Committee on Finance.
Committee on Foreign Relations.
Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.
Committee on the Judiciary.
Committee on Labor and Public Welfare.
Committee on Public Lands.
Committee on Public Works.
Committee on Rules and Administration.
Sec. 103. Appropriations.

PART 2—RULES OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Sec. 121. Standing committees of the House of Representatives:
Committee on Agriculture.
Committee on Appropriations.
Committee on Armed Services.
Committee on Banking and Currency.
Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.
Committee on the District of Columbia.
Committee on Education and Labor.
Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.
Committee on Foreign Affairs.
Committee on House Administration.
Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.
Committee on the Judiciary.
Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.
Committee on Public Lands.
Committee on Public Works.
Committee on Rules.
Committee on un-American Activities.
Committee on Veterans' Affairs.
Committee on Ways and Means.
Sec. 122. Delegates and Resident Commissioner.
Sec. 123. Reference of private claims bills.

PART 3—PROVISIONS APPLICABLE TO BOTH HOUSES

Sec. 131. Private bills banned.
Sec. 132. Congressional adjournment.
Sec. 133. Committee procedure.
Sec. 134. Committee powers.
Sec. 135. Conference rules on amendments in nature of substitute.
Sec. 136. Legislative oversight by standing committees.
Sec. 137. Decisions on questions of committee jurisdiction.
Sec. 138. Legislative budget.
Sec. 139. Hearings and reports by Appropriations Committees.
Sec. 140. Records of Congress.
Sec. 141. Preservation of committee hearings.
Sec. 142. Effective date.

TITLE II—MISCELLANEOUS

PART 1—STATUTORY PROVISIONS RELATING TO CONGRESSIONAL PERSONNEL

Sec. 201. Increase in compensation for certain congressional officers.
Sec. 202. Committee staffs.
Sec. 203. Legislative Reference Service.
Sec. 204. Office of the Legislative Counsel.
Sec. 205. Studies by Comptroller General.
Sec. 206. Expenditure analyses by Comptroller General.
Sec. 207. Correction of military and naval records.

PART 2—STATUTORY PROVISIONS RELATING TO COMMITTEES OF CONGRESS

Sec. 221. Improvement of CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.
Sec. 222. Joint Committee on Printing.
Sec. 223. Joint Committee on the Library.
Sec. 224. Transfer of functions.
Sec. 225. Joint Committee on the Economic Report.
Sec. 226. Economic Report of the President.

PART 3—PROVISIONS RELATING TO CAPITOL AND PAGES

Sec. 241. Remodeling of caucus rooms and restaurants.
Sec. 242. Assignment of Capitol space.
Sec. 243. Senate and House pages.
Sec. 244. Authorization of appropriations and personnel.
Sec. 245. Effective date.

TITLE III—REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT

Sec. 301. Short title.
Sec. 302. Definitions.
Sec. 303. Detailed accounts of contributions.
Sec. 304. Receipts for contributions.
Sec. 305. Statements to be filed with Clerk of House.
Sec. 306. Statement preserved for 2 years.
Sec. 307. Persons to whom applicable.
Sec. 308. Registration with Secretary of the Senate and Clerk of the House.
Sec. 309. Reports and statements to be made under oath.
Sec. 310. Penalties.
Sec. 311. Exemption.

TITLE IV—FEDERAL TORT CLAIMS ACT

PART 1—SHORT TITLE AND DEFINITIONS

Sec. 401. Short title.
Sec. 402. Definitions.

PART 2—ADMINISTRATIVE ADJUSTMENT OF TORT CLAIMS AGAINST THE UNITED STATES

Sec. 403. Claims of $1,000 or less.
Sec. 404. Reports.

PART 3—SUITS ON TORT CLAIMS AGAINST THE UNITED STATES

Sec. 410. Jurisdiction.
Sec. 411. Procedure.
Sec. 412. Review.
Sec. 413. Compromise.

PART 4—PROVISIONS COMMON TO PART 2 AND PART 3

Sec. 420. One year statute of limitations.
Sec. 421. Exceptions.
Sec. 422. Attorneys' fees.
Sec. 423. Exclusiveness of remedy.
Sec. 424. Certain statutes inapplicable.

TITLE V—GENERAL BRIDGE ACT

Sec. 501. Short title.
Sec. 502. Consent of Congress.
Sec. 503. Tools.
Sec. 504. Acquisition by public agencies.
Sec. 505. Statements of cost.
Sec. 506. Sinking fund.
Sec. 507. Applicability of title.
Sec. 508. International bridges.
Sec. 509. Eminent domain.
Sec. 510. Penalties.
Sec. 511. Rights reserved.

TITLE VI—COMPENSATION AND RETIREMENT PAY OF MEMBERS OF CONGRESS

Sec. 601. Compensation of Members of Congress.
Sec. 602. Retirement pay of Members of Congress.

SEPARABILITY CLAUSE

(b) If any provision of this act or the application thereof to any person or circumstances is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of the act and of the application of such provision to other persons and circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

TITLE I—CHANGES IN RULES OF SENATE AND HOUSE

Rule-making power of the Senate and House

SEC. 101. The following sections of this title are enacted by the Congress:

(a) As an exercise of the rule-making power of the Senate and the House of Representatives, respectively, and as such they shall be considered as part of the rules of each House, respectively, or of that House to which they specifically apply; and such rules shall supersede other rules only to the extent that they are inconsistent therewith; and

(b) With full recognition of the constitutional right of either House to change such rules (so far as relating to the procedure in such House) at any time, in the same manner and to the same extent as in the case of any other rule of such House.

PART 1—STANDING RULES OF THE SENATE

Standing committeees of the Senate

SEC. 102. Rule XXV of the Standing Rules of the Senate is amended to read as follows:

"RULE XXV

"STANDING COMMITTEES

"(1) The following standing committees shall be appointed at the commencement of each Congress, with leave to report by bill or otherwise:

"(a) Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Agriculture generally.

"2. Inspection of livestock and meat products.

"3. Animal industry and diseases of animals.

"4. Adulteration of seeds, insect pests, and protection of birds and animals in forest reserves.

"5. Agricultural colleges and experiment stations.

"6. Forestry in general, and forest reserves other than those created from the public domain.

"7. Agricultural economics and research.

"8. Agricultural and industrial chemistry.

"9. Dairy industry.

"10. Entomology and plant quarantine.

"11. Human nutrition and home economics.

"12. Plant industry, soils, and agricultural engineering.

"13. Agricultural educational extension services.

"14. Extension of farm credit and farm security.

"15. Rural electrification.

"16. Agricultural production and marketing and stabilization of prices of agricultural products.

"17. Crop insurance and soil conservation.

"(b) Committee on Appropriations, to consist of 21 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Appropriation of the revenue for the support of the Government.

"(c) Committee on Armed Services, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Common defense generally.

"2. The War Department and the Military Establishment generally.

"3. The Navy Department and the Naval Establishment generally.

"4. Soldiers' and sailors' homes.

"5. Pay, promotion, retirement, and other benefits and privileges of members of the armed forces.

"6. Selective service.

"7. Size and composition of the Army and Navy.

"8. Forts, arsenals, military reservations, and navy yards.
"9. Ammunition depots.
"10. Maintenance and operation of the Panama Canal, including the administration, sanitation, and government of the Canal Zone.
"11. Conservation, development, and use of naval petroleum and oil-shale reserves.
"12. Strategic and critical materials necessary for the common defense.

"(d) Committee on Banking and Currency, to consist of 13 Senators to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:
"1. Banking and currency generally.
"2. Financial aid to commerce and industry, other than matters relating to such aid which are specifically assigned to other committees under this rule.
"3. Deposit insurance.
"4. Public and private housing.
"5. Federal Reserve System.
"6. Gold and silver, including the coinage thereof.
"7. Issuance of notes and redemption thereof.
"8. Valuation and revaluation of the dollar.
"9. Control of prices of commodities, rents, or services.

"(e) Committee on Civil Service, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:
"1. The Federal civil service generally.
"2. The status of officers and employees of the United States, including their compensation, classification, and retirement.
"3. The postal service generally, including the railway mail service, and measures relating to ocean mail and pneumatic-tube service; but excluding post roads.
"4. Postal-savings banks.
"5. Census and the collection of statistics generally.
"6. The National Archives.

"(f) Committee on the District of Columbia, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:
"1. All measures relating to the municipal affairs of the District of Columbia in general, other than appropriations therefor, including—
"2. Public health and safety, sanitation, and quarantine regulations.
"3. Regulation of sale of intoxicating liquors.
"4. Adulteration of food and drugs.
"5. Taxes and tax sales.
"6. Insurance, executors, administrators, wills, and divorce.
"7. Municipal and juvenile courts.
"8. Incorporation and organization of societies.
"9. Municipal code and amendments to the criminal and corporation laws.

"(g) (1) Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:
"(A) Budget and accounting measures, other than appropriations.
"(B) Reorganizations in the executive branch of the Government.
"(2) Such committee shall have the duty of—
"(A) receiving and examining reports of the Comptroller General of the United States and of submitting such recommendations to the Senate as it deems necessary or desirable in connection with the subject matter of such reports;
"(B) studying the operation of Government activities at all levels with a view to determining its economy and efficiency;
"(C) evaluating the effects of laws enacted to reorganize the legislative and executive branches of the Government;
"(D) studying intergovernmental relationships between the United States and the States and municipalities, and between the United States and international organizations of which the United States is a member.

"(h) Committee on Finance, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:
"1. Revenue measures generally.
"2. The bonded debt of the United States.
"3. The deposit of public moneys.
"4. Customs, collection districts, and ports of entry and delivery.
"5. Reciprocal trade agreements.
"6. Transportation of dutiable goods.
"7. Revenue measures relating to the insular possessions.
"8. Tariffs and import quotas, and matters related thereto.
"9. National social security.
"10. Veterans' measures generally.
"11. Pensions of all the wars of the United States, general and special.
"12. Life insurance issued by the Government on account of service in the armed forces.
"13. Compensation of veterans.

"(i) Committee on Foreign Relations, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:
"1. Relations of the United States with foreign nations generally.
"2. Treaties.
"3. Establishment of boundary lines between the United States and foreign nations.
"4. Protection of American citizens abroad and expatriation.
"5. Neutrality.
"6. International conferences and congresses.
"7. The American National Red Cross.
"8. Intervention abroad and declarations of war.
"9. Measures relating to the diplomatic service.
"10. Acquisition of land and buildings for embassies and legations in foreign countries.
"11. Measures to foster commercial intercourse with foreign nations and to safeguard American business interests abroad.
"12. United Nations organization and international financial and monetary organizations.
"13. Foreign loans.

"(j) Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:
"1. Interstate and foreign commerce generally.
"2. Regulation of interstate railroads, busses, trucks, and pipe lines.
"3. Communication by telephone, telegraph, radio, and television.
"4. Civil aeronautics.
"5. Merchant marine generally.
"6. Registering and licensing of vessels and small boats.
"7. Navigation and the laws relating thereto, including pilotage.
"8. Rules and international arrangements to prevent collisions at sea.
"9. Merchant marine officers and seamen.
"10. Measures relating to the regulation of common carriers by water and to the inspection of merchant-marine vessels, lights and signals, life-saving equipment, and fire protection on such vessels.
"11. Coast and Geodetic Survey.
"12. The Coast Guard, including life-saving service, lighthouses, lightships, and ocean derelicts.
"13. The United States Coast Guard and Merchant Marine Academies.
"14. Weather Bureau.
"15. Except as provided in paragraph (c), the Panama Canal and interoceanic canals generally.
"16. Inland waterways.
"17. Fisheries and wildlife, including research, restoration, refuges, and conservation.
"18. Bureau of Standards including standardization of weights and measures and the metric system.

"(k) Committee on the Judiciary, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:
"1. Judicial proceedings, civil and criminal, generally.
"2. Constitutional amendments.
"3. Federal courts and judges.
"4. Local courts in the Territories and possessions.
"5. Revision and codification of the statutes of the United States.
"6. National penitentiaries.
"7. Protection of trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies.
"8. Holidays and celebrations.
"9. Bankruptcy, mutiny, espionage, and counterfeiting.
"10. State and Territorial boundary lines.
"11. Meetings of Congress, attendance of Members, and their acceptance of incompatible offices.
"12. Civil liberties.
"13. Patents, copyrights, and trade-marks.
"14. Patent Office.
"15. Immigration and naturalization.
"16. Apportionment of Representatives.
"17. Measures relating to claims against the United States.
"18. Interstate compacts generally.

"(l) Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:
"1. Measures relating to education, labor, or public welfare generally.
"2. Mediation and arbitration of labor disputes.
"3. Wages and hours of labor.
"4. Convict labor and the entry of goods made by convicts into interstate commerce.
"5. Regulation or prevention of importation of foreign laborers under contract.
"6. Child labor.
"7 Labor statistics.
"8. Labor standards.
"9. School-lunch program.
"10. Vocational rehabilitation
"11. Railroad labor and railroad retirement and unemployment, except revenue measures relating thereto.
"12. United States Employees Compensation Commission.
"13. Columbia Institution for the Deaf, Dumb, and Blind; Howard University; Freedmen's Hospital; and St. Elizabeths Hospital.
"14. Public health and quarantine.
"15. Welfare of miners.
"16. Vocational rehabilitation and education of veterans.
"17. Veterans' hospitals, medical care and treatment of veterans.
"18. Soldiers' and sailors' civil relief.
"19. Readjustment of servicemen to civil life.

"(m) Committee on Public Lands, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:
"1. Public lands generally, including entry, easements, and grazing thereon.
"2. Mineral resources of the public lands.
"3. Forfeiture of land grants and alien ownership, including alien ownership of mineral lands.

"4. Forest reserves and national parks created from the public domain.

"5. Military parks and battlefields, and national cemeteries.

"6. Preservation of prehistoric ruins and objects of interest on the public domain.

"7. Measures relating generally to Hawaii, Alaska, and the insular possessions of the United States, except those affecting their revenue and appropriations.

"8. Irrigation and reclamation, including water supply for reclamation projects, and easements of public lands for irrigation projects.

"9. Interstate compacts relating to apportionment of waters for irrigation purposes.

"10. Mining interests generally.

"11. Mineral land laws and claims and entries thereunder.

"12. Geological survey.

"13. Mining schools and experimental stations.

"14. Petroleum conservation and conservation of the radium supply in the United States.

"15. Relations of the United States with the Indians and the Indian tribes.

"16. Measures relating to the care, education, and management of Indians, including the care and allotment of Indian lands and general special measures relating to claims which are paid out of Indian funds.

"(n) Committee on Public Works, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Flood control and improvement of rivers and harbors.

"2. Public works for the benefit of navigation, and bridges and dams (other than international bridges and dams).

"3. Water power.

"4. Oil and other pollution of navigable waters.

"5. Public buildings and occupied or improved grounds of the United States generally.

"6. Measures relating to the purchase of sites and construction of post offices, customhouses, Federal courthouses, and Government buildings within the District of Columbia.

"7. Measures relating to the Capitol Building and the Senate and House Office Buildings.

"8. Measures relating to the construction or reconstruction, maintenance, and care of the buildings and grounds of the Botanic Gardens, the Library of Congress, and the Smithsonian Institution.

"9. Public reservations and parks within the District of Columbia, including Rock Creek Park and the Zoological Park.

"10. Measures relating to the construction of maintenance of roads and post roads.

"(o) (1) Committee on Rules and Administration, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"(A) Matters relating to the payment of money out of the contingent fund of the Senate or creating a charge upon the same; except that any resolution relating to substantive matter within the jurisdiction of any other standing committee of the Senate shall be first referred to such committee.

"(B) Except as provided in paragraph (n) 8, matters relating to the Library of Congress and the Senate Library; statuary and pictures; acceptance or purchase of works of art for the Capitol; the Botanic Gardens; management of the Library of Congress; purchase of books and manuscripts; erection of monuments to the memory of individuals.

"(C) Except as provided in paragraph (n) 8, matters relating to the Smithsonian Institution and the incorporation of similar institutions.

"(D) Matters relating to the election of the President, Vice President, or Members of Congress; corrupt practices; contested elections; credentials and qualifications; Federal elections generally; Presidential succession.

"(E) Matters relating to parliamentary rules; floor and gallery rules; Senate Restaurant; administration of the Senate Office Building and of the Senate wing of the Capitol; assignment of office space; and services to the Senate.

"(F) Matters relating to printing and correction of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

"(2) Such committee shall also have the duty of examining all bills, amendments, and joint resolutions after passage by the Senate; and, in cooperation with the Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives, of examining all bills and joint resolutions which shall have passed both Houses, to see that the same are correctly enrolled; and when signed by the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate, shall forthwith present the same, when they shall have originated in the Senate, to the President of the United States in person, and report the fact and date of such presentation to the Senate. Such committee shall also have the duty of assigning office space in the Senate wing of the Capitol and in the Senate Office Building.

"(2) Each standing committee shall continue and have the power to act until their successors are appointed.

"(3) Each standing committee is authorized to fix the number of its members (but not less than one-third of its entire membership) who shall constitute a quorum thereof for the transaction of such business as may be considered by said committee, subject to the provisions of section 133 (d) of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946.

"(4) Each Senator shall serve on two standing committees and no more; except that Senators of the majority party who are members of the Committee on the District of Columbia or of the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments may serve on three standing committees and no more."

Appropriations

SEC. 103. Rule XVI of the Standing Rules of the Senate is amended to read as follows:

"RULE XVI

"AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS

"1. All general appropriation bills shall be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and no amendments shall be received to any general appropriation bill the effect of which will be to increase an appropriation already contained in the bill, or to add a new item of appropriation, unless it be made to carry out the provisions of some existing law, or treaty stipulation, or act, or resolution previously passed by the Senate during that session; or unless the same be moved by direction of a standing or select committee of the Senate, or proposed in pursuance of an estimate submitted in accordance with law.

"2. The Committee on Appropriations shall not report an appropriation bill containing amendments proposing new or general legislation or any restriction on the expenditure of the funds appropriated which proposes a limitation not authorized by law if such restriction is to take effect or cease to be effective upon the happening of a contingency, and if an appropriation bill is reported to the Senate containing amendments proposing new or general legislation or any such restriction, a point of order may be made against the bill, and if the point is sustained, the bill shall be recommitted to the Committee on Appropriations.

"3. All amendments to general appropriation bills moved by direction of a standing or select committee of the Senate, proposing to increase an appropriation already contained in the bill, or to add new items of appropriation, shall, at least one day before they are considered, be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and when actually proposed to the bill no amendment proposing to increase the amount stated in such amendment shall be received; in like manner, amendments proposing new items of appropriation to river and harbor bills, establishing post roads, or proposing new post roads, shall, before being considered, be referred to the Committee on Public Works.

"4. No amendment which proposes general legislation shall be received to any general appropriation bill nor shall any amendment not germane or relevant to the subject matter contained in the bill be received; nor shall any amendment to any item or clause of such bill be received which does not directly relate thereto; nor shall any restriction on the expenditure of the funds appropriated which proposes a limitation not authorized by law be received if such restriction is to take effect or cease to be effective upon the happening of a contingency; and all questions of relevancy of amendments under this rule, when raised, shall be submitted to the Senate and be decided without debate; and any such amendment or restriction to a general appropriation bill may be laid on the table without prejudice to the bill.

"5. No amendment, the object of which is to provide for a private claim, shall be received to any general appropriation bill, unless it be to carry out the provisions of an existing law or a treaty stipulation, which shall be cited on the face of the amendment.

"6. (a) Three members of the following-named committees, to be selected by their respective committees, shall be ex officio members of the Committee on Appropriations, to serve on said committee when the annual appropriation bill making appropriations for the purposes specified in the following table opposite the name of the committee is being considered by the Committee on Appropriations:

Name of committee	Purpose of appropriation
Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.	For the Department of Agriculture.
Committee on Civil Service.	For the Post Office Department.
Committee on Armed Services.	For the Department of War; for the Department of the Navy.
Committee on the District of Columbia.	For the District of Columbia.
Committee on Public Works.	For rivers and harbors.
Committee on Foreign Relations.	For the diplomatic and consular service.

"(b) At least one member of each committee enumerated in subparagraph (a), to be selected by his or their respective committees, shall be a member of any conference committee appointed to confer with the House upon the annual appropriation bill making appropriations for the purposes specified in the foregoing table opposite the name of his or their respective committee.

"7. When a point of order is made against any restriction on the expenditure of funds appropriated in a general appropriation bill on the ground that the restriction violates this rule, the rule shall be construed strictly and, in case of doubt, in favor of the point of order."

PART 2—RULES OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Standing committees of the House of Representatives

SEC. 121. (a) Rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended to read as follows:

"RULE X

"STANDING COMMITTEES

"(a) There shall be elected by the House, at the commencement of each Congress, the following standing committees:

"1. Committee on Agriculture, to consist of 27 Members.
"2. Committee on Appropriations, to consist of 43 Members.
"3. Committee on Armed Services, to consist of 33 Members.
"4. Committee on Banking and Currency, to consist of 27 Members.
"5. Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, to consist of 25 Members.
"6. Committee on the District of Columbia, to consist of 25 Members.
"7. Committee on Education and Labor, to consist of 25 Members.
"8. Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, to consist of 25 Members.
"9. Committee on Foreign Affairs, to consist of 25 Members.
"10. Committee on House Administration, to consist of 25 Members.
"11. Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to consist of 27 Members.
"12. Committee on the Judiciary, to consist of 27 Members.
"13. Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, to consist of 25 Members.
"14. Committee on Public Lands, to consist of 25 Members.
"15. Committee on Public Works, to consist of 27 Members.
"16. Committee on Rules, to consist of 12 Members.
"17. Committee on Un-American Activities, to consist of nine Members.
"18. Committee on Veterans' Affairs, to consist of 27 Members.
"19. Committee on Ways and Means, to consist of 25 Members.

"(b) (1) The Speaker shall appoint all select and conference committees which shall be ordered by the House from time to time.

"(2) At the commencement of each Congress, the House shall elect as chairman of each standing committee one of the Members thereof; in the temporary absence of the chairman, the Member next in rank in the order named in the election of the committee, and so on, as often as the case shall happen, shall act as chairman; and in case of a permanent vacancy in the chairmanship of any such committee the House shall elect another chairman.

"(3) All vacancies in standing committees in the House shall be filled by election by the House. Each Member shall be elected to serve on one standing committee and no more; except that Members who are elected to serve on the Committee on the District of Columbia or on the Committee on Un-American Activities may be elected to serve on two standing committees and no more, and Members of the majority party who are elected to serve on the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments or on the Committee on House Administration may be elected to serve on two standing committees and no more."

(b) Rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended to read as follows:

"RULE XI

"POWERS AND DUTIES OF COMMITTEES

"(1) All proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the subjects listed under the standing committees named below shall be referred to such committees, respectively: Provided, That unless otherwise provided herein, any matter within the jurisdiction of a standing committee prior to January 2, 1947, shall remain subject to the jurisdiction of that committee or of the consolidated committee succeeding generally to the jurisdiction of that committee.

"(a) Committee on Agriculture.
"1. Agriculture generally.
"2. Inspection of livestock and meat products.
"3. Animal industry and diseases of animals.
"4. Adulteration of seeds, insect pests, and protection of birds and animals in forest reserves.
"5. Agricultural colleges and experiment stations.
"6. Forestry in general, and forest reserves other than those created from the public domain.
"7. Agricultural economics and research.
"8. Agricultural and industrial chemistry.
"9. Dairy industry.
"10. Entomology and plant quarantine.
"11. Human nutrition and home economics.
"12. Plant industry, soils, and agricultural engineering.
"13. Agricultural educational extension services.
"14. Extension of farm credit and farm security.
"15. Rural electrification.
"16. Agricultural production and marketing and stabilization of prices of agricultural products.
"17. Crop insurance and soil conservation.
"(b) Committee on Appropriations.
"1. Appropriation of the revenue for the support of the Government.
"(c) Committee on Armed Services.
"1. Common defense generally.
"2. The War Department and the Military Establishment generally.
"3. The Navy Department and the Naval Establishment generally.
"4. Soldiers' and sailors' homes.
"5. Pay, promotion, retirement, and other benefits and privileges of members of the armed forces.
"6. Selective service.
"7. Size and composition of the Army and Navy.
"8. Forts, arsenals, military reservations, and navy yards.
"9. Ammunition depots.
"10. Conservation, development, and use of naval petroleum and oil shale reserves.
"11. Strategic and critical materials necessary for the common defense.
"12. Scientific research and development in support of the armed services.
"(d) Committee on Banking and Currency.
"1. Banking and currency generally.
"2. Financial aid to commerce and industry, other than matters relating to such aid which are specifically assigned to other commitees under this rule.
"3. Deposit insurance.
"4. Public and private housing.
"5. Federal Reserve System.
"6. Gold and silver, including the coinage thereof.
"7. Issuance of notes and redemption thereof.
"8. Valuation and revaluation of the dollar.
"9. Control of prices of commodities, rents, or services.
"(e) Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.
"1. The Federal civil service generally.
"2. The status of officers and employees of the United States, including their compensation, classification, and retirement.
"3. The postal service generally, including the railway mail service, and measures relating to ocean mail and pneumatic-tube service; but excluding post roads.
"4. Postal-savings banks.
"5. Census and the collection of statistics generally.
"6. The National Archives.
"(f) Committee on the District of Columbia.
"1. All measures relating to the municipal affairs of the District of Columbia in general, other than appropriations therefor, including—
"2. Public health and safety, sanitation, and quarantine regulations.
"3. Regulation of sale of intoxicating liquors.
"4. Adulteration of food and drugs.
"5. Taxes and tax sales.
"6. Insurance, executors, administrators, wills, and divorce.
"7. Municipal and juvenile courts.
"8. Incorporation and organization of societies.
"9. Municipal code and amendments to the criminal and corporation laws.
"(g) Committee on Education and Labor.
"1. Measures relating to education or labor generally.
"2. Mediation and arbitration of labor disputes.
"3. Wages and hours of labor.
"4. Convict labor and the entry of goods made by convicts into interstate commerce.
"5. Regulation or prevention of importation of foreign laborers under contract.
"6. Child labor.
"7. Labor statistics.
"8. Labor standards.
"9. School-lunch program.
"10. Vocational rehabilitation.
"11. United States Employees' Compensation Commission.
"12. Columbia Institution for the Deaf, Dumb, and Blind; Howard University; Freedmen's Hospital; and Saint Elizabeths Hospital.
"13. Welfare of miners.
"(h) (1) Committee on expenditures in the Executive Departments.
"(A) Budget and accounting measures, other than appropriations.
"(B) Reorganizations in the executive branch of the Government.
"(2) Such committee shall have the duty of—
"(A) receiving and examining reports of the Comptroller General of the United States and of submitting such recommendations to the House as it deems necessary or desirable in connection with the subject matter of such reports;
"(B) studying the operation of Government activities at all levels with a view to determining its economy and efficiency;
"(C) evaluating the effects of laws enacted to reorganize the legislative and executive branches of the Government;
"(D) studying intergovernmental relationships between the United States and the States and municipalities, and between the United States and international organizations of which the United States is a member.
"(i) Committee on Foreign Affairs.
"1. Relations of the United States with foreign nations generally.
"2. Establishment of boundary lines between the United States and foreign nations.
"3. Protection of American citizens abroad and expatriation.
"4. Neutrality.
"5. International conferences and congresses.
"6. The American National Red Cross.
"7. Intervention abroad and declarations of war.
"8. Measures relating to the diplomatic service.
"9. Acquisition of land and buildings for embassies and legations in foreign countries.
"10. Measures to foster commercial intercourse with foreign nations and to safeguard American business interests abroad.
"11. United Nations organization and international financial and monetary organizations.
"12. Foreign loans.
"(j) (1) Committee on House Administration.
"(A) Employment of persons by the House, including clerks for Members and committees, and reporters of debates.
"(B) Expenditure of the contingent fund of the House.
"(C) The auditing and settling of all accounts which may be charged to the contingent fund.
"(D) Measures relating to accounts of the House generally.
"(E) Appropriations from the contingent fund.

"4. Forest reserves and national parks created from the public domain.

"5. Military parks and battlefields, and national cemeteries.

"6. Preservation of prehistoric ruins and objects of interest on the public domain.

"7. Measures relating generally to Hawaii, Alaska, and the insular possessions of the United States, except those affecting their revenue and appropriations.

"8. Irrigation and reclamation, including water supply for reclamation projects, and easements of public lands for irrigation projects.

"9. Interstate compacts relating to apportionment of waters for irrigation purposes.

"10. Mining interests generally.

"11. Mineral land laws and claims and entries thereunder.

"12. Geological survey.

"13. Mining schools and experimental stations.

"14. Petroleum conservation and conservation of the radium supply in the United States.

"15. Relations of the United States with the Indians and the Indian tribes.

"16. Measures relating to the care, education, and management of Indians, including the care and allotment of Indian lands and general special measures relating to claims which are paid out of Indian funds.

"(n) Committee on Public Works, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"1. Flood control and improvement of rivers and harbors.

"2. Public works for the benefit of navigation, and bridges and dams (other than international bridges and dams).

"3. Water power.

"4. Oil and other pollution of navigable waters.

"5. Public buildings and occupied or improved grounds of the United States generally.

"6. Measures relating to the purchase of sites and construction of post offices, customhouses, Federal courthouses, and Government buildings within the District of Columbia.

"7. Measures relating to the Capitol Building and the Senate and House Office Buildings.

"8. Measures relating to the construction or reconstruction, maintenance, and care of the buildings and grounds of the Botanic Gardens, the Library of Congress, and the Smithsonian Institution.

"9. Public reservations and parks within the District of Columbia, including Rock Creek Park and the Zoological Park.

"10. Measures relating to the construction of maintenance of roads and post roads.

"(o) (1) Committee on Rules and Administration, to consist of 13 Senators, to which committee shall be referred all proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the following subjects:

"(A) Matters relating to the payment of money out of the contingent fund of the Senate or creating a charge upon the same; except that any resolution relating to substantive matter within the jurisdiction of any other standing committee of the Senate shall be first referred to such committee.

"(B) Except as provided in paragraph (n) 8, matters relating to the Library of Congress and the Senate Library; statuary and pictures; acceptance or purchase of works of art for the Capitol; the Botanic Gardens; management of the Library of Congress; purchase of books and manuscripts; erection of monuments to the memory of individuals.

"(C) Except as provided in paragraph (n) 8, matters relating to the Smithsonian Institution and the incorporation of similar institutions.

"(D) Matters relating to the election of the President, Vice President, or Members of Congress; corrupt practices; contested elections; credentials and qualifications; Federal elections generally; Presidential succession.

"(E) Matters relating to parliamentary rules; floor and gallery rules; Senate Restaurant; administration of the Senate Office Building and of the Senate wing of the Capitol; assignment of office space; and services to the Senate.

"(F) Matters relating to printing and correction of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

"(2) Such committee shall also have the duty of examining all bills, amendments, and joint resolutions after passage by the Senate; and, in cooperation with the Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives, of examining all bills and joint resolutions which shall have passed both Houses, to see that the same are correctly enrolled; and when signed by the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate, shall forthwith present the same, when they shall have originated in the Senate, to the President of the United States in person, and report the fact and date of such presentation to the Senate. Such committee shall also have the duty of assigning office space in the Senate wing of the Capitol and in the Senate Office Building.

"(2) Each standing committee shall continue and have the power to act until their successors are appointed.

"(3) Each standing committee is authorized to fix the number of its members (but not less than one-third of its entire membership) who shall constitute a quorum thereof for the transaction of such business as may be considered by said committee, subject to the provisions of section 133 (d) of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946.

"(4) Each Senator shall serve on two standing committees and no more; except that Senators of the majority party who are members of the Committee on the District of Columbia or of the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments may serve on three standing committees and no more."

Appropriations

SEC. 103. Rule XVI of the Standing Rules of the Senate is amended to read as follows:

"RULE XVI

"AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS

"1. All general appropriation bills shall be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and no amendments shall be received to any general appropriation bill the effect of which will be to increase an appropriation already contained in the bill, or to add a new item of appropriation, unless it be made to carry out the provisions of some existing law, or treaty stipulation, or act, or resolution previously passed by the Senate during that session; or unless the same be moved by direction of a standing or select committee of the Senate, or proposed in pursuance of an estimate submitted in accordance with law.

"2. The Committee on Appropriations shall not report an appropriation bill containing amendments proposing new or general legislation or any restriction on the expenditure of the funds appropriated which proposes a limitation not authorized by law if such restriction is to take effect or cease to be effective upon the happening of a contingency, and if an appropriation bill is reported to the Senate containing amendments proposing new or general legislation or any such restriction, a point of order may be made against the bill, and if the point is sustained, the bill shall be recommitted to the Committee on Appropriations.

"3. All amendments to general appropriation bills moved by direction of a standing or select committee of the Senate, proposing to increase an appropriation already contained in the bill, or to add new items of appropriation, shall, at least one day before they are considered, be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and when actually proposed to the bill no amendment proposing to increase the amount stated in such amendment shall be received; in like manner, amendments proposing new items of appropriation to river and harbor bills, establishing post roads, or proposing new post roads, shall, before being considered, be referred to the Committee on Public Works.

"4 No amendment which proposes general legislation shall be received to any general appropriation bill nor shall any amendment not germane or relevant to the subject matter contained in the bill be received; nor shall any amendment to any item or clause of such bill be received which does not directly relate thereto; nor shall any restriction on the expenditure of the funds appropriated which proposes a limitation not authorized by law be received if such restriction is to take effect or cease to be effective upon the happening of a contingency; and all questions of relevancy of amendments under this rule, when raised, shall be submitted to the Senate and be decided without debate; and any such amendment or restriction to a general appropriation bill may be laid on the table without prejudice to the bill.

"5. No amendment, the object of which is to provide for a private claim, shall be received to any general appropriation bill, unless it be to carry out the provisions of an existing law or a treaty stipulation, which shall be cited on the face of the amendment.

"6. (a) Three members of the following-named committees, to be selected by their respective committees, shall be ex officio members of the Committee on Appropriations, to serve on said committee when the annual appropriation bill making appropriations for the purposes specified in the following table opposite the name of the committee is being considered by the Committee on Appropriations:

Name of committee	Purpose of appropriation
Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.	For the Department of Agriculture.
Committee on Civil Service.	For the Post Office Department.
Committee on Armed Services.	For the Department of War; for the Department of the Navy.
Committee on the District of Columbia.	For the District of Columbia.
Committee on Public Works.	For rivers and harbors.
Committee on Foreign Relations.	For the diplomatic and consular service.

"(b) At least one member of each committee enumerated in subparagraph (a), to be selected by his or their respective committees, shall be a member of any conference committee appointed to confer with the House upon the annual appropriation bill making appropriations for the purposes specified in the foregoing table opposite the name of his or their respective committee.

"7. When a point of order is made against any restriction on the expenditure of funds appropriated in a general appropriation bill on the ground that the restriction violates this rule, the rule shall be construed strictly and, in case of doubt, in favor of the point of order."

PART 2—RULES OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Standing committees of the House of Representatives

SEC. 121. (a) Rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended to read as follows:

"RULE X

"STANDING COMMITTEES

"(a) There shall be elected by the House, at the commencement of each Congress, the following standing committees:

"1. Committee on Agriculture, to consist of 27 Members.

"2. Committee on Appropriations, to consist of 43 Members.

"3. Committee on Armed Services, to consist of 33 Members.

"4. Committee on Banking and Currency, to consist of 27 Members.

"5. Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, to consist of 25 Members.

"6. Committee on the District of Columbia, to consist of 25 Members.

"7. Committee on Education and Labor, to consist of 25 Members.

"8. Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, to consist of 25 Members.

"9. Committee on Foreign Affairs, to consist of 25 Members.

"10. Committee on House Administration, to consist of 25 Members.

"11. Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to consist of 27 Members.

"12. Committee on the Judiciary, to consist of 27 Members.

"13. Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, to consist of 25 Members.

"14. Committee on Public Lands, to consist of 25 Members.

"15. Committee on Public Works, to consist of 27 Members.

"16. Committee on Rules, to consist of 12 Members.

"17. Committee on Un-American Activities, to consist of nine Members.

"18. Committee on Veterans' Affairs, to consist of 27 Members.

"19. Committee on Ways and Means, to consist of 25 Members.

"(b) (1) The Speaker shall appoint all select and conference committees which shall be ordered by the House from time to time.

"(2) At the commencement of each Congress, the House shall elect as chairman of each standing committee one of the Members thereof; in the temporary absence of the chairman, the Member next in rank in the order named in the election of the committee, and so on, as often as the case shall happen, shall act as chairman; and in case of a permanent vacancy in the chairmanship of any such committee the House shall elect another chairman.

"(3) All vacancies in standing committees in the House shall be filled by election by the House. Each Member shall be elected to serve on one standing committee and no more; except that Members who are elected to serve on the Committee on the District of Columbia or on the Committee on Un-American Activities may be elected to serve on two standing committees and no more, and Members of the majority party who are elected to serve on the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments or on the Committee on House Administration may be elected to serve on two standing committees and no more."

(b) Rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended to read as follows:

"RULE XI

"POWERS AND DUTIES OF COMMITTEES

"(1) All proposed legislation, messages, petitions, memorials, and other matters relating to the subjects listed under the standing committees named below shall be referred to such committees, respectively: Provided, That unless otherwise provided herein, any matter within the jurisdiction of a standing committee prior to January 2, 1947, shall remain subject to the jurisdiction of that committee or of the consolidated committee succeeding generally to the jurisdiction of that committee.

"(a) Committee on Agriculture.

"1. Agriculture generally.

"2. Inspection of livestock and meat products.

"3. Animal industry and diseases of animals.

"4. Adulteration of seeds, insect pests, and protection of birds and animals in forest reserves.

"5. Agricultural colleges and experiment stations.

"6. Forestry in general, and forest reserves other than those created from the public domain.

"7. Agricultural economics and research.

"8. Agricultural and industrial chemistry.

"9. Dairy industry.

"10. Entomology and plant quarantine.

"11. Human nutrition and home economics.

"12. Plant industry, soils, and agricultural engineering.

"13. Agricultural educational extension services.

"14. Extension of farm credit and farm security.

"15. Rural electrification.

"16. Agricultural production and marketing and stabilization of prices of agricultural products.

"17. Crop insurance and soil conservation.

"(b) Committee on Appropriations.

"1. Appropriation of the revenue for the support of the Government.

"(c) Committee on Armed Services.

"1. Common defense generally.

"2. The War Department and the Military Establishment generally.

"3. The Navy Department and the Naval Establishment generally.

"4. Soldiers' and sailors' homes.

"5. Pay, promotion, retirement, and other benefits and privileges of members of the armed forces.

"6. Selective service.

"7. Size and composition of the Army and Navy.

"8. Forts, arsenals, military reservations, and navy yards.

"9. Ammunition depots.

"10. Conservation, development, and use of naval petroleum and oil shale reserves.

"11. Strategic and critical materials necessary for the common defense.

"12. Scientific research and development in support of the armed services.

"(d) Committee on Banking and Currency.

"1. Banking and currency generally.

"2. Financial aid to commerce and industry, other than matters relating to such aid which are specifically assigned to other commitees under this rule.

"3. Deposit insurance.

"4. Public and private housing.

"5. Federal Reserve System.

"6. Gold and silver, including the coinage thereof.

"7. Issuance of notes and redemption thereof.

"8. Valuation and revaluation of the dollar.

"9. Control of prices of commodities, rents, or services.

"(e) Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

"1. The Federal civil service generally.

"2. The status of officers and employees of the United States, including their compensation, classification, and retirement.

"3. The postal service generally, including the railway mail service, and measures relating to ocean mail and pneumatic-tube service; but excluding post roads.

"4. Postal-savings banks.

"5. Census and the collection of statistics generally.

"6. The National Archives.

"(f) Committee on the District of Columbia.

"1. All measures relating to the municipal affairs of the District of Columbia in general, other than appropriations therefor, including—

"2. Public health and safety, sanitation, and quarantine regulations.

"3. Regulation of sale of intoxicating liquors.

"4. Adulteration of food and drugs.

"5. Taxes and tax sales.

"6. Insurance, executors, administrators, wills, and divorce.

"7. Municipal and juvenile courts.

"8. Incorporation and organization of societies.

"9. Municipal code and amendments to the criminal and corporation laws.

"(g) Committee on Education and Labor.

"1. Measures relating to education or labor generally.

"2. Mediation and arbitration of labor disputes.

"3. Wages and hours of labor.

"4. Convict labor and the entry of goods made by convicts into interstate commerce.

"5. Regulation or prevention of importation of foreign laborers under contract.

"6. Child labor.

"7. Labor statistics.

"8. Labor standards.

"9. School-lunch program.

"10. Vocational rehabilitation.

"11. United States Employees' Compensation Commission.

"12. Columbia Institution for the Deaf, Dumb, and Blind; Howard University; Freedmen's Hospital; and Saint Elizabeths Hospital.

"13. Welfare of miners.

"(h) (1) Committee on expenditures in the Executive Departments.

"(A) Budget and accounting measures, other than appropriations.

"(B) Reorganizations in the executive branch of the Government.

"(2) Such committee shall have the duty of—

"(A) receiving and examining reports of the Comptroller General of the United States and of submitting such recommendations to the House as it deems necessary or desirable in connection with the subject matter of such reports;

"(B) studying the operation of Government activities at all levels with a view to determining its economy and efficiency;

"(C) evaluating the effects of laws enacted to reorganize the legislative and executive branches of the Government;

"(D) studying intergovernmental relationships between the United States and the States and municipalities, and between the United States and international organizations of which the United States is a member.

"(i) Committee on Foreign Affairs.

"1. Relations of the United States with foreign nations generally.

"2. Establishment of boundary lines between the United States and foreign nations.

"3. Protection of American citizens abroad and expatriation.

"4. Neutrality.

"5. International conferences and congresses.

"6. The American National Red Cross.

"7. Intervention abroad and declarations of war.

"8. Measures relating to the diplomatic service.

"9. Acquisition of land and buildings for embassies and legations in foreign countries.

"10. Measures to foster commercial intercourse with foreign nations and to safeguard American business interests abroad.

"11. United Nations organization and international financial and monetary organizations.

"12. Foreign loans.

"(j) (1) Committee on House Administration.

"(A) Employment of persons by the House, including clerks for Members and committees, and reporters of debates.

"(B) Expenditure of the contingent fund of the House.

"(C) The auditing and settling of all accounts which may be charged to the contingent fund.

"(D) Measures relating to accounts of the House generally.

"(E) Appropriations from the contingent fund.

"(F) Measures relating to services to the House, including the House restaurant and administration of the House Office Buildings and of the House wing of the Capitol.

"(G) Measures relating to the travel of Members of the House.

"(H) Measures relating to the assignment of office space for Members and committees.

"(I) Measures relating to the disposition of useless executive papers.

"(J) Except as provided in paragraph (o) 8, matters relating to the Library of Congress and the House Library; statuary and pictures; acceptance or purchase of works of art for the Capitol; the Botanic Gardens; management of the Library of Congress; purchase of books and manuscripts; erection of monuments to the memory of individuals.

"(K) Except as provided in paragraph (o) 8, matters relating to the Smithsonian Institution and the incorporation of similar institutions.

"(L) Matters relating to printing and correction of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

"(M) Measures relating to the election of the President, Vice President, or Members of Congress; corrupt practices; contested elections; credentials and qualifications; and Federal elections generally.

"(2) Such committee shall also have the duty of—

"(A) examining all bills, amendments, and joint resolutions after passage by the House, and in cooperation with the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration, of examining all bills and joint resolutions which shall have passed both Houses, to see that they are correctly enrolled, and when signed by the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate, shall forthwith present the same, when they shall have originated in the House, to the President of the United States in person, and report the fact and date of such presentation to the House;

"(B) reporting to the Sergeant at Arms of the House the travel of Members of the House;

"(C) arranging a suitable program for each day observed by the House of Representatives as a memorial day in memory of Members of the Senate and House of Representatives who have died during the preceding period, and to arrange for the publication of the proceedings thereof.

"(k) Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

"1. Interstate and foreign commerce generally.

"2. Regulation of interstate and foreign transportation, except transportation by water not subject to the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"3. Regulation of interstate and foreign communications.

"4. Civil aeronautics.

"5. Weather bureau.

"6. Interstate oil compacts; and petroleum and natural gas, except on the public lands.

"7. Securities and exchanges.

"8. Regulation of interstate transmission of power, except the installation of connections between Government water power projects.

"9. Railroad labor and railroad retirement and unemployment, except revenue measures relating thereto.

"10. Public health and quarantine.

"11. Inland waterways.

"12. Bureau of Standards, standardization of weights and measures, and the metric system.

"(l) Committee on the Judiciary.

"1. Judicial proceedings, civil and criminal, generally.

"2. Constitutional amendments.

"3. Federal courts and judges.

"4. Local courts in the Territories and possessions.

"5. Revision and codification of the statutes of the United States.

"6. National penitentiaries.

"7. Protection of trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies.

"8. Holidays and celebrations.

"9. Bankruptcy, mutiny, espionage, and counterfeiting.

"10. State and Territorial boundary lines.

"11. Meetings of Congress, attendance of Members, and their acceptance of incompatible offices.

"12. Civil liberties.

"13. Patents, copyrights, and trade-marks.

"14. Patent Office.

"15. Immigration and naturalization.

"16. Apportionment of Representatives.

"17. Measures relating to claims against the United States.

"18. Interstate compacts generally.

"19. Presidential succession.

"(m) Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

"1. Merchant marine generally.

"2. Registering and licensing of vessels and small boats.

"3. Navigation and the laws relating thereto, including pilotage.

"4. Rules and international arrangements to prevent collisions at sea.

"5. Merchant marine officers and seamen.

"6. Measures relating to the regulation of common carriers by water (except matters subject to the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission) and to the inspection of merchant marine vessels, lights and signals, lifesaving equipment, and fire protection on such vessels.

"7. The Coast Guard, including lifesaving service, lighthouses, lightships, and ocean derelicts.

"8. United States Coast Guard and Merchant Marine Academies.

"9. Coast and Geodetic Survey.

"10. The Panama Canal and the maintenance and operation of the Panama Canal, including the administration, sanitation, and government of the Canal Zone; and interoceanic canals generally.

"11. Fisheries and wildlife, including research, restoration, refuges, and conservation.

"(n) Committee on Public Lands.

"1. Public lands generally, including entry, easements, and grazing thereon.

"2. Mineral resources of the public lands.

"3. Forfeiture of land grants and alien ownership, including alien ownership of mineral lands.

"4. Forest reserves and national parks created from the public domain.

"5. Military parks and battlefields, and national cemeteries.

"6. Preservation of prehistoric ruins and objects of interest on the public domain.

"7. Measures relating generally to Hawaii, Alaska, and the insular possessions of the United States, except those affecting the revenue and appropriations.

"8. Irrigation and reclamation, including water supply for reclamation projects, and easements of public lands for irrigation projects, and acquisition of private lands when necessary to complete irrigation projects.

"9. Interstate compacts relating to apportionment of waters for irrigation purposes.

"10. Mining interests generally.

"11. Mineral land laws and claims and entries thereunder.

"12. Geological survey.

"13. Mining schools and experimental stations.

"14. Petroleum conservation on the public lands and conservation of the radium supply in the United States.

"15. Relations of the United States with the Indians and the Indian tribes.

"16. Measures relating to the care, education, and management of Indians, including the care and allotment of Indian lands and general and special measures relating to claims which are paid out of Indian funds.

"(o) Committee on Public Works.

"1. Flood control and improvement of rivers and harbors.

"2. Public works for the benefit of navigation, including bridges and dams (other than international bridges and dams).

"3. Water power.

"4. Oil and other pollution of navigable waters.

"5. Public buildings and occupied or improved grounds of the United States generally.

"6. Measures relating to the purchase of sites and construction of post offices, customhouses, Federal courthouses, and Government buildings within the District of Columbia.

"7. Measures relating to the Capitol Building and the Senate and House Office Buildings.

"8. Measures relating to the construction or reconstruction, maintenance, and care of the buildings and grounds of the Botanic Gardens, the Library of Congress, and the Smithsonian Institution.

"9. Public reservations and parks within the District of Columbia, including Rock Creek Park and the Zoological Park.

"10. Measures relating to the construction or maintenance of roads and post roads, other than appropriations therefor; but it shall not be in order for any bill providing general legislation in relation to roads to contain any provision for any specific road, nor for any bill in relation to a specific road to embrace a provision in relation to any other specific road

"(p) Committee on Rules.

"1. The rules, joint rules, and order of business of the House.

"2. Recesses and final adjournments of Congress.

"(q) (1) Committee on Un-American Activities.

"(A) Un-American activities.

"(2) The Committee on Un-American Activities, as a whole or by subcommittee, is authorized to make from time to time investigations of (i) the extent, character, and objects of un-American propaganda activities in the United States, (ii) the diffusion within the United States of subversive and un-American propaganda that is instigated from foreign countries or of a domestic origin and attacks the principle of the form of government as guaranteed by our Constitution, and (iii) all other questions in relation thereto that would aid Congress in any necessary remedial legislation.

"The Committee on Un-American Activities shall report to the House (or to the Clerk of the House if the House is not in session) the results of any such investigation, together with such recommendations as it deems advisable.

"For the purpose of any such investigation, the Committee on Un-American Activities, or any subcommittee thereof, is authorized to sit and act at such times and places within the United States, whether or not the House is sitting, has recessed, or has adjourned, to hold such hearings, to require the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, and documents, and to take such testimony, as it deems necessary. Subpenas may be issued under the signature of the chairman of the committee or any subcommittee, or by any member designated by any such chairman, and may be served by any person designated by any such chairman or member.

"(r) Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

"1. Veterans' measures generally.

"2. Pensions of all the wars of the United States, general and special.

"3. Life insurance issued by the Government on account of service in the armed forces.

"4. Compensation, vocational rehabilitation, and education of veterans.

"5. Veterans' hospitals, medical care, and treatment of veterans.

"6. Soldiers' and sailors' civil relief.
"7. Readjustment of servicemen to civil life.
"(s) Committee on Ways and Means.
"1. Revenue measures generally.
"2. The bonded debt of the United States.
"3. The deposit of public moneys.
"4. Customs, collection districts, and ports of entry and delivery.
"5. Reciprocal trade agreements.
"6. Transportation of dutiable goods.
"7. Revenue measures relating to the insular possessions.
"8. National social security.
"(2) (a) The following-named committees shall have leave to report at any time on the matters herein stated, namely: The Committee on Rules—on rules, joint rules, and order of business; the Committee on House Administration—on the right of a Member to his seat, enrolled bills, on all matters referred to it of printing for the use of the House or the two Houses, and on all matters of expenditure of the contingent fund of the House; the Committee on Ways and Means—on bills raising revenue; the Committee on Appropriations—on the general appropriation bills; the Committee on Public Works—on bills authorizing the improvement of rivers and harbors; the Committee on the Public Lands—on bills for the forfeiture of land grants to railroad and other corporations, bills preventing speculation in the public lands, bills for the reservation of the public lands for the benefit of actual and bona fide settlers, and bills for the admission of new States; the Committee on Veterans' Affairs—on general pension bills.
"(b) It shall always be in order to call up for consideration a report from the Committee on Rules (except it shall not be called up for consideration on the same day it is presented to the House, unless so determined by a vote of not less than two-thirds of the Members voting, but this provision shall not apply during the last 3 days of the session), and, pending the consideration thereof, the Speaker may entertain one motion that the House adjourn; but after the result is announced he shall not entertain any other dilatory motion until the said report shall have been fully disposed of. The Committee on Rules shall not report any rule or order which shall provide that business under paragraph 7 of rule XXIV shall be set aside by a vote of less than two-thirds of the Members present; nor shall it report any rule or order which shall operate to prevent the motion to recommit being made as provided in paragraph 4 of rule XVI.
"(c) The Committee on Rules shall present to the House reports concerning rules, joint rules, and order of business, within three legislative days of the time when ordered reported by the committee. If such rule or order is not considered immediately, it shall be referred to the calendar and, if not called up by the Member making the report within seven legislative days thereafter, any member of the Rules Committee may call it up as a question of privilege and the Speaker shall recognize any member of the Rules Committee seeking recognition for that purpose. If the Committee on Rules shall make an adverse report on any resolution pending before the committee, providing for an order of business for the consideration by the House of any public bill or joint resolution, on days when it shall be in order to call up motions to discharge committees it shall be in order for any Member of the House to call up for consideration by the House any such adverse report, and it shall be in order to move the adoption by the House of said resolution adversely reported notwithstanding the adverse report of the Committee on Rules, and the Speaker shall recognize the Member seeking recognition for that purpose as a question of the highest privilege.
"(d) The Committee on House Administration shall make final report to the House in all contested-election cases not later than 6 months from the first day of the first regular session of the Congress to which the contestee is elected except in a contest from the Territory of Alaska, in which case the time shall not exceed 9 months.
"(e) A standing committee of the House (other than the Committee on Appropriations) shall meet to consider any bill or resolution pending before it (A) on all regular meeting days selected by the committee; (B) upon the call of the chairman of the committee; (C) if the chairman of the committee, after 3 days' consideration, refuses or fails, upon the request of at least three members of the committee, to call a special meeting of the committee within seven calendar days from the date of said request, then, upon the filing with the clerk of the committee of the written and signed request of a majority of the committee for a called special meeting of the committee, the committee shall meet on the day and hour specified in said written request. It shall be the duty of the clerk of the committee to notify all members of the committee in the usual way of such called special meeting.
"(f) The rules of the House are hereby made the rules of its standing committees so far as applicable, except that a motion to recess from day to day is hereby made a motion of high privilege in said committees."

Delegates and Resident Commissioner

SEC. 122. Rule XII of the Standing Rules of the House of Representatives is amended to read as follows:

"RULE XII

"DELEGATES AND RESIDENT COMMISSIONER

"1. The Delegates from Hawaii and Alaska, and the Resident Commissioner to the United States from Puerto Rico, shall be elected to serve as additional members on the Committees on Agriculture, Armed Services, and Public Lands; and they shall possess in such committees the same powers and privileges as in the House, and may make any motion except to reconsider."

Reference of private claims bills

SEC. 123. Paragraph 3 of rule XXI of the Standing Rules of the House of Representatives is amended to read as follows:

"3. No bill for the payment or adjudication of any private claim against the Government shall be referred, except by unanimous consent, to any other than the following committees, namely: To the Committee on Foreign Affairs and to the Committee on the Judiciary."

PART 3—PROVISIONS APPLICABLE TO BOTH HOUSES

Private bills banned

SEC. 131. No private bill or resolution (including so-called omnibus claims or pension bills), and no amendment to any bill or resolution, authorizing or directing (1) the payment of money for property damages, for personal injuries or death for which suit may be instituted under the Federal Tort Claims Act, or for a pension (other than to carry out a provision of law or treaty stipulation); (2) the construction of a bridge across a navigable stream; or (3) the correction of a military or naval record, shall be received or considered in either the Senate or the House of Representatives.

Congressional adjournment

SEC. 132. Except in time of war or during a national emergency proclaimed by the President, the two Houses shall adjourn sine die not later than the last day (Sundays excepted) in the month of July in each year unless otherwise provided by the Congress.

Committee procedure

SEC. 133. (a) Each standing committee of the Senate and the House of Representatives (except the Committees on Appropriations) shall fix regular weekly, biweekly, or monthly meeting days for the transaction of business before the committee, and additional meetings may be called by the chairman as he may deem necessary.
(b) Each such committee shall keep a complete record of all committee action. Such record shall include a record of the votes on any question on which a record vote is demanded.
(c) It shall be the duty of the chairman of each such committee to report or cause to be reported promptly to the Senate or House of Representatives, as the case may be, any measure approved by his committee and to take or cause to be taken necessary steps to bring the matter to a vote.
(d) No measure or recommendation shall be reported from any such committee unless a majority of the committee were actually present.
(e) Each such standing committee shall, so far as practicable, require all witnesses appearing before it to file in advance written statements of their proposed testimony, and to limit their oral presentations to brief summaries of their argument. The staff of each committee shall prepare digests of such statements for the use of committee members.
(f) All hearings conducted by standing committees or their subcommittees shall be open to the public, except executive sessions for marking up bills or for voting or where the committee by a majority vote orders an executive session.

Committee powers

SEC. 134. (a) Each standing committee of the Senate, including any subcommittee of any such committee, is authorized to hold such hearings, to sit and act at such times and places during the sessions, recesses, and adjourned periods of the Senate, to require by subpena or otherwise the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such correspondence, books, papers, and documents, to take such testimony and to make such expenditures (not in excess of $10,000 for each committee during any Congress) as it deems advisable. Each such committee may make investigations into any matter within its jurisdiction, may report such hearings as may be had by it, and may employ stenographic assistance at a cost not exceeding 25 cents per hundred words. The expenses of the committee shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers approved by the chairman.
(b) Every committee and subcommittee serving the Senate and House of Representatives shall report the name, profession, and total salary of each staff member employed by it, and shall make an accounting of funds appropriated to it and expended by it to the Secretary of the Senate and Clerk of the House of Representatives, as the case may be, at least once every 6 months, and such information shall be published periodically in the Congressional Directory when and as the same is issued and as Senate and House documents, respectively, every 3 months.
(c) No standing committee of the Senate or the House, except the Committee on Rules of the House, shall sit, without special leave, while the Senate or the House, as the case may be, is in session.

Conference rules on amendments in nature of substitute

SEC. 135. (a) In any case in which a disagreement to an amendment in the nature of a substitute has been referred to conferees, it shall be in order for the conferees to report a substitute on the same subject matter; but they may not include in the report matter not committed to them by either House. They may, however, include in their report in any such case matter which is a germane modification of subjects in disagreement.
(b) In any case in which the conferees violate subsection (a), the conference report shall be subject to a point of order.

Legislative oversight by standing committees

SEC. 136. To assist the Congress in appraising the administration of the laws and in developing such amendments or related legislation as it may deem necessary, each standing committee of the Senate and the House of Representatives shall exercise continuous watchfulness of the execution by the administrative agencies concerned of any laws, the subject matter of which is within the jurisdiction of such committee; and, for that purpose, shall study all pertinent reports and data submitted to the Congress by the agencies in the executive branch of the Government.

Decisions on questions of committee jurisdiction

SEC. 137. In any case in which a controversy arises as to the jurisdiction of any standing committee of the Senate with respect to any proposed legislation, the question of jurisdiction shall be decided by the presiding officer of the Senate, without debate, in favor of that committee which has jurisdiction over the subject matter which predominates in such proposed legislation; but such decision shall be subject to an appeal.

Legislative budget

SEC. 138. (a) The Committee on Ways and Means and the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives, and the Committee on Finance and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, or duly authorized subcommittees thereof, are authorized and directed to meet jointly at the beginning of each regular session of Congress and after study and consultation, giving due consideration to the budget recommendations of the President, report to their respective Houses a legislative budget for the ensuing fiscal year, including the estimated over-all Federal receipts and expenditures for such year Such report shall contain a recommendation for the maximum amount to be appropriated for expenditure in such year which shall include such an amount to be reserved for deficiencies as may be deemed necessary by such committees. If the estimated receipts exceed the estimated expenditures, such report shall contain a recommendation for a reduction in the public debt. Such report shall be made by February 15.

(b) The report shall be accompanied by a concurrent resolution adopting such budget, and fixing the maximum amount to be appropriated for expenditure in such year. If the estimated expenditures exceed the estimated receipts, the concurrent resolution shall include a section substantially as follows: "That it is the sense of the Congress that the public debt shall be increased in an amount equal to the amount by which the estimated expenditures for the ensuing fiscal year exceed the estimated receipts, such amount being $ "

Hearings and reports by appropriations committees

SEC. 139. (a) No general appropriation bill shall be considered in either House unless, prior to the consideration of such bill, printed committee hearings and reports on such bill have been available for at least three calendar days for the Members of the House in which such bill is to be considered.

(b) The Committees on Appropriations of the two Houses are authorized and directed, acting jointly, to develop a standard appropriation classification schedule which will clearly define in concise and uniform accounts the subtotals of appropriations asked for by agencies in the executive branch of the Government. That part of the printed hearings containing each such agency's request for appropriations shall be preceded by such a schedule.

(c) No general appropriation bill or amendment thereto shall be received or considered in either House if it contains a provision reappropriating unexpended balances of appropriations; except that this provision shall not apply to appropriations in continuation of appropriations for public works on which work has commenced.

(d) The Appropriations Committees of both Houses are authorized and directed to make a study of (1) existing permanent appropriations with a view to limiting the number of permanent appropriations and to recommend to their respective Houses what permanent appropriations, if any, should be discontinued; and (2) the disposition of funds resulting from the sale of Government property or services by all departments and agencies in the executive branch of the Government with a view to recommending to their respective Houses a uniform system of control with respect to such funds.

Records of Congress

SEC. 140. (a) The Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives are authorized and directed, acting jointly, to obtain at the close of each Congress all of the noncurrent records of the Congress and of each committee thereof and transfer them to the National Archives for preservation, subject to the orders of the Senate or the House, respectively.

(b) The Clerk of the House of Representatives is authorized and directed to collect all of the noncurrent records of the House of Representatives from the First to the Seventy-sixth Congress, inclusive, and transfer such records to the National Archives for preservation, subject to the orders of the Senate or the House, respectively.

Preservation of committee hearings

SEC. 141. The Librarian of the Library of Congress is authorized and directed to have bound at the end of each session of Congress the printed hearings of testimony taken by each committee of the Congress at the preceding session.

Effective date

SEC. 142. This title shall take effect on January 2, 1947; except that this section and sections 140 and 141 shall take effect on the date of enactment of this act.

TITLE II—MISCELLANEOUS

PART 1—STATUTORY PROVISIONS RELATING TO CONGRESSIONAL PERSONNEL

Increase in compensation for certain congressional officers

SEC. 201. (a) Effective January 1, 1947, the annual basic compensation of the elected officers of the Senate and the House of Representatives (not including the Presiding Officers of the two Houses) shall be increased by 50 percent; and the provisions of section 501 of the Federal Employees Pay Act of 1945, as amended by section 5 of the Federal Employees Pay Act of 1946, shall not be applicable to the compensation of said elected officers.

(b) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated annually for the "Office of the Vice President" the sum of $23,130; and there is hereby authorized to be appropriated annually for the "Office of the Speaker" the sum of $20,025.

(c) The Speaker, the majority leader, and the minority leader of the House of Representatives are each authorized to employ an administrative assistant, who shall receive basic compensation at a rate not to exceed $8,000 a year. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for the payment of such compensation.

Committee staffs

SEC. 202. (a) Each standing committee of the Senate and the House of Representatives (other than the Appropriations Committees) is authorized to appoint by a majority vote of the committee not more than four professional staff members in addition to the clerical staffs on a permanent basis without regard to political affiliations and solely on the basis of fitness to perform the duties of the office; and said staff members shall be assigned to the chairman and ranking minority member of such committee as the committee may deem advisable. Each such committee is further authorized to terminate the services by a majority vote of the committee of any such professional staff member as it may see fit. Professional staff members shall not engage in any work other than committee business and no other duties may be assigned to them.

(b) Subject to appropriations which it shall be in order to include in appropriation bills, the Committee on Appropriations of each House is authorized to appoint such staff, in addition to the clerk thereof and assistants for the minority, as each such committee, by a majority vote, shall determine to be necessary, such personnel, other than the minority assistants, to possess such qualifications as the committees respectively may prescribe, and the Committee on Appropriations of the House also is authorized to conduct studies and examinations of the organization and operation of any executive agency (including any agency the majority of the stock of which is owned by the Government of the United States) as it may deem necessary to assist it in connection with the determination of matters within its jurisdiction and in accordance with the procedures authorized by the committee by a majority vote, including the rights and powers conferred by House Resolution No. 50, adopted January 9, 1945.

(c) The clerical staff of each standing committee, which shall be appointed by a majority vote of the committee, shall consist of not more than six clerks, to be attached to the office of the chairman, to the ranking minority member, and to the professional staff, as the committee may deem advisable; and the position of committee janitor is hereby abolished. The clerical staff shall handle committee correspondence and stenographic work, both for the committee staff and for the chairman and ranking minority member on matters related to committee work.

(d) All committee hearings, records, data, charts, and files shall be kept separate and distinct from the congressional office records of the Member serving as chairman of the committee, and such records shall be the property of the Congress and all members of the committee and the respective Houses shall have access to such records. Each committee is authorized to have printed and bound such testimony and other data presented at hearings held by the committee.

(e) The professional staff members of the standing committees shall receive annual compensation, to be fixed by the chairman, ranging from $5,000 to $8,000 and the clerical staff shall receive annual compensation ranging from $2,000 to $8,000.

(f) No committee shall appoint to its staff any experts or other personnel detailed or assigned from any department or agency of the Government, except with the written permission of the Committee on Rules and Administration of the Senate or the Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives, as the case may be.

(g) No individual who is employed as a professional staff member of any committee as provided in this section shall be eligible for appointment to any office or position in the executive branch of the Government for a period of 1 year after he shall have ceased to be such a member.

(h) Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions—

(1) The committee employees of the existing Committee on Appropriations of the Senate and of the existing Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives shall be continued on the rolls of the respective appropriations committees established under title I of this act during the fiscal year 1947, unless sooner removed for cause.

(2) Committee employees of all other existing standing committees of each House shall be continued on the pay rolls of the Senate and House of Representatives, respectively, through January 31, 1947, unless sooner removed for cause by the Secretary of the Senate or the Clerk of the House, as the case may be.

(3) The appropriations for the compensation of committee employees of standing committees of the Senate and of the House of Representatives contained in the Legislative Branch Appropriation Act, 1947, shall be available for the compensation of employees specified in paragraph (2) of this subsection and of employees of the standing committees of the Senate and the House of Representatives succeeding to the jurisdiction of the standing committees specified in such Appropriation Act, and in any case in which the legislative jurisdiction of any existing standing committee is transferred to two or more standing committees under title I of this act, the Committee on Rules and Administration of the Senate, with respect to standing committees of the Senate, and the Committee on House Administration, with respect to standing committees of the House, shall allocate such appropriations in an equitable manner.

Legislative Reference Service

SEC. 203. (a) The Librarian of Congress is authorized and directed to establish in the Library of Congress a separate department to be known as the Legislative Reference Service. It shall be the duty of the Legislative Reference Service—

(1) upon request, to advise and assist any committee of either House or any joint committee in the analysis, appraisal, and evaluation of legislative proposals pending before it, or of recommendations submitted to Congress, by the President or any executive agency, and otherwise to assist in furnishing a basis for the proper determination of measures before the committee;

(2) upon request, or upon its own initiative in anticipation of requests, to gather, classify, analyze, and make available, in translations, indexes, digests, compilations and bulletins, and otherwise, data for or bearing upon legislation, and to render such data serviceable to Congress, and committees and Members thereof, without partisan bias in selection or presentation;

(3) to prepare summaries and digests of public hearings before committees of the Congress, and of bills and resolutions of a public general nature introduced in either House.

(b) (1) A director and assistant director of the Legislative Reference Service and all other necessary personnel, shall be appointed by the Librarian of Congress without regard to the civil-service laws and without reference to political affiliations, solely on the ground of fitness to perform the duties of their office. The compensation of all employees shall be fixed in accordance with the provisions of the Classification Act of 1923, as amended: Provided, That the grade of senior specialist in each field enumerated in paragraph (2) of this subsection shall not be less than the highest grade in the executive branch of the Government to which research analysts and consultants without supervisory responsibility are currently assigned. All employees of the Legislative Reference Service shall be subject to the provisions of the civil-service retirement laws.

(2) The Librarian of Congress is further authorized to appoint in the Legislative Reference Service senior specialists in the following broad fields: Agriculture; American government and public administration; American public law; conservation; education; engineering and public works; full employment; housing; industrial organization and corporation finance; international affairs; international trade and economic geography; labor; mineral economics; money and banking; price economics; social welfare; taxation and fiscal policy; transportation and communications; and veterans' affairs. Such specialists, together with such other members of the staff as may be necessary, shall be available for special work with the appropriate committees of Congress for any of the purposes set out in section 203 (a) (1).

(c) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the work of the Legislative Reference Service the following sums: (1) For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, $550,000; (2) for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1948, $650,000; (3) for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, $750,000; and (4) for each fiscal year thereafter such sums as may be necessary to carry on the work of the Service.

Office of the Legislative Counsel

SEC. 204. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the work of the Office of the Legislative Counsel the following sums:

(1) For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, $150,000;

(2) For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1948, $200,000;

(3) For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, $250,000;

(4) For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1950, $250,000; and

(5) For each fiscal year thereafter such sums as may be necessary to carry on the work of the Office.

Studies by Comptroller General

SEC. 205. The Comptroller General is authorized and directed to make a full and complete study of restrictions placed in general appropriation acts limiting the expenditure of specified appropriations therein, with a view to determining the cost to the Government incident to complying with such restrictions, and to report to the Congress his estimate of the cost of complying with such restrictions and such other recommendations with respect thereto as he deems necessary or desirable.

Expenditure analysis by Comptroller General

SEC. 206. The Comptroller General is authorized and directed to make an expenditure analysis of each agency in the executive branch of the Government (including Government corporations), which, in the opinion of the Comptroller General, will enable Congress to determine whether public funds have been economically and efficiently administered and expended. Reports on such analyses shall be submitted by the Comptroller General, from time to time, to the Committees on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, to the Appropriations Committees, and to the legislative committees having jurisdiction over legislation relating to the operations of the respective agencies, of the two Houses.

Correction of military and naval records

SEC. 207. The Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, and the Secretary of the Treasury with respect to the Coast Guard, respectively, under procedures set up by them, and acting through boards of civilian officers or employees of their respective departments, are authorized to correct any military or naval record where in their judgment such action is necessary to correct an error or to remove an injustice.

PART 2—STATUTORY PROVISIONS RELATING TO COMMITTEES OF CONGRESS

Improvement of Congressional Record

SEC. 221. The Joint Committee on Printing is authorized and directed to provide for printing in the daily RECORD the legislative program for the day, together with a list of congressional committee meetings and hearings, and the place of meeting and subject matter; and to cause a brief résumé of congressional activities for the previous day to be incorporated in the RECORD, together with an index of its contents. Such data shall be prepared under the supervision of the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives, respectively.

Joint Committee on Printing

SEC. 222. Section 1 of the act entitled "An act providing for the public printing and binding and the distribution of public documents," approved January 12, 1895 (28 Stat. 601), is amended to read as follows: "That there shall be a Joint Committee on Printing, consisting of the chairman and two members of the Committee on Rules and Administration of the Senate and the chairman and two members of the Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives, who shall have the powers hereinafter stated."

Joint Committee on the Library

SEC. 223. The Joint Committee of Congress on the Library shall hereafter consist of the chairman and four members of the Committee on Rules and Administration of the Senate and the chairman and four members of the Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives.

Transfer of functions

SEC. 224. The functions, powers, and duties imposed by statute, resolution, or rule of either House of Congress on the effective date of this section on a standing committee of the Senate or the House of Representatives (or the chairman thereof) are, insofar as they are consistent with this act, hereby transferred to that standing committee created by this act (or the chairman thereof) to which is transferred the legsilative jurisdiction over the subject matter to which such functions, powers, and duties relate; except that the chairman of the Committee on Civil Service of the Senate and the chairman of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service of the House created by this act shall be members of the National Archives Council.

Joint Committee on the Economic Report

SEC. 225. Section 5 (b) (3) (relating to the time for filing the report of the Joint Committee on the Economic Report) of the Employment Act of 1946 is amended by striking out "May 1" and inserting in lieu thereof "February 1."

Economic report of the President

SEC. 226. Section 3 (a) (relating to the time for filing the economic report of the President) of the Employment Act of 1946 is amended by striking out "within 60 days after the beginning of each regular session" and inserting in lieu thereof "at the beginning of each regular session."

PART 3—PROVISIONS RELATING TO CAPITOL AND PAGES

Remodeling of caucus rooms and restaurants

SEC. 241. The Architect of the Capitol is authorized and directed to prepare plans and submit them to Congress at the earliest practicable date for the remodeling (a) of the caucus rooms in the Senate and House Office Buildings to provide improve acoustics and seating facilities and for the presentation of motion picture or other visual displays on matters of national interest; and (b) of the Senate and House Restaurants to provide for more convenient dining facilities.

Assignment of Capitol space

SEC. 242. The President pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives shall cause a survey to be made of available space within the Capitol which could be utilized for joint committee meetings, meetings of conference committees, and other meetings, requiring the attendance of both Senators and Members of the House of Representatives; and shall recommend the reassignment of such space to accommodate such meetings.

Senate and House pages

SEC. 243. (a) The Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives, acting jointly, are authorized and directed to enter into an arrangement with the Board of Education of the District of Columbia for the education of congressional pages and pages of the Supreme Court in the public-school system of the District. Such arrangement shall include provision for reimbursement to the District of Columbia for any additional expenses incurred by the public-school system of the District in carrying out such arrangement.

(b) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to reimburse the District of Columbia in accordance with the arrangement referred to in subsection (a).

(c) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a) and (b) of this section, said page or pages may elect to attend a private or parochial school of their own choice: Provided, however, That such private or parochial school shall be reimbursed by the Senate and House of Representatives only in the same amount as would be paid if the page or pages were attending a public school under the provisions of paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section.

Authorization of appropriations and personnel

SEC. 244. All necessary funds required to carry out the provisions of this act, by the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House, are hereby authorized to be appropriated, and the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House are hereby further authorized to employ such administrative assistants as may be necessary in order to carry out the provisions of this act under their respective jurisdictions.

Effective date

SEC. 245. This title shall take effect on the date of its enactment; except that sections 202 (a), (b), (c), (e), (f), and (h), 222, 223, 224, and 243 shall take effect on the day on which the Eightieth Congress convenes.

TITLE III—REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT

Short title

SEC. 301. This title may be cited as the "Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act."

Definitions

SEC. 302. When used in this title—

(a) The term "contribution" includes a gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money or anything of value and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make a contribution.

(b) The term "expenditure" includes a payment, distribution, loan, advance, deposit, or gift of money or anything of value, and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make an expenditure.

(c) The term "person" includes an individual, partnership, committee, association, corporation, and any other organization or group of persons.

(d) The term "Clerk" means the Clerk of the House of Representatives of the United States.

(e) The term "legislation" means bills resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House.

Detailed accounts of contributions

SEC. 303. (a) It shall be the duty of every person who shall in any manner solicit or receive a contribution to any organization or fund for the purposes hereinafter designated to keep a detailed and exact account of—

(1) all contributions of any amount or of any value whatsoever;

(2) the name and address of every person making any such contribution of $500 or more and the date thereof;

(3) all expenditures made by or on behalf of such organization or fund; and

(4) the name and address of every person to whom any such expenditure is made and the date thereof.

(b) It shall be the duty of such person to obtain and keep a receipted bill, stating the particulars, for every expenditure of such funds exceeding $10 in amount, and to preserve all receipted bills and accounts required to be kept by this section for a period of at least 2 years from the date of the filing of the statement containing such items.

Receipts for contributions

SEC. 304. Every individual who receives a contribution of $500 or more for any of the purposes hereinafter designated shall within 5 days after receipt thereof rendered to the person or organization for which such contribution was received a detailed account thereof, including the name and address of the person making such contribution and the date on which received.

Statements to be filed with Clerk of House

SEC. 305. (a) Every person receiving any contributions or expending any money for the purposes designated in subparagraph (a) or (b) of section 307 shall file with the Clerk between the first and tenth day of each calendar quarter, a statement containing complete as of the day next preceding the date of filing—

(1) the name and address of each person who has made a contribution of $500 or more not mentioned in the preceding report; except that the first report filed pursuant to this title shall contain the name and address of each person who has made any contribution of $500 or more to such person since the effective date of this title;

(2) the total sum of the contributions made to or for such person during the calendar year and not stated under paragraph (1);

(3) the total sum of all contributions made to or for such person during the calendar year;

(4) the name and address of each person to whom an expenditure in one or more items of the aggregate amount or value, within the calendar year, of $10 or more has been made by or on behalf of such person, and the amount, date, and purpose of such expenditure;

(5) the total sum of all expenditures made by or on behalf of such person during the calendar year and not stated under paragraph (4);

(6) the total sum of expenditures made by or on behalf of such person during the calendar year.

(b) The statements required to be filed by subsection (a) shall be cumulative during the calendar year to which they relate, but where there has been no change in an item reported in a previous statement only the amount need be carried forward.

Statement preserved for 2 years

SEC. 306. A statement required by this title to be filed with the Clerk—

(a) shall be deemed properly filed when deposited in an established post office within the prescribed time, duly stamped, registered, and directed to the Clerk of the House of Representatives of the United States, Washington, D. C., but in the event it is not received, a duplicate of such statement shall be promptly filed upon notice by the Clerk of its nonreceipt;

(b) shall be preserved by the Clerk for a period of 2 years from the date of filing, shall constitute part of the public records of his office, and shall be open to public inspection.

Persons to whom applicable

SEC. 307. The provisions of this title shall apply to any person (except a political committee as defined in the Federal Corrupt Practices Act, and duly organized State or local committees of a political party), who by himself, or through any agent or employee or other persons in any manner whatsoever, directly or indirectly, solicits, collects, or receives money or any other thing of value to be used principally to aid, or the principal purpose of which person is to aid, in the accomplishment of any of the following purposes;

(a) The passage or defeat of any legislation by the Congress of the United States.

(b) To influence, directly or indirectly, the passage or defeat of any legislation by the Congress of the United States.

Registration with Secretary of the Senate and Clerk of the House

SEC. 308. (a) Any person who shall engage himself for pay or for any consideration for the purpose of attempting to influence the passage or defeat of any legislation by the Congress of the United States shall, before doing anything in furtherance of such object, register with the Clerk of the House of Representatives and the Secretary of the Senate and shall give to those officers in writing and under oath, his name and business address, the name and address of the person by whom he is employed, and in whose interest he appears or works, the duration of such employment, how much he is paid and is to receive, by whom he is paid or is to be paid, how much he is to be paid for expenses, and what expenses are to be included. Each such person so registering shall, between the first and tenth day of each calendar quarter, so long as his activity continues, file with the Clerk and Secretary a detailed report under oath of all money received and expended by him during the preceding calendar quarter in carrying on his work; to whom paid; for what purposes; and the names of any papers, periodicals, magazines, or other publications in which he has caused to be published any articles or editorials; and the proposed legislation he is employed to support or oppose. The provisions of this section shall not apply to any person who merely appears before a committee of the Congress of the United States in support of or opposition to legislation; nor to any public official acting in his official capacity; nor in the case of any newspaper or other regularly published periodical (including any individual who owns, publishes, or is employed by any such newspaper or periodical) which in the ordinary course of business publishes news items, editorials, or other comments, or paid advertisements, which directly or indirectly urge the passage or defeat of legislation, if such newspaper, periodical, or individual, engages in no further or other activities in connection with the passage or defeat of such legislation, other than to appear before a committee of the Congress of the United States in support of or in opposition to such legislation.

(b) All information required to be filed under the provisions of this section with the Clerk of the House of Representatives and the Secretary of the Senate shall be compiled by said Clerk and Secretary, acting jointly, as soon as practicable after the close of the calendar quarter with respect to which such information is filed and shall be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Reports and statements to be made under oath

SEC. 309. All reports and statements required under this title shall be made under oath, before an officer authorized by law to administer oaths.

Penalties

SEC. 310. (a) Any person who violates any of the provisions of this title, shall, upon conviction, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000 or imprisonment for not more than 12 months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

(b) In addition to the penalties provided for in subsection (a), any person convicted of the misdemeanor specified therein is prohibited, for a period of 3 years from the date of such conviction, from attempting to influence, directly or indirectly, the passage or defeat of any proposed legislation or from appearing before a committee of the Congress in support of or opposition to proposed legislation; and any person who violates any provision of this subsection shall, upon conviction thereof, be guilty of a felony, and shall be punished by a fine of not more than $10,000, or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Exemption

SEC. 311. The provisions of this title shall not apply to practices or activities regulated by the Federal Corrupt Practices Act nor be construed as repealing any portion of said Federal Corrupt Practices Act.

TITLE IV—FEDERAL TORT CLAIMS ACT

PART 1—SHORT TITLE AND DEFINITIONS

Short title

SEC. 401. This title may be cited as the "Federal Tort Claims Act."

Definitions

SEC. 402. As used in this title, the term—

(a) "Federal agency" includes the executive departments and independent establishments of the United States, and corporations whose primary function is to act as, and while acting as, instrumentalities or agencies of the United States, whether or not authorized to sue and be sued in their own names: Provided, That this shall not be construed to include any contractor with the United States.

(b) "Employee of the Government" includes officers or employees of any Federal agency, members of the military or naval forces of the United States, and persons acting on behalf of a Federal agency in an official capacity, temporarily or permanently in the service of the United States, whether with or without compensation.

(c) "Acting within the scope of his office or employment," in the case of a member of the military or naval forces of the United States, means acting in line of duty.

PART 2—ADMINISTRATIVE ADJUSTMENT OF TORT CLAIMS AGAINST THE UNITED STATES

Claims of $1,000 or less

SEC. 403. (a) Subject to the limitations of this title, authority is hereby conferred upon the head of each Federal agency, or his designee for the purpose, acting on behalf of the United States, to consider, ascertain, adjust, determine, and settle any claim against the United States for money only, accruing on and after January 1, 1945, on account of damage to or loss of property or on account of personal injury or death, where the total amount of the claim does not exceed $1,000, caused by the negligent or wrongful act or omission of any employee of the Government while acting within the scope of his office or employment, under circumstances where the United States, if a private person, would be liable to the claimant for such damage, loss, injury, or death, in accordance with the law of the place where the act or omission occurred.

(b) Subject to the provisions of part 3 of this title, any such award or determination shall be final and conclusive on all officers of the Government, except when procured by means of fraud, notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary.

(c) Any award made to any claimant pursuant to this section, and any award, compromise, or settlement of any claim cognizable under this title made by the Attorney General pursuant to section 413, shall be paid by the head of the Federal agency concerned out of appropriations that may be made therefor, which appropriations are hereby authorized.

(d) The acceptance by the claimant of any such award, compromise, or settlement shall be final and conclusive on the claimant, and shall constitute a complete release by the claimant of any claim against the United States and against the employee of the Government whose act or omission gave rise to the claim, by reason of the same subject matter.

Reports

SEC. 404. The head of each Federal agency shall annually make a report to the Congress of all claims paid by such Federal agency under this part. Such report shall include the name of each claimant, a statement of the amount claimed and the amount awarded, and a brief description of the claim.

PART 3—SUITS ON TORT CLAIMS AGAINST THE UNITED STATES

Jurisdiction

SEC. 410. (a) Subject to the provisions of this title, the United States district court for the district wherein the plaintiff is resident or wherein the act or omission complained of occurred, including the United States district courts for the Territories and possessions of the United States, sitting without a jury, shall have exclusive jurisdiction to hear, determine, and render judgment on any claim against the United States, for money only, accruing on and after January 1, 1945, on account of damage to or loss of property or on account of personal injury or death caused by the negligent or wrongful act or omission of any employee of the Government while acting within the scope of his office or employment, under circumstances where the United States, if a private person, would be liable to the claimant for such damage, loss, injury, or death in accordance with the law of the place where the act or omission occurred. Subject to the provisions of this title, the United States shall be liable in respect of such claims to the same claimants, in the same manner, and to the same extent as a private individual under like circumstances, except that the United States shall not be liable for interest prior to judgment, or for punitive damages. Costs shall be allowed in all courts to the successful claimant to the same extent as if the United States were a private litigant, except that such costs shall not include attorneys' fees.

(b) The judgment in such an action shall constitute a complete bar to any action by the claimant, by reason of the same subject matter, against the employee of the Government whose act or omission gave rise to the claim. No suit shall be instituted pursuant to this section upon a claim presented to any Federal agency pursuant to part 2 of this title unless such Federal agency has made final disposition of the claim: Provided, That the claimant may, upon 15 days' notice given in writing, withdraw the claim from consideration of the Federal agency and commence suit thereon pursuant to this section: Provided further, That as to any claim so disposed of or so withdrawn, no suit shall be instituted pursuant to this section for any sum in excess of the amount of the claim presented to the Federal agency, except where the increased amount of the claim is shown to be based upon newly discovered evidence not reasonably discoverable at the time of presentation of the claim to the Federal agency or upon evidence of intervening facts, relating to the amount of the claim. Disposition of any claim made pursuant to part 2 of this title shall not be competent evidence of liability or amount of damages in proceedings on such claim pursuant to this section.

Procedure

SEC. 411. In actions under this part, the forms of process, writs, pleadings, and motions, and the practice and procedure, shall be in accordance with the rules promulgated by the Supreme Court pursuant to the act of June 19, 1934 (48 Stat. 1064); and the same provisions for counterclaim and set-off, for interest upon judgments, and for payment of judgments, shall be applicable as in cases brought in the United States district courts under the act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. 505).

Review

SEC. 412. (a) Final judgments in the district courts in cases under this part shall be subject to review by appeal—

(1) in the circuit courts of appeals in the same manner and to the same extent as other judgments of the district courts; or

(2) in the Court of Claims of the United States: Provided, That the notice of appeal filed in the district court under rule 73 of the Rules of Civil Procedure shall have affixed thereto the written consent on behalf of all the appellees that the appeal be taken to the Court of Claims of the United States. Such appeals to the Court of Claims of the United States shall be taken within 3 months after the entry of the judgment of the district court, and shall be governed by the rules relating to appeals from a district court to a circuit court of appeals adopted by the Supreme Court pursuant to the act of June 19, 1934 (48 Stat. 1064). In such appeals the Court of Claims of the United States shall have the same powers and duties as those conferred on a circuit court of appeals in respect to appeals under section 4 of the act of February 13, 1925 (43 Stat. 939).

(b) Sections 239 and 240 of the Judicial Code, as amended, shall apply to cases under this part in the circuit courts of appeals and in the Court of Claims of the United States to the same extent as to cases in a circuit court of appeals therein referred to.

Compromise

SEC. 413. With a view to doing substantial justice, the Attorney General is authorized to arbitrate, compromise, or settle any claim cognizable under this part, after the institution of any suit thereon, with the approval of the courts in which such suit is pending.

PART 4—PROVISIONS COMMON TO PART 2 AND PART 3

One-year statute of limitations

SEC. 420. Every claim against the United States cognizable under this title shall be forever barred, unless within 1 year after such claim accrued or within 1 year after the date of enactment of this act, whichever is later, it is presented in writing to the Federal agency out of whose activities it arises, if such claim is for a sum not exceeding $1,000; or unless within 1 year after such claim accrued or within 1 year after the date of enactment of this act, whichever is later, an action is begun pursuant to part 3 of this title. In the event that a claim for a sum not exceeding $1,000 is presented to a Federal agency as aforesaid, the time to institute a suit pursuant to part 3 of this title shall be extended for a period of 6 months from the date of mailing of notice to the claimant by such Federal agency as to the final disposition of the claim or from the date of withdrawal of the claim from such Federal agency pursuant to section 410 of this title, if it would otherwise expire before the end of such period.

Exceptions

SEC. 421. The provisions of this title shall not apply to—

(a) Any claim based upon an act or omission of an employee of the Government, exercising due care, in the execution of a statute or regulation, whether or not such statute or regulation be valid, or based upon the exercise or performance or the failure to exercise or perform a discretionary function or duty on the part of a Federal agency or an employee of the Government, whether or not the discretion involved be abused.

(b) Any claim arising out of the loss, miscarriage, or negligent transmission of letters or postal matter.

(c) Any claim arising in respect of the assessment or collection of any tax or customs duty, or the detention of any goods or merchandise by any officer of customs or excise or any other law-enforcement officer.

(d) Any claim for which a remedy is provided by the act of March 9, 1920 (U. S. C., title 46, secs. 741–752, inclusive), or the act of March 3, 1925 (U. S. C., title 46, secs. 781–790, inclusive), relating to claims or suits in admiralty against the United States.

(e) Any claim arising out of an act or omission of any employee of the Government in administering the provisions of the Trading with the Enemy Act, as amended.

(f) Any claim for damages caused by the imposition or establishment of a quarantine by the United States.

(g) Any claim arising from injury to vessels, or to the cargo, crew, or passengers of vessels, while passing through the locks of the Panama Canal or while in Canal Zone waters.

(h) Any claim arising out of assault, battery, false imprisonment, false arrest, malicious prosecution, abuse of process, libel, slander, misrepresentation, deceit, or interference with contract rights.

(i) Any claim for damages caused by the fiscal operation of the Treasury or by the regulation of the monetary system.

(j) Any claim arising out of the combatant activities of the military or naval forces, or the Coast Guard, during time of war.

(k) Any claim arising in a foreign country.

(l) Any claim arising from the activities of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Attorneys' fees

SEC. 422. The court rendering a judgment for the plaintiff pursuant to part 3 of this title, or the head of the Federal agency or his designee making an award pursuant to part 2 of this title, or the Attorney General making a disposition pursuant to section 413 of this title, as the case may be, may, as a part of the judgment, award, or settlement, determine and allow reasonable attorney's fees, which, if the recovery is $500 or more, shall not exceed 10 percent of the amount recovered under part 2, or 20 percent of the amount recovered under part 3, to be paid out of but not in addition to the amount of judgment, award, or settlement recovered, to the attorneys representing the claimant. Any attorney who charges, demands, receives, or collects for services rendered in connection with such claim any amount in excess of that allowed under this section, if recovery be had, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to a fine of not more than $2,000 or imprisonment for not more than 1 year, or both.

Exclusiveness of remedy

SEC. 423. From and after the date of enactment of this act, the authority of any Federal agency to sue and be sued in its own name shall not be construed to authorize suits against such Federal agency on claims which are cognizable under part 3 of this title, and the remedies provided by this title in such cases shall be exclusive.

Certain statutes inapplicable

SEC. 424 (a) All provisions of law authorizing any Federal agency to consider, ascertain, adjust, or determine claims on account of damage to or loss of property, or on account of personal injury or death, caused by the negligent or wrongful act or omission of any employee of the Goverment while acting within the scope of his office or employment, are hereby repealed in respect of claims cognizable under part 2 of this title and accruing on and after January 1, 1945, including, but without limitation, the provisions granting such authorization now contained in the following laws:

Public Law No. 375, Sixty-seventh Congress, approved December 28, 1922 (42 Stat. 1066; U. S. C., title 31, secs. 215–217).

Public Law No. 267, Sixty-sixth Congress, approved June 5, 1920 (41 Stat. 1054; U. S. C., title 33, sec. 853).

Public Law No. 481, Seventy-fourth Congress, approved March 20, 1936 (49 Stat. 1184; U. S. C., title 31, sec. 224b).

Public Law No. 112, as amended, Seventy-eighth Congress, approved July 3, 1943 (57 Stat. 372; U. S. C., title 31, secs. 223b, 223c, and 223d).

Public Law No. 182, as amended, Sixty-fifth Congress, approved July 1, 1918 (40 Stat. 705; U. S. C., title 34, sec. 600).

Section 4 of Public Law No. 18, Sixty-seventh Congress, approved June 16, 1921 (42 Stat. 63), as amended by Public Law No. 456, Seventy-third Congress, approved June 22, 1934 (48 Stat. 1207; U. S. C., title 31, sec. 224c).

(b) Nothing contained herein shall be deemed to repeal any provision of law authorizing any Federal agency to consider, ascertain, adjust, settle, determine, or pay any claim on account of damage to or loss of property or on account of personal injury or death, in cases in which such damage, loss, injury, or death was not caused by any negligent or wrongful act or omission of an employee of the Government while acting within the scope of his office or employment, or any other claim not cognizable under part 2 of this title.

TITLE V—GENERAL BRIDGE ACT

Short title

SEC. 501. This title may be cited as the "General Bridge Act of 1946."

Consent of Congress

SEC. 502. (a) The consent of Congress is hereby granted for the construction, maintenance, and operation of bridges and approaches thereto over the navigable waters of the United States, in accordance with the provisions of this title.

(b) The location and plans for such bridges shall be approved by the Chief of Engineers and the Secretary of War before construction is commenced, and, in approving the location and plans of any bridge, they may impose any specific conditions relating to the maintenance and operation of the structure which they may deem necessary in the interest of public navigation, and the conditions so imposed shall have the force of law.

(c) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsections (a) and (b), it shall be unlawful to construct or commence the construction of any privately owned highway toll bridge until the location and plans thereof shall also have been submitted to and approved by the highway department or departments of the State or States in which the bridge and its approaches are situated; and where such bridge shall be between two or more States and the highway departments thereof shall be unable to agree upon the location and plans therefor, or if they, or either of them, shall fail or refuse to act upon the location and plans submitted, such location and plans then shall be submitted to the Public Roads Administration and, if approved by the Public Roads Administration, approval by the highway departments shall not be required.

Tolls

SEC. 503. If tolls shall be charged for the transit over any interstate bridge of engines, cars, streetcars, wagons, carriages, vehicles, animals, foot passengers, or other passengers, such tolls shall be reasonable and just, and the Secretary of War may, at any time, and from time to time, prescribe the reasonable rates of toll for such transit over such bridge, and the rates so prescribed shall be the legal rates and shall be the rates demanded and received for such transit.

Acquisition by public agencies

SEC. 504. After the completion of any interstate toll bridge constructed by an individual, firm, or corporation, as determined by the Secretary of War, either of the States in which the bridge is located, or any public agency or political subdivision of either of such States, within or adjoining which any part of such bridge is located, or any two or more of them jointly, may at any time acquire and take over all right, title, and interest in such bridge and its approaches, and any interest in real property for public purposes by condemnation or expropriation. If at any time after the expiration of 5 years after the completion of such bridge the same is acquired by condemnation or expropriation, the amount of damages or compensation to be allowed shall not include good will, going value, or prospective revenues or profits, but shall be limited to the sum of (1) the actual cost of constructing such bridge and its approaches, less a reasonable deduction for actual depreciation in value; (2) the actual costs of acquiring such interests in real property; (3) actual financing and promotion costs, not to exceed 10 percent of the sum of the cost of constructing the bridge and its approaches and acquiring such interests in real property; and (4) actual expenditures for necessary improvements.

Statements of cost

SEC. 505. Within 90 days after the completion of a privately owned interstate toll bridge, the owner shall file with the Secretary of War and with the highway departments of the States in which the bridge is located, a sworn itemized statement showing the actual original cost of constructing the bridge and its approaches, the actual cost of acquiring any interest in real property necessary therefor, and the actual financing and promotion costs. The Secretary of War may, and upon request of a highway department shall, at any time within 3 years after the completion of such bridge, investigate such costs and determine the accuracy and the reasonableness of the costs alleged in the statement of costs so filed, and shall make a finding of the actual and reasonable costs of constructing, financing, and promoting such bridge. For the purpose of such investigation the said individual, firm, or corporation, its successors and assigns, shall make available all of its records in connection with the construction, financing, and promotion thereof. The findings of the Secretary of War as to the reasonable costs of the construction, financing, and promotion of the bridge shall be conclusive for the purposes mentioned in section 504 of this title, subject only to review in a court of equity for fraud or gross mistake.

Sinking fund

SEC. 506. If tolls are charged for the use of an interstate bridge constructed or taken over or acquired by a State or States or by any municipality or other political subdivision or public agency thereof, under the provisions of this title, the rates of toll shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay for the reasonable cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridge and its approaches under economical management, and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to amortize the amount paid therefor, including reasonable interest and financing cost, as soon as possible under reasonable charges, but within a period of not to exceed 20 years from the date of constructing or acquiring the same. After a sinking fund sufficient for such amortization shall have been so provideded, such bridge shall thereafter be maintained and operated free of tolls. An accurate record of the amount paid for acquiring the bridge and its approaches, the actual expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same, and of the daily tolls collected, shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested.

Applicability of title

SEC. 507. The provisions of this title shall apply only to bridges over navigable waters of the United States, the construction of which is hereafter approved under the provisions of this title; and the provisions of the first proviso of section 9 of the act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. 1151; U. S. C., title 33, sec. 401), and the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906, shall not apply to such bridges.

International bridges

SEC. 508. This title shall not be construed to authorize the construction of any bridge which will connect the United States, or any Territory or possession of the United States, with any foreign country.

Eminent domain

SEC. 509. There are hereby conferred upon any individual, his heirs, legal representatives, or assigns, any firm or corporation, its successors or assigns, or any State, political subdivision, or municipality authorized in accordance with the provisions of this title to build a bridge between two or more States, all such rights and powers to enter upon lands and acquire, condemn, occupy, possess, and use real estate and other property in the respective States needed for the location, construction, operation, and maintenance of such bridge and its approaches, as are possessed by railroad corporations for railroad purposes or by bridge corporations for bridge purposes in the State in which such real estate or other property is situated, upon making just compensation therefor to be ascertained and paid according to the laws of such State, and the proceedings therefor shall be the same as in the condemnation or expropriation of property for public purposes in such State.

Penalties

SEC. 510. Any person who fails or refuses to comply with any lawful order of the Secretary of War or the Chief of Engineers issued under the provisions of this title, or who fails to comply with any specific condition imposed by the Chief of Engineers and the Secretary of War relating to the maintenance and operation of bridges, or who refuses to produce books, papers, or documents in obedience to a subpena or other lawful requirement under this title, or who otherwise violates any provisions of this title, shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not to exceed $5,000 or by imprisonment for not more than 1 year, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Rights reserved

SEC. 511. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this title is hereby expressly reserved as to any and all bridges which may be built under authority hereof.

TITLE VI—COMPENSATION AND RETIREMENT PAY OF MEMBERS OF CONGRESS

Compensation of Members of Congress

SEC. 601. (a) Effective on the day on which the Eightieth Congress convenes, the compensation of Senators, Representatives in Congress, Delegates from the Territories, and the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico shall be at the rate of $12,500 per annum each; and the compensation of the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the Vice President of the United States shall be at the rate of $20,000 per annum each.

(b) Effective on the day on which the Eightieth Congress convenes there shall be paid to each Senator, Representative in Congress, Delegate from the Territories, Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico, an expense allowance of $2,500 per annum to assist in defraying expenses relating to, or resulting from the discharge of his official duties, for which no tax liability shall incur, or accounting be made; such sum to be paid in equal monthly installments.

(c) The sentence contained in the Legislative Branch Appropriation Act, 1946, which reads as follows: "There shall be paid to each Representative and Delegate, and to the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico, after January 2, 1945, an expense allowance of $2,500 per annum to assist in defraying expenses related to or resulting from the discharge of his official duties, to be paid in equal monthly installments.", is hereby repealed, effective on the day on which the Eightieth Congress convenes.

(d) The sentence contained in the Legislative Branch Appropriation Act, 1947, which reads as follows: "There shall be paid to each Senator after January 1, 1946, an expense allowance of $2,500 per annum to assist in defraying expenses related to or resulting from the discharge of his official duties, to be paid in equal monthly installments.", is hereby repealed, effective on the day on which the Eightieth Congress convenes.

Retirement pay for Members of Congress

SEC. 602. (a) Section 3 (a) of the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended, is amended by inserting after the words "elective officers" the words "in the executive branch of the Government."

(b) Such act, as amended, is further amended by adding after section 3 the following new section:

"SEC. 3A. Notwithstanding any other provision of this act—

"(1) This act shall not apply to any Member of Congress until he gives notice in writing, while serving as a Member of Congress, to the disbursing officer by whom his salary is paid of his desire to come within the purview of this act. Such notice may be given by a Member of Congress within 6 months after the date of enactment of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 or within 6 months after any date on which he takes an oath of office as a Member of Congress.

"(2) In the case of any Member of Congress who gives notice of his desire to come within the purview of this act, the amount required to be deposited for the purposes of section 9 with respect to services rendered after the date of enactment of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, shall be a sum equal to 6 percent of his basic salary, pay, or compensation for such services, together with interest computed at the rate of 4 percent per annum compounded on December 31 of each year; and the amount to be deducted and withheld from the basic salary, pay, or compensation of each such Member of Congress for the purposes of section 10 shall be a sum equal to 6 percent of such basic salary, pay, or compensation.

"(3) No person shall be entitled to receive an annuity as provided in this section until he shall have become separated from the service after having had at least 6 years of service as a Member of Congress and have attained the age of 62 years except that any such Member who shall have had at least 5 years of service as a Member of Congress, may, subject to the provisions of section 6 and of paragraph (4) of this section, be retired for disability, irrespective of age, and be paid an annuity computed in accordance with paragraph (5) of this section.

"(4) No Member of Congress shall be entitled to receive an annuity under this act unless there shall have been deducted and withheld from his basic salary, pay, or compensation for the last 5 years of his service as a Member of Congress, or there shall have been deposited under section 9 with respect to such last 5 years of service, the amounts specified in paragraph (2) of this section with respect to so much of such 5 years of service as was performed after the date of enactment of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 and the amounts specified in section 9 with respect to so much of such 5 years of service as was performed prior to such date.

"(5) Subject to the provisions of section 9 and of subsections (c) and (d) of section 4, the annuity of a Member of Congress shall be an amount equal to 2½ percent of his average annual basic salary, pay, or compensation as a Member of Congress multiplied by his years of service as a Member of Congress, but no such annuity shall exceed an amount equal to three-fourths of the salary, pay, or compensation that he is receiving at the time he becomes separated from the service.

"(6) In the case of a Member of Congress who becomes separated from the service before he completes an aggregate of 6 years of service as a Member of Congress, and who is not retired for disability, the total amount deducted from his basic salary, pay, or compensation as a Member of Congress, together with interest at 4 percent compounded as of December 31 of each year shall be returned to such Member of Congress. No such Member of Congress shall thereafter become eligible to receive an annuity as provided in this section unless the amounts so returned are redeposited with interest at 4 percent compounded on December 31 of each year, but interest shall not be required covering any period of separation from the service.

"(7) If any person takes office as a Member of Congress while receiving an annuity as provided in this section, the payment of such annuity shall be suspended during the period for which he holds such office; but, if he gives notice as provided in paragraph (2) of this section, his service as a Member of Congress during such period shall be credited in determining the amount of his subsequent annuity.

"(8) Nothing contained in this act shall be construed to prevent any person eligible therefor from simultaneously receiving an annuity computed in accordance with this section and an annuity computed in accordance with section 4, but in computing the annuity under section 4 in the case of any person who (A) has had at least 6 years' service as a Member of Congress, and (B) has served as a Member of Congress at any time after the date of enactment of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, service as a Member of Congress shall not be credited.

"(9) No provision of this or any other act relating to automatic separation from the service shall be applicable to any Member of Congress.

"(10) As used in this section, the term 'Member of Congress' means a Senator, Representative in Congress, Delegate from a Territory, or the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico; and the term 'service as a Member of Congress' shall include the period from the date of the beginning of the term for which a Member of Congress is elected or appointed to the date on which he takes office as such a Member."

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I move that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, what is the nature of the matter in question?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. This is the reorganization bill.

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, will the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin give me his opinion on one subject which has been brought to my attention by some of the finest organizations in the United States? They are somewhat concerned lest the provision in the reorganization plan against lobbying might be construed to apply to institutions such as the United States Chamber of Commerce, for instance, which was organized at the request of the President of the United States to assemble information and make it available for ready reference for members of his Cabinet and the various governmental agencies. I should like to have the Senator from Wisconsin express his opinion whether it affects these fine institutions which are a part of our business and industrial system in the United States.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. So far as any organizations or individuals are concerned, I will say to the Senator from New Jersey, it will depend on the type and character of activity which they undertake.

I ask for a vote on the motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Wisconsin to concur in the amendment of the House. Those in favor——

Mr. HAWKES. Just a moment, Mr. President. Would not the Senator from Wisconsin be willing to express an opinion regarding such organizations of years and years standing?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I cannot tell the Senator whether they will come under the act. It will depend on the type of activity in which they engage, so far as legislation is concerned.

Mr. HAWKES. Does not the bill contain language to the effect "if they are organized to do a business of lobbying principally"? Is not the word "principally" used in the bill? And does that not mean something to the Senator, who knows, of course, that there is not a business organization or chamber of commerce in the United States whose representatives do not come to see Senators and Representatives and interview them regarding legislation?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. It will all depend on the type of activity that is carried on. I cannot give the Senator a blanket interpretation.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. CORDON. The Senator will agree that there is nothing in that provision that can in any way abrogate the right of petition on the part of the American people, or the presentation to Congress of any fact on any subject, anywhere, and at any time?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Of course not, and there is no stigma attached to anyone who engages in this type of activity. The bill simply prescribes certain requirements which have to be fulfilled.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. WHITE. It certainly is true also, I believe, that the legislation in no respect specifies and particularizes in the case of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Oh, no. It affects all individuals and organizations alike if they engage in a covered activity.

Mr. WHITE. It stands on the same footing with every other institution in the United States?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The Senator's statement is correct.

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. HAWKES. The Senator knows I supported his bill, and I have commended him for the work he has done. I think it is a magnificent accomplishment.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I appreciate the Senator's statement.

Mr. HAWKES. I was simply trying to clarify a situation which is worrying many people, though it does not worry me at all, because I think I understand definitely what the provision means. I think the Senator will agree that the bill in its present form does not inhibit in any way, or restrict, a person coming to see his Senator or Representative on a matter incident to his business.

Mr. TUNNELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. TUNNELL. As I understand, there is no exemption of the chamber of commerce from the provisions of the measure.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Nor any other organization.

Mr. TUNNELL. Nor any other organization.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Or individual.

Mr. TUNNELL. They would have the same right as any other organization.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. That is correct.

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a moment further?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. HAWKES. I have no authority to use the name of any chamber of commerce. I addressed my question on my own independent responsibility. I do not want the Senator from Delaware or anyone else to think that I am speaking in behalf of an individual chamber of commerce. I am referring to organizations throughout the United States which, in my opinion, are doing fine work and are clearly within the law.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Wisconsin that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I wish the RECORD to show that I voted against the motion to concur in the amendment of the House to Senate bill 2177.

(Subsequently, while Mr. GEORGE had the floor, the following statements were made:)

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. A few moments ago the Senate voted, although not by a yea-and-nay vote, on the question of the adoption of the House amendment to the bill which provides for the reorganization of the two Houses of Congress. I wish to say that I am not in favor of that bill. I am opposed to it, and I wish to have the RECORD show I was opposed to the reorganization bill as passed by the Senate and to the amendment of the House.

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. McFARLAND. I wish the RECORD to show that I, too, am opposed to Senate concurrence in the amendment of the House to the reorganization bill, and I voted against it orally. I am opposed to the amendment for the same reason that has just been stated by the Senator from Tennessee, namely, that I was opposed to the reorganization bill, Senate bill 2177, when it passed the Senate, and I am opposed to the House amendment which the Senate adopted.

Mr. EASTLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. EASTLAND. I wish the RECORD to show that I am opposed to the reorganization bill, and that I voted against it.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. I wish to say that when the Senate originally considered the so-called reorganization bill, I voted against it and made some remarks against it. I am opposed to the amendment of the House to the bill, and I am opposed to the passage of the bill.

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. BILBO. When the reorganization bill was before the Senate, I made a speech in opposition to its passage, I am still against it. I wish the RECORD to show that the House amendment to the bill was concurred in while I was temporarily out of the Chamber, but if I had been present, I would have voted against it.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, I am one of the Senators who voted against the reorganization bill when it was passed by the Senate. I wish to say that I think it has been improved in some respects by the House amendment, but, even so, the House amendment has not met the objections which I have had to the bill. If I had had an opportunity to vote on the question of the Senate concurring in the House amendment, I would have voted against it.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. LANGER. At the time when the Senate voted on the question of concurring in the amendment of the House to the reorganization bill, Senate bill 2177, I was unavoidably absent. I wish the RECORD to show that if I had been present, I would have voted against having the Senate concur in the House amendment to the bill.

Mr. GERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. GERRY. Mr. President, if I had had an opportunity to vote on the question of having the Senate concur in the amendment of the House to the reorganization bill, I would have voted against it.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I think I had better decline to yield further, or else a majority of the Senate may go on record as being opposed to the reorganization bill. [Laughter.]

AMENDMENT TO RAILROAD RETIREMENT ACT, ETC.

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill (H. R. 1362) to amend the railroad retirement acts. the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, and subchapter B of chapter 9 of the Internal Revenue Code; and for other purposes.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, as I understand we now have before us the amendment offered by the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HOEY]. Before discussing the particular phase which I wish to mention, I should like to ask the Senator from North Carolina a question or two.

I observe at page 10005 of the RECORD of yesterday that the distinguished Senator from North Carolina referred to section 1 of the bill as the section which increases the coverage of the law.

Mr. HOEY. That is correct.

Mr. DONNELL. The Senator stated that if this section were stricken out the coverage of the bill would be exactly as it now is in the law.

Mr. HOEY. That is correct.

Mr. DONNELL. I take it, therefore, that the intention of the distinguished Senator, insofar as it relates to section 1 of the bill, is to preserve the coverage as it now is, rather than to increase the coverage.

Mr. HOEY. That is correct.

Mr. DONNELL. I ask the distinguished Senator also whether or not he shares the fear which the Senator from Kansas [Mr. REED] has expressed, to the effect that the reference in subdivision 2 of section 1 (a) to the term "'transportation' as defined in section 1 (3) of the Interstate Commerce Act" might in itself increase the coverage of Senate bill 1362 beyond the present coverage.

Mr. HOEY. I think it unquestionably would.

Mr. DONNELL. I take it that the Senator likewise feels that when House bill 1362 provides that the term "employer" shall mean, among other things, "any person, other than a carrier regulated under part I of the Interstate Commerce Act, which, pursuant to arrangements with a carrier or otherwise, performs for hire, with respect to passengers or property transported, being transported, or to be transported by a carrier, any service included within the term 'transportation' as defined in section 1 (3) of the Interstate Commerce Act, whether or not such service is offered under railroad tariffs," the distinguished Senator from North Carolina inclines to the view that that particular portion of section 1 (a) does increase the coverage beyond that of the existing law. Is that correct?

Mr. HOEY. Absolutely.

Mr. DONNELL. I thank the Senator.

I again invite the attention of the Senate, in connection with the statement of the Senator from North Carolina, to the fact that section 1 (3) of the Interstate Commerce Act defines transportation as follows:

> The term "transportation" as used in this part shall include locomotives, cars, and other vehicles, vessels, and all instrumentalities and facilities of shipment or carriage, irrespective of ownership or of any contract, express or implied, for the use thereof, and all services in connection with the receipt, delivery, elevation, and transfer in transit, ventilation, refrigeration or icing storage, and handling of property transported.

I submit further that in addition to the apprehensions indulged in so far by the distinguished Senator from North Carolina and the distinguished Senator from Kansas as to the effect of subdivision 2 of section 1 (a) of the bill, there is good ground for equal apprehension under subdivision 4 of the same section, which subdivision provides, in defining other persons who shall be included by the term "carrier," as follows:

> Any person engaged in rendering pursuant to any arrangement for one or more carriers, any service which (i) is of such a nature as to be susceptible of indefinitely continuous performance and (ii) constitutes a part of or is necessary or incidental to the operation or maintenance of way, equipment or structures devoted to transportation use.

Mr. President, for illustration I submit the example of the icing of refrigerator cars. Let us test that example by the provisions of subdivision 4. Suppose that a company is engaged in "rendering, pursuant to any arrangement for one or more carriers," a "service which is of such a nature as to be susceptible of indefinitely continuing performance." Is not such a service one which, again to quote subdivision 4, "constitutes a part of or is necessary or incidental to the operation of equipment devoted to transportation use"?

It seems to me, without going into great detail as to the provisions of the definition of "employer," that the apprehension entertained by the distinguished author of the amendment which is now before us is well founded.

In considering how to vote on the amendment offered by the Senator from North Carolina it seems to me that we should at this time consider, among other things, the alternative course of action which I understand we are to be asked to follow if the amendment offered by the Senator from North Carolina and other amendments shall fail. I understand that the proposal is that House bill 1362, as it now stands, be enacted. That is step No. 1. Not only is it to be enacted, but according to the views of the distinguished majority leader, it is to be enacted exactly as it is now set forth, without amendment.

On page 9981 of yesterday's RECORD the majority leader stated:

> But I felt it my duty and feel it my duty to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that if it is amended it will fail of enactment.

Similar observations appear elsewhere in the RECORD. For example, at page 9983 we find the following statement by the majority leader:

> The Senator can place his own interpretation on the action of the Senate, and can couch it in whatever language he chooses to use. What I have suggested to the Senate is that in view of the situation which exists—which I agree is an unfortunate situation—to change this bill in any particular would mean that it might not be enacted at this session of Congress.

So, Mr. President, the first step in the program which we are to be called upon to follow if the amendment of the Senator from North Carolina and other amendments shall fail is the enactment of House bill 1362 precisely as it now stands, without the change of a comma, a period, or a semicolon.

As I understand, the second step in the program which we are to be called upon to follow is the adoption of a concurrent resolution. The concurrent resolution is very interesting and lengthy. I shall not take the time of the Senate this afternoon to read it. I note from page 10010 of the RECORD that the majority leader has himself prepared it for submission. He read it last night. As Senators will recall, at page 10010 he stated:

> I have it prepared for submission—

I do not know that he meant that he personally had prepared it—> and I shall have it printed, so that every Senator may know what it will entail.

Then the concurrent resolution is set forth in extenso on page 10012. It occupies, roughly, a column and a half of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, in small type. It involves, among other things, various changes in dates which were mentioned by the Senator from Kentucky last evening. It involves, on page 12, striking out from line 25 through line 3, on page 13, and the insertion of certain language and figures in lieu thereof.

It involves the striking out of lines 11 through 13, on page 13, and it involves a change on page 14. It involves a change on page 15, and a further change on page 15, striking out lines 13 through 15 and inserting in lieu thereof approximately 12 or 15 lines, which are set forth on page 10012 of the RECORD. Then it proposes to change various other dates which are listed in detail on pages 10012 and 10013.

It involves a change in name on page 34, and substitution of a portion of a sentence. On page 35, it strikes out a portion. There is a change on page 38. On page 51, it inserts language which roughly constitutes approximately 20 lines or thereabouts of small type. On pages 57, 58, 59, and 60 are other changes. Finally, on page 60 of the bill, there is to be inserted a paragraph lettered "(v)," which I should say comprises probably 15 lines of small type.

Obviously, Mr. President, this is a very extensive and very important change, and one which is clearly designed to allay the fears of those who share the apprehensions of the Senator from North Carolina and the Senator from Kansas.

This is the alternative we have, under the program which has been suggested: On the one hand, to clarify this question by leaving the coverage as it is, not leaving open to debate the legal effect of the language of section 1, in its reference to the Interstate Commerce Act, which seems clearly to include other items of coverage than are embraced in the present law, and not leaving open to argument the question as to subdivision 4, on pages 2 and 3, which, as I have indicated, seems to me clearly susceptible to the interpretation that it increases the coverage of the new act as compared with the coverage of the old act. In other words, on the one hand, we have the proposed amendment of the Senator from North Carolina; and as the alternative we have, first, the enactment of House bill 1362, in exact language and punctuation, consisting, as it does, of 60 pages, without the change of a letter, dot, or character, plus the adoption of a very decidedly unusual method of procedure, of adopting a concurrent resolution after the enactment of this bill, in order to clarify certain contents of the bill, which by then would have been passed.

Mr. President, as to the procedure which has been suggested by the majority leader, I mentioned last night, and again today, the decision to be found in One Hundred and Fiftieth Federal Reporter, Second Series, at page 857. That is a decision by the Circuit Court of Appeals of the Fifth Circuit. In referring to Resolution 50, adopted by the Senate last year, the court said:

> The resolution is not an act of Congress approved by the President or passed over his veto. It does not make law, or change the law made by a previous Congress and President.

Mr. President, the unusual plan of procedure suggested by the distinguished majority leader is distinctly different from the precedent which was cited earlier today by the junior Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON]. It will be recalled that he pointed out that on August 5, 1909, there was received by the Senate from the House of Representatives a concurrent resolution authorizing the Committees on Enrolled Bills of the two Houses to amend the tariff bill which had been passed by both Houses and had been enrolled. It will be recalled that in the course of the debate on that concurrent resolution, Mr. John J. Fitzgerald, of New York, indicated the unusual nature of the type of procedure which was there proposed, and which I may say was adopted by the House by unanimous consent. I now read a part of Mr. Fitzgerald's statement at that time:

> Mr. Speaker, an examination of the precedents discloses that there has not been a similar incident in the history of the country in which bills were amended in the identical way proposed here. Clerical errors and corrections have been made after bills have reached the enrolling clerks, but no substantial change or radical correction has been authorized except where the discovery was after the bill had passed both Houses, and then only to make the bill conform to the proposals of the conference committees.

I pause to point out that if we adopt the course of procedure suggested last evening by the distinguished majority leader, we shall not be in the position of having discovered, after having passed the bill, that there was some error or some omission which should be corrected or taken care of. We shall enact this law with the design of turning around the moment after we have enacted it, and, because it needs amplification or clarification, adopting the concurrent resolution to which I have referred.

The remarks of Mr. Fitzgerald, appearing in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for August 5, 1909, contain the following further statement:

> If it were not for the very comprehensive language of Judge Harlan in Field v. Clark (143 U. S.), I doubt very seriously whether it could be held that the boot and shoe amendment as proposed in this concurrent resolution had passed both Houses of Congress.

The so-called boot and shoe amendment was adopted on August 5, 1909, by the House of Representatives, and it provided for the imposition of an ad valorem duty upon the hides of cattle, and so forth. That action was taken by unanimous consent of the House, as I have indicated.

But in the course of the discussion today, as will be recalled, reference was made to the case of Field against Clark, in the United States Supreme Court, in which Judge Harlan rendered the opinion. The distinguished Senator from Michigan read extensively from that case. At that time I, too, referred to the case, and stated that perhaps I would later today refer to it further.

Mr. President, I have looked into that case, and I wish to say two things about it.

In the first place, the opinion in the case of Field against Clark, which was written by Mr. Justice Harlan—there were two concurring opinions by two other members of the Court, but they were relative to other phases of the case—does not contain facts similar to those involved in connection with the concurrent resolution now under discussion. I shall not go into the facts involved in that case, because a considerable amount of time would be required to do so. But I wish to read a portion of the opinion which sets forth the facts which were under consideration by the Court in that case. It states that certain firms, among others being Marshall Field, of Chicago, had paid duties on woolen dress goods, and so forth, and that later on they proceeded against the collector of the port of Chicago to recover the duties paid thereon; or in the case of certain others, they proceeded against the collector of the port of New York; and others proceeded against the United States—all for the purpose of recovering the duties which had been paid.

The facts which were presented in support of the contention of the plaintiffs that the bill under which the tariff was imposed never became a law in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution, were three, only one of which has relevance here. That one is this:

> (1) That in engrossing the bill a clause known as section 30, relating to a rebate of taxes on tobacco—

I pause to say that was not one of the commodities on which the firms concerned had paid taxes—> which was shown by the journals of both the House of Representatives and the Senate to have been regularly passed by both Houses of Congress, was omitted, and that the engrossed act, as attested by the Vice President and the Speaker of the House, as approved by the President, and as deposited with the Secretary of State, was not the act which passed the two Houses of Congress, and was therefore not a statute of the United States in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution.

So the proposition which the Court had before it for determination, in regard to the question whether, in the case of an act which, before being signed by the Presiding Officers of the two legislative bodies and before receiving the signature of the President of the United States, was found not to contain a particular section which the Journals of both Houses showed had been actually passed, was whether the act so certified could in any sense be impeached.

So, Mr. President, I think it is apparent that the facts in that case are not the ones in the case now before the Senate.

However, I wish to say, in the second place, that there is a very strong statement indicative of the fact that once certain language is set forth in a bill and is certified to by the Presiding Officers of both the House and the Senate and is approved and signed by the President—and I make this statement even though the facts in the case now before us are different—the Court will not impeach the correctness of a bill which has been so certified. I shall quote a sentence or two from page 672, where the Court said:

> And when a bill, thus attested, receives his approval, and is deposited in the public archives, its authentication as a bill that has passed Congress should be deemed complete and unimpeachable.

The Court further said:

> The respect due to coequal and independent departments requires the judicial department to act upon that assurance, and to accept, as having passed Congress, all bills as authenticated in the manner stated, leaving the courts to determine, when the question properly arises, whether the act, so authenticated, is in conformity with the Constitution.

So, Mr. President, in the first place, I say that the Field case is not by any manner of means on all fours with the case now before us. I am free to say that in my judgment, in the event we pass this bill and then adopt the concurrent resolution, and in the event that they are certified together by the respective Presiding Officers and are approved by the President, the doctrine so enunciated by the Court would establish the unimpeachability of the bill in the form in which it had been so certified and approved. I believe that is a correct analysis of that case.

Then we come to the equally important, perhaps the more important, question of the advisability of first enacting the bill in haec verba, with the same punctuation, the same signs, the same figures, and the same words, and then subsequently adopting a concurrent resolution changing its terms.

I shall address myself as briefly as possible to the question whether, regardless of the legal situation with reference to the concurrent resolution, it is advisable and wise that in connection with this particular legislation the Senate shall follow the procedure suggested by the distinguished majority leader.

In the first place, Mr. President, we observe that, as indicated a few moments ago, and also as indicated earlier today by the Senator from Michigan, the procedure to which appeal is had here is an exceedingly unusual one; and, as pointed out in Mr. Fitzgerald's statement, an examination of the precedents discloses that there had not been a single incident in the history of the country until August 5, 1909, in which bills were amended in the identical way proposed there—which, by the way, is the way by which it is proposed to proceed at this time in connection with the measure we are considering.

We note further, Mr. President, that the subject matter which has been covered by such procedure has not been of the type which is sought here to be covered. We are now dealing with substantive legislation which is designed to make the meaning of the measure clear and to remove certain apprehensions, not only apprehensions similar to those of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HOEY] and the Senator from Kansas [Mr. REED], but to legislate affirmatively to the effect that this bill shall not include the various groups of employees which it is feared by those Senators will be included under the bill.

I assert, therefore, that the concurrent resolution which has been suggested to the Senate, and set forth in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of yesterday, is not of the clerical-error-correction type to which Mr. Fitzgerald referred in the statement which I have quoted.

I assert further, Mr. President, that the doctrine to which Mr. Fitzgerald adverted was that which had been followed for a century previous to his investigation in 1909. The procedure which had been followed was confined to situations in which, after a bill had been passed and a discovery had been made of some clerical error in it, an effort was made to correct it. The procedure did not involve in advance the contemplation that after a bill had been passed by the Senate it should immediately turn around and undertake either to change it, clarify it, or do such as is now proposed through a concurrent resolution.

Mr. President, I quote from the statement of Mr. Fitzgerald:

> Clerical errors and corrections have been made after bills have reached the enrolling clerks, but no substantial change or radical correction has been authorized except where the discovery was after the bill had passed both Houses, and then only to make the bill conform to the proposals of the conference committees.

The action which was taken on August 5, 1909, in connection with the boot and shoe amendment which was adopted, was unique in the history of the country up to that time. We start now with the proposition that this particular type of procedure is unusual, and that it does not come within the category of the ordinary type of case in which such procedure has been followed.

It has been suggested that the action taken by the Senate last year in connection with the Export and Import Bank bill should be considered by the Senate in this connection. It will be remembered that last evening the Senator from Utah said:

> I wanted to call the Senator's attention to the fact that when we had under consideration the Export-Import Bank bill the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] called the attention of the Senate to the fact that the Philippine Islands should be included in the bill. They were not included. A concurrent resolution was submitted and adopted by the Senate and sent to the House. I do not know whether it was agreed to by the House.

And so forth.

Mr. President, I digress to say that that concurrent resolution was not agreed to by the House.

Last evening, after the Senator from Utah called attention to this particular incident which occurred last year, the distinguished majority leader said:

> I appreciate the reference of the Senator from Utah to the situation which existed when the Senator from Maryland submitted the concurrent resolution instructing the enrolling clerk to include in the bill the Philippine Islands, which had not been included in either House.

Then the Senator from Kentucky proceeded to say:

> I do not recall whether it was done, but I think it was.

As previously noted, Mr. President, the majority leader was in error in thinking that it was done.

I continue with his statement:

> And when the bill went to the President it carried in it the Philippine Islands just as though it had been in the bill when introduced.

Then, Mr. President, the distinguished Senator from Illinois [Mr. LUCAS] said:

> I wonder whether the Senator sees any difference in what is now being attempted to do by the employment of a concurrent resolution, and what was done in the case the Senator from Utah speaks of.

The majority leader responded:

> There is no difference in principle, of course.

So, Mr. President, we find that the action which was taken last year in the case of the Philippine Islands situation is being used as a precedent with respect to the instant case. Yet, what were the facts? I shall not detail them. I made mention of them earlier in the day. I undertook to point out what happened on July 20, 1945. I desire to call attention once more to the following remarks by three Members of this body. I shall now quote from the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 91, part 6, at page 7851:

> Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I wish to make a statement. It is a little unusual to instruct the enrolling clerks of the two Houses by way of correction to put something in a bill which was not in the bill as it passed either House and was not intended to be in the bill. We frequently instruct the enrolling clerks to put something in a bill that was left out by oversight. That is not the case in this matter. No effort was made to get this provision in the bill in the House or in the Senate, and it is not by way of correction, because the bill as it is now, in process of, or ready for, enrollment, is not incorrect. There was no error committed in enrollment.
>
> I am not going to object, but I want it distinctly understood that it is an unusual thing to amend a bill by way of correcting the enrollment, when neither House considered the item or acted upon it. With the understanding that it establishes no precedent, Mr. President, in that regard I shall not object.

Mr. President, on the procedure about which we are debating I have read the comment of one of the Members of this body.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. Would not the Senator say that the majority leader's statement that he would not object implied his belief that if he did object it would put an end to the requirement of unanimous consent in connection with a matter of that kind?

Mr. DONNELL. I believe that what the Senator from Ohio has said is a proper inference to be drawn.

Mr. President, I wish to recall our minds back to the reading of the next sentence which was uttered after the majority leader had said, "With the understanding that it establishes no precedent in that regard, Mr. President, I shall not object." In the first place, I ask why was it that the majority leader wanted it strictly understood that the procedure which was suggested should establish no precedent? It it had been a proper type or means to be used in legislating, would he have reserved the right to make an objection? Would he have desired to have it clearly understood that the action would not constitute a precedent? The fact that he did not want it to constitute a precedent shows that in his mind the situation was, as he had previously stated, a little unusual. It not only shows that, but it shows that it was of a sufficient deviation from the ordinary course of procedure that he thought it was necessary to put into the RECORD a clear statement of the fact that it should not constitute a precedent. If it had been a wise course to follow, the distinguished majority leader would never have interposed such a qualification, and would not have insisted that the action about to be taken on July 20, 1945, should not constitute a precedent.

I was about to address myself to the next two sentences which were uttered by our distinguished friend, the minority leader. Immediately after the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] had spoken with respect to his understanding that the action about to be taken would constitute no precedent. The distinguished minority leader the Senator from Maine [Mr. WHITE] said:

> I simply want to echo what the Senator from Kentucky has said. I think it does establish a precedent, and I think an unhappy one, but I am not going to object.

I pause, Mr. President, once again as I see in the Chamber the distinguished minority leader. In the statement which I have just read, which was made by the distinguished minority leader, I see something of a prophecy, because notwithstanding the reservation of the distinguished majority leader which I recently read, we found him last evening using this very incident as a precedent.

Mr. President, I quote finally from another Member of the Senate on this subject. Remember that a concurrent resolution had been presented by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], and that the statement was made by the majority leader that, "With the understanding that the action establishes no precedent in that regard, Mr. President, I will not object." We have also the statement of the distinguished minority leader, the Senator from Maine [Mr. WHITE], that while he would not object he thought the action would establish an unhappy precedent. Then the Senator from Maryland said:

> Mr. President, I want to reecho what both Senators have said, and I hope what is proposed to be done will not establish a precedent. I hope the concurrent resolution will be adopted.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. WHERRY. Does the Senator imply that this procedure was never employed before except when unanimous consent was granted?

Mr. DONNELL. I know of no illustration of the procedure having been used. I cannot assure the Senator categorically that it has never been used.

Mr. WHERRY. In the Senator's research, has he ever found an example of it having been used except by unanimous consent?

Mr. DONNELL. I have never found such a case, but I may say that I have not made an exhaustive study and research of the subject. I have indicated to the Senate substantially, if not all, that I have found in respect to the matter.

Mr. WHERRY. Is it the Senator's opinion, on the basis of the research which he has made, that if the Senate employs the procedure at this time it must be by unanimous consent?

Mr. DONNELL. Yes. My opinion is based not only on the practice and procedure of past years, but also on rule XV of the Senate Rules. The distinguished Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON] indicated earlier in the day that, in his opinion, the concurrent resolution which we have been discussing must be considered and treated as an amendment. Obviously, it is an amendment. The language of it indicates clearly that it is an amendment. Rule XV of the Senate Rules states:

> When a bill or resolution shall have been ordered to be read a third time, it shall not be in order to propose amendments, unless by unanimous consent, but it shall be in order at any time before the passage of any bill or resolution to move its commitment, and when the bill or resolution shall again be reported from the committee it shall be placed on the calendar.

Mr. President, if it be true, as I agree with the Senator from Michigan it is true, that this concurrent resolution, if it is anything, is an amendment, I take it that under rule XV unanimous consent is required in order that it may be proposed.

Mr. WHERRY. I thank the distinguished Senator, because I am of exactly the same opinion relative to the use of the concurrent resolution.

Mr. DONNELL. Therefore, Mr. President, in considering the course of procedure suggested by the distinguished Senator, considering whether or not such a course is advisable and wise to follow, we have, first, the fact that the procedure has not been adopted, save only in a very few instances in the past, in order to do anything except correct mere clerical errors or omissions of the type referred to by Mr. Fitzgerald, of the House of Representatives.

In the second place, so far as I am informed, in no instance has it been used where a measure has been passed knowing in advance that a concurrent resolution was thereafter to be adopted in order to correct an alleged error or to make an alleged clarification. So far as I know, there is no such case. I have not learned of any, although I wish to say, in frankness, that I have not made an exhaustive examination; but I have been unable to find in Cannon's Precedents of the House of Representatives any case except the one of August 5, 1909, and the facts of that case are as I have already indicated to the Senate.

Furthermore, we find that last year, with respect to the Philippine Islands, as to which we occupy a position, as we all realize, of trust, and in many respects copartnership, it was pointed out by the distinguished Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] that the Export-Import Bank was not permitted to make loans to the Philippine Islands, which immediately aroused a sense of justice on the part of the Senate, and the thought that there should be incorporated language in the Export-Import Bank Act which would clearly include the Philippine Islands.

On that occasion the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] made the statement which I quoted earlier today. I do not recall that he conceded anything further than this; I may be in error, but I observe this statement in his language in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 91, part 6, at page 7839:

> It is certainly doubtful whether they—

That is, the Philippines—

> would be within the purview of this act.

Then he said:

> I agree with the Senator that at the present time it is not clear whether or not they could come under it.

So we had in that instance a situation in which, because of the peculiar circumstances, the relationship of this country to the Philippines, the obvious importance of including the Philippines in the bill, the thought of the proponent of the bill himself was that it was doubtful, as I have indicated, whether or not the Philippines would be included within the purview of the act; and the Senate went through the process to which reference has been made.

Mr. President, I wish to say further that at the time the Export-Import Bank bill was passed, as shown in the proceedings of July 20, 1945, it was not determined at that time that there would be a concurrent resolution adopted. The suggestion of the importance of getting certain provisions into the bill had been made, my recollection is that an amendment was provided, but it certainly had not been determined in advance that after the adoption of the bill there would be a concurrent resolution adopted in order to clarify or supplement the then pending bill.

Therefore, if we undertake to adopt this concurrent resolution we will be in this position: We will be passing a bill, and the minute we have passed it we will in effect be changing it, because we have been told by distinguished Members of the Senate that there is strong likelihood that House bill 1362 does increase the coverage of the existing law. We have been told by the majority leader that he has caused to be prepared a concurrent resolution, which is to be presented later, I take it. It has been read into the RECORD. When objection was made to it last night, the distinguished majority leader, in order to get it in print and before the Members of the Senate, went to the extreme physical task of reading it verbatim into the RECORD of the United States Senate.

Mr. President, if we pass House bill 1362 we are doing so with the contemplation of the Members of the Senate who follow the majority leader in this matter that we shall thereafter not discover anew some error in the measure, but that we shall pass it with the knowledge that there is something which certainly needs to be clarified, or which it is proper to clarify. Therefore, after we have passed it, we turn around, not, as Mr. Fitzgerald suggests, where the discovery was after the bill had passed both Houses, but to make a correction or a supplementation or a clarification, whatever it may be called, which was anticipated in advance of the passage of the bill.

Mr. President, I submit that this is poor legislative procedure, and is a bad public policy. Why do I say that? We have here perhaps as striking an illustration as could be presented of the inadvisability of it. What does such a course of action lead us to do? It leads us to do two things. In the first place, to adopt such a legislative procedure as this, unusual as it is, under circumstances practically unique, with very few exceptions in our national history. It leads the Senate, if we adopt the plan, to pass an act of 60 pages, verbatim, line jot and tittle, exactly as it is, without change of any kind, even though at the same moment we already know, and the majority leader already knows, that there is such an important and worthy-of-consideration point in opposition to the bill that he has caused to be prepared an amendment which occupies a column and a half, in small type, in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. It leads us to pass a bill, H. R. 1362, knowing at the time that a substantial number of our members, or at least some of the Members of the Senate, regard it as of grave importance that there be adopted thereafter, or at some time, at any rate, the suggestions which are contained in the concurrent resolution.

We are therefore put in the position of voting—and I take it everyone is going to be asked to vote for this—for a bill when those in favor of the Hoey amendment, or other amendments, know that the bill does not meet with their approval and their judgment as to what is wise and proper.

It is going to put those of us who believe that the bill does extend the coverage—I certainly take it that the arguments made on this floor indicate that such a construction is permissible, at any rate, if it is not mandatory—in the position of having to vote to increase that coverage, although we do not want to do it, and perhaps right away to present another measure which will undo the first measure if it shall prove to extend the coverage.

So I say the course of action suggested is going to lead us to pass something which at least some Members of the Senate believe is not proper and is not right, and which the majority leader himself has realized is of such importance, after suggestions offered by other Senators, as to cause him to present an amendment taking up a column and a half of the RECORD, to amplify or clarify certain points.

But, Mr. President, not only will this course of action, if adopted, lead some of the Members of the Senate, if they shall yield to it, to support a bill in which they do not believe; not only will it bring about that result, but it will leave the Senate in this further very precarious position. There will be no insurance at all, that the concurrent resolution will be adopted. In other words, if we pass House bill 1362, and the Chair announces that it is passed, it would then be sent to the President of the United States in that form, unless the Senate acts, and acts very promptly, to adopt the concurrent resolution.

Mr. President, the procedure suggested by the majority leader will leave the Senate in the situation that we will be called upon to pass this bill, H. R. 1362, containing provisions that, at any rate, some of the Members of the Senate do not believe to be proper, and we are left in the position of taking a chance as to whether or not there shall be any correction, change or clarification of the language which those Members of the Senate deem to be improper.

Now what are those changes? In the first place, Mr. President, it is by no means certain that the Senate itself will adopt the concurrent resolution. It may be that it will do so. It may be that the force of the arguments presented by the distinguished Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HOEY], the Senator from Kansas [Mr. REED], and other Senators, together with the admonition of the distinguished majority leader, will cause us to adopt the concurrent resolution. But we have no assurance of it. We have no assurance of how long a time the debate will continue upon the concurrent resolution. We have no knowledge as to how the Senate will vote upon it. So it places the Senate in the position of voting for a proposition, namely, H. R. 1362, in which some of the Members do not believe or agree, on the chance that there may hereafter be adopted something which we do not even know whether the Senate will adopt.

Mr. President, I do not have at the moment before me the language of the distinguished majority leader, but I recall very well indeed, and I know it is in the RECORD, because I read it, that he indicates a preference, I should say, to take a chance as to what is going to happen, in order to get this bill through. If I am not mistaken, he used that language, that he would prefer to take the chance.

Mr. President, not only, however, is there this chance, the chance of what the Senate will do, but we must remember that there is another body at the other end of the Capitol, the House of Representatives, and they did not see fit to put any of these amendments into the bill when they were considering it. There was a very considerable controversy over the matter. Hearings were held, I understand, for weeks and weeks and months and months, and finally there was action by the House committee, and then the House took diametrically different action than that taken by the committee. How do we know what action the House of Representatives is going to take with respect to the concurrent resolution if we should adopt it?

So, Mr. President, I say that this plan of passing a measure simply in order to get something on the books that some of the Members think proper, and not amending the measure, not giving us a chance to place amendments in it, because of the fact that the majority leader thinks that the other House will not approve the amendments—I say that there is a danger there, because of the fact first, that it leaves us to pass something which some of us think is improper, and, in the second place, it leaves us to the mercy, first of the Senate, and second to the mercy of the House of Representatives, as to whether the proposed clarification and amplification will be made by the concurrent resolution. I take it, Mr. President, that that procedure is improper and should not be adopted.

I desire to say further, Mr. President, that so far as I have heard—I have not been present all the time, but so far as I have heard on the floor there has been no explanation why it is that there is such assurance that the House of Representatives will not adopt the amendments which are set out in the concurrent resolution, if they shall be proposed as amendments to the bill, and still have the apparent assurance that the House of Representatives will adopt them in the form of a concurrent resolution. It would seem to me that if there is reasonable assurance that the House will adopt the concurrent resolution containing these various amendments, equal assurance should apply to their action should they be proposed in the ordinary method as amendments to the bill itself.

Mr. President, in conclusion I may say that, as I see it, we have here a very important question. We have undertaken to discover what would be the effect of the adoption of the concurrent resolution. From a study of the case of Field against Clark, and from the illuminating discussion of it by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON] earlier today we have come to the conclusion that, while the case itself is not based at all on the same set of facts which we have before us here, while it does not involve directly or indirectly any concurrent resolution, while it does not approach the facts we must contemplate, nevertheless the observations of the court may well lead to the conclusion that if the concurrent resolution shall be adopted, if it shall be signed by the two presiding officers and the President of the United States, that the courts will observe an obligation not to impeach that proceeding. That may be true.

Furthermore, Mr. President, we are confronted with the alternative as to whether in voting for the Hoey amendment and other amendments, if there be any which we think could properly be in the bill, or should be attached to the bill, we should vote for them in the ordinary course of procedure which we adopt with reference to every other bill with almost no exception in the Senate of the United States, or whether we shall resort to this very unique, very unusual plan. If we resort to this unusual plan, Mr. President, we must realize, first, as previously indicated, that we are adopting a procedure which has been adopted in very few cases except with respect to correction of clerical errors or dealing with omissions, and, second, as pointed out by Mr. Fitzgerald, with respect to necessary changes the need for which was discovered only after the bill had been passed by both Houses; whereas here, in advance of the bill itself being passed, we are told that it is proposed to make changes in it by a concurrent resolution.

Mr. President, when the Export-Import Bank bill had been passed, and when the Senator from Maryland proposed to include the Philippine Islands in its provisions, by way of concurrent resolution, the majority leader himself stated he would have no objection to that procedure being followed with the understanding, however, that it would not establish a precedent. Not only did the minority leader say that he thought the action would establish a precedent, and an unhappy one, but the Senator from Maryland, the proponent of that very concurrent resolution, said, "I want to re-echo what both Senators have said, and I hope that what is proposed to be done will not establish a precedent."

Mr. President, these are the considerations which I submit respecting the inherent lack of wisdom, the folly, one may say, of undertaking to adopt a course of procedure by which the Senate would be called upon in one breath to pass a bill with which various of its Members do not agree, on the chance that thereafter the Senate may adopt something else which will clarify and possibly change the law, and on the further chance that the House of Representatives will do likewise. It did not do so in the case of the Export-Import Bank bill, even though the Philippine Islands, the object of our special solicitude, was involved.

Mr. President, I submit that we should not embark upon this dangerous, unique, unusual type of procedure in the instant case.

Mr. HOEY. Mr. President, the yeas and nays have been ordered upon my amendment. I shall suggest the absence of a quorum, but before doing so I ask unanimous consent that the Senate vote on the amendment immediately following the calling of the roll for the purpose of establishing a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from North Carolina? The Chair hears none.

Mr. HOEY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Hill	Overton
Andrews	Hoey	Pepper
Austin	Huffman	Radcliffe
Ball	Johnson, Colo.	Reed
Barkley	Johnston, S. C.	Revercomb
Bilbo	Kilgore	Russell
Brewster	Knowland	Shipstead
Brooks	La Follette	Smith
Burch	Langer	Stanfill
Capper	Lucas	Stewart
Carville	McClellan	Swift
Connally	McFarland	Taft
Cordon	McKellar	Taylor
Donnell	McMahon	Thomas, Okla.
Eastland	Magnuson	Thomas, Utah
Ferguson	Mead	Tunnell
Fulbright	Millikin	Vandenberg
George	Mitchell	Wagner
Gerry	Moore	Walsh
Green	Morse	Wheeler
Guffey	Murdock	Wherry
Gurney	Murray	White
Hart	Myers	Wiley
Hawkes	O'Daniel	Willis
Hayden	O'Mahoney	Young

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TUNNELL in the chair). Seventy-five Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Under the unanimous-consent agreement, the Senate will proceed to vote on the amendment offered by the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HOEY] which will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to strike out all of section 1 and renumber the remaining sections of the bill.

On page 60, it is proposed to strike out lines 18 through 20.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HOEY]. On this question the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I have a general pair with the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES]. Not knowing how he would vote, I transfer that pair to the Senator from Idaho [Mr. GOSSETT]. I am not advised how the Senator from Idaho would vote on this question if present. Being at liberty to vote, I vote "nay."

Mr. HILL. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] and the Senator from Idaho [Mr. GOSSETT] are absent because of illness.

The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. MAYBANK] is absent because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Missouri [Mr. BRIGGS] and the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ] are detained on public business.

The Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] and the Senator from California [Mr. DOWNEY] are absent on official business.

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN] is unavoidably detained on official business at one of the Government departments.

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH] is absent on official business, having been appointed a member of the President's Evaluation Commission in connection with the test of atomic bombs on naval vessels at Bikini.

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER] and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] are absent on official business, having been appointed to the commission on the part of the Senate to participate in the Philippine independence ceremonies.

The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. MAYBANK], who would vote "yea" if present, is paired on this question with the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN], who would vote "nay" if present.

Mr. WHERRY. The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] is necessarily absent. He has a general pair with the Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS].

The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BUTLER] is absent on official business, being a member of the commission appointed to attend the Philippine independence ceremonies.

The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. BUSHFIELD], the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART], the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. ROBERTSON], and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY] are absent by leave of the Senate. If present, the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. ROBERTSON] would vote "yea."

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HICKENLOOPER] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business as a member of the Special Committee on Atomic Energy.

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL] is absent on official business, having been appointed a member of the President's Evaluation Commission in connection with the test of atomic bombs on naval vessels at Bikini.

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON] is absent on official business. If present, he would vote "yea."

The Senator from Delaware [Mr. BUCK] is necessarily absent.

The result was announced—yeas 40, nays 35, as follows:

YEAS—40

Andrews	Green	Reed
Austin	Gurney	Revercomb
Ball	Hart	Russell
Bilbo	Hawkes	Smith
Brewster	Hoey	Stanfill
Brooks	Johnston, S. C.	Swift
Burch	Knowland	Taft
Capper	Lucas	Thomas, Okla.
Connally	McClellan	Wherry
Donnell	Magnuson	White
Eastland	Millikin	Wiley
Fulbright	Moore	Willis
George	O'Daniel
Gerry	Overton

NAYS—35

Aiken	Langer	Radcliffe
Barkley	McFarland	Shipstead
Carville	McKellar	Stewart
Cordon	McMahon	Taylor
Ferguson	Mead	Thomas, Utah
Guffey	Mitchell	Tunnell
Hayden	Morse	Vandenberg
Hill	Murdock	Wagner
Huffman	Murray	Walsh
Johnson, Colo.	Myers	Wheeler
Kilgore	O'Mahoney	Young
La Follette	Pepper

NOT VOTING—21

Bailey	Capehart	McCarran
Bridges	Chavez	Maybank
Briggs	Downey	Robertson
Buck	Ellender	Saltonstall
Bushfield	Gossett	Tobey
Butler	Hatch	Tydings
Byrd	Hickenlooper	Wilson

So Mr. HOEY's amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HOEY. Mr. President, I move that the vote by which the amendment was adopted be reconsidered.

Mr. WHERRY. I move that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion to lay on the table the motion to reconsider.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, in view of the adoption of the amendment which has just been voted upon, which makes it obvious that the bill will have to go back to the House for whatever fate may await it there, I wonder whether we may expedite the further consideration of the bill in the Senate by invoking a limitation on debate on the bill and on any amendments to it. Looking to that end, I ask unanimous consent that during the further consideration of this measure, no Senator may speak more than once or longer than 15 minutes upon the bill or any amendment thereto.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. DONNELL. I object.

Mr. BARKLEY. Would the Senator from Missouri object to a 30-minute limitation?

Mr. DONNELL. I think 30 minutes is not sufficient, and I would object.

Mr. BARKLEY. I did not hear the Senator.

Mr. DONNELL. I object.

Mr. BARKLEY. Very well.

KARL E. BOND

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives announcing its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 783) for the relief of Karl E. Bond and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. O'DANIEL. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendment, agree to the request of the House for a conference, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. O'DANIEL, Mr. KILGORE, and Mr. WHERRY conferees on the part of the Senate.

DISPOSITION BY SECRETARY OF THE NAVY OF VESSELS, TROPHIES, RELICS, ETC.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1547) to provide for the disposition of vessels, trophies, relics, and material of historical interest by the Secretary of the Navy, and for other purposes, which was, on page 3, line 4, after "Department" to insert a colon and "Provided, That the material authorized by this section to be loaned or given by the Secretary of the Navy shall not include any records of the Federal Government as defined in the act approved July 7, 1943 (57 Stat. 380; 44 U. S. C. 366)."

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

ENACTMENT OF CERTAIN PROVISIONS INCLUDED IN NAVAL APPROPRIATION ACT OF 1946

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1917)

to enact certain provisions now included in the Naval Appropriation Act, 1946, and for other purposes, which were, on page 2, line 10, to strike out "$2,000" and insert "$5,200"; on page 5, lines 5 and 6, to strike out "when authorized in an appropriation" and insert "out of funds specifically appropriated for that purpose"; on page 7, strike out all after "money", in line 6, down to and including "allowance", in line 10, and insert:

Active duty enlisted personnel, active and inactive retired enlisted personnel and members of the Fleet Reserve when sick and in hospitals, and enlisted personnel on duty in hospitals may be subsisted in kind in hospital messes and, when so subsisted, the appropriation chargeable with the maintenance of the hospital mess shall be credited, when applicable, at such rate as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Navy as the value of the hospital ration. Members of the Nurse Corps may be subsisted in hospital messes under such regulations as the Secretary of the Navy may prescribe, and nurses so subsisted shall pay therefor at rates to be fixed by such regulations: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall deprive such nurses of allowances for subsistence now or hereafter provided by law.

On page 9, lines 16 and 17, strike out "paid in connection with such transportation or travel"; on page 11, line 21, after "them", insert "for their personal use, not to exceed one vehicle per person,"; on page 13, after line 19, insert:

(d) The provisions of section 12 of title 22, United States Code, together with the provisions of regulations prescribed thereunder, are hereby made applicable to civilian officers and employees of the Navy Department who are citizens of the United States and who are permanently stationed in foreign countries.

On page 14, line 1, after "war", insert "and until the end of the first fiscal year thereafter"; on page 15, line 10, strike out "graudates" and insert "graduates"; and on page 15, after line 14, insert:

TITLE II—AMENDMENTS TO THE PAY READJUSTMENT ACT

SEC. 201. The third paragraph of section 10 of the Pay Readjustment Act of 1942 is amended to read as follows:

"Enlisted men entitled to receive allowances for quarters or subsistence shall continue, while their permanent stations remain unchanged, to receive such allowances while sick in hospital or absent from their permanent-duty stations in a pay status: Provided, That allowances for subsistence shall not accrue to such an enlisted man while he is in fact being subsisted at Government expense. Enlisted personnel not receiving allowances for subsistence shall be entitled to commutation in lieu of rations while on furlough or authorized leave or when authorized to mess separately, under such regulations and at such rates as may be prescribed by the head of the executive department concerned."

SEC. 202. The first paragraph of section 12 of the Pay Readjustment Act of 1942, as amended by section 9 of the act of September 7, 1944 (37 U. S. C. 112), is amended to read as follows:

"Officers of any of the services mentioned in the title of this act, including active and retired personnel of the Regular Establishments and members of the Reserve components thereof and the National Guard, while on active duty in the Federal service, when traveling under competent orders without troops, including travel from home to first station in connection with their appointment or call to active duty from last station to home in connection with relief from active duty or discharge not the result of their own misconduct, shall receive a mileage allowance at the rate of 8 cents per mile, distance to be computed by the shortest usually traveled route and existing laws providing for the issue of transportation requests to officers of the Army traveling under competent orders, and for deduction to be made from mileage accounts when transportation is furnished by the United States, are hereby made applicable to all the services mentioned in the title of this act: Provided, That the head of the executive department concerned may, in his discretion, direct that, in lieu of mileage, actual and necessary expenses shall be allowed to officers traveling on official business and away from their designated posts of duty, without regard to the length of time away from such posts. Actual expenses only shall be paid for travel under order in Alaska and outside the limits of the United States in North America."

SEC. 203. The second paragraph of section 12 of the Pay Readjustment Act of 1942 is amended to read as follows:

"Unless otherwise expressly provided by law, no officer of the services mentioned in the title of this act shall be allowed or paid any sum in excess of expenses actually incurred for subsistence while traveling on duty away from his designated post of duty, nor any sum for such expenses actually incurred in excess of $8 per day. The heads of the executive departments concerned are authorized to prescribe per diem rates of allowance, not exceeding $7, in lieu of subsistence to officers traveling on official business and away from their designated posts of duty, without regard to the length of time away from such posts. Officers, midshipmen, and cadets of the Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard when absent from a vessel or designated post of duty while assigned to shore patrol duty may be paid their actual expenses, and naval personnel on duty with or under training for the Naval Air Transport Service and away from their permanent stations may be paid their actual expenses, or per diem in lieu thereof, at rates not exceeding those prescribed for naval officers in a travel status, without in either case the issuance of orders for specific travel: Provided, That for travel by air under competent orders on duty without troops, under regulations to be prescribed respectively by the heads of the departments concerned, members (including officers, warrant officers, contract surgeons, enlisted men, aviation cadets, and members of the Nurse Corps) of the services mentioned in the title of this act, and of the legally constituted Reserves of said services while on active duty, and of the National Guard while in Federal service, or while participating in exercises, or performing duties under sections 92, 94, 97, or 99 of the National Defense Act, shall, in lieu of mileage or other travel allowances, be allowed and paid their actual and necessary traveling expenses not to exceed $8 per day, or, in lieu of subsistence, per diem allowances at rates not to exceed $7 per day. Without regard to the monetary limitations in this act, and in accordance with regulations prescribed by the President, the heads of the departments concerned may authorize the payment to members of the services mentioned in the title of this act on duty outside continental United States or in Alaska, whether or not in a travel status, of actual and necessary expenses or per diem in lieu thereof, considering all elements of cost of living, including cost of quarters, subsistence, and other necessary incidental expenses."

SEC. 204. Section 12 of the Pay Readjustment Act of 1942 is amended by inserting between the fourth and fifth paragraphs thereof the following new paragraph:

"Under regulations prescribed by the head of the department concerned, (1) officers entitled to transportation (as distinguished from mileage) and enlisted personnel of any of the services mentioned in the title of this act may be paid, in advance or otherwise, a money allowance of 3 cents per mile in lieu of transportation, regardless of the mode of travel; (2) applicants for enlistment (including rejected applicants) in such services may be furnished or reimbursed for transportation and subsistence incident to recruitment of such personnel; and (3) insane patients may be furnished transportation and subsistence from military hospitals to other hospitals or their homes."

SEC. 205. (a) Section 12 of the Pay Readjustment Act of 1942 is amended by inserting between the fifth and sixth paragraphs thereof the following new paragraph:

"Upon changes of station, members of the services mentioned in the title of this act shall be entitled to transportation (including packing, crating, drayage, temporary storage, and unpacking) of baggage and household goods and effects, or reimbursement therefor, as authorized by regulations prescribed by the heads of the department concerned, which shall be uniform for the services mentioned and shall be approved by the President. Such transportation may be by rail, water, or van, without regard to comparative costs."

(b) The fifth paragraph of section 12 of the Pay Readjustment Act of 1942 is amended by striking out the following proviso: "Provided further, That the personnel of all the services mentioned in the title of this act shall have the benefit of all existing laws applying to the Army and Marine Corps for the transportation of household effects:"

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

OPERATION OF INDIAN SERVICE IRRIGATION PROJECTS

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 115) to modify sections 4 and 20 of the Permanent Appropriation Repeal Act, 1934, with reference to certain funds collected in connection with the operation of Indian Service irrigation projects, and for other purposes, which was, on page 1, line 3, strike out "and after July 1, following."

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

RETURN OF CERTAIN SECURITIES TO PHILIPPINE COMMONWEALTH GOVERNMENT

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2210) to provide for the return of certain securities to the Philippine Commonwealth Government, which were, in line 4, strike out "return" and insert "transfer and deliver"; in line 4, strike out "Philippine Commonwealth Government" and insert "Republic of the Philippines"; and in line 7, after "States," insert "by the Philippine Commonwealth Government."

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, let me say that, as I understand these amendments, they do not affect in any way the amount of the securities to be returned, but they simply deal with the titles of the authorities in the Philippines.

Mr. HAYDEN. In substance, that is correct.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Arizona that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

AMENDMENT TO RAILROAD RETIREMENT ACTS, ETC.

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill (H. R. 1362) to amend the railroad retirement acts, the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, and subchapter B of chapter 9 of the Internal Revenue Code; and for other purposes.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, yesterday I sent to the desk and had printed a series of amendments which I announced I would propose to the bill if it were amended in any particular.

It is not my purpose to detain the Senate for any great length of time, but I am about to discuss some technical matters in connection with the bill. I earnestly invite the attention of the Senate to the amendments.

As I have said, yesterday I sent forward and had printed, to lie on the table, a series of amendments to the Railroad Retirement Act, which I stated I would offer if any amendments were adopted to the measure. I now wish to make this statement about the amendments. In view of the adoption of the amendment offered by the distinguished junior Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HOEY], it will be necessary for me to revise somewhat the amendments which I am offering to the bill. His amendment, as I understand, struck from the bill all of section 1. The series of amendments which I have prepared begins with certain amendments to section 1. I think it is entirely proper for me to make the statement which I am about to make. It will not be lengthy, but it will deal with what I regard as an important feature of this proposed legislation.

Mr. President, all the amendments which I am proposing would remove two seriously objectionable features now appearing in the bill.

The first objectionable feature of the bill is that it would transfer from the Bureau of Internal Revenue to the Railroad Retirement Board the collection of the taxes imposed in support of the railroad-retirement system.

It has been the national policy to have only one tax collecting agency in the Federal Government. The Treasury Department has pointed out that unnecessary duplication of facilities and functions, as well as a possibility of conflict in administrative policies and interpretations under the same or corresponding provisions of law, result when another agency is permitted to function, even in a limited field, in the tax-collecting activities of the Government.

Also, on the taxpayer's side, unwarranted annoyance and harassment would result from the auditing of the taxpayer's records by two different Federal tax-collecting agencies. For convenience and ease of compliance with the Federal taxing statutes, the taxpayer should not be forced to deal with more than one Federal agency in tax matters.

This principle was violated in 1938 when the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act was passed, giving the function of collecting the contributions in support of that act to the Railroad Retirement Board. This was then done over the objections of the Treasury. It constitutes the sole exception to the general policy that all taxes should be collected by the tax collecting agency of the Federal Government, the Bureau of Internal Revenue. It should not be permitted to be used as a precedent for the further dispersal of the tax-collection functions. Since that act of 1938, the collection of the income tax through withholding on wages has been instituted; thereunder the Bureau of Internal Revenue is charged with the responsibility of collecting the income tax on wages from employers, including the carrier employers covered by this bill. There are possibilities for an integration and simplification of the administration of the various pay-roll taxes and the income tax collected at the source, which would redound to the advantage of the employer-taxpayer as well as the Government. However, it is clear that these potentialities for simplifying the administration and collection of these taxes cannot be achieved under a division of the responsibility for the collection of taxes with respect to the railroad industry.

Accordingly, the proposed amendments would continue the present tax collection functions under the Railroad Retirement Act in the hands of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. If the bill should be enacted without an amendment in this respect, it would constitute a dangerous precedent for the parceling out of the tax collection functions of the Federal Government to the various agencies which are concerned with the administration expending of the proceeds. For example, the Social Security Board could then expect to administer all the social-security taxes, and collect them for its purpose.

Mr. President, I have stated the first serious objection to this bill and, to my mind, the reasons for it are perfectly evident.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield for a question, but I do not wish to break the continuity of what I am attempting to say.

Mr. SMITH. It is my understanding that social-security taxes are collected through the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Mr. GEORGE. Yes. There is one exception to that, namely, under the present Railroad Retirement Act, but the tax now collected is insignificant in comparison with the tax which it is proposed to collect under the pending bill.

Mr. SMITH. I thank the Senator.

Mr. GEORGE. The Senator is entirely correct.

The second major objection to the bill is that it would make certain determinations of the Railroad Retirement Board with respect to the coverage of the Railroad Retirement and Unemployment Insurance Acts binding upon the Bureau of Internal Revenue with respect to the social-security taxes which are administered by the Bureau.

The social-security taxes are not applicable to employment covered by the railroad-retirement system. The bill contains provisions to the effect that the determinations of the Railroad Retirement Board as to whether a person is liable for taxes or is entitled to the refund of taxes under the Railroad Retirement or Unemployment Insurance Acts would be final and binding upon all parties, subject only to limited judicial review in the circuit courts of appeal. The result would be that such determinations of coverage would be binding upon the Bureau of Internal Revenue with respect to its administration of the social-security taxes. Thereunder, the rulings of the Bureau of Internal Revenue in this area would lose their certainty and would be subjected to improper delays, and the collection of the social-security taxes would be impaired. Accordingly the proposed amendments to the bill would strike out the provision of the bill which would impose this degree of finality upon the Bureau of Internal Revenue, insofar as the taxes administered by the Bureau are concerned. The amendments would not disturb the finality of the Retirement Board's judgment, insofar as its judgment may be exercised under the amendments which I am now offering.

In addition, the effective dates of the bill are entirely improper and should be revised. The bill now contains amendments which would increase the rates of tax under the Railroad Retirement Act from 3½ percent to 5¾ percent each upon the employer and employee retroactively to July 1, 1945. Similarly, the increase in the tax from 7 percent to 11½ percent upon employee representatives would be imposed retroactively to July 1, 1945. That, of course, results from the fact that the bill was introduced some 2 years ago in the House of Representatives, but, nevertheless, these provisions remain in the bill.

The bill would also transfer to the Railroad Retirement Board the tax collecting functions under the Railroad Retirement Act retroactively back to January 1, 1946. Even assuming that such retroactive legislation violates no constitutional prohibition, the administrative difficulties cannot be exaggerated. The employee's tax is to be deducted from his wages when he is paid; if the increase in rate is imposed retroactively, the employer will not have deducted a sufficient amount of tax. The employer is nevertheless required to pay the full amount of tax. If the employee is still working for him, the employer may be permitted to deduct in a lump sum the amount of the retroactive increases; if the employee is no longer with him, the employer will have to bear the full burden of the increases in both the employer's and employee's taxes.

The proposed amendments now offered would revise the effective dates, so that the bill would become effective for tax purposes on January 1, 1947.

I presume those amendments inserting proper dates in the bill will certainly not be opposed inasmuch as one amendment of that nature has already been agreed to in connection with the pending bill.

This would give the administrative agencies, as well as the taxpayers, a sufficient opportunity to prepare for the substantial changes which the bill makes in the present law.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator has referred to the changes in dates due to the fact that the bill was introduced early in 1945. In the proposed concurrent resolution, which I read last night, I included all those changes in dates, and since the Senate has stricken out section 1 of the bill, the part of that proposal which included the coverages is no longer appropriate. The Senator from Colorado had intended to offer the same suggestion with respect to the dates, and I am wondering if they are the same dates covered in the amendment of the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. GEORGE. I have not compared them, but I presumed, in view of the adoption of one amendment to the bill, that there would be no objection to the insertion of the proper dates.

Mr. BARKLEY. The suggestion I made included all dates necessary, and if the Senator's amendment does not include all of them, it might be well to make a comparison to see that they do.

Mr. GEORGE. The amendments which I have I am sure will cover all the necessary dates, because they have been rather carefully checked by the Treasury.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. They do correspond with the dates the Senator from Kentucky offered last night in the concurrent resolution.

Mr. BARKLEY. Very well; so that it would be unnecessary to offer them now.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, that would leave only the two features in the bill to which I first referred.

There can be no more dangerous principle established than the principle which the pending bill seeks finally and firmly to establish in our law, to wit, that the beneficiary of a tax is to be the tax collector and the distributor of the tax. It should not be necessary even to repeat the assertion that it is class legislation, it is a special privilege given to one class of people in the United States, though they happen to be people whom I very greatly admire and with whom I have always been in close relationship. Nevertheless it is class legislation, without any reasonable excuse, and special privileges granted to a particular group.

When the Railroad Retirement Act was first passed there was some rhyme, although not sound logic, for vesting in the Retirement Board the power to collect and handle the taxes which were then imposed. There can be no reason now. We have the Social Security System, which has reached a fair degree of development. We have, however, a complete change in our income-tax system. We have collection at the source. The withholding principle is now rather firmly imbedded, I hope, in our tax laws. So the Treasury Department must withhold at the source the income tax on all wages paid by the railway systems to their employees. The work of collection must be done by the Bureau of Internal Revenue. At the same time the pending bill seeks to enact as a permanent provision of our law the wholly vicious principle of an additional revenue agent collecting a tax on the identical income, in the form of a pay-roll tax.

The Railway Retirement Act has in fact resulted in serious complications in our tax system. Pending before the Committee on Finance at this moment is a bill which would give to all Federal employees receiving retirement benefits a credit of $1,440, plus whatever other statutory exemptions they were entitled to take, before any income tax would be imposed. Why? Because in the Railroad Retirement Act there was granted a special privilege, there was recognized the vicious legislative practice of class legislation, and the railway retirement benefits which reach a maximum of $1,440 are not subject to income tax. In other words, that exemption goes into our law today. So that all Federal employees who come under our retirement system have sought by legislation, in the House of Representatives, a similar exemption for themselves.

By construction, the Social Security Board has exempted social security benefits, or survivor and old-age payments made under the act, but the exemption in that case does not reach the statutory exemption. But in the case of the railway retirement benefits $1,440 is the maximum.

Congress cannot in justice, and as a matter of fairness, permit railway employees to have $1,440 exempted from their income before the payment of a tax, and deny to the charwoman, or to the janitor, or to any man who works for the Government of the United States, the same privilege. Unless the amendments which I am offering are accepted, this bill will continue the vicious doctrine and principle which has led to this serious embarrassment, and which will lead to greater embarrassment as the days go by.

Not only that, Mr. President, but we speak of retaining the confidence of the American people in the parliamentary system which we have. We speak of retaining the confidence of the American people in the Congress of the United States. How can the confidence of the American people be retained in the Congress of the United States if by special legislation we give to one single class of our people the power to collect their own taxes, make their own distribution, and strip from the taxing committees of both Houses of Congress any jurisdiction over the important question of taxing our public utilities, common carriers, the railroads. That is what the bill would do.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I am compelled to leave the Chamber. Will the Senator permit me to renew a request which I made a moment ago?

Mr. GEORGE. I am glad to yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. A moment ago I made a request for a limitation of debate on the bill and all amendments. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. DONNELL] objected. He has since advised me that, after considering the matter further, and consulting other Senators, he thinks the request was reasonable. Therefore I renew the request, that following the address of the Senator from Georgia, and during the further consideration of the bill, no Senator shall speak more than once nor longer than 15 minutes on the bill or any amendment thereto.

Mr. TAFT. Are we to understand it is 15 minutes on the bill and 15 minutes on each amendment?

Mr. BARKLEY. That is correct.

Mr. WHITE. Will the Senator at this time indicate how long he would like to have the Senate proceed this afternoon?

Mr. BARKLEY. I had hoped we might finish the consideration of the bill this afternoon and avoid a session tonight, and I think this limitation may help bring that about: I am still hoping that we may not be compelled to hold a night session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Kentucky? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I had about concluded all I desired to say upon the series of amendments designed to accomplish the two purposes which I first discussed briefly.

I was saying that the passage of the pending bill, giving to the Railroad Retirement Board the power to collect taxes from the common carriers, and giving to them the power over the tax funds when they are collected, as contemplated in the bill, will necessarily result in the loss of jurisdiction over the class of taxes covered by the legislation to the taxing committees of both the House and the Senate, and to a confusion similar to the confusion, and with the resulting embarrassment, which the taxing committees of the two Houses now encounter in undertaking to deal with demands for the exemption of all retirement benefits paid by the Federal Government, by the State Governments, by municipalities, and even annuities payable under policies or contracts purchased by the taxpayer himself with funds upon which he has already paid his full tax responsibility.

So I hope, Mr. President, that these amendments will be agreed to anyway, since the bill must go back to the House and have these questions considered.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, in view of the limitation on debate agreed upon, I hope we may finish the bill in the next hour or so and therefore avoid an evening session. I wish to say, however, for the information of Senators, regardless of the disposition of this bill it will be necessary for the Senate to be in session tomorrow; so Senators may adjust themselves accordingly.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Will the Senator indicate whether he contemplates a night session tomorrow night?

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr. President, when the subcommittee was holding hearings on the pending bill we queried Mr. Murray W. Latimer, who at that time was chairman of the Railroad Retirement Board, on the point which has been discussed by the Senator from Georgia. Mr. Latimer called our attention to what he had said on this subject in the House hearings on January 31, 1945, to be found on page 74 of part I of the Railroad Retirement hearings held by the House committee. Mr. Latimer let us know that that was his answer to the arguments which have been advanced today by the Senator from Georgia. This is what Mr. Latimer said:

The Railroad Retirement Board now collects all records of wage and service, collects the contributions under the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, compares the tax returns under subchapter B of chapter 9 of the Internal Revenue Code and its predecessor, the Carriers' Taxing Act (copies of all such returns being furnished the Board by the Bureau of Internal Revenue), with compensation returns, and attempts to reconcile any differences between the two sets of returns. On occasion this latter function has involved inspection of employer records. If the Board discovers any discrepancy between the compensation and tax returns which cannot be reconciled, the Bureau of Internal Revenue is notified in order that it may take appropriate action.

The Bureau of Internal Revenue makes coverage determinations in some cases, though most determinations are made by the Railroad Retirement Board, assesses penalties in appropriate cases, and receives and deposits checks in the Treasury.

Since the coverage provisions of the Railroad Retirement Act are identical to those of subchapter B of chapter 9 of the Internal Revenue Code, it can be expected that coverage determinations of the board and bureau will be uniform. Although I can recall no instance of ultimate disagreement in result between the board and the bureau, the achievement of that condition has frequently been long and tedious. At times the Board and the Bureau, while concurring in the result, has achieved such result by different paths. In at least one such case the difference of method has resulted in embarrassing consequences insofar as uniform coverage is concerned. In any event, substantially all of the research work required to formulate coverage determinations has been done by the staff of the Board.

When litigation is brought against the Bureau of Internal Revenue, the Railroad Retirement Board frequently assists in the preparation of briefs. But the fact that the procedure for and the scope of judicial review with respect to cases arising under subchapter B of chapter 9 of the Internal Revenue Code differs from the procedure and scope of judicial review with respect to cases arising under the Railroad Retirement Act has produced results which are not, in my judgment, calculated to produce the best results for a system of social insurance. Social insurance cases ought to be decided, it seems to me, on the basis of criteria appropriate to social insurance and not on the basis of criteria appropriate only to the field taxation. The two sets of criteria, while having much in common, are by no means identical. So long as taxes are collected by the Bureau of Internal Revenue it will probably be undesirable to lay down for such taxes conditions with respect to collection, payment, and controversies different from those with respect to most other taxes. It would, however, be entirely appropriate to transfer tax collection to the Railroad Retirement Board and provide for a uniform administrative procedure and judicial review with respect to all controversial matters within the jurisdiction of that Board.

There would be other possible advantages in transfer of the tax collection function to the Railroad Retirement Board. Employers could make a single return rather than the two returns now required. The agency which reconciles tax and compensation returns could more easily take effective action than if discrepancies have to be reported to a second agency for action. The Railroad Retirement Board could assume the function with little or no additional cost. The Board already receives contribution returns and a check from each employer with respect to contributions under the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act. A single check for both contributions and taxes could easily be split down into its component parts on a predetermined ratio for deposit in three accounts as against the two in which the Board deposits contributions at the present time. Both the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the Board could effect savings in connection with legal expenses. I anticipate that should this provision in H. R. 1362 be adopted, a net saving in the expenses of the Federal Government, though, to be sure, not a large one, could be achieved.

It seems to me that that argument by Mr. Latimer is very convincing, and especially the fact that a saving would be made by one agency collecting the same taxes from the same groups, instead of having two agencies, each collecting taxes from two identical groups.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I offer the amendments to which I previously referred. The amendments are offered in conformity with the action taken by the Senate in agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HOEY]. The amendments are technical in nature. They do not affect the merits of the bill in any particular whatsoever, except purely the administrative side of it. I ask that the amendments may be printed in the RECORD at this point without reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Georgia?

There being no objection, the amendments were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

On page 8, strike out the lines 13 to 16, inclusive, and insert the following:

"SEC. 2. Section 1 (c) of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937, section (e) of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, and section 1532 (d) of the Internal Revenue Code are each amended as follows: After the word 'if' where it first appears therein insert '(1)' and for the phrase."

On page 9, lines 16 to 18, strike out the following: "by striking out the proviso in said section 1 (1) of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act and replacing the colon with a period."

Strike out section 4 of the bill beginning with page 11, line 10, down through page 15, line 15, and insert the following:

"SEC. 4. (a) Section 1500 of the Internal Revenue Code is amended to read as follows:

" 'SEC. 1500. Rate of tax.

" 'In addition to other taxes, there shall be levied, collected, and paid upon the income of every employee a tax equal to the following percentages of so much of the compensation, paid to such employee after December 31, 1946, for services rendered by him after such date, as is not in excess of $300 for any calendar month:

" '1. With respect to compensation paid during the calendar years 1947 and 1948, the rate shall be 5¾ percent;

" '2. With respect to compensation paid during the calendar years 1949, 1950, and 1951, the rate shall be 6 percent;

" '3. With respect to compensation paid after December 31, 1951, the rate shall be 6¼ percent.'

"(b) The second sentence of section 1501 (a) of the Internal Revenue Code is amended to read as follows: 'If an employee is paid compensation after December 31, 1946, by more than one employer for services rendered during any calendar month after 1946 and the aggregate of such compensation is in excess of $300, the tax to be deducted by each employer other than a subordinate unit of a national railway-labor-organization employer from the compensation paid by him to the employee with respect to such month shall be that proportion of the tax with respect to such compensation paid by all such employers which the compensation paid by him after December 31, 1946, to the employee for services rendered during such month bears to the total compensation paid by all such employers after December 31, 1946, to such employee for services rendered during such month; and in the event that the compensation so paid by such employers to the employee for services rendered during such month is less than $300, each subordinate unit of a national railway-labor-organization employer shall deduct such proportion of any additional tax as the compensation paid by such employer after December 31, 1946, to such employee for services rendered during such month bears to the total compensation paid by all such employers after December 31, 1946, to such employee for services rendered during such month.'

"(c) Section 1510 of the Internal Revenue Code is amended to read as follows:

" 'SEC. 1510. Rate of tax.

" 'In addition to other taxes, there shall be levied, collected, and paid upon the income of each employee representative a tax equal to the following percentages of so much of the compensation, paid to such employee representative after December 31, 1946, for services rendered by him after such date, as is not in excess of $300 for any calendar month:

" '1. With respect to compensation paid during the calendar years 1947 and 1948, the rate shall be 11½ percent;

" '2. With respect to compensation paid during the calendar years 1949, 1950, and 1951, the rate shall be 12 percent;

" '3. With respect to compensation paid after December 31, 1951, the rate shall be 12½ percent.'

"(d) Section 1520 of the Internal Revenue Code is amended to read as follows:

" 'SEC. 1520. Rate of tax.

" 'In addition to other taxes, every employer shall pay an excise tax, with respect to having individuals in his employ, equal to the following percentages of so much of the compensation, paid by such employer after December 31, 1946, for services rendered to him after December 31, 1936, as is, with respect to any employee for any calendar month, not in excess of $300: Provided, however, That if an employee is paid compensation after December 31, 1946, by more than one employer for services rendered during any calendar month after 1936, the tax imposed by this section shall apply to not more than $300 of the aggregate compensation paid to such employee by all such employers after December 31, 1946, for services rendered during such month, and each employer other than a subordinate unit of a national railway-labor-organization employer shall be liable for that proportion of the tax with respect to such compensation paid by all such employers which the compensation paid by him after December 31, 1946, to the employee for services rendered during such month bears to the total compensation paid by all such employers after December 31, 1946, to such employee for services rendered during such month; and in the event that the compensation so paid by such employers to the employee for services rendered during such month is less than $300, each subordinate unit of a national railway-labor-organization employer shall be liable for such proportion of any additional tax as the compensation paid by such employer after December 31, 1946, to such employee for services rendered during such month bears to the total compensation paid by all such employers after December 31, 1946, to such employee for services rendered during such month:

"'1. With respect to compensation paid during the calendar years 1947 and 1948, the rate shall be 5¾ percent;

"'2. With respect to compensation paid during the calendar years 1949, 1950, and 1951, the rate shall be 6 percent;

"'3. With respect to compensation paid after December 31, 1951, the rate shall be 6¼ percent.'

"(e) Section 1532 (b) of the Internal Revenue Code is amended to read as follows:

"'(b) Employee: The term "employee" means any individual in the service of one or more employers for compensation: Provided, however, That the term "employee" shall include an employee of a local lodge or division defined as an employer in subsection (a) only if he was in the service of or in the employment relation to a carrier on or after August 29, 1935. An individual shall be deemed to have been in the employment relation to a carrier on August 29, 1935, if (i) he was on that date on leave of absence from his employment, expressly granted to him by the carrier by whom he was employed, or by a duly authorized representative of such carrier, and the grant of such leave of absence will have been established to the satisfaction of the Railroad Retirement Board before July 1947; or (ii) he was in the service of a carrier after August 29, 1935, and before January 1946 in each of six calendar months, whether or not consecutive; or (iii) before August 29, 1935, he did not retire and was not retired or discharged from the service of the last carrier by whom he was employed or its corporate or operating successor, but (A) solely by reason of his physical or mental disability he ceased before August 29, 1935, to be in the service of such carrier and thereafter remained continuously disabled until he attained age 65 or until August 1945, or (B) solely for such last stated reason a carrier by whom he was employed before August 29, 1935, or a carrier who is its successor did not on or after August 29, 1935, and before August 1945 call him to return to service, or (C) if he was so called he was solely for such reason unable to render service in six calendar months as provided in clause (ii); or (iv) he was on August 29, 1935, absent from the service of a carrier by reason of a discharge which, within one year after the effective date thereof, was protested, to an appropriate labor representative or to the carrier, as wrongful, and which was followed within 10 years of the effective date thereof by his reinstatement in good faith to his former service with all his seniority rights: Provided, That an individual shall not be deemed to have been on August 29, 1935, in the employment relation to a carrier if before that date he was granted a pension or gratuity on the basis of which a pension was awarded to him pursuant to section 6 of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937, or if during the last pay-roll period before August 29, 1935, in which he rendered service to a carrier he was not in the service of an employer, in accordance with subsection (d), with respect to any service in such pay-roll period, or if he could have been in the employment relation to an employer only by reason of his having been, either before or after August 29, 1935, in the service of a local lodge or division defined as an employer in subsection (a).

"'The term "employee" includes an officer of an employer.

"'The term "employee" shall not include any individual while such individual is engaged in the physical operations consisting of the mining of coal, the preparation of coal, the handling (other than movement by rail with standard railroad locomotives) of coal not beyond the mine tipple, or the loading of coal at the tipple.'

"(f) Section 1532 (e) of the Internal Revenue Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"'A payment made by an employer to an individual through the employer's pay roll shall be presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, to be compensation for service rendered by such individual as an employee of the employer in the period with respect to which the payment is made. An employee shall be deemed to be paid, "for time lost" the amount he is paid by an employer with respect to an identifiable period of absence from the active service of the employer, including absence on account of personal injury, and the amount he is paid by the employer for loss of earnings resulting from his displacement to a less remunerative position or occupation. If a payment is made by an employer with respect to a personal injury and includes pay for time lost, the total payment shall be deemed to be paid for time lost unless, at the time of payment, a part of such payment is specifically apportioned to factors other than time lost, in which event only such part of the payment as is not so apportioned shall be deemed to be paid for time lost.'

"(g) Subchapter B of chapter 9 of the Internal Revenue Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"'SEC. 1538. Title of subchapter:

"'This subchapter may be cited as the "Railroad Retirement Tax Act".'"

On page 16, line 1, strike out "1946" and insert "1947"; line 3, strike out "1945" and insert "1946"; line 11, strike out "1944" and insert "1945"; line 14, strike out "1944" and insert "1945"; and in line 22, strike out the word "nine" and insert the word "ten."

On page 23, strike out the sentence beginning in line 14, down through line 19, and insert the following: "In computing the monthly compensation, no part of any month's compensation in excess of $300 shall be recognized."

Strike out section 216 of the bill, beginning on page 41, line 24, down through page 42, line 3.

Strike out section 318 of the bill on page 51, lines 3 to 23, inclusive, and insert the following:

"SEC. 318. Section 8 (a) is amended by changing the word 'payable' to 'paid' wherever it appears; and by substituting for the portion of the subsection beginning with the words 'and each such employer' and continuing to the end of the subsection, the following: 'and each employer other than a subordinate unit of a national railway-labor-organization employer shall be liable for that proportion of the contribution with respect to such compensation paid by all such employers which the compensation paid by him after December 31, 1946, to the employee for services during any calendar month after 1946 bears to the total compensation paid by all such employers after December 31, 1946, to such employee for services rendered during such month; and in the event that the compensation so paid by such employers to the employee for services rendered during such month is less than $300, each subordinate unit of a national railway-labor-organization employer shall be liable for such proportion of any additional contribution as the compensation paid by such employer after December 31, 1946, to such employee for services rendered during such month bears to the total compensation paid by all such employers after December 31, 1946, to such employee for services rendered during such month."

On page 57, after line 16, insert the following:

"The amendments to section 1532 of the Internal Revenue Code made by sections 2 and 4 (e), and (f), shall be effective only with respect to services rendered after December 31, 1946. The amendments made by section 4 (a), (b), (c), and (d) shall take effect January 1, 1947. Sections 1500, 1510, and 1520 of the Internal Revenue Code as in effect on December 31, 1946, shall remain in full force and effect on and after January 1, 1947, with respect to any remuneration which constitutes compensation under the law as in effect on December 31, 1946, to which such sections as amended by this act are not applicable."

On page 39, lines 1 and 2, substitute for the words "multiplied by the number of months he will have been in service as an employee" the following: "for any calendar month in such year".

On page 45, lines 2 to 4, substitute for the parenthetical expression the following: "with respect to employment".

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the amendments may be voted on en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The question is on agreeing to the amendments offered by the Senator from Georgia.

The amendments were agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to further amendment.

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, I offer an amendment and ask to have it stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 42, line 7, it is proposed to strike out all language through line 11, page 57, being sections 301 to 324, inclusive, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

SEC. 301. Subsection (a) of section 8 of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(a) Every employer shall pay a contribution, with respect to having employees in his service, equal to the percentages set forth below of so much of the compensation as is not in excess of $300 for any calendar month payable by him to any employee for services rendered to him after June 30, 1939: Provided, however, That if compensation is payable to an employee by more than one employer with respect to any such calendar month, the tax imposed by this section shall apply to not more than $300 of the aggregate compensation payable to said employee by all said employers with respect to such calendar month, and each such employer shall be liable for that proportion of the tax with respect to such compensation which the amount payable by him to the employee with respect to such calendar month bears to the aggregate compensation payable to such employee by all employers with respect to such calendar month:

"1. With respect to compensation earned prior to January 1, 1947, the rate shall be 3 percent.

"2. With respect to compensation earned after December 31, 1946, the rate shall be as follows:

"If the balance to credit of the railroad unemployment insurance account as of the close of business on Sept. 30 of any year, as determined by the Secretary, is:	The rate with respect to compensation payable to employees for services rendered during the next succeeding calendar year shall be:
$350,000,000 or more.	1 percent.

$300,000,000 or more but less than $350,000,000.	1½ percent.
$250,000,000 or more but less than $300,000,000.	2 percent.
$200,000,000 or more but less than $250,000,000.	2½ percent.
Less than $200,000,000.	3 percent.

"On or before December 31, 1946, and on or before December 31 of each succeeding year, the Secretary of the Treasury shall determine and proclaim the balance to the credit of the account as of the close of business on September 30 of such year."

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, a great deal could be said with regard to this amendment, but my time is limited. No Member of the Senate is more interested than I in finding a solution to the problems confronting the railroad men. I have some very definite ideas in regard to the manner in which their retirement plan should be changed. I am thoroughly in accord with them and with practically all other sound-thinking people, that the retirement fund should be actuarially sound, and that we should make it sound.

I shall not deal with the figures which were so ably placed before the Senate earlier in the day by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] as to the percentage which each group—the railroads and the employees—is contributing to the retirement fund.

In my opinion if we pass this bill without substantial amendments we shall be doing great injustice to the railroad employees and to all other workers in the United States who come under Social Security. I may add that we would also be doing an injustice to the railroad owners; but I leave them out of consideration for the moment.

We have no right to enact such far-reaching legislation as this without Senators thoroughly understanding what they are doing. I have no objections, in the main, to the improvements offered in the retirement portion of the bill. This morning we spent 3 hours in the Commiteee on Finance trying to find ways and means of leveling off payments to various classes of people in the Nation who have retirement funds, old-age benefits, or benefits for the blind under the social-security law.

I invite the attention of the Senate to the fact that the other day we voted between $3,000,000,000 and $5,000,000,000 for terminal leave pay for all the noncommissioned personnel of the armed forces, not on the basis of the merits of the case alone, but to correct an injustice. I am very serious when I say that in this over-all picture of social security we must be careful to see that we do not create further injustices, which will compel us to make further corrections, and further use up the funds of the free enterprise system or the production system of the United States. It is easy to scoff at the production system. I should like to leave one thought with Senators. It is simple, but too many persons forget it: The Government never had any money. The only money the Government has it gets from the use of the power of taxation. I remind the Senate that one of the greatest men ever to sit on the Supreme Court said to the people of the United States that the power to tax also carries with it the power to destroy, and when we destroy we do not accomplish any good for the people.

What were the working people of Europe promised? What were the people promised in Germany, France, and Italy? They were promised the millennium. It was thought that the impossible could be accomplished; and the people wound up as slaves of the state.

I have talked with a number of employees of the railroads. They very definitely wish to be sure that this plan is carried out in a sound manner.

The first part of my amendment would remove the section of the bill which deals with increasing the unemployment compensation fund, as well as the new coverages and benefits, such as compensation for sickness which is nonoccupational, compensation for injuries which have nothing to do with the work of the employee, maternity benefits, and various other benefits.

I think it is proper for me to ask the Senate, in voting on my amendment, to consider the fact that only a very few months ago the Senate Committee on Finance gave very careful thought to the question of temporarily, during the reconversion period, increasing unemployment compensation from $20 a week, or whatever it might have been in the States, so that the Federal Government would guarantee each person in any State, regardless of the State law, $25 for 26 weeks. After very careful consideration of that subject the Finance Committee refused to approve the proposal. The majority leader offered on the floor of the Senate an amendment to place in the bill the provision allowing $25 a week for 26 weeks, and after very considerable debate on this floor the Senate voted down that amendment by a vote of 51 to 29.

I shall not say much more about this particular subject, because I believe that what we have done is apparent. My amendment is perfectly clear. There is a difference of opinion on this particular subject among the best minds in the United States.

I wish to speak of the question of the sliding-scale part of the amendment relating to the unemployment-compensation fund. I invite the attention of the Senate to the fact that according to information which I have received from Mr. Latimer over the telephone, as of today the unemployment-compensation fund amounts to $790,000,000. During the past 5 years the demands upon the unemployment-compensation fund were $48,000,000, or less than $10,000,000 a year. At that rate the amount in the fund today would last for more than 80 years. We all know that we have been through an era of prosperity. We know that certain things may happen to the railroads which may cause them to release men, thus increasing the demand on the unemployment-compensation fund. I am advised that during the present year between $18,000,000 and $20,000,000 will be required for unemployment-compensation benefits to railroad employees, because of the coal strike, the temporary shut-down of the railroads, and other such interferences.

It would be very inconsistent to advocate making the retirement fund actuarily sound, but making the unemployment-compensation fund unsound. However, I submit to the Senate that the unemployment-compensation fund as it stands today would meet the demands for 5 or 6 years under the most difficult circumstances that can be imagined, namely, a 40-percent reduction in employment on the railroads, which is the maximum reduction possible under the law, because the railroads must keep their stations open and remain in operation. The maximum reduction in employment that is considered possible would be a 40-percent reduction. I am not suggesting that we should jeopardize this fund, because I believe that both the unemployment-compensation fund and the retirement fund represent sacred contracts. I believe that they should be dealt with intelligently and on the basis of certain knowledge.

In the House of Representatives an amendment was offered on behalf of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce which would carry the tax down to one-half of 1 percent. I have not done that, even though the fund would justify it. I have provided in my amendment that if the balance to the credit of the railroad unemployment insurance account as of the close of business on September 30 of any year, as determined by the Secretary, is $350,000,000 or more, the tax shall be reduced to 1 percent; if the fund is $300,000,000 or more, but less than $350,000,000, 1½ percent; if the fund is $250,000,000 or more, but less than $300,000,000, 2 percent; if the fund is $200,000,000 or more, but less than $250,000,000, 2½ percent; if it is less than $200,000,000, the 3-percent rate which has been in effect shall be restored.

At the present time the interest on the money in the fund, at 2 percent, is between $15,000,000 and $16,000,000 a year. The average expenditure from the unemployment compensation fund under the Railroad Retirement Act during the past 5 years was less than $10,000,000 a year. Even during the present year, with the prolonged coal strike which seriously interfered with employment on the railroads, and with the railroad shut-down and other interferences, the total demands upon the unemployment compensation fund will be between $18,000,000 and $20,000,000. Just think of the interest accumulation of $15,000,000 or $16,000,000 as against the demands on the fund, and the fact that there is $790,000,000 in the fund today. I do not believe anyone can successfully maintain that this fund is not now much larger than is necessary in order to guarantee the safety and solvency of the system.

I am definitely of the opinion that the procedure provided by the amendment is sound. I believe that if we adopt the amendment, the unemployment compensation fund will still be left in excellent, sound condition; and I believe that the adoption of the amendment will help the railroads pay the increased amount which it will be necessary for them to pay in order to make the retirement fund actuarially sound.

I see that I have only 1 minute remaining. So in closing, I should like to state that the railroads have made application to the Interstate Commerce Commission for a 25-percent increase in rates. That matter has been debated on the floor of the Senate to a considerable extent, although no other Senator has heretofore mentioned that the increase in rates which has been applied for amounts to 25 percent. I am told that the Interstate Commerce Commission has granted a 6-percent increase, and has taken under advisement the request for the further increase. In the interest of the consumers who pay the bills and in the interest of the shippers, both of whom now must pay higher rates, we should handle this matter in such a way that no additional burden will be placed upon the consumers.

So, Mr. President, I hope the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. THOMAS of Utah in the chair). Does the Senator from New Jersey yield to his colleague?

Mr. HAWKES. I am glad to yield.

Mr. SMITH. I understand that the Senator's amendment strikes out the benefits provided in division III of the bill, which are the benefits which would be received by persons suffering from nonoccupational diseases or illnesses. I understand that the Senator's amendment does not relate to the survivorship benefits.

Mr. HAWKES. That is correct. I approve of the survivorship benefits. My amendment relates only to the illness and maternity benefits. Such benefits never have been paid thus far in respect to any phase or activity of American life. I am not saying that we should not do something about them some day; I am not discussing that matter now. I simply say that if at this time we take such steps for the benefit of one group, all other groups in the United States will wish to have similar treatment accorded to them.

Mr. SMITH. So, as I understand the Senator's amendment, it will not reduce the over-all amount of the payments to be made by the railroads into these funds; but in the case of what heretofore has been placed, in the form of a tax, into the unemployment compensation fund, and the amendment will transfer a part of that to the retirement fund, in order to build it up to the extent called for by the bill.

Mr. HAWKES. Yes.

Let me say that I read in the RECORD the colloquy which my colleague had yesterday with the distinguished Senator from Colorado [Mr. JOHNSON]. I noticed a little difference in viewpoint. In other words, I think the Senator from Colorado misunderstood the position of my colleague from New Jersey in regard to taking some of the money from the unemployment compensation fund and placing it in the retirement fund.

Mr. SMITH. I think I corrected that misunderstanding.

Mr. HAWKES. Yes; I think my colleague did.

I wish to say that if the railroads are permitted to pay smaller amounts into the unemployment compensation fund, in my opinion it will not be necessary for the railroads to obtain increases in rates in order to obtain funds with which to make increased contributions to the retirement fund, so as to place it on an actuarially sound basis.

Mr. SMITH. That is correct. I think that statement is in line with the suggestion I made last night, at which time the Senator from Colorado said that he agreed in principle, although he said he would like to see the matter handled in separate legislation.

Mr. HAWKES. That is my understanding, although of course the Senator from Colorado may speak for himself. I understand that he agrees in principle, but that he would like to see the matter handled in separate legislation.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. HAWKES. I yield.

Mr. DONNELL. As the Senator from New Jersey has indicated, I, too, understand that the amendment would strike out all of the proposed division III, section 3, beginning on page 42 and running to about half way down page 57.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HAWKES] on the amendment has expired.

Mr. HAWKES. I am yielding for questions, and I shall take some of my time on the bill.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, is it agreeable to the Senator from New Jersey to have me continue with my questions?

Mr. HAWKES. Yes; I am glad to have the Senator do so.

Mr. DONNELL. The Senator from New Jersey realizes, of course, as all other Senators do, that the bill is very long; and therefore I take the liberty of trespassing on the Senator's time long enough to ask whether he can tell us briefly whether any provisions, other than those as to nonoccupational disability, will be dealt with by his amendment. In other words, I understand that the amendment would remove nonoccupational disabilities from the list of the types of disabilities to which the benefits will apply.

Mr. HAWKES. Yes; I shall be glad to reply to the Senator. As I said a few moment ago, the provisions as to nonoccupational disabilities and illness and maternity benefits would be removed from the bill, by my amendment. My amendment also would strike from the bill the provision to increase the unemployment compensation benefit payments from $20 a week for 20 weeks to $25 a week for 26 weeks; and the provision would remain as it has been, namely $20 for 20 weeks.

Mr. DONNELL. That is the only other change, is it?

Mr. HAWKES. That is the first part of it. The only other change is as to the sliding scale of taxation.

Mr. DONNELL. I thank the Senator.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I should like to call attention to the fact that the Senator from New Jersey said that the members of the committee did not understand the bill because it is so complex. But now, for the first time, there is offered on the floor of the Senate an amendment relating to a most complicated subject, one which only experts could thoroughly understand. I submit that it is most unfair to offer from the floor an amendment of this kind, which is a fundamental amendment and propose its adoption. At any time the railroads themselves could have had their representatives propose such an amendment and could have had it studied by the committee. But it never has been before the committee for study, and, of course, the facts and figures bearing on it have not been before the committee for its consideration and study. The amendment is offered for the first time at a quarter of 6 in the afternoon, and it is offered from the floor of the Senate. It relates to a subject which should be very carefully considered and studied.

As I have said, the railroads themselves have never requested the Interstate Commerce Committee to consider such an amendment or to adopt such an amendment.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. I should like to read from the report of the subcommittee:

> The railroads deny this premise and point to merit rating provisions in State laws as showing that overfinancing should be corrected through tax reduction. The railroads also argue that these provisions are essentially sickness and health insurance and that since no similar provisions are contained in the State unemployment compensation laws they should not be written into the Railroad Unemployment Act until and unless all business enterprises are required to undertake similar responsibilities.

So the railroads did present their objections before the Interstate Commerce Committee.

Mr. WHEELER. I beg the Senator's pardon. They never came before the committee and suggested such a revision of the bill as is now proposed by the amendment.

Mr. TAFT. The amendment is substantially the same as one submitted in the House.

Mr. WHEELER. But representatives of the railroads never came before the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce and presented this matter at all.

Mr. TAFT. Yes; they did. It is shown in the hearings. It is referred to in the report of the subcommittee. They show the position which the railroads took. The Senator from Montana is wholly in error in his statement.

Mr. WHEELER. No; I am not. The railroads objected to the proposal to provide additional benefits for the railroad workers. I say that the matter covered by the amendment is a most technical one, and that it needs very serious consideration. I certainly hope the amendment will be rejected.

It is argued that reductions are made under State laws because it is felt that if the railroads are permitted to reduce the number of their employees, they will try very hard to keep the employees who remain after the reduction. But the fact that one railroad has full employment does not affect the total situation materially, because all the railroads will be affected alike, and one railroad cannot maintain its employment and have it employment unaffected, at the same time other railroads are affected. In that respect, the railroad situation is entirely different from the situation of the ordinary industries.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield to me?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. Let me read the statement made by the subcommittee regarding what the employees claim:

> The employees claim that it is the established national policy to devote 3 percent of pay roll to unemployment insurance and that unemployment benefits have been very conservatively framed to make certain that financing is adequate.

That is the position of the employees. They admit that the full amount of the tax is not needed for the existing purposes; and so they have requested additional benefits in the way of sickness and maternity benefits. Of course, such benefits are not provided for by any other system or for any other group of employees. But the railroad employees have requested the payment of the additional benefits, in order to take up the slack. That is the only justification for paying such additional benefits to them; namely, because the 3-percent contribution is more than is needed for the payment of the unemployment compensation benefits.

Mr. WHEELER. The employees pay their half of it.

Mr. TAFT. No; the Senator is mistaken about that, as I am sure he realizes. The 3 percent is paid entirely by the railroads.

Mr. WHEELER. Oh, yes; that is correct. Nevertheless, Mr. President, the employees have requested these additional benefits. The railroads are opposed to having such benefits granted, while the employees are asking for them.

When anyone says that the railroad brotherhoods are worried about the proposal and that the railroad employees say this and that in opposition to the proposal, let me say that the fact is that no railroad man in the United States is opposed to having this provision made. All of them are in favor of obtaining the increased benefits which are provided by the bill. Of course, if the Senate wishes to eliminate all these increased benefits and do away with the bill entirely, the only thing for the Senate to do is to vote down the bill.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. Allow me to say a word further. Senators may think that they can stop the granting of these benefits, but they will not be successful in their efforts. There will be more and more of such benefits as time goes on. The more enlightened industries realize that fact, whether they want it to take place or not. It must take place if we are to preserve our democratic form of government. We might just as well recognize the fact that if we turn back the wheels of progress, there is no telling what will happen in the United States of America.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. I merely wish to point out that there are many increased benefits still remaining in the bill. All the increased benefits relating to annuities and disabilities are still in the bill. The only thing objected to is the extension of unemployment compensation and sickness and maternity benefits. Those are subjects which are not the purpose of an unemployment compensation law, or a tax in that connection.

Mr. WHEELER. As I said a moment ago, Mr. President, these benefits which some of us seem to wish to prevent are coming along in the United States and neither the Senator from Ohio nor anyone else will be able to stop them. If the Senator wishes to eliminate them, why not suggest that the entire bill be defeated. That is what is being done. And let us not then say that something is being done for the railroad men, because such a contention is ridiculous.

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. HAWKES. I cannot talk unless the Senator yields to me because I have no time of my own remaining. Does the Senator believe that the weekly payments under unemployment compensation of more than a million persons in the United States, including payments for sickness and maternity benefits, which are not occupational in any way, can be increased without nearly all American society being upset because of what has been done for one segment of the population? Does not the Senator believe, as I do, that we would be doing a better job if we took the report of the House concerning the over-all social security question and tried to straighten out the problem on a fair relative basis as to each group involved?

Mr. WHEELER. The Senator complained earlier in the day that no consideration had been given to this bill by the committee. Now he offers an amendment which was not discussed by the committee and was not considered at all with reference to the matter of decreasing rates. Ever since bills on this subject came before the committee the railroads have had an opportunity to appear there and ask that a reduction be made, but they never came at any time. I do not know whether they appeared before the House committee; but, certainly, they did not come before the Senate committee and ask that the proposed reduction be made.

Mr. HAWKES. A similar amendment going further than my amendment would go was before the committee for months.

Mr. WHEELER. Yes. The Senator complained once before today that this bill did not receive any consideration by the Senate committee, and that no member of the committee had given it any thought.

Mr. HAWKES. I have not changed my mind whatever about that matter.

Mr. WHEELER. The Senator now offers an amendment which no member of the committee has had an opportunity to consider at any time. It was never discussed or proposed.

Mr. HAWKES. Then, in respect to the consideration which it has received, both the bill and the amendment are in the same category.

Mr. WHEELER. No; the Senator is entirely incorrect. Hearings were held on the bill, and the Senator was a member of the subcommittee, and so was I. I discussed the bill from time to time with the members of the subcommittee. But no hearings have ever been held on the Senator's amendment, and no arguments have been made. I have not heard anything from the railroad employees or from the opposition. What the Senator is proposing was suggested in the House with reference to a reduction. If the Senator wishes to proceed without giving the opposition an opportunity to be heard, of course that can be done, but it is not fair to come before the Senate with a one-sided amendment which represents the views, perhaps, of the railroads, when the railroads themselves never came before the committee and advocated the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. HAWKES. I may say to the Senator, if he will permit me to do so, that this amendment is not at all detrimental because the minute the fund gets down to $200,000,000 the percentage of tax increases.

Mr. WHEELER. That is the Senator's statement, but I am frank to say to him that I am not familiar with the facts or the figures in connection with the subject, and I submit that no one else is familiar with them.

Mr. HAWKES. I have been informed that even a more severe amendment was adopted by the Committee of the Whole of the House of Representatives.

Mr. WHEELER. I understand that, but it was subsequently eliminated. I am talking about the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce. That committee never held any hearings on the amendment. The railroads did not appear and say anything in favor of it, and neither did the railroad brotherhoods. They had no opportunity to appear and testify with regard to the amendment.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. I wish to rebut the statement of the Senator from Montana that the railroads did not oppose this bill. To be sure, they did not oppose what is reflected in the amendment. But all I need to do is to call the attention of the Senate to the record which shows how definitely the railroads did oppose this bill. I read from the statement of J. Carter Fort, vice president and general counsel of the Association of American Railroads, as set forth on page 159 of the hearings:

This bill would provide for total taxes in the railroad industry of 15½ percent of the pay roll for that purpose. Is there any reason to think that Congress is ready to set aside any such percent as that for general social security purposes, or that the people in this country are ready to do so? Certainly there has been no indication that they are. Congress refused, as late as last December, to raise the general social-security pay-roll tax of 1 percent on each employer and employee to 2 percent: and yet here you are asked to force upon the railroads a system which would require, according to these estimates, 15½ percent. And there is every reason to think that the estimates are much too low and that the cost would run way up above 15½ percent, perhaps up to 20 percent.

I do not believe this Congress is ready to do that. The thinking of the peope isn't ready for that. Nothing could be more "premature" than the measure before you, to use the language which Mr. Miller used in his testimony. You are dealing with a profound subject, and you are asked to dispose of it in a few days and with respect to just a few people. Nothing can bring worse confusion in this country than such an approach to a problem of such magnitude.

I conclude with only one comment. The reference which has been made to this bill as being one which deals with general social-security purposes is perfectly justified, because we have departed from the original design of industrial protection of all, and gone into the remote field of providing benefits for those who are not at all connected directly with industry and for the family generally.

Mr. WHEELER. I wish to say that the Senator is entirely mistaken. I agree with him when he says that the railroads opposed this bill. What I said was that the amendment which has been offered with reference to the reduction of payments was never discussed by the committee at any time in the last 24 years during which I have been a member of the committee, nor since the bill was adopted originally.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Maurer, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1717) for the development and control of atomic energy.

The message also anonunced that the House had agreed to a concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 163) authorizing the printing of a revised edition of the Biographical Directory of the American Congress up to and including the Eightieth Congress, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills, and they were signed by the President pro tempore:

S. 162. An act for the relief of Walter S. Faulkner;

S. 496. An act to make it a criminal offense for certain escaped convicts to travel from one State to another;

S. 1235. An act to authorize the use of the funds of any tribe of Indians for insurance premiums;

S. 1477. An act to authorize relief in certain cases where work, supplies, or services have been furnished for the Government under contracts during the war;

S. 1549. An act for the relief of the legal guardian of Duane N. Thompson;

S. 1561. An act to amend the act entitled "Compensation for injury, death, or detention of employees of contractors with the United States outside the United States," as amended, for the purpose of making the 100-percent earning provisions effective as of January 1, 1942;

S. 1573. An act for the relief of James H. Wilkinson;

S. 1640. An act to provide for the acquisition by the United States of certain real property in the District of Columbia;

S. 1674. An act for the relief of Michael Joseph Bennett, a minor;

S. 1731. An act for the relief of Lester A. Dessez;

S. 1751. An act for the relief of Wayne Parker;

S. 1880. An act for the relief of the Crosby Yacht Building & Storage Co., Inc.;

S. 1910. An act for the relief of George D. King;

S. 2036. An act granting the consent of Congress to the State of Rhode Island to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Sakonnet River between the towns of Tiverton and Portsmouth in Newport County, R. I.;

S. 2247. An act to permit the Secretary of the Navy to delegate the authority to compromise and settle claims against the United States caused by vessels of the Navy or in the naval service, or for towage or salvage services to such vessels, and for other purposes;

S. 2253. An act to further amend the act of January 16, 1936, as amended, entitled "An act to provide for the retirement and retirement annuities of civilian members of the teaching staff at the United States Naval Academy and the Postgraduate School, United States Naval Academy";

S. 2259. An act to amend the Philippine Rehabilitation Act of 1946, for the purpose of making a clerical correction;

S. 2260. An act for the relief of Roy M. Davidson;

S. 2349. An act to permit the Secretary of the Navy to delegate the authority to compromise and settle claims for damages to property under the jurisdiction of the Navy Department, and for other purposes;

S. 2369. An act for the relief of Col. S. V. Constant, General Staff Corps; and

S. 2405. An act to define the area of the United States Capitol Grounds, to regulate the use thereof, and for other purposes.

HOUSE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION REFERRED

The concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 163) authorizing the printing of a revised edition of the Biographical Directory of the American Congress up to and including the Eightieth Congress, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Printing.

PRINTING OF REVISED EDITION OF BIOGRAPHICAL DIRECTORY OF THE AMERICAN CONGRESS

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, from the Committee on Printing I ask unanimous consent to report favorably House Concurrent Resolution 163, authorizing the printing of a revised edition of the Biographical Directory of the American Congress up to and including the Eightieth Congress, and I request its present consideration.

There being no objection, the concurrent resolution was considered and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there shall be compiled and printed, with illustrations, as a House document, in such style and form as may be directed by the Joint Committee on Printing, a revised edition of the Biographical Directory of the American Congress up to and including the Eightieth Congress (1774–1948); and that 3,500 additional copies shall be printed, of which 2,300 copies shall be for the use of the House of Representatives, 800 copies for the use of the Senate, and 400 copies for the use of the Joint Committee on Printing.

PRINTING AND PREPARATION OF SENATE RULES AND MANUAL FOR EIGHTIETH CONGRESS

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, from the Committee on Printing, I ask unanimous consent to report favorably without amendment Senate Resolution 285, providing for the preparation and printing of the Senate Rules and Manual for the Eightieth Congress, submitted by the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] on June 13, 1946, and I request its present consideration.

There being no objection, the resolution was considered and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, that the Committee on Rules be, and it is hereby, directed to prepare a revised edition of the Senate Rules and Manual for the use of the Eightieth Congress, and that 1,500 additional copies shall be printed and bound, of which 1,000 copies shall be for the Senate, 200 copies for the use of the Committee on Rules, and the remaining 300 copies shall be bound in full morocco and tagged as to contents and delivered as may be directed by the committee.

DEVELOPMENT AND CONTROL OF ATOMIC ENERGY—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. McMAHON submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1717) for the development and control of atomic energy, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its amendments numbered 1, 19, 25, 28, 30, 32, 34, 37, 43, 44, 45, 47, 49, 52, 53, 56, 59, 60, 61, 62, 64, 65, 66, and 67.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the House numbered 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 11, 12, 15, 16, 17, 18, 21, 22, 23, 26, 27, 36, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 46, 50, 54, 55, 57, 58, 63, 68, 69, 70, and 71, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 3: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 3 and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following:

"(d) Appointment of Army and Navy officers: Notwithstanding the provisions of section 1222 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., 1940 edition, title 10, sec. 576), section 212 of the Act entitled "An Act making appropriations for the Legislative Branch of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933, and for other purposes," approved June 30, 1932, as amended (U. S. C., 1940 edition, title 5, sec. 59a), section 2 of the Act entitled 'An Act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and ninety five, and for other purposes", approved July 31, 1894, as amended (U. S. C., 1940 edition, title 5, sec. 62), or any other law, any active or retired officer of the Army or the Navy may serve as Director of the Division of Military Application established by subsection (a) (4) (B) of this section, without prejudice to his commissioned status as such officer. Any such officer serving as Director of the Division of Military Application shall receive, in addition to his pay from the United States as such officer, an amount equal to the difference between such pay and the compensation prescribed in subsection (a) (4) (B) of this section.

And the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 10: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 10, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following: "subject to valid claims, rights, or privileges existing on the date of the enactment of this Act"; and the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 13: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 13, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following: ", if such individual, corporation, partnership, or association, by reason of having had such part in the development of the atomic bomb project, acquired confidential official information as to the existence of deposits of such uranium, thorium, or other materials in the specific lands upon which such location, entry, or settlement is made, and subsequent to the date of the enactment of this Act made such location, entry, or settlement or caused the same to be made for his, its, or their benefit"; and the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 14: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 14, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following:

"The Commission shall not—

"(1) Distribute any fissionable material to (A) any person for a use which is not under or within the jurisdiction of the United States, (B) any foreign government, or (C) any person within the United States if, in the opinion of the Commission, the distribution of such fissionable material to such person would be inimical to the common defense and security.

"(2) License any person to transfer or deliver, receive possession of or title to, or export from the United States any source material if, in the opinion of the Commission, the issuance of a license to such person for such purpose would be inimical to the common defense and security."

And the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 20: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 20, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the House amendment strike out in the Senate engrossed bill on page 25, line 12, the following: "not to exceed one year,"; and the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 24: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 24, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be stricken out by the House amendment insert the following:

"(1) That until Congress declares by joint resolution that effective and enforceable international safeguards against the use of atomic energy for destructive purposes have been established, there shall be no exchange of information with other nations with respect to the use of atomic energy for industrial purposes; and."

And the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 29: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 29, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following: "death or imprisonment for life (but the penalty of death or imprisonment for life may be imposed only upon recommendation of the jury and only in cases where the offense was committed with intent to injure the United States); or by"; and the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 31: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 31, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following: "death or imprisonment for life (but the penalty of death or imprisonment for life may be imposed only upon recommendation of the jury and only in cases where the offense was committed with intent to injure the United States); or by"; and the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 33: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 33, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following: "death or imprisonment for life (but the penalty of death or imprisonment for life may be imposed only upon recommendation of the jury and only in cases where the offense was committed with intent to injure the United States); or by"; and the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 35: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 35, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following:

"(5) (A) No person shall be prosecuted for any violation under this section unless and until the Attorney General of the United States has advised the Commission with respect to such prosecution and no such prosecution shall be commenced except upon the express direction of the Attorney General of the United States.

"(B) (i) No arrangement shall be made under section 3, no contract shall be made or continued in effect under section 4, and no license shall be issued under section 4 (e) or 7, unless the person with whom such arrangement is made, the contractor or prospective contractor, or the prospective licensee agrees in writing not to permit any individual to have access to restricted data until the Federal Bureau of Investigation shall have made an investigation and report to the Commission on the character, associations, and loyalty of such individual and the Commission shall have determined that permitting such person to have access to restricted data will not endanger the common defense or security.

"(ii) Except as authorized by the Commission in case of emergency, no individual shall be employed by the Commission until the Federal Bureau of Investigation shall have made an investigation and report to the Commission on the character, associations, and loyalty of such individual.

"(iii) Notwithstanding the provisions of subparagraphs (i) and (ii), during such period of time after the enactment of this Act as may be necessary to make the investigation, report, and determination required by such paragraphs, (a) any individual who was permitted access to restricted data by the Manhattan Engineer District may be permitted access to restricted data and (b) the Commission may employ any individual who was employed by the Manhattan Engineer District.

"(iv) To protect against the unlawful dissemination of restricted data and to safeguard facilities, equipment, materials, and other property of the Commission, the President shall have authority to utilize the services of any Government agency to the extent he may deem necessary or desirable.

"(C) All violations of this Act shall be investigated by the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice."

And the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 48: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 48, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following: "death or imprisonment for life (but the penalty of death or imprisonment for life may be imposed only upon recommendation of the jury and only in cases where the offense was committed with intent to injure the United States); or by"; and the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 51: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 51, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be stricken out by the House amendment insert the following: ", or of any regulation or order prescribed or issued under sections 5 (b) (4), 10 (c), or 12 (a) (2),"; and the House agree to the same.

BRIEN MCMAHON,
ED C. JOHNSON,
RICHARD RUSSELL,
ARTHUR VANDENBERG,
E. D. MILLIKIN,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

A. J. MAY,
R. EWING THOMASON,
CARL T. DURHAM,
CHARLES R. CLASON,
Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration and adoption of the conference report.

There being no objection, the report was considered and agreed to.

ESTATE OF WILLIAM EDWARD OATES—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. O'DANIEL submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 78) entitled "An Act for the relief of the estate of William Edward Oates," having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum passed by the House insert "$5,953"; and the House agree to the same.

W. LEE O'DANIEL,
GEO. A. WILSON,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

J. M. COMBS,
E. H. HEDRICK,
W. A. PITTENGER,
Managers on the Part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

AMENDMENT TO RAILROAD RETIREMENT ACTS, ETC.

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill (H. R. 1362) to amend the Railroad Retirement Acts, the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, and subchapter B of chapter 9 of the Internal Revenue Code; and for other purposes.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. President, not being a member of the committee which reported the pending bill, I feel a little presumptuous in speaking with reference to it, but I do have a few thoughts concerning the amendment to the bill which I wish to express.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE IMPROVEMENTS

When we first enacted unemployment insurance in this country, more than 10 years ago, it was decided that 3 percent of pay roll was about the right amount to devote to that purpose. We were still in the depression of the 1930's, billions were appropriated each year for relief and work relief, unemployment was heavy, and the prospects of continued industrial employment were gloomy. To keep within that limit of 3 percent of pay roll, the benefits under unemployment insurance were made picayune, and we embodied all sorts of restrictions, by way of qualifying conditions, disqualifications, waiting periods, and the like. But we made a start. Even with those niggardly benefits and all those restrictions on drawing any benefits, some people predicted that the system would fail because it could not be supported by a 3-percent-pay-roll tax.

When the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act was enacted, the same pay-roll tax of 3 percent was levied as was imposed upon other industries covered by the various unemployment insurance laws. Since that time, experience has shown that we had been too pessimistic in our estimates of what this 3 percent could support. Benefits have been increased somewhat. Under the State laws the average unemployed person already draws about 20 percent more than the average unemployed person covered by the Railroad Act, and the State laws are continually being further liberalized. Benefits can now be considerably increased under the railroad system without any change in the tax rate. This bill which we are enacting does so in three ways.

It will remove the distinction between unemployment caused by there being no work for the individual to perform and unemployment caused by his inability to work, and so will pay benefits for unemployment caused by a worker's sickness as well as by his loss of a job for economic reasons.

Unemployment benefits are now paid under the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act on a graduated scale, depending on previous earnings. The maximum is now $20 per week for full unemployment for an employee who earned more than $1,600 in a test base period. This is a lower maximum than is already provided in a great many States. The changes the bill makes in the rate of benefits do not affect those who earned less than $2,000 in the test period; benefits of employees who earned up to that amount would remain the same. But since the scale of benefits in the present law was enacted, rates of pay have advanced materially while the old scale remains geared to lower earnings. This bill increases the maximum rate of benefits of those who earned $2,000 or more in the base period. The maximum for those who earned at least $2,000 but less than $2,500 would be raised to $22.50 per week, and the maximum for complete unemployment of those who earned at least $2,500 would be raised to $25 per week. The rate of benefits for all others remains unchanged. The Social Security Board agrees that the maximum benefits under the unemployment-insurance laws should be raised to at least $25 per week.

Under the law as it now stands, the maximum duration of unemployment benefits is 100 compensable days. This comes to 20 weeks. The bill would extend the maximum to 130 compensable days, or 26 weeks. Only a small percentage of persons who become unemployed ever receive benefits for the maximum duration, and so this change helps only that small percentage who suffer the heaviest unemployment. A large number of States already have a maximum duration in excess of 20 weeks, and several have already provided a 26-week maximum duration. The Social Security Board has recommended to us that the maximum duration of benefits under the unemployment-insurance laws should be increased to at least 26 weeks. There can be no reason why the railroad system, so long as it can afford to be more liberal without any increase in the taxes, should have a shorter maximum duration than the more favorable State laws provide.

Our experience with unemployment insurance in the railroad field shows beyond any dispute that all these changes can be amply afforded without any increase in the tax rate. But the argument has been advanced that instead of trying to make the benefits less inadequate and trying to bring them up to something that would really approach unemployment insurance—that is, something that would really resemble insurance against unemployment—we should keep the old, inadequate benefits and return what is left to the railroads by reducing their unemployment insurance taxes. I should like to discuss that suggestion a little.

As I have already stated, when we started unemployment insurance we thought 3 percent of pay roll an appropriate amount to devote to unemployment insurance. Benefits were made so scanty and payment of them hedged with so many artificial limitations and restrictions, because under conditions as we could see them then we were afraid that that rate of tax would not support anything like substantial benefits. To encourage employers to try to stabilize their employment and reduce their turnover of employees, a plan of so-called merit rating was proposed and finally authorized in the Social Security Act for the State unemployment insurance laws. Under this scheme, taxes paid by an employer are credited to his account, and unemployment benefits paid to his employees are charged to his account. When the amount in his account reaches a certain percentage of his pay roll, his unemployment tax rate is reduced.

There was considerable controversy about this. Its opponents pointed out that the factors and circumstances that cause unemployment had very little to do with what the employer wanted to do or could do, and so had very little and probably nothing to do with the employer's merit. This has already been recognized at least in part, and the plan is no longer referred to as "merit rating" but is now called "experience rating." That the facts on which an employer's tax rate might increase or decrease have nothing to do with his ability or desire to stabilize employment, or his merit, is shown by the possibility that a very large turn-over and an artificially unstable labor force could also result in tax reduction. This is so because by employing men for a period just too short for them to qualify for unemployment benefits, and then replacing them with another group for a like period, the employer's record would also be very good on the books, for very little if any benefits would be paid on the basis of employment with him, and he would receive the benefit of so-called merit rating although his performance would be the opposite of the desired basis of merit rating.

It was suggested also that merit rating was but an opening for a general unemployment tax reduction below the accepted 3 percent and would be used to prevent the furnishing of more adequate benefits if experience should prove that the tax could support more adequate benefits. The proponents of such plan answered that merit rating provisions could never form the basis of a general unemployment tax reduction, for there would always be enough unemployment to assure that most employers would be paying the full 3 percent.

Finally, those opposed to merit rating pointed out that it raised and lowered taxes at the most inopportune times. When an employer would be employing all his men without lay-offs, and would be prosperous and making a lot of money, his tax rate would be reduced just when he could afford to pay the highest taxes to take care of future unemployment. On the other hand, when business would be bad, and the employer would be compelled to lay off his employees, when his profits would be shrinking or would have disappeared, then his taxes would increase, just when he could least afford an increase. I ask Senators if that is not exactly what is proposed under the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from New Jersey? It was observed that under none of the other unemployment insurance systems anywhere in the world, some of them having been in operation many years, was experience rating recognized.

The fears and forecasts of those who criticized experience rating have now been realized, and the arguments of those who favored it have proven unsound. Prosperity and full employment, during and preceding the war, have produced large pay rolls through no merit of the employers. The simple force of economic factors far beyond the control of any employer has resulted in his taxes being reduced in those States which have experience rating. Now, when his profits are far higher than they were during the early years of unemployment insurance of this country, he is subject to a lower tax rate for unemployment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator on the amendment has expired.

Mr. MURDOCK. I will take 15 minutes on the bill, Mr. President.

Should conditions deteriorate and profits dwindle, with unemployment on the increase and unemployment benefits paid in larger sums, his unemployment tax rate will increase just when he can least afford it, and when it will produce the least revenue. That is what the Hawkes amendment would provide.

Despite the argument of the proponents of experience rating that it could never form the basis of a general unemployment tax reduction, that is just what has happened. With full employment for the last few years, most employers in States embodying experience rating in their laws are paying less than the full rate. The most glaring example of the tendency of experience rating to encourage a circumvention of its ostensible justification and to furnish an excuse for unwarranted tax reduction, is the move of the employers in this instance. We refused to adopt experience rating when we enacted the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act. Remember that benefits were set as low as they were to keep costs within the 3-percent tax rate, and numerous irrelevant restrictions and exclusions were embodied for the same purpose. Now we see large sums accumulating in the reserve and we see that a liberalization can be made without any danger of insolvency. Yet the employers resist all liberalization and argue and propose that instead of bringing the benefits up to what the tax can support, the tax be brought down to the level that will support the present artificially meager benefits. It could hardly be more apparent that we were right when we omitted experience rating from this law and when we rejected an earlier movement to interject it.

The fund is now highly solvent and it is undisputed that the present tax can support less niggardly benefits. It is our duty to see that the monies collected for unemployment be devoted to the benefit of those for whose protection we collected them. There can be no sound reason for our not doing so.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MURDOCK. I yield.

Mr. LANGER. I ask the distinguished Senator if it is not true that only a short time ago the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor, when the matter of the last Federal pay bill came up, said that the women employees of the Federal Government who had been married a year should have at least 90 days of leave without pay.

Mr. MURDOCK. I am advised that that is correct.

Mr. LANGER. How many men and women are affected by this bill?

Mr. MURDOCK. I do not believe I can give the Senator the answer. I am sure the Senator from Colorado [Mr. JOHNSON] or the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] have those figures, but not being a member of the committee, and not having attended the hearings, I do not have the figures.

Mr. LANGER. Is it not one of the tactics of the opposition, of those who are opposed to unemployment insurance, whenever any measure of this nature is brought up on the floor of the Senate, to say "Well, that affects but a small group and is getting a precedent which other groups will have to follow." When the Civil Service Committee, under the chairmanship of the Senator from California [Mr. DOWNEY] recommended that pay be provided women employed by the Government in connection with maternity cases, that was exactly the argument which was used against the proposal.

Mr. MURDOCK. Yes; the same argument is used in all similar cases.

Mr. LANGER. Is it not true also that a great many other countries are far in advance of the United States when it comes to the matter of unemployment insurance, and that for some 20 or 25 years the United States has lagged in seeing to it that our laboring people receive the same kind of treatment that the laboring people of some foreign countries receive?

Mr. MURDOCK. I should say that we generally move in this country with the brakes on.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, let me say a word or two respecting the proposed change. The amendment provides for no reduction in benefits or reduction in rates. Applicable as of 1949, the highest rate under the law is 3¾ percent, the same percentage to be paid by employers and employees, or a total of 7½ percent each year, plus 3 percent for unemployment compensation, or 10½ percent.

In the part of the bill to which there is no objection we are raising the benefits and increasing the tax to 12½ percent, 6¼ percent from each group. If we add this 3 percent the tax would be 15½ percent instead of the present 10½-percent tax.

The effect of the Hawkes amendment would be to fix the rate at 13½ percent, instead of 15½ percent. As nearly as I can judge, even if this provision were removed, the amount of benefits for railroad workers would be increased by $75,000,000 a year. This is a progressive bill, without the particular provision to which reference has been made. Merely because the unemployment tax is not all needed for standard unemployment compensation, I see no reason why we should invent new benefits which do not exist under any unemployment compensation system today, and insist that the rate be 15½ percent on the pay roll, or nearly 5 percent more than under the existing law.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HAWKES].

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, may we have a vote on the amendment? I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BARKLEY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. BARKLEY. I withdraw the point of no quorum. I suppose Senators will come into the Chamber anyway.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HOEY] adopted a new technique. I ask unanimous consent that immediately following the quorum call there shall be a vote on the pending amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The request for the quorum call has been withdrawn.

Mr. BARKLEY. I have withdrawn the request for a quorum call.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, are we to have a quorum call or a vote on the amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The request for a quorum call is withdrawn.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HAWKES]. On this question the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. HAWKES. I understood the Senator from Kentucky to suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. BARKLEY. I withdrew that suggestion.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I call for the regular order.

The legislative clerk resumed and concluded the calling of the roll.

Mr. REED (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON], who, if present, would vote as I have voted, and allow my vote to stand.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I have a general pair with the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES]. Not knowing how he would vote, I transfer that pair to the Senator from Idaho [Mr. GOSSETT]. I am not advised how the Senator from Idaho would vote on this question if present. Being at liberty to vote, I vote "nay."

Mr. HILL. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] and the Senator from Idaho [Mr. GOSSETT] are absent because of illness.

The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. MAYBANK] is absent because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Florida [Mr. ANDREWS], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. BILBO], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN], the Senator from Texas [Mr. O'DANIEL], the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY], the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. STEWART], and the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] are necessarily absent.

The Senator from Missouri [Mr. BRIGGS], the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ], and the Senators from Pennsylvania [Mr. GUFFEY and Mr. MYERS] are detained on public business.

The Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] and the Senator from California [Mr. DOWNEY] are absent on official business.

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. OVERTON] and the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] are detained on official business at Government departments.

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH] is absent on official business, having been appointed a member of the President's Evaluation Commission in connection with the test of atomic bombs on naval vessels at Bikini.

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER] and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] are absent on official business, having been appointed to the commission on the part of the Senate to participate in the Philippine independence ceremonies.

If present and voting, the Senators from Pennsylvania [Mr. GUFFEY and Mr. MYERS], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL], and the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] would vote "nay."

Mr. WHERRY. The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] is necessarily absent. He has a general pair with the Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS].

The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BUTLER] is absent on official business, being a member of the commission appointed to attend the Philippine independence ceremonies.

The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. BUSHFIELD], the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART], the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. ROBERTSON], and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY] are absent by leave of the Senate.

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HICKENLOOPER] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business as a member of the Special Committee on Atomic Energy.

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL] is absent on official business, having been appointed a member of the President's Evaluation Commission in connection with the test of atomic bombs on naval vessels at Bikini.

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON] is absent on official business. If present, he would vote "yea."

The Senator from Maine [Mr. BREWSTER] and the Senator from Delaware [Mr. BUCK] are necessarily absent.

The result was announced—yeas 22, nays 41, as follows:

YEAS—22

Austin	Hart	Swift
Ball	Hawkes	Taft
Brooks	Hoey	Wherry
Burch	Millikin	White
Capper	Moore	Wiley
Donnell	Reed	Willis
Gerry	Smith
Gurney	Stanfill

NAYS—41

Aiken	Knowland	Murray
Barkley	La Follette	Pepper
Carville	Langer	Radcliffe
Connally	Lucas	Revercomb
Cordon	McCarran	Shipstead
Eastland	McClellan	Taylor
Ferguson	McFarland	Thomas, Okla.
Fulbright	McKellar	Thomas, Utah
Green	McMahon	Tunnell
Hill	Magnuson	Vandenberg
Huffman	Mead	Walsh
Johnson, Colo.	Mitchell	Wheeler
Johnston, S. C.	Morse	Young
Kilgore	Murdock

NOT VOTING—33

Andrews	Chavez	O'Daniel
Bailey	Downey	O'Mahoney
Bilbo	Ellender	Overton
Brewster	George	Robertson
Bridges	Gossett	Russell
Briggs	Guffey	Saltonstall
Buck	Hatch	Stewart
Bushfield	Hayden	Tobey
Butler	Hickenlooper	Tydings
Byrd	Maybank	Wagner
Capehart	Myers	Wilson

So Mr. HAWKES' amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to further amendment. If there be no further amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill was read the third time.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Secretary of the Senate be authorized and directed to make such clerical, technical, section-number and cross-reference changes in the Senate engrossed amendments to the bill as may be necessary.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall it pass?

Mr. LANGER. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I have a general pair with the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES]. Not knowing how he would vote, I transfer that pair to the Senator from Idaho [Mr. GOSSETT]. I am not advised how the Senator from Idaho would vote on this question if present. Being at liberty to vote, I vote "yea."

Mr. HILL. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] and the Senator from Idaho [Mr. GOSSETT] are absent because of illness.

The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. MAYBANK] is absent because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Florida [Mr. ANDREWS], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN], the Senator from Texas [Mr. O'DANIEL], the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY], and the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] are necessarily absent.

The Senator from Missouri [Mr. BRIGGS] and the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ] are detained on public business.

The Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] and the Senator from California [Mr. DOWNEY] are absent on official business.

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. OVERTON] and the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] are detained on official business at Government departments.

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH] is absent on official business, having been appointed a member of the President's Evaluation Commission in connection with the test of atomic bombs on naval vessels at Bikini.

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER] and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] are absent on official business, having been appointed to the commission on the part of the Senate to participate in the Philippine independence ceremonies.

If present and voting, the Senator from Florida [Mr. ANDREWS], the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ], the Senators from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE and Mr. RUSSELL], the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. MAYBANK], the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY], and the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] would vote "yea."

Mr. WHERRY. The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] is necessarily absent. He has a general pair with the Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS].

The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BUTLER] is absent on official business, being a member of the commission appointed to attend the Philippine independence ceremonies.

The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. BUSHFIELD], the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART], the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. ROBERTSON], and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY] are absent by leave of the Senate. If present the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. BUSHFIELD] would vote "nay," and the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. ROBERTSON] would vote "yea."

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HICKENLOOPER] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business as a member of the Special Committee on Atomic Energy.

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL] is absent on official business, having been appointed a member of the President's Evaluation Commission in connection with the test of atomic bombs on naval vessels at Bikini.

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON] is absent on official business.

The Senator from Maine [Mr. BREWSTER] and the Senator from Delaware [Mr. BUCK] are necessarily absent.

Mr. MYERS. Mr. President, the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. GUFFEY] is absent on public business. If he were present he would vote "yea."

Mr. REED (after having voted in the negative). Making the same announcement as the one I made on the last vote with regard to my pair with the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER], I transfer that pair to the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. BUSHFIELD] and let my vote stand.

The result was announced—yeas 55, nays 11, as follows:

YEAS—55

Aiken	Kilgore	Radcliffe
Barkley	Knowland	Revercomb
Bilbo	La Follette	Shipstead
Brooks	Langer	Smith
Burch	Lucas	Stanfill
Carville	McCarran	Stewart
Connally	McClellan	Swift
Cordon	McFarland	Taylor
Donnell	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Eastland	McMahon	Thomas, Utah
Ferguson	Magnuson	Tunnell
Fulbright	Mead	Vandenberg
Gerry	Millikin	Walsh
Green	Mitchell	Wheeler
Hill	Morse	Wiley
Hoey	Murdock	Willis
Huffman	Murray	Young
Johnson, Colo.	Myers
Johnston, S. C.	Pepper

NAYS—11

Austin	Hart	Taft
Ball	Hawkes	Wherry
Capper	Moore	White
Gurney	Reed

NOT VOTING—30

Andrews	Chavez	O'Daniel
Bailey	Downey	O'Mahoney
Brewster	Ellender	Overton
Bridges	George	Robertson
Briggs	Gossett	Russell
Buck	Guffey	Saltonstall
Bushfield	Hatch	Tobey
Butler	Hayden	Tydings
Byrd	Hickenlooper	Wagner
Capehart	Maybank	Wilson

So the bill (H. R. 1362) was passed.

MINIMUM STANDARDS OF SOCIAL POLICY IN DEPENDENT TERRITORIES—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. THOMAS of Utah in the chair) laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying document, referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

(For President's message, see today's proceedings of the House of Representatives on p. 10174.)

AMENDMENT OF INTERSTATE COMMERCE ACT WITH RESPECT TO AGREEMENTS BETWEEN CARRIERS

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 2536.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be stated by title for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 2536) to amend the Interstate Commerce Act with respect to certain agreements between carriers.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the motion is debatable and will be discussed. I do not wish to precipitate discussion tonight, but the motion will be the pending motion when the Senate convenes tomorrow.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE ON NEW PRICE-CONTROL LAW

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, in the President's message on the new price-control law which was read in the Senate yesterday, the President stated reasons for signing the measure. Those reasons will appear in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. I ask unanimous consent that there be printed at this point in the RECORD, as a part of my remarks, a statement which I have issued relating to the message.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

President Truman has signed a price-control bill far more inflationary than the one which he vetoed on June 29. His whole message in support of the present bill is a labored attempt to justify his veto of the first bill which alone brought about the 24 percent increase in basic commodity prices of which he complains. He vetoed a bill which held prices steady on foods and rents which are really important to the consumers. He vetoed it because it contained a Taft formula for pricing manufactured goods which, after 3 or 4 months' study, might have required an increase in price on some of these goods of 10 percent. Now he has a Barkley formula which may perhaps reduce this 10 percent increase in some cases to a 6 or 7 percent increase. The essential feature of the Taft formula, requiring the Administrator to price each product of an industry on its present cost basis plus a reasonable profit, is also contained in the Barkley formula.

My main purpose was to destroy the OPA's over-all industry standard under which it required many products to be sold at a loss, or at cost, thereby producing the serious shortages about which every housewife knows. The Barkley amendment fully accomplishes this purpose.

Could the President like the Barkley formula better because it is a Democratic formula instead of a Republican?

He vetoed the last bill because the Wherry amendment gave wholesalers and retailers their January 1, 1946, mark-up. Now he has signed a bill which gives them their April 1, 1946, mark-up, which in 99 percent of the cases is exactly the same.

He vetoed the last bill because the Crawford amendment gave automobile dealers their prewar mark-up. The Crawford amendment is still in the bill and involves the increase in automobile prices of which he complained.

In his last veto message, the President demanded that subsidies be continued until July 1, 1947, and increased to a billion and a quarter dollars. The new Barkley bill rejects his proposal.

He vetoed the last bill because it contained detailed standards for decontrol based on supply and demand. The new bill still requires decontrol if supply equals demand regardless of what happens to the price. The new bill also requires decontrol regardless of supply and demand if prices do not rise unreasonably, or if the Board finds that control cannot be restored without restoring black markets. Now the President says these are reasonable standards, although they are much more severe than the ones he criticized.

He vetoed the last bill because it gave the Secretary of Agriculture power over the OPA. This bill gives the same power to the Secretary, plus a lot more to the Price Decontrol Board.

The President vetoed the last bill against the advice of all the Democratic leaders in Congress, who told him he would get a more inflationary bill. Events have proved they were right, but the main purpose of the President's message is to try to prove they were wrong. To avoid some time in the autumn a few percent increase in manufactured goods, the purchase of which can usually be put off if the price is too high, he opened on July 1 the Pandora's box of price increases in those market-basket items which the housewife must buy every day. His message says nothing of the fact that his veto, and then the new bill, allow 7 weeks of complete removal of all ceilings on these important essentials of life. It ignores the fact that these increases are probably permanent, because all efforts to roll back prices on any items which might be later restored are likely to produce an intolerable situation. Confusion and chaos must reign in the meantime in many industries.

The best solution of the beef and grain problem would be to announce immediately a complete removal of all ceilings without waiting for action by the Price Decontrol Board.

The net result of the President's action has been to bring about the very inflation he pretends to abhor.

A touch of humor is given to the message by the statement that "attention must be given to strong anti-inflationary policies such as further reduction of Federal expenditures." Within a week, the President has signed a bill giving the British $3,750,000,000 and is about to sign another paying war veterans $3,000,000,000. The deficit for the fiscal year based on expenditures recommended by the President is likely to be $10,000,000,000 instead of the $4,000,000,000 he forecast. Expenditures in June were higher than any month since January. Federal employees are increasing instead of decreasing. The time to have started an economy drive was last January.

RECOGNITION OF SERVICES OF CIVILIAN OFFICIALS AND EMPLOYEES ENGAGED IN CONSTRUCTION OF PANAMA CANAL—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. STEWART submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3748) to amend an Act entitled "An Act to provide for the recognition of the services of the civilian officials and employees, citizens of the United States, engaged in and about the construction of the Panama Canal", approved May 29, 1944, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 1.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 2, and agree to the same.

TOM STEWART,
WARREN G. MAGNUSON,
A. W. HAWKES,
HARLAN BUSHFIELD,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

J. HARDIN PETERSON,
HERBERT C. BONNER,
CHRISTIAN A. HERTER,
Managers on the Part of the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Maurer, one of its reading clerks, informed the Senate that Mr. DURHAM and Mr. SIKES had been appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4051) entitled "An act to grant to enlisted personnel of the armed forces certain benefits in lieu of accumulated leave," vice Mr. MAY and Mr. BROOKS, excused.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1236) to amend the Mineral Leasing Act of February 25, 1920, as amended, in order to promote the development of oil and gas on the public domain, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House had passed the following bills, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 957. An act for the relief of Margaret Dunn;

H. R. 976. An act for the relief of Chet Walker;

H. R. 1004. An act for the relief of the legal guardian of Robert Olsen, a minor;

H. R. 1633. An act for the relief of Raymond Crosby;

H. R. 1887. An act for the relief of Mrs. Leroy A. Robbins;

H. R. 3210. An act for the relief of Clyde O. Payne;

H. R. 3855. An act for the relief of Martin A. Tucker and Emma M. Tucker;

H. R. 4827. An act to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of Pan American Petroleum & Transport Co. against the United States;

H. R. 4860. An act for the relief of Materials Handling Machinery Co., Inc.;

H. R. 4924. An act for the relief of Joseph A. Brown;

H. R. 5031. An act for the relief of Ernest C. Heine and Harriet W. Heine;

H. R. 5050. An act for the relief of Minnie P. Shorey;

H. R. 5125. An act to establish the Castle Clinton National Monument, in the city of New York, and for other purposes;

H. R. 5134. An act for the relief of Clarence W. Ohm;

H. R. 5166. An act for the relief of Raphael Elder;

H. R. 5287. An act for the relief of Mrs. Cecile W. McAfee, the legal guardian of Sarah McAfee, a minor, and Haven H. McAfee;

H. R. 5288. An act for the relief of Warren M. Miller;

H. R. 5463. An act for the relief of Hiram H. Wilson;

H. R. 5469. An act for the relief of Bertha Lillian Robbins and Charles Robbins;

H. R. 5603. An act for the relief of Wilford B. Brown;

H. R. 5848. An act for the relief of Mrs. Millicent Moore;

H. R. 5849. An act for the relief of Mrs. Grace A. Phillips;

H. R. 5851. An act for the relief of Second Lt. Francis W. Anderson;

H. R. 6012. An act for the relief of Lippert Bros.;

H. R. 6161. An act for the relief of the legal guardian of Samuel Roscoe Thompson, a minor;

H. R. 6215. An act for the relief of the Yellow Cab Transit Co., of Oklahoma City;

H. R. 6255. An act for the relief of Thomas A. Beddingfield and his wife, Opal May Beddingfield;

H. R. 6376. An act for the relief of Mrs. Fuku Kurokawa Thurn;

H. R. 6381. An act for the relief of Thomas L. Brett;

H. R. 6399. An act for the relief of Caesar Henry;

H. R. 6423. An act for the relief of Mrs. Ivan B. Hofman;

H. R. 6890. An act to amend the First War Powers Act, 1941;

H. R. 7030. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Allegheny River, between a point in or near the borough of Tarentum, in the county of Allegheny, and a point near the boundary of the city of New Kensington and Lower Burrel Township in Westmoreland County in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania; and

H. R. 7038. An act to provide for the sale of certain public lands in the States for the use and benefit of the State public educational institutions.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED OR PLACED ON CALENDAR

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles and referred, as indicated:

H. R. 957. An act for the relief of Margaret Dunn;

H. R. 1004. An act for the relief of the legal guardian of Robert Olsen, a minor;

H. R. 1633. An act for the relief of Raymond Crosby;

H. R. 1887. An act for the relief of Mrs. Leroy A. Robbins;

H. R. 3210. An act for the relief of Clyde O. Payne;

H. R. 3855. An act for the relief of Martin A. Tucker and Emma M. Tucker;

H. R. 4827. An act to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of Pan American Petroleum & Transport Co. against the United States;

H. R. 4860. An act for the relief of Materials Handling Machinery Co., Inc.;

H. R. 4924. An act for the relief of Joseph A. Brown;

H. R. 5031. An act for the relief of Ernest C. Heine and Harriet W. Heine;

H. R. 5050. An act for the relief of Minnie P. Shorey;

H. R. 5134. An act for the relief of Clarence W. Ohm;

H. R. 5166. An act for the relief of Raphael Elder;

H. R. 5287. An act for the relief of Mrs. Cecile W. McAfee, the legal guardian of Sarah McAfee, a minor, and Haven H. McAfee;

H. R. 5288. An act for the relief of Warren M. Miller;

H. R. 5463. An act for the relief of Hiram H. Wilson;

H. R. 5469. An act for the relief of Bertha Lillian Robbins and Charles Robbins;

H. R. 5603. An act for the relief of Wilford B. Brown;

H. R. 5848. An act for the relief of Mrs. Millicent Moore;

H. R. 5849. An act for the relief of Mrs. Grace A. Phillips;

H. R. 5851. An act for the relief of Second Lt. Francis W. Anderson;

H. R. 6012. An act for the relief of Lippert Bros.;

H. R. 6161. An act for the relief of the legal guardian of Samuel Roscoe Thompson, a minor;

H. R. 6215. An act for the relief of the Yellow Cab Transit Co., of Oklahoma City;

H. R. 6255. An act for the relief of Thomas A. Beddingfield and his wife, Opal May Beddingfield;

H. R. 6381. An act for the relief of Thomas L. Brett;

H. R. 6399. An act for the relief of Caesar Henry; and

H. R. 6423. An act for the relief of Mrs. Ivan B. Hofman; to the Committee on Claims.

H. R. 976. An act for the relief of Chet Walker; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

H. R. 5125. An act to establish the Castle Clinton National Monument, in the city of New York, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 7038. An act to provide for the sale of certain public lands in the States for the use and benefit of the State public educational institutions; to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

H. R. 6376. An act for the relief of Mrs. Fuku Kurokawa Thurn; to the Committee on Immigration.

H. R. 6890. An act to amend the First War Powers Act, 1941; ordered to be placed on the calendar.

H. R. 7030. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Allegheny River, between a point in or near the borough of Tarentum, in the county of Allegheny, and a point near the boundary of the city of New Kensington and Lower Burrel Township in Westmoreland County in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania; to the Committee on Commerce.

RECESS

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 6 o'clock and 45 minutes p. m.), the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Saturday, July 27, 1946, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

FRIDAY, JULY 26, 1946

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

Rev. Bernard Braskamp, D. D., pastor of the Gunton Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church, offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, our Father, whose hearing transcends all our asking and whose amazing goodness surpasses all our thought, humbly and confidently we are lifting our hearts in prayer, for of no one else can we ask so much and none other is so willing and able to supply our many needs.

May we now yield ourselves unreservedly to the promptings and persuasions of Thy spirit, whose interpreting light and sustaining presence we so sorely need as we face the perplexing problems of each succeeding day. Help us to sense the sanctity of even the most commonplace duty. Give us the faith that dispels our fears, the hope that is invincible, and the love that fathoms the deep things of God.

We pray that the members of the human family may be blessed with a finer feeling of appreciation and understanding, a more heartfelt and healing sympathy, and a nobler skill in ministering to the welfare of all who are finding the struggle of life so difficult. May it be the goal of all our aspirations to attain unto the likeness and spirit of our blessed Lord, who went about doing good.

Hear us in His name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. Miller, one of his secretaries, who also informed the House that on July 25, 1946, the President approved and signed a joint resolution of the House of the following title:

H. J. Res. 371. Joint resolution extending the effective period of the Emergency Price Control Act of 1942, as amended, and the Stabilization Act of 1942, as amended.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a bill and a concurrent resolution of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 6528. An act to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces to commemorate the life and perpetuate the ideals and teachings of Booker T. Washington; and

H. Con. Res. 160. Concurrent resolution authorizing the printing of the handbook entitled "Laws Relating to the Physically Handicapped" as a House document, and providing for additional copies thereof.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed a bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 2359. An act to close the Office of the Recorder of Deeds on Saturdays.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendments of the House to a bill of the Senate of the following title:

S. 1477. An act to authorize relief in certain cases where work, supplies, or services have been furnished for the Government under contracts during the war.

ELIMINATION AND RETIREMENT OF OFFICERS

Mr. SIKES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 7063) to provide for the selection for elimination and retirement of officers of the Regular Army, for the equalization of retirement benefits for members of the Army of the United States, and for other purposes, and further ask that 20 minutes may be allowed, to be equally divided between the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. MARTIN] and myself, for an explanation of the bill.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I am not going to object to this request, but I want it distinctly understood that hereafter there will be very few such consent requests granted. Legislation has been pouring onto the floor of the House in vast quantities. Committees are reporting out bills without giving hearings and very little consideration, and expecting them to be brought up under unanimous consent. This is unfair to the taxpayers and the people of the country. Some of these bills involve millions of dollars and others vitally affect our industrial life. If they are going to be taken up, they should be given decent consideration. Therefore, for my part, I am going to insist that any measure of any large importance be considered either by suspension or at least under a procedure giving full opportunity for debate. They are not going to be taken up by unanimous consent. I have no objection to the pending request.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. RICH. How can the Members of the House know what is coming before the House in the way of unanimous-consent requests?

The SPEAKER. The majority leader made an announcement yesterday about these matters, also about the various bills as to which the Chair intends to recognize Members to move to suspend the rules.

Mr. RICH. Then nothing else will come before the House under unanimous consent except what has been stated by the majority leader?

The SPEAKER. The Chair is not going to recognize anybody to ask unanimous consent to call up any bill that has not been cleared with both the majority and the minority leaders and with the Speaker. The Chair does not do that anyhow.

Mr. RICH. How are the Members going to know?

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not know, other than that a Member can get in touch with the majority or the minority leader or the Speaker and find out if any such request is going to be submitted.

Mr. RICH. If they do not tell the Members of the House, is there not some way in which there could be published a day ahead what bills are coming up? Would not that be sound business?

The SPEAKER. It might not be sound business for the Chair to be bound in that way.

Mr. RICH. It might be sound business for the Members of the House to know that. I think we ought to know that. I think the Speaker of the House and the majority and minority leaders ought to give notice at least 24 hours ahead of what is coming up.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Further reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I want it thoroughly understood that my remarks are no reflection on either the Speaker or the majority leader. I simply want it understood that committees cannot bring bills in here without hearings and any consideration and expect to have them considered by unanimous consent. Polling of a few committee members is not the way to legislate on bills of Nation-wide importance. The House should have the opportunity to have thorough knowledge of the legislation to be considered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I cannot get a copy of the bill. What is the number of the bill, at least?

Mr. SIKES. The number is H. R. 7063.

Mr. CHURCH. Can we have the bill read?

The SPEAKER. The bill, of course, cannot be read unless the House grants unanimous consent for its consideration.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I am going to object until I see a copy of the bill. I am going to object temporarily. I think I have an amendment and I want to see the bill.

The SPEAKER. Objection is heard.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES—INTERNATIONAL LABOR CONFERENCE

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs and ordered printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

The Twenty-seventh Conference of the International Labor Organization was held in Paris, France, from October 15 to November 5, 1945. Representatives of governments, employers, and workers participated in its deliberations. The United States was one of the 48 member nations represented at the Conference.

The Conference adopted, on November 5, 1945, recommendation (No. 74) concerning minimum standards of social policy in dependent territories (supplementary provisions). One hundred votes were cast in favor of adoption, and none were recorded in opposition.

This recommendation sets forth minimum standards found desirable by the Conference for application in dependent territories to supplement the standards contained in recommendation (No. 70) concerning minimum standards of social policy in dependent territories, which was adopted on May 12, 1944, by the Twenty-sixth Conference held in Philadelphia and which was transmitted to the Congress of the United States on August 22, 1944.

In accordance with the constitution of the International Labor Organization which provides that recommendations adopted by the Conference shall be brought before the competent authority or authorities for the enactment of legislation or other action, I herewith transmit to the Congress the authentic text of this recommendation (No. 74). I believe that the Congress will find the provisions of this recommendation helpful in its consideration of problems of social policy in those Territories and possessions of the United States to which it may be applicable.

I am also bringing this recommendation to the attention of the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, and the Secretary of the Interior in order that they may transmit it for suitable action by the appropriate authority or authorities in those Territories and possessions of the United States for which they respectively are administratively responsible.

HARRY S. TRUMAN.

THE WHITE HOUSE, July 26, 1946.

ADDITIONAL COPIES OF PEARL HARBOR INVESTIGATION REPORT

Mr. JARMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of Senate Concurrent Resolution 74.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed 8,000 additional copies of Senate Document No. 244, being the report of the Joint Committee on the Investigation of the Pearl Harbor Attack pursuant to Senate Concurrent Resolution 27, a concurrent resolution to investigate the attack on Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, and events and circumstances relating thereto, including the additional views of Mr. KEEFE and the minority views of Mr. FERGUSON and Mr. BREWSTER, of which 6,000 copies shall be for the use of the said joint committee, 1,000 copies for the use of the Senate document room and 1,000 copies for the use of the House document room.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

The Senate concurrent resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PART IV OF HEARINGS ON AID TO PHYSICALLY HANDICAPPED

Mr. JARMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of House Resolution 741.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That in accordance with paragraph 3 of section 2 of the Printing Act, approved March 1, 1907, the House Committee on Labor Subcommittee to Investigate Aid to the Physically Handicapped be, and is hereby, authorized and empowered to have printed for its use 500 copies of part 4 of the hearings held before said subcommittee during the second session, Seventy-eighth Congress, relative to aid to the physically handicapped.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PART V OF HEARINGS RELATIVE TO AID TO THE PHYSICALLY HANDICAPPED

Mr. JARMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of House Resolution 742.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That in accordance with paragr.ph 3 of section 2 of the Printing Act, approved March 1, 1907, the House Committee on Labor Subcommittee to Investigate Aid to the Physically Handicapped be, and is hereby, authorized and empowered to have printed for its use 500 copies of part 5 of the hearings held before said subcommittee during the second session, Seventy-eighth Congress, relative to aid to the physically handicapped.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PART VI OF HEARING ON AID TO PHYSICALLY HANDICAPPED

Mr. JARMAN. Mr. Speaker, I present a resolution (H. Res. 743) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That in accordance with paragraph 3 of section 2 of the Printing Act, approved March 1, 1907, the House Committee on Labor Subcommittee to Investigate Aid to the Physically Handicapped be, and is hereby, authorized and empowered to have printed for its use 500 additional copies of part 6 of the hearings held before said subcommittee during the second session, Seventy-eighth Congress, relative to aid to the physically handicapped.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

COMMUNISM IN SOVIET UNION

Mr. JARMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of House Resolution 720.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the manuscript of a documented study and analysis of communism in operation in the Soviet Union be printed as a House document.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MANUAL EXPLANATORY OF THE PRIVILEGES, RIGHTS, AND BENEFITS PROVIDED FOR ALL PERSONS WHO ARE, OR HAVE BEEN, MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES

Mr. JARMAN. Mr. Speaker, from the Committee on Printing, I report (Rept. No. 2672) a privileged concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 66), and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the pamphlet entitled "Manual Explanatory of the Privileges, Rights, and Benefits Provided for All Persons Who Are, or Have Been, Members of the Armed Forces of the United States and of Those Dependent Upon Them" be printed as a House document, and that 91,300 additional copies shall be printed, of which 66,300 copies shall be for the use of the House of Representatives, 20,000 for the use of the Senate, 2,000 for the use of the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation of the House of Representatives, 2,000 for the House document room, and one thousand for the Senate document room.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BIOGRAPHICAL DIRECTORY OF THE AMERICAN CONGRESS

Mr. JARMAN. Mr. Speaker, from the Committee on Printing, I report (Rept. No. 2673), a privileged concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 163), and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there shall be compiled and printed, with illustrations, as a House document, in such style and form as may be directed by the Joint Committee on Printing, a revised edition of the Biographical Directory of the American Congress up to and including the Eightieth Congress (1774-1948); and that 3,500 additional copies shall be printed, of which 2,300 copies shall be for the use of the House of Representatives, 800 copies for the use of the Senate, and 400 copies for the use of the Joint Committee on Printing.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ELIMINATION AND RETIREMENT OF OFFICERS

Mr. SIKES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 7063) to provide for the selection for elimination and retirement of officers of the Regular Army, for the equalization of retirement benefits for members of the Army of the United States, and for other purposes, and I ask unanimous consent that 20 minutes be allocated for discussion of the bill, the time to be equally divided between the gentleman from Iowa and myself.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SIKES]?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Florida is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. SIKES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and include an analysis of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

Mr. SIKES. Mr. Speaker, in asking for the present consideration of H. R. 7063, the Committee on Military Affairs, recognizes the lateness of the session and is prompted by the fact that General Eisenhower has classed this bill as one extremely valuable to the Nation's military program and to our national defense and security. I want to point out that it has the active support and endorsement of the National Guard Association and the Reserve Officers' Association. Consequently the committee feels that it is in order to ask for this special treatment of the bill at this time.

The bill contains two principal features: First, a retirement program for National Guard and Reserve officers. I think all of us recognize and appreciate the importance of national guardsmen and of the Reserve officers in World War II. They formed the backbone of the training staff. They made it possible for our people to train an army in the quickest possible time. More important, they helped to hold the lines on far-flung battle fronts until other officers and men could be trained and sent into the breach. Consequently it is extremely important—it is considered essential—that we provide an incentive for a strong National Guard and Reserve in the years ahead. A few men held on during the lean years between World Wars I and II because they loved the work and wanted to help their country's defense. But they were not many in number, and they were never given the full opportunity for training and experience which they needed. We are now seeking to avoid a repetition of that condition. We are seeking to encourage the participation of the best type of personnel in our National Guard and Reserve program. I should like to point out that in order to protect our commitments for the armed forces it is going to be necessary to keep in active service for a long time about 30,000 officers in addition to the 50,000 now authorized for the Regular Army. These men must come from AUS or from the Reserves. It is hard to attract good men from their careers unless some additional attractions for service are provided. The possibility of participating in a retirement program is a positive incentive.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SIKES. I yield.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. I had a wire from the National Guard of Nebraska in which it was pointed out that the proposed bill would eliminate perhaps the older men who have been giving service for many years, that they no longer will be in the National Guard. Can the gentleman make any explanation of that?

Mr. SIKES. I cannot see that this bill will in any way eliminate the services of the older men.

It requires the continued participation in military activity of nearly all National Guard and Reserve officers, for it is the purpose of the bill to keep these men up to the minute in training and tactics. But the bill does not in any way infer that those who have served faithfully in the past cannot continue to serve.

I should like to point out to the House that War Department officials estimate that we shall be about 20,000 officers short on August 1. Men are returning to their own careers. They are reluctant to continue to give time to active duty unless additional incentive is provided; something that gives them an opportunity to look forward to at least partial compensation in the way of a retirement program for continued active service.

It is not going to be easy to meet the requirements of this retirement program; its requirements are exhaustive. The completion of 20 years of active and inactive service is necessary. No one can participate before age 60. It is intended to keep officers on their toes, but to offer rewards for long and faithful service of the type that was so important to our prewar military institution. It holds out to officers the possibility of retirement in later years for service in the National Guard and in the Reserve.

Mrs. BOLTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SIKES. I yield.

Mrs. BOLTON. Does this include Medical Corps officers?

Mr. SIKES. It includes all officers in the National Guard and Reserves. I should like to point out that the cost of this legislation is considered to be about $2,000,000 a year for approximately the next 10 years. Beyond that it is rather difficult to say what the cost will be. It will increase as time goes on.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SIKES. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. In World War I and in World War II over two-thirds of the Ground Forces and a large part of our officers came out of the National Guard organization and Reserves. Is not that a fact?

Mr. SIKES. I believe the gentleman is correct.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. And this bill just gives a slight consideration in a monetary way to those men who continue to work over a very prolonged period, and they cannot take advantage of its provisions until they have reached 60 years of age.

Mr. SIKES. That is correct; a man must be 60 years of age to draw any retirement benefit, and he must have had 20 years active and inactive service. It is not going to be easy to qualify for the benefits offered under this bill, but it does offer a real and substantial incentive for continued service in the National Guard and in the Reserves.

Mr. KEARNEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SIKES. I yield.

Mr. KEARNEY. Does this bill also give recognition to these National Guard men who in the past have carried the burden of this problem?

Mr. SIKES. It does.

Mr. KEARNEY. By going to their armories night after night? It is also an incentive for men to continue in the National Guard and Reserves.

Mr. SIKES. That is correct, and I may say for the benefit of the membership that no one in this House is better qualified than my distinguished friend to speak of the need for this legislation.

Mr. KEARNEY. I wish to compliment the gentleman and members of the subcommittee for the work they have put in on this bill to get it in shape where it could be reported out and has been.

Mr. SIKES. I thank the gentleman from New York.

Mr. ABERNETHY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SIKES. I yield.

Mr. ABERNETHY. I have a constituent who has had about 24 years of service, mostly in the Reserves, and about 4 years in active service, a little less than 4 years. Will he qualify under this bill?

Mr. SIKES. How long did he serve in the National Guard and Reserves?

Mr. ABERNETHY. His over-all service was about 24 years plus, but a little less than 4 years was active service on duty.

Mr. SIKES. If he has served less than 25 years in the National Guard or Reserves and has less than 4 years' active service, he will have to have another 6 months' active service to qualify under this program.

Mr. ABERNETHY. How much active service is required in all?

Mr. SIKES. For a man who has had over 25 years in the National Guard or in the Reserves, no additional active service is required. If he has had between 15 and 25 years, he will have to have another 6 months. A graduated program of requirements is set up as a reward for service already rendered and to insure the continuation of active participation in the future of guardsmen and reserves.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SIKES. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Texas.

Mr. THOMASON. Is it not a fact this bill has the approval not only of the National Guard Officers' Association but likewise the Reserve Officers' Association, also the unanimous approval of the Committee on Military Affairs?

Mr. SIKES. That is correct. It has the very strong endorsement of the National Guard Officers' Association and the Reserve Officers' Association and comes to us with the unanimous report of the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. THOMASON. In view of the modesty of the gentleman who now has the floor, may I add that the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BROOKS], who is not present today, the gentleman from Florida who is now speaking [Mr. SIKES], and the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. MARTIN] have given literally months of time in studying this question in collaboration with the War Department officials, and I understand it not only has the approval of the subcommittee and the full committee but also of the War Department as well.

Mr. SIKES. I want to subscribe to all the gentleman has said about the able leadership of the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BROOKS], who has worked long and faithfully on this matter, as well as the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. MARTIN], who has carried a large part of the load. At this point I hope I may list the members of the subcommittee which prepared the bill. It has required much work and they have given freely of their time to insure a sound and workable bill. They are Messrs. BROOKS, SPARKMAN, KILDAY, DURHAM, myself, PHILBIN, STEWART, WINSTEAD, ROE of New York, SHORT, ARENDS, CLASON, MARTIN of Iowa, ELSTON, HARNESS of Indiana, and JOHNSON of California.

Mr. KEARNEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SIKES. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. KEARNEY. It also has been endorsed by the Adjutant General's Association?

Mr. SIKES. That is correct.

Mr. COLE of New York. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SIKES. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. COLE of New York. If I understand it correctly, this is the first time a Reserve officer of the Army is given the privilege of retirement?

Mr. SIKES. It is the first time a measure has been brought to the floor setting up a retirement program for Reserves.

Mr. COLE of New York. Does this bill affect only the Army or does it affect the Navy as well?

Mr. SIKES. This bill is written for the Army.

Mr. COLE of New York. Was any consideration given to the advisability of including the Navy?

Mr. SIKES. I think it is advisable to include Navy personnel in this program, but the committee, realizing the size and enormity of its task, confined its discussion to its applicability to the War Department.

Mr. COLE of New York. Was the position of the Navy Department on this question sought by the Military Committee?

Mr. SIKES. I am not able to answer that question. I do not know.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. Are we discussing 1972?

Mr. SIKES. We are discussing H. R. 7063.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. Is that the Brooks bill?

Mr. SIKES. That is the Brooks bill.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. The information I tried to impart to the gentleman a few minutes ago was that the National Guard and Reserve Officers' Associations were opposed to section 203 of S. 1974 because it required 3 years of active military service and 2 years to be served in the future and only 1-year credit for prior service.

Mr. SIKES. There is a graduated scale which sets up the amount of active service required. It depends upon the active and inactive service a man has had in the past. We must set up standards which can be attained, but which are sufficiently exacting to insure a well-trained, spirited Reserve and National Guard. There will always have to be a dividing line, which some persons cannot quite attain.

It is going to be impossible to set up a program that will please everybody; however, we are trying to set one up that will benefit the service to the greatest extent, and at the same time provide an incentive for officers to do the required work of first-class services. We want to build up the Reserve and the Guard and at the same time we want the personnel of both to have a chance to benefit financially by their work.

We do not want to eliminate those officers who have served faithfully and well in the past and they are included in this program.

Now Mr. Speaker, before my time expires, I want to touch on other features of the bill. The second main provision establishes a method for the elimination of unqualified Regular Army officers.

I think we all realize that the old program, which was in effect prior to 1941 is so cumbersome that it was almost impossible to eliminate an inefficient officer against his will. The war proviso now temporarily in effect for the elimination of inefficient officers does not provide sufficient protection for the rights of the individual officer. In setting up our peacetime forces, the War Department wants the best officers it can obtain, and this bill seeks to provide a sound, long-range program for the retention of able officers and the weeding out of undesirable ones. The bill provides for a selection board, whose findings are gone into thoroughly by a board of inquiry. Afterwards a board of review will confirm or reject previous findings. As a final step, the Secretary of War is empowered to pass on the findings of the various boards.

There are other features in the bill. One of them provides for retirement in the highest grade held during wartime. This is similar to a provision now enjoyed by Navy personnel, and it is included in this bill as a part of the program to place the services on an equal footing.

Another significant feature is the requirement for an annual physical examination of persons retired for physical disability except in cases of obvious permanent disability. This section is intended to stop abuses, which are known to exist, and to correct cases where individuals have recovered from disability for which they were retired, and for which they are still drawing retirement pay. The bill does not leave these individuals out in the cold. It provides for their return to duty or for retirement pay on the basis of actual service rendered.

The bill also provides some needed safeguards on legislation previously enacted. For instance some individuals who have just been appointed to the Regular Army have the right to retire almost immediately and to receive retirement pay for years of constructive service. Constructive service is a term used in determining the rank they will enjoy in the Regular Army, but unless this bill is passed some individuals can also use constructive service for retirement and be paid for it, even though it refers to years not actually served. The bill corrects that situation.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that I may include herein an analysis of the bill which explains each paragraph.

ANALYSIS OF H. R. 7063, A BILL TO PROVIDE FOR THE SELECTION FOR ELIMINATION AND RETIREMENT OF OFFICERS OF THE REGULAR ARMY, FOR THE EQUALIZATION OF RETIREMENT BENEFITS FOR MEMBERS OF THE ARMY OF THE UNITED STATES, AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES

GENERAL

H. R. 7063 is a bill prepared by a Subcommittee of the Committee on Military Affairs under the chairmanship of the Honorable OVERTON BROOKS. The bill is necessarily involved in a legal sense in view of the complexity of present law respecting elimination and retirement of military personnel. The principles, however, which it seeks to establish are clear and relatively simple.

The bill contains two separate and distinct subjects.

TITLE I. ELIMINATION OF UNQUALIFIED REGULAR OFFICERS

Title I of the bill applies only to officers of the Regular Army and is designed to establish a method for the elimination of inefficient officers. It is a substitute for the provisions of section 24b of the National Defense Act under which inefficient officers were eliminated after World War I and prior to World War II and for the provisions of the joint resolution of July 29, 1941, under which inefficient officers were eliminated during World War II.

As the committee is aware, the method established for the elimination of inefficient officers in section 24b of the National Defense Act proved to be unsatisfactory. The numerous boards and resulting delays provided by that act to protect the interests of officers whose elimination was recommended proved too cumbersome with the result that it was practically impossible to terminate the commission of an inefficient officer against his will. On the other hand, the provisions of the joint resolution of July 29, 1941, passed in anticipation of war, are extremely drastic and do not provide appropriate safeguards to protect the interests of the officers concerned consistent with our democratic form of government.

Title I of the bill under consideration provides (sec. 102) that the Secretary of War shall convene a selection board of five general officers. This board is charged with responsibility of reviewing the records of all officers on the active list of the Regular Army annually and of selecting therefrom the names of those officers who have failed to achieve standards of performance of duty established by War Department regulations.

Officers who are found by the selection board not to meet minimum War Department requirements are to be afforded a fair and impartial hearing before a board of not less than three general officers (sec. 103). If the board of inquiry finds an officer to have met the standards prescribed, proceedings in his case are terminated. On the other hand, if the board finds the officer not to have met such minimum standards, the officer's record, together with the recommendations of the board of inquiry, are forwarded to a board of review (sec. 104) consisting of not less than five general officers. Again, if the board of review finds the officer qualified, his case is dropped. If, however, it concurs in the findings of the board of inquiry, it forwards the case to the Secretary of War with the recommendation that the officer be removed from the active list. The action of the Secretary of War is final.

Section 105 provides that an officer required to show cause why he should not be removed from the active list, shall be allowed to appear in person, to be represented by counsel, and shall be furnished full access to all records pertinent to his case at all stages in the proceedings. This section also prohibits the same general officer from sitting on more than one of the boards involved. These safeguards are provided to insure a complete and just hearing in each case and to afford each officer a full opportunity to present all factors favorable to his side of the case.

Officers who are removed from the active list under the provisions described in the preceding paragraph and who have completed less than 7 years active Federal commissioned service are honorably discharged (sec. 106a). Where such an officer has completed more than 7 years but less than 10 years service, he is discharged with severance pay equal to 6 months base pay and longevity of his permanent grade (sec. 106b). In the case of those officers who have completed more than 10 but less than 20 years service, severance pay equal to 1 year's base and longevity pay is authorized (sec. 106c). Finally, those officers who have completed more than 20 years service are placed on the retired list in the permanent grade then held with retirement pay at the rate of 2½ percent of such officers' active duty annual pay at the time of his retirement multiplied by the number of years service which he has completed but with a maximum limit of not to exceed 75 percent.

Section 107 provides for the review of the records of those officers heretofore removed from the active list of the Regular Army under the provisions of the joint resolution of July 29, 1941. Provision is made for a full and complete hearing in all such cases and for the restoration to the active list of those officers found to have been wrongfully removed in the position and with all rights, benefits, and privileges which he would have attained had he not been removed except those rights, benefits, and privileges based upon active service in time of war in fact not performed by such officers.

Sections 108 and 109 of the bill authorize the Secretary of War to promulgate regulations necessary to carry the provisions of title 1 into effect; provide against the payment of back pay or allowances for personnel reinstated and repeal section 24b of the National Defense Act and the joint resolution of July 29, 1941.

The War Department feels that the method established in title 1 of the bill will operate satisfactorily, avoids the difficulties heretofore experienced under section 24b of the National Defense Act, and contains appropriate safeguards for the rights of individuals.

TITLE II. RETIREMENT

In his recent appearance before the Military Affairs Committee, General Eisenhower pointed out "we will always, in the forseeable future, require a larger combined Army and Air Force than this—the 50,000 Regular officers will always have to be supported by a large number of civilian officers on active duty." As the committee also is aware, the establishment of a strong reserve in the period between the World Wars I and II was seriously handicapped by a reluctance on the part of Reserve and National Guard officers to accept extended active duty. Under the circumstances, the purpose of title II of the bill under consideration is to provide an incentive to National Guard and Reserve officers to seek extended active duty subsequent to the termination of the present war. The incentive established is a provision for the retirement of temporary officers under certain circumstances with retired pay in amounts proportional to the service which they will be required to render in order to qualify.

Title II of the bill affects retirement of both Regular and temporary officers. Section 201 provides for the establishment of an officers' retired list and of a Reserve officers' retired list. The names of all officers of the Regular Army heretofore or hereafter retired under any provision of law are placed on the former list. The names of all commissioned officers and former commissioned officers of the Army of the United States, other than those of the Regular Army, heretofore retired under the provisions of the act of April 3, 1939 (retired for physical disability) or the act of September 26, 1941 (physical disability incurred on or after February 28, 1925) or hereafter retired under the provisions of section 203 of title II of the bill under consideration, are placed on the Reserve officers' retired list.

Section 202 provides for the future voluntary retirement of Regular Army officers. Present law (act of July 31, 1935) as amended, permits an officer of the Regular Army to retire at his own request, in the discretion of the Secretary of War, after having completed 15 years' active Federal service. This minimum term of service is raised to 20 years by the bill under consideration. No change is made in the rate of retired pay (2½ percent per year) now provided by law, nor in the maximum limit of 75 percent. A proviso protects, without change, provisions of present law which authorize 75 percent active duty annual base and longevity pay for retired officers of the Regular Army or Philippine Scouts who served prior to November 12, 1918. It is to be noted therefore that insofar as regular officers are concerned, these two sections make little change in present law.

RETIREMENT OF RESERVE AND NATIONAL GUARD OFFICERS

Section 203 of the bill establishes a new national policy providing for the retirement of reserve and National Guard officers for length of service. There is no authority of law for such purpose at the present time and it is hoped that the provisions established by section 203 will provide the incentive desired in order that reserve and National Guard officers will seek active Federal service after the official termination of the present war.

Two over-all criteria which apply to all temporary officers are first established. First, retirement benefits are not payable until the age of 60; and second, a minimum of 20 years satisfactory service in the armed forces or reserve components must be served in all cases.

With the two over-all requirements in mind, section 203 establishes a number of postwar requirements which must be met if an individual is to qualify for retirement benefits. These are adjusted with two purposes in mind. First, to establish a maximum probable postwar active duty requirement which could be met by a reserve officer in consideration of his age; and second, to compensate to a degree the past service rendered by reserve and National Guard officers in World Wars I and II. The requirements established are spelled out in subsections (a) (1), (2), (3), (4), (5), (6) of section 203. The following table indicates these requirements:

Age (years)	Minimum total satisfactory service	Minimum total active Federal service (years)	Minimum satisfactory service in armed forces prior to termination of present war (years)	Minimum postwar active Federal service required (years)
60	At least 20 years.	3	None	3
60	do	3	0 to 5	2
60	do	4	5 to 10	1½
60	do	4	10 to 15	1
60	do	4	15 to 25	½
60	At least 25 years.	4	Over 25	None

Service with the Civilian Conservation Corps is specifically excluded from the time which may be counted as active Federal service.

Persons who are eligible for retirement benefits under the conditions described above receive retired pay at the rate of 2½ percent for each year of active Federal service and at the rate of one-half of 1 percent for each year of inactive Federal service. A maximum of 75 percent is established. These rates are applied to the annual base and longevity pay of the highest grade satisfactorily held by such person during his period of service.

Subsection (d) of section 203 provides that the Secretary of War shall certify to the Veterans' Administration the names of those persons entitled to receive retirement pay under the provisions of this section. Payment is made by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs from appropriations of the Veterans' Administration. This is consistent with the national policy established by the Congress in 1939 whereby the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs pays all benefits other than the retired pay of members of the Regular Army.

Subsection (e) contains certain definitions essential to the proper interpretation of section 203.

CONSTRUCTIVE SERVICE FOR RETIREMENT

Regular Army

Sections 204 and 205 of title II again apply only to members of the Regular Army.

Subsection 204 is necessary in view of the recent integration of temporary officers into the Regular Army under the provisions of the act of December 28, 1945. As the committee is aware, these officers were given constructive service under the provisions of that act for purposes of determining their grade and right of promotion. Section 204 permits such constructive service to be counted in determining their eligibility for voluntary retirement under the provisions of the act of July 31, 1935. As originally introduced, this section also permitted such constructive service to be counted in computing retirement pay. The subcommitee, however, specifically amended the section to permit the constructive service in question to be counted for determining eligibility for retirement only and, as now written, it does not authorize this service to be counted in computing retirement pay.

The section in question is a substitute for the fifth proviso of section 5 of the act of July 31, 1935, as amended, which is repealed.

Retirement in temporary grade

Section 205 of the bill under consideration provides for the retirement or for advancement on the retired list of each commissioned officer of the Regular Army in the highest temporary grade satisfactorily held by him during active military service in time of war.

Subsection (b) of section 205 applies the same principle to members of the Army Nurse Corps. Similarly warrant officers and enlisted members of the Regular Army heretofore or hereafter retired are retired in the highest grade held during active military service during the war and receive retired pay on the basis of base and longevity pay which they would have been receiving if serving in active duty in such grade.

Subsection (d) of this section makes a similar provision with respect to members of the Army of the United States other than of the Regular Army heretofore or hereafter granted retirement pay for physical disability.

Subsections (e) and (f) provide for the effective date of the provisions of this section and provide certain safeguards in the event such individuals are recalled to active duty.

Congress has established this principle in national policy by making similar provisions in the act of February 21, 1946 (Public Law 305, 79th Cong.), respecting the retirement of naval personnel. It is not believed that any valid distinction exists between the type of service rendered by officers and enlisted men of the Army and the service rendered by officers and enlisted men of the Navy upon which naval personnel should be retired in temporary war grades while military personnel are retired in their permanent grades. The provisions of this section place Army personnel in exactly the same position in that respect as naval personnel under the act of February 21, 1946.

REEXAMINATION OF PERSONS RETIRED FOR PHYSICAL DISABILITY

Section 206 is a new section inserted by the subcommittee which prepared the bill under consideration. The subcommittee was of the opinion that there has been abuse of the laws and regulations providing for the retirement of personnel because of physical disability in the past. At the present time, there is no provision for the reexamination of individuals who have been retired because of physical disability nor is there any provision whereby the retired pay of such individuals is terminated or reduced should they recover from the disability for which they were retired.

Section 206, consequently, provides that all persons heretofore or hereafter retired for physical disability, with the exception of those having obvious disabilities of a permanent nature, shall be required to take annual physical examinations and that the retired pay of persons found no longer physically disqualified for service as a result of such examination shall be terminated.

In the case of a member of the Regular Army or of the Army Nurse Corps whose retired pay is terminated as a result of the contemplated annual physical examination, the Secretary of War, with the consent of the individual involved, is required to recommend to the President the nomination of such individual for reappointment to the active list of the Regular Army or of the Army Nurse Corps in the grade and with the seniority that such person would have held had he not been originally retired.

Similar provisions are made with respect to persons other than members of the Regular Army whose retirement pay is terminated, and again the section calls upon the President to appoint such persons in the Officers' Reserve Corps in the grade equal to the highest grade satisfactorily held by him in the Army of the United States.

Those members of the Regular Army who decline to accept reappointment to the active list may, if they have completed 20 or more years of active Federal service, be retired at 2½ percent of annual base pay and longevity of the highest grade satisfactorily held by him during his period of service multiplied by the number of years of active Federal service. In computing this figure, time spent on the retired list is counted as active Federal service. Similar provisions are made respecting the retirement of enlisted men.

Rules and regulations

Section 207 of the bill contains authority for the Secretary of War to promulgate necessary regulations and also contains the usual "grandfather clause." A specific exemption with respect to section 206 of the bill is contained in this clause.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Florida has expired.

Mr. LARCADE. Mr. Speaker, this bill now under consideration was introduced by my colleague the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BROOKS], and I am heartily in favor of the same.

It is my opinion that this bill corrects an injustice as between the officers of the armed forces and that the provisions are fair and reasonable, and that the enactment of this bill will go a long ways to solidify and clarify our national-defense policies.

The bill has the unanimous support of the War Department, National Guard, and Reserve Officers' Associations, as well as the approval of veterans' organizations.

Mr. Speaker, I trust that the Members of the House will not defer further action on this important matter, and that the same will be approved unanimously.

Mr. Speaker, the legislation has the full support of the various officers and veterans organizations in my State, and I ask unanimous consent that I may insert telegrams from a number of leading and distinguished men from my district and Louisiana who urge the enactment of this bill, and that the same be included in my remarks.

I now submit the telegrams addressed to me as follows:

LAKE CHARLES, LA., July 24, 1946.
Representative LARCADE, Louisiana,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.:

Urge further support of H. R. 6954 introduced by BROOKS of Louisiana in order that it may be placed on unanimous-consent list. The bill has won unanimous support of the War Department, National Guard, Reserve Officers' Association, and veterans' organizations.

LEONARD E. PAULEY,
Lieutenant Colonel, United States National Guard.

LAKE CHARLES, LA., July 24, 1946.
Representative LARCADE, Louisiana,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.:

Urge further support of H. R. 6954 introduced by BROOKS of Louisiana in order that it may be placed on unanimous-consent list. The bill has won unanimous support of the War Department, National Guard, Reserve Officers' Association, and veterans' organizations.

RAYMOND H. PAULEY,
First Lieutenant, United States Artillery.

LAKE CHARLES, LA., July 24, 1946.
Congressman HENRY D. LARCADE, JR.,
Washington, D. C.:

Urge further support of H. R. 6954 introduced by BROOKS of Louisiana in order that it may be placed on the unanimous-consent calendar. This is the bill unanimously supported by the War Department, National Guard, and Reserve Officers' Associations, and the veterans' organizations.

FRANK C. BLACKBURN.

LAKE CHARLES, LA., July 24, 1946.
Representative HENRY D. LARCADE, JR.,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.:

Urge further support of H. R. 6954 introduced by BROOKS of Louisiana in order that it may be placed on unanimous-consent calendar. His bill has won unanimous support of War Department, National Guard, Reserve Officers Association, and veterans' organizations.

ROBERT B. CAGLE,
Louisiana National Guard.

LAKE CHARLES, LA., July 24, 1946.
Congressman HENRY D. LARCADE, JR.,
Washington, D. C.:

Urge further support of H. R. 6954 introduced by BROOKS of Louisiana in order that it may be placed on the unanimous-consent calendar. This is the bill unanimously supported by the War Department, National Guard and Reserve Officers' Associations, and veterans' organizations.

JAS. H. KUTTNER.

LAKE CHARLES, LA., July 24, 1946.
Hon. HENRY D. LARCADE, JR.,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.:

Urge further support of H. R. 6954 introduced by Representative BROOKS, Louisiana, in order that it may be placed on unanimous-consent calendar. This bill has won unanimous support of War Department, National Guard, Reserve Officers' Association, and veterans' organizations.

ARTHUR L. GAYLE, JR.,
Lieutenant Colonel, United States Reserve Army.

SHREVEPORT, LA., July 25, 1946.
Hon. HENRY J. LATHAM,
Member of Congress,
Washington, D. C.:

Understand H. R. 6954 by BROOKS of Louisiana may be placed on unanimous-consent calendar for immediate consideration. Urge your assistance. We think it highly important that passage be expedited so as to hasten solidification and clarification of the national defense policies. This bill unanimously supported by War Department, National Guard, Reserve Officers' Association, and so forth.

WHITFIELD JACK,
President, Louisiana Department, Reserve Officers' Association.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. MARTIN] is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, this bill has been under study by the Committee on Military Affairs for several years. The problem came up acutely in 1940 when we rewrote the promotion law for the Army. I joined at that time with the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. SPARKMAN] in writing a committee report in which we stressed two important factors needed by the Army, one governing promotion and the other governing attrition as far as the Regular Army is concerned.

Section 1 of the bill now before you includes the first far-reaching legislation governing the problem of attrition and giving the War Department the machinery needed for keeping the Army officer personnel up to date and freeing it from officers who cease to be of effective service and use to the Army.

Section 1 of this bill is vitally needed now since we are increasing the Regular Army officer personnel. I had the privilege of serving in the Army for many years following World War I, and following the increase in the Regular Army in 1920, and I know how badly the Regular Army needed legislation of this kind at that time. They did not have it, and as a consequence the Army suffered because of the inability and the lack of machinery to take care of the necessary attrition.

As far as sections 2 and 3 are concerned, they bring in a new piece of legislation authorizing limited retirement rights for National Guard and Reserve Officers and men who devote many years of their lifetime to the national defense. We have needed such incentive as is provided in this bill, and we have never needed it more than we do today when we look forward to building up a larger and a more effective National Guard and Reserve system.

I have two amendments which I shall offer covering points that have arisen since the committee completed discussion of the bill, and in offering these amendments I certainly do not wish to criticize any member of the committee for not having placed them in the bill, because I know enough about the laws governing the armed forces, and especially those laws governing retirement of members of the armed forces, to know that no one can expect even in years of study to cover every possible point that should be covered.

At this point I want to make a statement regarding the work of the subcommittee chairman, the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BROOKS]. He has done an outstanding job on this bill. I am sorry that he is not able to be with us at this time. Backing up the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BROOKS] with equal good work was the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SIKES] who just addressed you.

The committee has given a lot of time and study to this matter. The bill itself is too complicated to expect one to outline every detail of it here at this time, but I can assure you that it is the best bill in this field that I have had the privilege of helping to develop and bring before the House.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I want to say for the record that our committee looks upon the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. MARTIN] as the best informed man in Congress on these problems. I think that is not exaggerating one bit. We relied very heavily on his experience and his background in connection with this problem, and that is one reason why I am thoroughly in favor of the bill. He sponsored it and he furnished the historical background we had to have in order to understand it.

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. DURHAM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. DURHAM. I would like to add to what the gentleman from California [Mr. JOHNSON] has just said about the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. MARTIN]. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. MARTIN], I think, knows more about this matter than any other member of the subcommittee. During the last 2 years he has been working on this problem trying to coordinate and work out this retirement bill. I think that he has done more hard work on it than any member on this subcommittee and deserves the thanks of the Members of this House.

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. I realize that the gentleman is an authority on this matter, but I should like to bring up a letter I received this morning in which an old National Guard officer, who had some service in this war, was complaining about the section in this bill which requires 3 years of actual military service, 2 years' service in the future, and only 1 year credit for service already rendered. I am wondering if that is still in this bill?

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. We have taken care of that.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. That has been taken care of in the bill?

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. We tried to be fair to those officers of the National Guard and reserve who have already given long service. I have an amendment to offer in behalf of those officers who served 20 years or more and who were taken out of service because of physical disability at the very time they had the opportunity to render extended active duty during this war. This amendment will improve the bill considerably, and I know it is acceptable to the committee. I shall be very glad to offer it. I will also offer an amendment changing the present law regarding officers retired under section 24 (b) of the National Defense Act.

Mr. DURHAM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. DURHAM. This amendment was overlooked in the committee. The gentleman from Iowa brought it to the attention of the committee after we had completed the consideration of the bill. Personally, I think it is a good amendment and should be added, because it puts every group in the Army on the same basis of retired pay. There is no reason why this little group of men, approximately 150 or 200, as I recall the number, should not be placed on the same basis as all the other officers in the Regular Army.

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. I appreciate the gentleman's comment regarding that amendment to section 24 (b) of the National Defense Act.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. THOMASON. I join with other members of my committee in saying that the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. MARTIN] has done an outstanding job on this bill. I should also like to include the gentleman from California [Mr. JOHNSON]. If we are not to have a large standing army, and none of us wants a larger one than is absolutely necessary for our national defense and national security, I am sure the gentleman will agree that we must give proper encouragement to the National Guard and Reserve officer components of the United States. The truth of the matter is, I think, and I believe the gentleman will agree with me, that in the recent past they have not had what might be commonly called a square deal, yet their contribution in the recent war equalled that of any other person in the Army.

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. The gentleman is absolutely right. Also I wish to join in his commendation of the gentleman from California [Mr. JOHNSON] for his intelligent and diligent efforts to build a sound piece of legislation in this field.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired. All time has expired.

The Clerk will read the bill for amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That this act may be cited as the "Army Vitalization and Retirement Equalization Act of 1946."

TITLE I

ELIMINATION

SEC. 101. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of War is hereby authorized for such causes as may be satisfactory to him, to remove any commissioned officer from the active list of the Regular Army in the manner hereinafter prescribed.

SEC. 102. Immediately following the enactment of this act, and once annually thereafter, the Secretary of War shall convene a selection board of five general officers, which shall review the records of all officers on the active list of the Regular Army to determine which of such officers shall be required to show cause why they should be retained on the active list. Selection of any officer to show cause for retention shall be based upon his failure to achieve such standards of performance as the Secretary of War shall by regulations prescribe, or on other good and sufficient reasons appearing to the satisfaction of the Secretary of War and of which the selection board is advised.

SEC. 103. Any officer selected to show cause for retention shall be accorded a fair and impartial hearing before a board of inquiry, consisting of not less than three general officers, convened at such place or places as the Secretary of War may prescribe to receive evidence and to make findings and recommendations as to the officer's fitness to be retained on the active list. If the board of inquiry recommends the retention of any officer on the active list, his case shall thereupon be closed and shall not be subject to further action, except that such officer may again be selected to show cause for retention at any future time in accordance with the provisions of section 102 of this title.

SEC. 104. The board of inquiry shall forward the record of its proceedings in each case in which it recommends the removal of any officer from the active list to a board of review, consisting of not less than five general officers, convened by the Secretary of War at such time as he deems appropriate, to review each such case and make recommendations as to the retention of the officer concerned on the active list. If the board of inquiry recommends the retention of any officer on the active list, his case shall thereupon be closed and shall not be subject to further action, except that such officer may again be selected to show cause for retention at any future time in accordance with the provisions of section 102 of this title. If the board of review recommends against the retention of any officer on the active list, such recommendation shall be transmitted to the Secretary of War for his action thereon. The action of the Secretary of War in removing any officer from the active list shall be final and conclusive: Provided, That at any time prior to his removal from the active list the application of any officer for honorable discharge or voluntary retirement under this act or any other provision of law may, if the applicant is otherwise qualified therefor, be granted by the Secretary of War.

SEC. 105. Any officer who is under consideration for removal from the active list shall be allowed to appear in person or by counsel at proceedings before any board of inquiry or any board of final review, and shall, at all stages of the proceedings, be allowed full access to and furnished copies of records pertinent to his case. No person shall sit as a member of more than one of the boards convened under section 102, 103, or 104 of this title in the consideration of the case of the same officer.

SEC. 106. Each officer removed from the active list of the Regular Army pursuant to this title shall—

(a) if on the date of removal he has completed less than 7 years' active Federal commissioned service, be honorably discharged in the permanent grade then held;

(b) if on the date of removal he has completed 7 or more but less than 10 years of such service, be honorably discharged in the permanent grade then held, with severance pay equal to 6 months' base and longevity pay computed upon such grade;

(c) if on the date of removal he has completed 10 or more but less than 20 years of such service, be honorably discharged in the permanent grade then held, with severance pay equal to 1 year's base and longevity pay computed upon such grade;

(d) if on the date of removal he has completed 20 or more years of such service, be retired in the permanent grade then held, with retired pay equal to the retired pay which he would receive if retired in such grade upon his own application under section 5 of the act of July 31, 1935 (49 Stat. 507), as now or hereafter amended.

SEC. 107. (a) The Secretary of War shall transmit the records of all proceedings in the case of each person heretofore removed from the active list of the Regular Army pursuant to the provisions of section 2 of the joint resolution of July 29, 1941 (55 Stat. 606), to a board of review convened under section 104 of this title. Each person so removed shall be notified of the reference of his case to such board for review, and shall be accorded opportunity to appear before the board in person or by counsel. After full and fair consideration of all the facts and circumstances of each such case as they existed at the time of removal, the board shall transmit to the Secretary of War a report thereon containing its findings of fact, its conclusion on the question whether such removal was justified, and its recommendation on the question whether the officer affected should be restored to the active list pursuant to the provisions of this section.

(b) In each such case in which the Secretary of War approves a recommendation for the restoration of any person to the active list of the Regular Army, he shall transmit the record of proceedings to the President, who is authorized and requested to appoint such person, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, as a commissioned officer on the active list of the Regular Army in the grade and with the seniority which he would have attained by operation of law if he had not been removed therefrom. In all other cases the action taken by the Secretary of War shall be final and conclusive for all purposes. The Secretary of War shall transmit to each person affected a copy of the report made by the board of review in his case and written notice as to the disposition thereof.

(c) In determining length of active Federal commissioned service for all purposes of pay, allowances, appointment, promotion, and retirement, each person restored to the active list of the Regular Army pursuant to the provisions of this section shall be deemed to have served as an officer on the active list of the Regular Army from the date of his removal therefrom to the date of his restoration thereto, and upon restoration shall be carried as an additional number in the grade in which restored to the active list or in any grade to which he thereafter may be promoted. Each officer so restored shall be accorded all other rights, benefits, and privileges to which he would have been entitled if he had not been removed from the active list, except those based upon active service in time of war or emergency not in fact performed by him.

SEC. 108. (a) The Secretary of War may promulgate such regulations as may be necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this title.

(b) No back pay, allowances, or compensation shall accrue to any person by reason of the enactment of any provision of this title.

SEC. 109. Section 24b of the National Defense Act, as amended by the act of June 4, 1920 (41 Stat. 773), and the joint resolution of July 29, 1941 (55 Stat. 606), are hereby repealed.

TITLE II

RETIREMENT

SEC. 201. Effective upon the enactment of this title, the Secretary of War shall establish—

(a) An officers' retired list, to be published annually in the Army Register, upon which shall be placed all commissioned officers of the Regular Army heretofore or hereafter retired from active service under any provision of law, without limitation as to the number of officers who may be placed thereon. Any provision of law requiring commissioned officers of the Regular Army to be placed upon the limited or unlimited retired lists hereafter shall be deemed to refer to the officers' retired list established pursuant to this subsection;

(b) A Reserve officers' retired list, to be published annually in the Army Register, upon which shall be placed the names of all commissioned officers and former commissioned officers of the Army of the United States, other than those of the Regular Army, heretofore or hereafter granted retirement pay under section 5 of the act of April 3, 1939 (53 Stat. 557), as amended (10 U. S. C. 456), section 1 of the act of Sepember 26, 1941 (55 Stat. 733; 10 U. S. C. 456a), section 203 of this title or any law hereafter enacted to provide retirement pay for commissioned officers other than those of the Regular Army, and the names of all warrant officers and enlisted men of the Regular Army heretofore or hereafter retired under any provision of law who, by reason of service in temporary commissioned grades in the Army of the United States or any component thereof, are entitled to be retired with commissioned rank or grade.

SEC. 202. That portion of section 5 of the act of July 31, 1935 (49 Stat. 507), as amended by section 3 of the act of June 13, 1940 (54 Stat. 380; 10 U. S. C. 943a, 971b), ending with the colon following the second proviso thereof, is hereby further amended to read as follows:

"That any officer on the active list of the Regular Army or Philippine Scouts who shall have completed not less than 20 or more than 30 years' active Federal service in the armed forces of the United States may in the discretion of the Secretary of War be retired upon his own application with annual pay equal to 2½ percent of his active-duty annual base and longevity pay at the time of retirement, multiplied by a number equal to the number of years of such active Federal service not in excess of 30 years: Provided, That in computing the number of years of such service for the purpose of determining the amount of retired pay, and for no other purpose, any fractional part of a year amounting to 6 months or more shall be counted as a complete year: Provided further, That any officer on the active list of Regular Army or Philippine Scouts who served in any capacity as a member of the military or naval forces of the United States prior to November 12, 1918, and who completes 20 or more years of active service shall, upon his own application, be retired with annual pay equal to 75 percent of his active-duty annual base and longevity pay at the time of his retirement unless entitled to retired pay of a higher grade as hereinafter provided, except that officers who are under investigation or who are awaiting trial by courts martial or the result of such trial, or whose cases are pending before courts of inquiry shall be retired only when the application for retirement in each case has been approved by the Secretary of War."

SEC. 203. (a) Any person, after attaining the age of 60, who has heretofore served or hereafter serves as a commissioned officer, warrant officer, flight officer, or an enlisted man in a reserve component of the Army of the United States and who has completed an aggregate of 20 or more years of satisfactory service in the armed forces of the United States, or reserve components thereof, shall, upon application to the Secretary of War, be granted retirement pay, if he satisfies the requirements applicable to his case as set forth below:

(1) If he has no satisfactory service in the armed forces of the United States, or reserve components thereof, prior to the termination of the present wars, he must have completed not less than 3 years of active Federal service subsequent to the date of termination of such wars.

(2) If he has completed some satisfactory service but less than 5 years of satisfactory service in the armed forces of the United States, or reserve components thereof, prior to the date of termination of the present wars, he must have completed not less than 3 years of active Federal service, at least 2 years of which must have been served subsequent to the date of termination of such wars.

(3) If he has completed 5 years but less than 10 years of satisfactory service in the armed forces of the United States, or reserve components thereof, prior to the date of termination of the present wars, he must have completed not less than 4 years of active Federal service, at least 18 months of which must have been served subsequent to the date of termination of such wars.

(4) If he has completed 10 years but less than 15 years of satisfactory service in the armed forces of the United States, or reserve components thereof, prior to the date of termination of the present wars, he must have completed not less than 4 years of active Federal service, at least 1 year of which must have been served subsequent to the date of termination of such wars.

(5) If he has completed 15 years but less than 25 years of satisfactory service in the armed forces of the United States, or reserve components thereof, prior to the date of termination of the present wars, he must have completed not less than 4 years of active Federal service, at least 6 months of which must have been served subsequent to the date of termination of such wars.

(6) If he has completed 25 or more years of satisfactory service in the armed forces of the United States, or reserve components thereof, prior to the date of termination of the present wars, he must have completed not less than 4 years of active Federal service.

For the purposes of paragraphs (1) through (6) of this subsection, service with the Civilian Conservation Corps shall not be deemed to be active Federal service.

(b) Any person granted retirement pay under the provisions of subsection (a) shall be entitled to receive such pay at an annual rate equal to—

(1) 2½ percent of the active-duty annual base and longevity pay which he would receive if serving, at the time granted retirement pay, on active duty in the highest grade satisfactorily held by him during his period of service multiplied by a number equal to the sum of the number of years of his active Federal service; plus

(2) one-half of 1 percent of such active-duty annual base and longevity pay multiplied by a number equal to the sum of the number of years of his inactive Federal service.

No person shall be entitled to receive such retirement pay at an annual rate in excess of 75 percent of such active-duty annual base and longevity pay. In computing the number of years of active or inactive Federal service for the purposes of this subsection, any fractional part of a year amounting to 6 months or more shall be counted as a complete year and any fractional part of a year amounting to less than 6 months shall be disregarded. No person shall be entitled to receive any increase in retirement pay granted to him under this section by reason of any active or inactive Federal service performed by him subsequent to the time he is granted retirement pay.

(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any member of a reserve component of the Army of the United States who fails to meet such standards and qualifications as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War may be discharged at any time by the Secretary of War. No member or former member of a reserve component of the Army of the United States shall be eligible for retirement pay under the provisions of this section unless he meets such standards and qualifications during the entire period of his service in the Army of the United States.

(d) The Secretary of War shall certify to the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs the names of all persons entitled to retirement pay under the provisions of this section and the amount of such pay to which such persons are respectively entitled. The Administrator of Veterans' Affairs shall thereafter disburse such pay to such persons from appropriations made to the Veterans' Administration for that purpose.

(e) For the purposes of this section—

(1) service in the inactive National Guard, in a nonfederally recognized status in the National Guard, or in the inactive Reserve section of the Officers' Reserve Corps shall not be deemed to be active or inactive Federal service;

(2) periods of annual field training and periods of attendance at service schools, as authorized by the Secretary of War under section 37a, 94, 97, and 99 of the National Defense Act, shall be credited as active Federal service;

(3) the term "date of termination of the present wars" shall mean the date proclaimed by the President as the date of such termination or the date specified in a concurrent resolution of the two Houses of Congress as the date of such termination;

(4) all service in the federally recognized National Guard shall be deemed to be service in a reserve component of the Army of the United States.

SEC 204. (a) For the purpose of determining the number of years of active service to be credited in computing eligibility for retirement under any provision of law, except under the second proviso of section 5 of the act of July 31, 1935 (49 Stat. 507), as amended, each commissioned officer on the active list of the Regular Army who is—

(1) commissioned in a promotion-list arm or service shall be deemed to have at least the same length of continuous active commissioned service in the Regular Army as any officer junior to him on the promotion list;

(2) commissioned in a non-promotion-list arm or service shall be deemed to have at least the same length of continuous active commissioned service in the Regular Army as any officer junior to him in rank in the arm or service in which he is commissioned.

(b) The fifth proviso of section 5 of the act of July 31, 1935 (49 Stat. 507), as amended by section 3 of the act of June 13, 1940 (54 Stat. 380), is hereby repealed.

SEC. 205. (a) Each commissioned officer of the Regular Army heretofore or hereafter retired under any provision of law (except section 24b of the National Defense Act, as amended, the joint resolution of July 29, 1941 (55 Stat. 606), title I of this act, or any law hereafter enacted for the retirement of inefficient officers) shall be advanced on the officers' retired list to the highest temporary grade satisfactorily held by him, as determined by the Secretary of War, during active military service in time of war, and shall receive retired pay at the rate prescribed by law, computed on the basis of the base and longevity pay which he would receive if serving on active duty in such grade.

(b) Each member of the Army Nurse Corps, established by chapter V of the act of July 9, 1918 (40 Stat. 879), as amended, heretofore or hereafter retired under any provision of law shall be advanced to the highest temporary tired list to a grade with relative rank equal to the highest grade in which, or to the highest relative rank with which, she served satisfactorily, as determined by the Secretary of War, during active military service in time of war, whichever is higher, and shall receive retired pay at the rate prescribed by law computed on the basis of the base and longevity pay which she would receive if serving on active duty in such grade or with such relative rank.

(c) Each warrant officer and each enlisted member of the Regular Army heretofore or hereafter retired under any provision of law shall be advanced on the Nurse Corps recommissioned officer, warrant officer, flight officer, or enlisted grade satisfactorily held by him, as determined by the Secretary of War, during active military service in time of war, and shall receive retired pay at the rate prescribed by law computed on the basis of the base and longevity pay which he would receive if serving on active duty in such grade.

(d) Each member of the Army of the United States, other than a member of the Regular Army, heretofore or hereafter granted retirement pay under any of the laws specified in subsection 201 (b) of this title, shall receive such pay at the rate prescribed by law, computed upon the same basis as that prescribed by this section for the computation of the retired pay of members of the Regular Army.

(e) This section shall be effective as to persons heretofore retired or granted retirement pay upon the first day of the first calendar month following the date of enactment of this title, and as to persons hereafter retired or granted retirement pay upon the effective date of retirement or of entitlement to receive retirement pay.

(f) No person recalled to active duty after retirement, or after having been granted retirement pay, shall be entitled, by reason of the enactment of this section, to be recalled in any rank or grade higher than that to which he or she would otherwise have been entitled.

SEC. 206. (a) On and after the effective date of this act—

(1) all members of the Regular Army and all members of the Army Nurse Corps heretofore or hereafter retired under any provision of law providing for retirement because of incapacity for active service, and all persons entitled to disability retirement benefits provided by law for members of the Army Nurse Corps, shall, until they have attained the age of 60 years, be given annual physical examinations at such times and places and in such manner as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War: Provided, That, under such regulations as the Secretary of War may prescribe, persons having obvious disabilities of a permanent nature may be relieved from such annual physical examinations;

(2) all persons who have heretofore served or hereafter serve as members of the Army of the United States, other than as members of the Regular Army, and who have heretofore been granted or are hereafter granted retirement pay under the provisions of section 5 of the act of April 3, 1939 (53 Stat. 557), as amended (10 U. S. C. 456), or section 1 of the act of September 26, 1941 (55 Stat. 733; 10 U. S. C. 456a), shall, until they attain the age of 60 years, be given annual physical examinations at such times and places and in such manner as may be prescribed by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs: Provided, That, under such regulations as the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs may prescribe, persons having obvious disabilities of a permanent nature may be relieved from such annual physical examinations.

(b) All persons who (1) have heretofore been retired under any provision of law providing for retirement because of incapacity for active service or (2) have heretofore been granted retirement pay under the provisions of section 5 of the act of April 3, 1939 (53 Stat. 557), as amended (10 U. S. C. 456), or section 1 of the act of September 26, 1941 (55 Stat. 733; 10 U. S. C. 456a), and who have not attained the age of 60 years, shall, not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this act and annually thereafter, submit to an annual physical examination as herein required. The Secretary of War or the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, as the case may be, is hereby authorized and directed to terminate the entitlement to the continued receipt of retired or retirement pay by any person who refuses or fails to submit to an annual physical examination required by this section.

(c) Any person required to submit to an annual physical examination as prescribed by this section shall be furnished transportation in kind, or in lieu thereof reimbursement at the rate of 4 cents per mile in accordance with distances established in the Official Mileage Tables governing travel of officers of the Army. No per diem allowance for, or incident to, such travel or physical examination shall be paid under this or any other law. Appropriations of the Army and of the Veterans' Administration available for expenses of travel current at the time the travel is directed shall be available to cover the cost of transportation and reimbursement authorized in this subsection.

(d) If as the result of an annual physical examination, as required by this section, it is determined by the Secretary of War or the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, as the case may be, that an individual is not incapacitated for active service, his entitlement to receive retired or retirement pay shall be terminated.

(e) In the case of any member of the Regular Army or of the Army Nurse Corps whose entitlement to retired pay is terminated under the provisions of subsection (d) of this section, the Secretary of War shall, with the consent of the member concerned, transmit the name of such person to the President, who is authorized and requested to appoint such person, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to the active list of the Regular Army or of the Army Nurse Corps in the grade and with the seniority which he would have attained by operation of law if he had not been retired. In determining length of active Federal commissioned service for all purposes of pay, allowances, appointment, promotion, and retirement, each such person restored to the active list of the Regular Army or of the Army Nurse Corps pursuant to the provisions of this subsection shall be deemed to have served as a member of the Regular Army or of the Army Nurse Corps on the active list from the date of his retirement to the date of his restoration thereto, and upon restoration shall be carried as an additional number in the grade in which restored to the active list or in any grade to which he thereafter may be promoted.

(f) In the case of any person whose entitlement to retirement pay is terminated under the provisions of subsection (d) of this section, the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs shall, with the consent of each individual involved, transmit the records of such person to the Secretary of War who shall request the President to appoint each such person as a commissioned officer in the Officers' Reserve Corps in a grade equal to the highest grade theretofore satisfactorily held by him in the Army of the United States.

(g) Any retired commissioned officer, warrant officer, flight officer, or retired member of the Army Nurse Corps whose entitlement to retired pay is terminated under the provisions of subsection (d) of this section and who declines to be restored to the active list of the Regular Army as contemplated in subsection (e) of this section shall, if he has completed 20 or more years of active Federal service, be entitled to receive retired pay at an annual rate equal to 2½ percent of the active duty annual base and longevity pay which he would receive if serving, at the time of such termination, in the highest grade satisfactorily held by him during his period of service multiplied by a number equal to the sum of the number of years of his active Federal service not in excess of 30 years. For the purpose of determining the number of years of active Federal service to be credited in computing eligibility for retirement and the amount of retired pay under this subsection, each such person shall be deemed to have been in active Federal service during the time for which he received retired pay.

(h) Any retired enlisted man whose entitlement to retired pay is terminated under the provisions of subsection (d) of this section shall be offered an opportunity to reenlist in the Regular Army in a grade equal to the highest grade theretofore satisfactorily held by him. If such enlisted man declines to reenlist in the Regular Army he shall be entitled to receive retired pay at an annual rate equal to 2½ percent of the active duty annual base and longevity pay which he would receive if serving, at the time of such termination, in the highest grade satisfactorily held by him during his period of service multiplied by a number equal to the sum of the number of years of his active Federal service not in excess of 30 years.

SEC. 207. (a) The Secretary of War may promulgate such regulations as may be necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this title.

(b) Nothing contained in this title except the provisions of section 206 thereof shall be construed to deprive any person of any higher retired grade or rank, or any greater retired or retirement pay, to which he or she may be entitled under any other provision of law. No back pay or allowances for any period prior to the date of enactment of this title shall accrue to any person by reason of the enactment thereof.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 16, strike out line 3 and insert "provision of law shall be advanced on the Nurse Corps re-."

Page 16, strike out line 15 and insert "provision of law shall be advanced to the highest temporary."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MARTIN of Iowa: After line 5, page 12, insert a new subsection as follows:

"(7) If he has been separated from the armed forces of the United States or reserve components thereof because of physical disability as the result of the finding of a duly constituted board of officers, he need not have completed any specified period of active Federal service."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I offer a further amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MARTIN of Iowa: Add after line 12, page 15, a new section:

"SEC. 205. Effective upon the first day of the first calendar month following the date of enactment of this act, the retired pay of any officer heretofore retired under the provisions of section 24b of the National Defense Act, as amended (41 Stat. 774, 10 U. S. C. 571), shall be computed at the rate of 2½ percent of the active duty annual base and longevity pay provided in the Pay Readjustment Act of 1942, as amended by the act of June 29, 1946 (Public Law 474, 79th Cong.), for an officer of corresponding grade who is credited with the same number of years of service for longevity purposes as the number with which such officer is credited multiplied by a number equal to the number of complete years of commissioned service and service which under the provisions of the National Defense Act, as amended, is counted as the equivalent of such commissioned service. The maximum retired pay of an officer retired prior to January 1, 1924, under the provisions of section 24b of the National Defense Act, as amended, shall not exceed 75 percent of the active duty annual base and longevity pay which he would receive if presently serving on active duty in the grade held by him at the time of his retirement, and the maximum retired pay of such an officer so retired after such date shall not exceed 60 percent of such active duty annual base and longevity pay."

The third paragraph of section 15 of the Pay Readjustment Act of 1942 (act of June 16, 1942, 56 Stat. 359), as amended, is hereby repealed.

Renumber subsequent sections of the bill correctly.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

JAMES E. WEBB

Mr. DOUGHTON of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. DOUGHTON of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I take this opportunity of congratulating President Truman and the country upon the appointment of Mr. James E. Webb, of North Carolina, to the position of Director of the Budget.

By ability, training, and experience, Mr. Webb possesses unusual as well as necessary qualifications for this high and responsible position. Mr. Webb has served as executive assistant to the Under Secretary of the Treasury, Hon. O. Max Gardner, since last March. Previous to that time and since reaching his majority he has held numerous responsible public and private positions which trained and equipped him in a very high degree for the duties that will rest upon him as Director of the Budget. I do not believe that the President could have found a better man had he made a diligent search of the entire country.

With Hon. John Snyder, himself a successful businessman, Secretary of the Treasury, and his able lieutenant, Hon. O. Max Gardner, as Under Secretary, who will have charge of tax matters, and Mr. Webb as Director of the Budget, I am sure that the finances of the country and its fiscal affairs will be conducted on a sound and practical basis. Governor Gardner, while chief executive of our State, demonstrated most unusual business ability, and has done the same in private business. So I feel that we can safely look forward with hope and confidence to an era of economy and efficiency in business practices of our Government if the Congress will cooperate.

THE LATE HONORABLE WALTER LEWIS HENSLEY

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CARNAHAN].

Mr. CARNAHAN. Mr. Speaker, I regret to announce to the membership of the House the passing of a former Member of this body, who represented the old Thirteenth Missouri Congressional District. The counties which composed that district are now a large part of the present Eighth District which I have the honor to represent.

Walter Lewis Hensley, son of Thomas J. and Emily E. Hensley, was born near Pevely, Jefferson County, Mo., September 3, 1871. He obtained his elementary and secondary education in the public schools of Jefferson County and later studied law at the University of Missouri, Columbia, Mo. In 1894, at the early age of 23, he was admitted to the bar and immediately took up commercial practice in Wayne County, Mo.

After 4 years of legal practice in Wayne County, he moved to Bonne Terre, Mo., where he served with distinction in the office of prosecuting attorney of St. Francois County from 1898 to 1902, leaving that position to continue the practice of his profession at Farmington, Mo. There he remained until 1911 when he was elected as a Democratic Representative of the old Thirteenth Congressional District of Missouri to the Sixty-second Congress.

By his splendid ability and initiative, Congressman Hensley was reelected to the Sixty-third, Sixty-fourth, and Sixty-fifth sessions of Congress, during which time he did outstanding work on the House Labor Committee, Naval Affairs Committee, and the Census Committee. At the conclusion of the Sixty-fifth Congress, he declined to seek reelection.

Turning away from his illustrious record in the Halls of Congress, he was honored with the appointment as United States district attorney and in this capacity he served from March 1919 to May 1920, resigning to resume private law practice in St. Louis, Mo.

The last 26 years of his life he devoted to his profession and his beautiful dairy farm near Pevely, Mo., where he spent many of his declining days. He died July 18, 1946, while on a sojourn in the State of Michigan.

Congressman Hensley was a friend to everyone, in all walks of life, and his cheery smile and friendly word of greeting will be missed by all who knew him. He was particularly kind and sympathetic to the humble, lowly, and unfortunate, and loved children. In times of distress or difficulty, he was always ready to help in any way he could, many times going out of his way to help or to accommodate those in need of assistance. He was a kind, loving, and devoted husband and father, and his greatest pride and joy was his home and family.

For myself and for his colleagues here in the House, I extend our deep sympathy to his family in their bereavement. And since death is as natural as birth, his family and friends should find consolation in the knowledge that death to Mr. Hensley was a fitting benediction to a life well spent and also an invocation to a glorious immortality.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Mr. GALLAGHER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may have an indefinite leave of absence in order to visit a member of my family who is ill.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection. .

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mrs. DOUGLAS of Illinois asked and was given permission to extend her remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. BARTLETT asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a newspaper article.

Mr. GRANAHAN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD on the OPA and also to extend his remarks on registration in Pennsylvania.

Mr. POWELL asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include certain excerpts of an address before the National Council of Negro Women.

Mr. POWELL asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include excerpts from a magazine article.

SURPLUS QUICKSILVER

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arizona?

There was no objection.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, as a member of the Colmer Committee on Postwar Economic Policy and Planning, I have, of course, been interested in all legislation suggested by that committee. One piece of legislation concerned disposal of surplus war property. I know it was the intent of Congress, when war property was declared surplus, to see that it was not sold by the purchasers at enormous profits, or that it was not brought into competition with American products.

I understand that about 9,000 flasks of quicksilver or mercury has been declared surplus in Europe. Instead of being channeled to the War Assets Administration to be stock piled as a necessary reserve for national defense, as it was supposed to be, I am told it has been disposed of for about one-third of our market price and may find its way back to this country, yielding great profits to the speculator, and not only that, but wrecking the price of the American product.

A great deal of quicksilver is developed in my State. The market now is weak. If several thousand flasks of quicksilver should be dumped on the American market, it would have a disastrous effect upon the domestic price. We now have a new law which covers such surplus war property needed for national defense, but I fear negligence has occurred on the part of someone in the meantime, according to my information.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Arizona has expired.

TOLL BRIDGE ACROSS MISSISSIPPI RIVER AT OR NEAR CAHOKIA, ILL.

Mr. CHAPMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 6004, an act to provide authorization for the village of Cahokia, Ill., to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Cahokia, Ill., and for other purposes, with Senate amendments, and agree to the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

Page 3, line 15, strike out "State" and insert "States."

Page 3, line 15, after "Illinois" insert "or Missouri."

Page 3, line 18, strike out "State" and insert "States."

Page 3, line 24, strike out "State" and insert "States."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CHAPMAN]?

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this bill has the approval of the House committee, has it?

Mr. CHAPMAN. It has.

Mr. MICHENER. There is nothing to it except these clarifying Senate amendments?

Mr. CHAPMAN. That is all.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendments were agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

VIOLENCE AND INTOLERANCE

Mr. POWELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. POWELL. Mr. Speaker, I take this opportunity to bring before the House and I hope before the conscience of our Nation what has just been reported to us by the Associated Press, that four American citizens on a public highway of this Nation during the early hours of this morning were massacred by a mob. Two of those people who were shot to death were women.

A few days ago a soldier of the United States Army in a neighboring State, with campaign ribbons on his chest and gold bars on his sleeve, 4 hours after being discharged honorably from the Army, was beaten and both of his eyes were gouged out by a representative of law and order.

A few weeks before that a section of a city of our Nation was completely destroyed not by a mob but by the forces of law and order with tommy guns at their disposal, destroying every place of business and every residence in that section.

I hope the Department of Justice will move on this as soon as possible. To that end I have today wired the Attorney General demanding immediate action.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the Judiciary may have until midnight tonight to file a report on the bill H. R. 7147.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. DOMENGEAUX asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD.

APPOINTMENT OF RESIDENT COMMISSIONER PIÑERO AS GOVERNOR OF PUERTO RICO

Mr. PRICE of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. PRICE of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I am exceedingly pleased with the announcement in today's newspapers of the appointment by President Truman of our distinguished friend and colleague, the Resident Commissioner for Puerto Rico, JESÚS T. PIÑERO, as the Governor of his home island.

Mr. PIÑERO becomes the first native Governor of Puerto Rico since United States troops landed on the island in 1898 during the Spanish-American War. All previous governors during American possession have been residents of the United States mainland.

The appointment is not only a singular honor to our esteemed friend, Mr. PIÑERO, who is exceedingly popular with the membership of this House and who is an outstanding leader among his own constituency, but is a tribute to the people of Puerto Rico.

Through this action President Truman lets it be known that he wants the Puerto Rican people to have a greater share in their own government. It is evidence that our Government believes that the people of the island are fully capable of administering their own governmental responsibilities.

Mr. PIÑERO, who is the leader of the popular Democratic Party in the island, is a native Puerto Rican. He was born there, at Carolina, on April 16, 1897. He attended the College of Liberal Arts, University of Puerto Rico, and after his early scholastic training in the island schools, completed his education in the School of Engineering, University of Pennsylvania.

I know of no one better equipped to handle this high and most important position that Mr. PIÑERO. He knows the economic problems of his island better than any other man, from practical experience and a lifetime of study. He has been active in the island's economic life, as well as in its political life. I am confident his appointment will lead to a new era in Puerto Rico and bring a better understanding between the great people of the island and their fellow countrymen on the mainland. If I had been asked to recommend a Governor who, in my opinion, could accomplish the most for Puerto Rico I would have unhesitatingly suggested the name of JESÚS T. PIÑERO, a fine man whom I know is going to make a great Governor.

We dislike losing Mr. PIÑERO's genial companionship in this House, but we are happy in this great honor which has come to him and to his people.

BOOKS FOR THE ADULT BLIND

Mr. O'TOOLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 6455) to amend the act entitled "An act to provide books for the adult blind."

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain the bill?

Mr. O'TOOLE. This bill provides $1,125,000 for talking books for the adult blind. Eighty percent of the adult blind are unable to master the Braille system of reading. These machines are loaned out by the Library of Congress to circulating libraries throughout the United States. Records are made of novels, historical books, and books of all kinds, and they, in turn, are loaned out to the blind.

There were 42,000 of these machines made in 1937. The major part of them are now worn out—in fact, they cannot be repaired. It is necessary not only to replace these 42,000 but an effort is being made to increase the number of machines by another 5,000, the demand is so great.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I may say that this is one piece of legislation with which I have been acquainted for several days. I know the committee has had thorough hearings on it and were unanimous in reporting it out. It is not in the classification about which I spoke earlier.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act of June 13, 1944 (58 Stat. 276), is amended to read as follows:

"That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated annually to the Library of Congress, in addition to appropriations otherwise made to said Library, $1,125,000, which sum shall be expended under the direction of the Librarian of Congress to provide books published either in raised characters, on sound-reproduction recordings, or in any other form, for the use of the adult blind residents of the United States, including the several States, Territories, insular possessions, and the District of Columbia: Provided, That of said annual appropriation of $1,125,000, not exceeding $200,000 thereof shall be expended for books in raised characters and the balance remaining shall be expended for sound-reproduction recordings and for the purchase, maintenance, and replacement of reproducers for these sound-reproduction recordings, all of which books, recordings, and reproducers will remain the property of the Library of Congress but will be loaned to blind readers under regulations prescribed by the Librarian of Congress for this service. In the purchase of books in either raised characters or in sound-reproduction recordings the Librarian of Congress, without reference to section 5 of title 41, United States Code, shall give preference to non-profit-making institutions or agencies whose activities are primarily concerned with the blind, in all cases where the prices or bids submitted by such institutions or agencies are, by said Librarian, under all the circumstances and needs involved, determined to be fair and reasonable.

SEC. 2. This act shall be applicable with respect to the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for each fiscal year thereafter.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL HOUSING ACT

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Clerk may read a short letter I received from the President of the United States and to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

JULY 25, 1946.

Hon. BRENT SPENCE,
Chairman, Committee on Banking and Currency, the House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I urge upon you and your committee the earliest practicable action on S. 1592, the General Housing Act of 1946, which is essential to the over-all housing program and particularly necessary at this time to make effective the veterans' emergency housing program.

The veterans' emergency housing program involves two equally important tasks: (1) to expedite the production of building materials and finished homes, which is being done under the Veterans' Emergency Housing Act of 1946, and (2) to make sure that these houses are made available in sufficient volume at sales prices or rentals which the majority of our veterans and their families can afford, which cannot be achieved without passage of S. 1592.

It is my considered judgment that S. 1592 is urgently needed. I am confident that if this bill reaches the floor the Congress, recognizing the need and the equity of adequate housing for the veteran, will pass the bill in question.

Time is of the essence. I therefore urge again the earliest practicable action on this matter by you and your committee.

Very sincerely yours,

HARRY S. TRUMAN.

Copies to Hon. JOHN W. MCCORMACK, Hon. SAM RAYBURN.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, the bill of which the President writes is known as the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill. It is nonpartisan, and, in my opinion, there is more general interest expressed in it than in any bill now pending before the Congress. This is not confined to any section of the country. The interest seems to be general throughout the United States. The imperative need of housing is apparent to all.

May I say as chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency that I have made every effort to conduct the hearings on this bill expeditiously but have met with so many dilatory motions that we have been unable to make much progress. The President says it is essential that the bill shall be reported and passed before the Congress adjourns.

I hope we may have the assistance of the Congress in that respect and that the bill will be reported and passed. We are going to hold hearings in the evenings until the end of the session. I trust the House will remain in session for a sufficient time for the bill to be reported and passed.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky has expired.

Mr. HEALY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. HEALY. Mr. Speaker, following the remarks of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE], chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency, I wish to advise the Members of the House that on yesterday I filed discharge petition No. 35 to discharge the Committee on Banking and Currency from further consideration of the bill S. 1592, otherwise known as the Wagner-Ellender-Taft Housing bill.

My sympathies are with the chairman of the committee. I have not introduced this petition to cast any reflection on the efforts of the chairman or the efforts of the other members of the committee, who have worked so diligently in trying to bring this bill out before the Congress adjourns for the summer.

I have placed this discharge petition on the Speaker's desk only as a last resort. If 218 Members of the House of Representatives will sign the petition, this general housing bill, which is so urgently needed to speed up the construction of new homes, can be brought to the floor of the House and passed before Congress adjourns for the summer.

I know that the Banking and Currency Committee held a hearing on the bill this morning and that it will meet again tonight and again tomorrow. That is fine, but I also know that the proponents have not yet concluded their testimony and that there are at least 35 opponents waiting to testify. These hearings cannot possibly be concluded prior to the date tentatively set for adjournment which is August 1. The Senate held lengthy hearings on this bill before passing it with a substantial majority and the volumes of testimony from these hearings are available to any Member who wants more information before voting on this bill. Further hearings by the House committee are unnecessary.

Mr. Speaker, if the Members of this House are sincerely interested in helping to solve our critical housing shortage, they will want this bill to pass before adjournment. Without this bill many veterans will go without badly needed housing. I realize that filing this petition at this late hour is a drastic move but we must have action. I plead with all interested Members to sign discharge petition No. 35 now.

AUTHORIZING CERTAIN ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES IN THE GOVERNMENT SERVICE

Mr. MANASCO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 6533) to authorize certain administrative expenses in the Government service, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments thereto, and concur in the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

Page 2, line 6, strike out "five" and insert "seven."

Page 2, line 7, strike out "six" and insert "eight."

Page 2, line 7, strike out "two" and insert "seven."

Page 8, line 12, strike out all after "or", down to and including "basis" in line 14, and insert "(4) when the services are required to be performed by the contractor in person and are (A) of a technical and professional nature or (B) under Government supervision and paid for on a time basis."

Page 8, line 14, after "Except", insert "(1)."

Page 8, line 16, strike out "or unless" and insert "(2) when."

Page 8, line 17, strike out all after "law", down to and including "$100" in line 20, and insert "or (3) when the reasonable value involved in any one case does not exceed $100, sales and contracts of sale by the Government shall be governed by the requirements of this section for advertising.

"(c) In the case of wholly owned Government corporations, this section shall apply to their administrative transactions only."

Page 10, line 8, after "use", insert "and to incur necessary expenses for the honorary recognition of exceptional or meritorious service."

Page 10, line 25, strike out "Effective July 1, 1946, all" and insert "All."

Page 11, line 9, after "(but", insert "as to agencies subject to the Classification Act."

Page 14, strike out all after line 19, over to and including line 2, on page 15, and insert:

"'Sections 1779 and 192, as amended, of the Revised Statutes (5 U. S. C. 102);'"

Page 15, line 20, strike out the comma and insert "and."

Page 16, line 1, after "Columbia", insert ", but shall not include the Senate, House of Representatives, or office of the Architect of the Capitol, or the officers or employees thereof."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain these Senate amendments?

Mr. MANASCO. Most of those amendments read by the Clerk are purely mechanical corrections. This bill was drawn by the General Accounting Office, the attorneys for the Bureau of the Budget, and the House Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments. The principal change in the bill as it passed the House and amended by the Senate was to except the Senate and House of Representatives and the Architect of the Capitol from the provisions of this act. We had no intention of placing the Architect of the Capitol under the provisions of this act, anyhow. It was done for administrative expense in the executive departments.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendments were concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. JOHNSON of California asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a newspaper article.

Mr. WILSON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

CANCER

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is their objection to the request of the gentleman from Nebraska?

There was no objection.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, this afternoon the House will consider a bill relating to cancer. We should give this our carefully considered attention. It is estimated by the Vital Statistics Department that one person dies every 3 minutes of cancer; 20 every hour. There are some 17,000,000 people now living who will die of cancer. One out of eight people die of cancer. If that ratio should be applied to the House of Representatives we could expect 60 or 70 Members in this Congress to die of cancer.

Cancer is the second killer in the United States; heart disease being first. In World War II about 300,000 people died of war injuries. From 1942 to 1944 the Vital Statistics Department says that more than 500,000 Americans died of cancer. So it is important to give careful consideration to this bill. I do feel that the bill should be amended to place the money and the work in the United States Public Health Service. It should not be under the direction of the President—it requires no new agencies.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. ELLIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

[Mr. ELLIS addressed the House. His remarks appear in the Appendix.]

FARM MACHINERY SHORTAGE

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Dakota?

There was no objection.

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Speaker, this morning I received a telegram from Mr. Oscar Forsheim, president of the South Dakota Farmers Union, calling attention to the serious farm machinery shortage out there in our bumper-crop area of America. Mr. Forsheim says this was caused in part due to the fact that the farm-equipment plants have been closed down by strike for some time, and calls on the President of the United States to take whatever action is necessary to get those plants open. I want to join with him in his request and suggestion. This appears to be one more good reason for passage of the President's emergency strike legislation, support for which the President now seems strangely but effectively to be discouraging.

Another thing the President of the United States can do, Mr. Speaker. In the Department of Agriculture's news letter for July 24 it quotes the International Harvester Co. as filing a request with the Civilian Production Administration for relief from the order requiring them to export 14,500 American-built tractors largely to Russian-dominated countries. The President can issue an order canceling these scheduled exports.

The American farmers need these tractors and they need this machinery. If the President of the United States will take action to get these strike-bound plants open or to take them over to get them operating, if that is necessary to produce essential farm machinery, and if this administration will stop exporting farm machinery abroad, we can harvest America's bumper crop and still further expand our program of contributions to the bread basket of the world.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. JUDD asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances and to include in each certain printed excerpts.

Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include certain newspaper excerpts.

WAGNER-ELLENDER-TAFT BILL

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, the chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency has just had the Clerk read a letter from the President in which the President urged the consideration by the House of the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill. Following the reading of this letter, the chairman of that committee, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE], made the statement that dilatory tactics had been used to prevent this committee from carrying on its work in connection with this bill. The facts are available to all who may be interested. No dilatory tactics have been used to prevent the committee from considering this bill. We are concluding a very busy session. Many of us feel that our attention ought to be given to the many and important legislative proposals that are being considered in the final rush.

Furthermore, this is the first time the President has said anything to the committee about this bill. I asked the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE], whether he had any previous information or instruction from the President respecting the urgency of consideration by the House of this measure prior to adjournment. He replied in the negative.

Why, if it so important that this measure be taken up before adjournment, has the President waited till this late hour to show particular concern in it?

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. JOHNSON of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks and include a letter from the War Department.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. JOHNSON of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, processors and distributors of milk and milk products supplying the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps have been supplying on period contracts and under competitive bidding.

Last month bids for contracts to begin June 17 and July 1 were predicated on the then prevailing Government subsidy of 2 cents per quart for milk. The demise of OPA on July 1 and the decontrol of dairy products in the new OPA law as of today place undue financial hardship on the dairy industry. Today I am introducing a resolution that seeks to provide proper legal steps to allow a just and reasonable renegotiation of these contracts.

Under leave by the Speaker, I include a letter from the Director of Service, Supply and Procurement for the Armed Forces, which is self-explanatory:

JULY 24, 1946.

Mr. B. F. CASTLE,
President, Milk Industry Foundation,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR Mr. CASTLE: This is with reference to your telephone conversation with Col. M. F. Hass on Tuesday morning, July 9, 1946, concerning certain Army contracts covering the procurement of milk. I understand, on the basis of that conversation, that certain suppliers who entered into contracts to furnish milk to the Army on a fixed-price basis desire a revision in their contract prices as the result of certain recent actions by the Office of Price Administration which have resulted in an increase in the price of milk.

I have had the matter looked into thoroughly, and I regret that there appears to be no legal authority which would permit the War Department, in the absence of adequate additional legal consideration, either to revise the contract prices upward or to cancel the contracts in question, as you suggested, and enter into new contracts with the suppliers upon the basis of revised prices. The procurement was effected and the contracts were awarded in the usual fashion and, once awarded and accepted by the contractors, are as binding upon the War Department as they are on the contractors except as the terms included in the contracts may permit other action. Accordingly, I regret that there would appear to be no basis upon which the War Department could justify action of the nature you suggested in your conversation with Colonel Hass.

Sincerely yours,

LER. LUTES,
Lieutenant General, GSC, Director of Service, Supply and Procurement.

HOUSING

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, somebody should tell the President the facts of life about housing. This Congress has voted $600,000,000 for veterans housing, and it is getting to be a joke in this Nation that there are houses started all over this country, and they lack roofs or they lack all sorts of things, so they cannot be finished. The reason is that they have started too much, and the OPA has held down the ceilings so that they cannot get parts, lumber, brick, and all the rest of the things they need. Instead of changing his OPA rules, the President comes in here and asks for a slum-clearance program to do more of the same damage.

HON. CLARENCE E. HANCOCK

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, I, for one, deeply regret that several of the most prominent and most valuable Members of this House have decided not to be candidates for reelection. I shall confine my remarks at the present time to one of my colleagues from New York State. I think I am well within the facts when I say that Representative CLARENCE E. HANCOCK, of the Thirty-sixth Congressional District of New York State, has been one of the most valuable Members of this House. He has been an active and highly useful member of the Committee on the Judiciary. His fine legal talents have meant much in formulating sound, constructive legislation not only for his district but for the great Empire State of New York and for the Nation as a whole. It is deeply regrettable that he has decided not to run again, but inasmuch as he has so decided I want him to know that, speaking for myself, and I believe for my delegation, we are proud of his record, and we wish him well in whatever activity he may engage from now on.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a letter.

Mr. GRAHAM asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include a short editorial from the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Mr. ROBERTSON of North Dakota asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances, in one to include a report from the committee on statements, policies, and principles of the North Central Association of Commissioners of Agriculture.

Mr. CHIPERFIELD asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD.

Mr. MATHEWS asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. PITTENGER asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD in three instances, in one to include a copy of a bill, in the second a letter which he received, and in the third a newspaper article and other material.

CANCER

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Speaker, I have listened with a great deal of interest to the remarks of our distinguished colleague the gentleman from Nebraska, Dr. MILLER, with reference to the bill which has been introduced by the distinguished gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY] on the subject of cancer. I hope before the House adjourns that that legislation is passed. I think it will be a monument that will stand for all time testifying to the foresight and statesmanship of the Members of this body.

The purpose of the bill is to further the study of cancer in an effort to discover means of curing and preventing this dread disease. The President of the United States is authorized to call into service the world's outstanding experts in connection with the efforts to find a method of treatment.

The bill has a favorable report from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, which report was submitted by the gentleman from New York, Congressman BLOOM, on July 18, and this report calls attention to the mortality rate of people who are afflicted with cancer. The figures are astounding and, in my opinion, Congress may well tackle the problem in an effort to continue constructive work now being done by other agencies.

Our distinguished colleague the gentleman from Nebraska, Dr. MILLER, has been a practicing physician of many years' standing and his remarks to which we listened a short time ago carry conviction. Coming from a man of his profession, I feel that we may well follow the endorsements that the gentleman from Nebraska, Congressman MILLER, has made of this program.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HALE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a letter from the head of the Maine Development Commission commenting on the end of price control in Maine.

TERMINAL LEAVE FOR ENLISTED MEN

Mr. GAVIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. GAVIN. Mr. Speaker, I note that the other body has recommended to the House that the terminal leave pay for GI's be paid in bonds which are nonnegotiable for a period of 5 years. They use as an argument that to pay cash on the barrel head would unbalance the budget. Now, is that not a very interesting observation? Who has been concerned around here with balancing the budget for the past few years? Recently we had the British loan before us for $3,750,000,000. Did you hear any talk about balancing the budget at that time? But when it comes to our own GI's, who deserve every consideration that a grateful Nation can bestow upon them, we hear talk about giving them nonnegotiable bonds instead of cash. I sincerely hope that when the proposal comes before the House it will be rejected.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

LICK YOUR PLATTER CLEAN

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Speaker, back in 1943, in April, I came into the well of the House one day and called the attention of the House and the country to the pending food shortage and I said that the least the individual could do was to lick his platter clean. A few people laughed about it. Emily Post finally said it would be good sense and judgment and patriotic. It made the Nation food-conscious. Many people began to save food. I am glad now that after 3 years the War Food Administration has taken up the slogan and is urging people Nation-wide on their posters to "lick your platter clean." If the people will lick their platters clean and offer a little consumer resistance, we will break down a lot of these high prices of food. Then our supplies will reach around, prices will adjust themselves, our economy will balance itself, and so will our budget. Thrift, economy, and production will answer about all of our problems.

AUTOMOBILES FOR AMPUTEES

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Speaker, I hope every Member of the House will vote for the bill giving cars to servicemen amputees to replace fully the ability of free movement that they used to have. By invitation as a former serviceman, I have spoken to the patients from Walter Reed and Forest Glen Hospitals, and I have had four amputees working in my congressional office this session, so I do know how hard it is for them to get around and use these crutches and legs that they have to put up with.

One of these servicemen working in my congressional office is Ervie Agatucci, who lost his leg in the Battle of the Bulge. Ervie is the son of Joe Agatucci, manager of the Bower Hill Club, and lives with his family several miles from a streetcar and a distance from a bus. I know he and many others need a car to give him back his independence, and these servicemen are entitled to it.

The United States should replace the abilities that those men have willingly given for the defense of their country. I do hope every Member will sign this petition and vote for the bill.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. REED of New York asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial.

Mr. ANGELL asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a short article.

Mr. ABERNETHY asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial from a Memphis newspaper.

Mr. WHITE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include certain excerpts.

BALANCING THE BUDGET

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, we have just heard our colleague from Pennsylvania talking about balancing the budget. I read in yesterday's RECORD where one of our colleagues made this statement: "Our budget is unbalanced, but we are in debt to no one. We have borrowed from ourselves."

I heard that statement made several years ago, but I do not think much of it.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I yield.

Mr. CURTIS. We may have borrowed from ourselves, but it has been rather in a fiduciary capacity. Men have gone to the penitentiary for that.

Mr. RICH. Yes; I understand there are a lot of them considered for that position in life, because they borrowed without the intention of paying it back. It seems to me if we borrow money we ought to try to pay it back as soon as we can. That is what we have to do with the national debt. If we are going to get this country on its feet we have got to stop spending.

Mr. Speaker, every day someone brings up some bill that takes millions and wants the Government to go into debt, more debt, lots of debt. The Nation is today in the poorest financial position it has ever been—the result of 13 years of New Deal. Will you ever come to your senses like sensible men should do? Stop all these unanimous-consent requests; block a lot of this legislation. We must do it or bust. If you do not stop squandering you will bust the Government and lose all—liberty, freedom, and honor.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

WAGNER-ELLENDER-TAFT BILL

Mr. BIEMILLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mr. BIEMILLER. Mr. Speaker, I am strongly in favor of the passage of the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill, and I take this time to ask the chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency if he will inform me what he meant by his reference a few minutes ago to dilatory tactics in the committee.

Mr. SPENCE. In the Banking and Currency Committee it has never been customary for members to make the point of order that the committee cannot hold hearings because the House was in session. It has never been the custom for members to make a point of no quorum, because frequently committees meet without a quorum being present. Those points of order have been constantly made. They have not been partisan, because Senator TAFT twice came before the committee and was prevented from continuing his testimony by members of his own party.

Mr. BIEMILLER. I thank the gentleman for his explanation. I want to say that I know the distinguished chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee has been endeavoring diligently to hold hearings and get action on the very important housing bill introduced under the bipartisan authorship of Senators WAGNER, ELLENDER, and TAFT. I hope that the Banking and Currency Committee will report the bill to the House before adjournment. I also recall that the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE] has asked permission to hold hearings on the bill during sessions of the House, but has been prevented by objections of Republican Members. I hope there will be no repetition of this practice.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has expired.

AUTOMOBILES FOR AMPUTEES

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Idaho?

There was no objection.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker, I recently signed the petition to bring before the House the bill to provide automobiles for the amputees. I do not think there is a man in this House who would be willing to give his leg or arm for 1 automobile or even 10 automobiles. Therefore I am in favor of this legislation.

At this point I ask unanimous consent to insert an editorial from the Washington Star on the subject of cars for amputees.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Idaho?

There was no objection.

(The editorial is as follows:)

CARS FOR AMPUTEES

There are many proposals being made these days in behalf of additional aid to war veterans, but few, if any, have the appeal of Representative EDITH NOURSE ROGERS' bill to provide amputees with automobiles at Government expense. That this is not just another bonus proposition in disguise is plain from a reading of the testimony which proponents of the measure gave before the House Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation. The Rogers bill is described by its sponsor and by many of its supporters among the ranks of disabled veterans as a proposal to extend the existing prosthetic program so as to supply legless or paralyzed combat veterans not only with artificial limbs and wheel chairs, but with means of automotive locomotion as well.

The amputees who testified in favor of the bill made out a most persuasive case. They pointed out that their rehabilitation would be greatly accelerated if they were provided with cars to offset their impaired mobility. They are severely handicapped when it comes to using streetcars, busses, and other public transportation facilities.

Under the bill, the Government would allow each veteran afflicted with such war-incurred disabilities the sum of $1,500 for the specific purpose of buying a specially equipped motor vehicle. It is estimated that from 16,000 to 20,000 crippled veterans are involved. These battle-scarred men deserve the special consideration which the Rogers bill would afford them. This bill would avoid having any semblance of a bonus flavor if use of the allowance were restricted, by specific wording of the legislation, to purchase of automobiles by the limited group of amputees and paraplegics who can actually make use of the cars. Thus narrowed, the measure would be strictly a prosthetics liberalization plan. As such, it deserves early and favorable consideration by Congress.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman withdraw that for a few moments?

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. If the chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency will consent, I will.

PERMISSION TO EXTEND REMARKS AT THIS POINT

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD and include a newspaper article from the New York

Post entitled "Hard Facts: Cancer Kills 20 an Hour."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

(The article referred to follows:)

THE HARD FACTS: CANCER KILLS 20 AN HOUR

WASHINGTON, July 23.—One American dies of cancer every 3 minutes, 20 every hour. Of the 135,000,000 Americans now living, 500,000 have cancer and 17,000,000 eventually will die of it. Which means: 1 of every 8 Americans living now will die of cancer.

Cancer deaths are increasing. In 1900 cancer was ninth on the list of killers. Now it's second. Only heart disease kills more people. About 175,000 people in this country die of cancer yearly.

In World War II about 273,000 Americans died in action. In the years 1942 through 1944 about 500,000 Americans died of cancer.

These figures come from sponsors of a bill, now in Congress, to have the Government put up $100,000,000 to fight cancer by searching for its cause and cure. The money would be spent over a number of years.

The bill does not mention any organization—private or governmental—as the one to receive the money and do the job. It would let President Truman set up a program for the cancer fight by calling on the world's cancer experts for help.

Congressional committees approved the bill. Now it is up to the full House and Senate to act.

The bill was introduced in the House by Representative NEELY (Democrat, West Virginia). A duplicate bill was offered in the Senate.

Sponsors of the bill emphasize that when this country wanted to find an atomic bomb it pooled its scientific brains and came up with a quick answer.

So they think this country's best brains should be pooled, with Government help, to lick cancer. But they warn that finding the cause of cancer will be a vastly harder job than creating an atomic bomb.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. IZAC (at the request of Mr. HAVENNER) was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include a digest of veterans' legislation.

Mr. KEARNEY asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

MRS. AGNES H. HARTMAN

Mr. ELLIOTT. Mr. Speaker, I submit a privileged resolution (H. Res. 744) from the Committee on Accounts and ask for its consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That there shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House to Mrs. Agnes H. Hartman, mother of Martena R. Ambrose, late an employee of the House, an amount equal to 6 months' salary at the rate she was receiving at the time of her death, and an additional amount not to exceed $250 toward defraying the funeral expenses of the said Martena R. Ambrose.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CARS FOR AMPUTEES

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, like many Members of Congress, I rather dislike the discharge-petition route of bringing a bill to the floor. However, I felt entirely justified in signing the petition to discharge the committee and bring before the House for consideration the bill which would give an automobile to amputees. I feel that by so doing we can at least in a small degree show our gratitude and appreciation to those fine American boys who have given so much in the defense of the country they love. I hope enough signatures will be added to the petition to bring the bill before the House for consideration and adoption before adjournment.

The primary purpose of every good veterans' organization is to see to it that their disabled buddies and the widows and orphans of their deceased buddies receive their just dues in every respect. Mr. Speaker, as you and all other Members of this House know, I have vigorously opposed, with some success, the needless spending of millions—yes, billions of dollars—requested by the great bureaucratic spenders and wasters, but no one will ever have cause to say I practiced economy on our disabled veterans.

DEVELOPMENT AND CONTROL OF ATOMIC ENERGY—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (S. 1717) for the development and control of atomic energy and ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1717) for the development and control of atomic energy, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its amendments numbered 1, 19, 25, 28, 30, 32, 34, 37, 43, 44, 45, 47, 49, 52, 53, 56, 59, 60, 61, 62, 64, 65, 66, and 67.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the House numbered 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 11, 12, 15, 16, 17, 18, 21, 22, 23, 26, 27, 36, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 46, 50, 54, 55, 57, 58, 63, 68, 69, 70, and 71, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 3: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following:

"(d) Appointment of Army and Navy Officers.—Notwithstanding the provisions of section 1222 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., 1940 edition, title 10, sec. 576), section 212 of the Act entitled 'An act making appropriations for the Legislative Branch of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933, and for other purposes', approved June 30, 1932, as amended (U. S. C., 1940 edition, title 5, sec. 59a), section 2 of the Act entitled 'An Act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, and for other purposes', approved July 31, 1894, as amended (U. S. C., 1940 edition, title 5, sec. 62), or any other law, any active or retired officer of the Army or the Navy may serve as Director of the Division of Military Application established by subsection (a)(4)(B) of this section, without prejudice to his commissioned status as such officer. Any such officer serving as Director of the Division of Military Application shall receive, in addition to his pay from the United States as such officer, an amount equal to the difference between such pay and the compensation prescribed in subsection (a)(4)(B) of this section."

And the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 10: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 10, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following: "subject to valid claims, rights, or privileges existing on the date of the enactment of this Act"; and the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 13: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 13, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following: ", if such individual, corporation, partnership, or association, by reason of having had such part in the development of the atomic bomb project, acquired confidential official information as to the existence of deposits of such uranium, thorium, or other materials in the specific lands upon which such location, entry, or settlement is made, and subsequent to the date of the enactment of this Act made such location, entry, or settlement or caused the same to be made for his, its, or their benefit"; and the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 14: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 14, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following:

"The Commission shall not—

"(1) Distribute any fissionable material to (A) any person for a use which is not under or within the jurisdiction of the United States, (B) any foreign government, or (C) any person within the United States if, in the opinion of the Commission, the distribution of such fissionable material to such person would be inimical to the common defense and security.

"(2) License any person to transfer or deliver, receive possession of or title to, or export from the United States any source material if, in the opinion of the Commission, the issuance of a license to such person for such purpose would be inimical to the common defense and security."

And the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 20: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 20, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the House amendment strike out in the Senate engrossed bill on page 25, line 12, the following: "not to exceed one year,"; and the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 24: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 24, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be stricken out by the House amendment insert the following:

"(1) That until Congress declares by joint resolution that effective and enforceable international safeguards against the use of atomic energy for destructive purposes have been established, there shall be no exchange of information with other nations with respect to the use of atomic energy for industrial purposes; and"

And the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 29: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 29, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following: "death or imprisonment for life (but the penalty of death or imprisonment for life may be imposed only upon recommendation of the jury and only in cases where the offense was committed with intent to injure the United States); or by"; and the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 31: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 31, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following: "death or imprisonment for life (but the penalty of death or imprisonment for life may be imposed only upon recommendation of the jury and only in cases where the offense was committed with intent to injure the United States); or by"; and the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 33: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 33, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following: "death or imprisonment for life (but the penalty of death or imprisonment for life may be imposed only upon recommendation of the jury and only in cases where the offense was committed with intent to injure the United States); or by"; and the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 35: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 35, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following:

"(5) (A) No person shall be prosecuted for any violation under this section unless and until the Attorney General of the United States has advised the Commission with respect to such prosecution and no such prosecution shall be commenced except upon the express direction of the Attorney General of the United States.

"(B) (i) No arrangement shall be made under section 3, no contract shall be made or continued in effect under section 4, and no license shall be issued under section 4 (c) or 7, unless the person with whom such arrangement is made, the contractor or prospective contractor, or the prospective licensee agrees in writing not to permit any individual to have access to restricted data until the Federal Bureau of Investigation shall have made an investigation and report to the Commission on the character, associations, and loyalty of such individual and the Commission shall have determined that permitting such person to have access to restricted data will not endanger the common defense or security.

"(ii) Except as authorized by the Commission in case of emergency, no individual shall be employed by the Commission until the Federal Bureau of Investigation shall have made an investigation and report to the Commission on the character, associations, and loyalty of such individual.

"(iii) Notwithstanding the provisions of subparagraphs (i) and (ii), during such period of time after the enactment of this Act as may be necessary to make the investigation, report, and determination required by such paragraphs, (a) any individual who was permitted access to restricted data by the Manhattan Engineer District may be permitted access to restricted data and (b) the Commission may employ any individual who was employed by the Manhattan Engineer District.

"(iv) To protect against the unlawful dissemination of restricted data and to safeguard facilities, equipment, materials, and other property of the Commission, the President shall have authority to utilize the services of any Government agency to the extent he may deem necessary or desirable.

"(C) All violations of this Act shall be investigated by the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice."

And the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 48: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 48, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following: "death or imprisonment for life (but the penalty of death or imprisonment for life may be imposed only upon recommendation of the jury and only in cases where the offense was committed with intent to injure the United States); or by"; and the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 51: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 51, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be stricken out by the House amendment insert the following: ", or of any regulation or order prescribed or issued under sections 5 (b) (4), 10 (c), or 12 (a) (2),"; and the House agree to the same.

A. J. MAY,
R. EWING THOMASON,
CARL T. DURHAM,
CHARLES R. CLASON,
Managers on the Part of the House.

BRIEN MCMAHON,
ED C. JOHNSON,
RICHARD RUSSELL,
ARTHUR VANDENBERG,
E. D. MILLIKIN,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1717) for the development and control of atomic energy, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

Amendment No. 1: The House amendment required at least one member of the Atomic Energy Commission to be a member of the armed forces. The House recedes.

Amendment No. 2: The House amendment requires that the Director of the Division of Military Application be a member of the armed forces. The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 3: This amendment would permit not to exceed two active or retired officers of the Army or Navy to serve at any one time as members of the Commission, and one such officer to serve as the Director of the Division of Military Application, without prejudice to their status as such officers. The Senate recedes with an amendment which limits the application of this provision to the officer serving as Director of the Division of Military Application.

Amendment No. 4: The Senate bill authorized and directed the Commission to make arrangements (including contracts, agreements, grants-in-aid, and loans) for the conduct of research and development activities. This amendment strikes out the words "grants-in-aid." The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 5: The bill as it passed the Senate provided that the Commission shall be the exclusive owner of certain facilities for the production of fissionable material. This amendment inserts after the word "Commission" the words "as agent of and on behalf of the United States." The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 6: This amendment would permit the Commission to authorize its contractors to enter into subcontracts. The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 7: Under this amendment it is made clear that persons lawfully producing or utilizing fissionable material may expose materials of any kind to the radiation incident to the processes of producing or utilizing fissionable material. The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 8: This amendment makes it clear that the authority of the Commission to distribute fissionable material relates to material owned by it. The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 9: This amendment makes it clear that licenses are required for the exportation of source material from the United States. The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 10: This amendment struck out the Senate language which excepted existing or inchoate rights and privileges from the reservation for the use of the United States of source materials in deposits in the public lands, and substituted a provision that such reservation should be subject to valid claims existing on the date of the enactment of the act. The Senate recedes with an amendment which modifies the House provision so as to provide that the reservation for the use of the United States shall be subject to valid claims, rights, or privileges existing on the date of enactment of the act.

Amendments Nos. 11 and 12: These are technical amendments substituting the word "individual" for the word "person", and the Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 13: The Senate bill provided that no person, corporation, partnership, or association which had any part in the development of the atomic-bomb project may benefit by any location, entry, or settlement upon the public domain made after having taken such part in such project. This amendment of the House modified this prohibition so as to make it inapplicable if the benefit was authorized by the Commission. The Senate recedes with an amendment which provides that the prohibition will apply only in cases where, by reason of having taken part in the atomic-bomb project, confidential official information was acquired as to the existence of deposits of source materials in the specific lands upon which the location, entry, or settlement is made, and only in cases where the location, entry, or settlement is made subsequent to the date of the enactment of this act.

Amendment No. 14: This amendment has three purposes. First, to prohibit the Commission from distributing any fissionable material to any person within the United States if, in the opinion of the Commission, the distribution of such fissionable material to such person would be inimical to the common defense and security. Second, to clarify the Commission's authority with respect to source material. Third, to prohibit the Commission from licensing any person to transfer or deliver, receive possession of or title to, or export from the United States any source material if, in the opinion of the Commission, the issuance of a license to such person for such purpose would be inimical to the common defense and security. The Senate recedes with an amendment to correct the numbering and lettering of the subsection.

Amendment No. 15: This amendment strikes out provisions requiring the Commission to establish by regulation a procedure by which any person who is dissatisfied with the distribution or refusal to distribute to him, or the recall from him, of any fissionable or byproduct materials or with the issuance, refusal, or revocation of a license to him for the transfer or receipt of source materials may obtain a review of such determination by a board of appeal consisting of three members appointed by the Commission. The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 16: This is a clerical amendment. The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 17: Under this amendment the President from time to time may direct the Commission to deliver such quantities of fissionable materials to the armed forces for such use as he deems necessary in the interest of national defense. The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 18: Under this amendment the President from time to time may direct the Commission to authorize the armed forces to manufacture, produce, or acquire any equipment or device utilizing fissionable material or atomic energy as a military weapon. The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 19: This amendment excepted activities authorized by the Commission under section 6 (a) from the prohibition contained in section 6 (b) against manufacturing, producing, transferring, or acquiring equipment or devices utilizing fissionable material or atomic energy as a military weapon. Since the Senate bill already excepts from this prohibition all activities authorized by the Commission, this amendment merely duplicated in part the exception in the Senate bill and, consequently, is unnecessary. The House recedes.

Amendment No. 20: This amendment, as agreed to in conference, provides that licenses authorizing certain activities with respect to fissionable material or atomic energy shall be issued for a specified period, shall be revocable at any time by the Commission in accordance with such procedures as the Commission may establish, and may be renewed upon expiration of such period. The bill as it passed the Senate provided that licenses could not be issued for a period to exceed 1 year. The House amendment provided that such licenses could not be issued for a period of less than 1 year.

Amendment No. 21: This is a clerical amendment. The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 22: This amendment provides that no license relating to the utilization of atomic energy may be given to any person within the United States if, in the opinion of the Commission, the issuance of a license to such person would be inimical to common defense and security. The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 23: This amendment makes clear that the definition of "international arrangement" includes only an international agreement approved by the Congress after the Atomic Energy Act of 1946 becomes law. The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 24: This amendment, as agreed to in conference, is a statement of principle to be followed by the Commission that until Congress declares by joint resolution that effective and enforceable international safeguards against the use of atomic energy for destructive purposes have been established there shall be no exchange of information with other nations with respect to the use of atomic energy for industrial purposes. The House amendment proposed to strike out the statement of principle in the bill as it passed the Senate that such information should be shared with other nations on a reciprocal basis as soon as the Congress declares by joint resolution that such safeguards have been established.

Amendment No. 25: This amendment relates to the numbering of a paragraph, and the House recedes.

Amendment No. 26: This amendment struck out the provision of the Senate bill which specifically authorized and directed the Commission to establish information services, publications, libraries, and other registers of information. The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 27: This amendment relates to the lettering of a subsection. The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 28: This amendment would have required a unanimous vote of the Commission for it to determine that any data could be published without adversely affecting the common defense and security. The House recedes.

Amendments Nos. 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 48, and 49: These amendments provided that the death penalty might be imposed upon persons convicted of violating certain provisions of the act, with intent to injure the United States or with intent to secure an advantage to any foreign nation, and provided that the minimum term of imprisonment for persons convicted of such violations should be 10 years. The conference agreement provides that the penalty of death or imprisonment for life may be imposed, but only upon the recommendation of the jury and only in the case of offenses committed with intent to injure the United States. The provisions for minimum terms of imprisonment of 10 years are eliminated.

Amendment No. 35: The bill as it passed the Senate provided that no person shall be prosecuted for any violation of the provisions relating to restricted data unless and until the Attorney General has advised and consulted with the Commission with respect to such prosecution.

The House amendment struck out the Senate provision and provided that the Commission shall make no contract under section 3 or 4, issue no license to any person, nor employ any person until the Federal Bureau of Investigation shall have first made an investigation of the character and associations of such person and certified that the character of such contractor, licensee, or employee is such as not to endanger the common defense or security.

The Senate recedes with an amendment which provides that (1) no person shall be prosecuted for any violation under this section unless and until the Attorney General of the United States has advised the Commission with respect to such prosecution and no such prosecution shall be commenced except upon the express direction of the Attorney General of the United States; (2) no arrangement shall be made under section 3, no contract shall be made or continued in effect under section 4, and no license shall be issued under section 4 (e) or 7, unless the person dealing with the Commission agrees in writing not to permit any individual to have access to restricted data until the Federal Bureau of Investigation shall have made an investigation and report to the Commission on the character, associations, and loyalty of such individual and the Commission shall have determined that permitting such person to have access to restricted data will not endanger the common defense or security; (3) except as authorized by the Commission in case of emergency, no individual shall be employed by the Commission until the Federal Bureau of Investigation shall have made an investigation and report to the Commission on the character, associations, and loyalty of such individual; (4) during such period of time after the enactment of this act as may be necessary to make such investigation, report, and determination, individuals who were permitted access to restricted data by the Manhattan Engineer District may be permitted access to restricted data and the Commission may employ individuals who were employed by the Manhattan Engineer District; (5) to protect against the unlawful dissemination of restricted data and to safeguard facilities, equipment, materials, and other property of the Commission, the President shall have authority to utilize the services of any Government agency to the extent he may deem necessary or desirable, and (6) all violations of this act shall be investigated by the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice.

Amendment No. 36: This is a clerical amendment and the Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 37: The Senate bill provided that no patent should be granted after the date of enactment of the act for any invention or discovery which is useful solely in the production of fissionable material or in the utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy for a military weapon and provided for the revocation of any patent previously issued for any such invention or discovery and payment of just compensation to the owner of the patent. The Senate bill further provided (1) that no patent granted after the date of enactment of the act should confer any rights with respect to any invention or discovery to the extent that it is used in the production of fissionable material, the utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy for a military weapon, or the conduct of research or development activities in the atomic energy field; and (2) that any rights conferred by any patent previously issued should be revoked to the extent that the invention or discovery should be so used and that just compensation should be made for the revocation of rights. The House amendment contained no provisions comparable to the above-described provisions of the Senate bill.

The Senate bill provided that any person who has made or may make an invention or discovery useful in the production of fissionable material or in the utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy for a military weapon should make a report to the Commission within a limited period of time describing such invention or discovery, unless it is described in an application for patent filed in the Patent Office within such period of time. The House amendment contained a similar provision requiring reports to the Commission with respect to inventions and discoveries, but such provision was applicable only to inventions or discoveries "utilizing fissionable materials or atomic energy designed or especially adapted for use as or in a military weapon."

The Senate bill placed a duty on the Commission to declare any patent to be affected with the public interest if (1) the invention or discovery covered by the patent utilizes or is essential in the utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy, and (2) the use of such invention or discovery by persons having licenses for the utilization of atomic energy is necessary to effectuate the policies and purposes of the act. In any case in which a patent should be declared to be affected with the public interest the Commission would be licensed to use the invention or discovery and persons having licenses from the Commission for the utilization of atomic energy would be licensed to use it to the extent necessary in carrying on their activities licensed by the Commission. The owner of the patent would be entitled to a reasonable royalty fee for the use of the invention or discovery, the fee to be agreed upon by the owner and the licensee or to be fixed by the Commission in the absence of an agreement. The Senate bill contained appropriate provisions preventing court proceedings to stay, restrain, or enjoin the use of inventions or discoveries licensed under the provisions of the bill and to provide for the collection through court proceedings of royalty fees for the use of inventions or discoveries so licensed. The House amendment contained no provisions comparable to those described in this paragraph.

The Senate bill authorized the Commission to purchase, or to take, requisition, or condemn, and make just compensation for (1) any invention or discovery which is useful in the production of fissionable material or in the utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy for a military weapon, or which utilizes or is essential in the utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy, or (2) any patent or patent application covering any such invention or discovery. The bill required the Commissioner of Patents to notify the Commission of, and to provide it access to, all applications for patents which in his opinion disclose such inventions or discoveries. The House amendment authorized the Commission to purchase, for the manufacture or use by or for the United States Government, any and all rights in and to any invention or discovery, or application for patent or patent thereon, relating to research on or the production of fissionable material or the utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy. The House amendment authorized the Commission to condemn any or all rights to any such invention or discovery which affects the national defense and security, but provided that whenever the Commission determined that the national defense or security were no longer involved any and all rights in such invention or discovery would revert to the owner, subject to a nonexclusive, irrevocable, and nontransferable license in favor of the Government.

The House amendment provided that any person making an invention or discovery relating to research on or the production of fissionable material or the utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy should, upon filing an application for a patent thereon and tendering the invention or discovery to the United States for its use, have the right to sue the United States for compensation for the use of such invention or discovery in the event he should ultimately receive a patent thereon. The Commission was authorized to make an agreement with the inventor in settlement for the use of his invention by the Government. The Senate bill contained no comparable provisions to those described in this paragraph.

The Senate bill provided for the designation by the Commission of a Patent Compensation Board, consisting of two or more employees of the Commission, to consider applications filed with the Commission for (1) the determination of reasonable royalty fees in connection with patents declared to be affected with the public interest and licensed for use by persons having atomic energy utilization licenses from the Commission, (2) the payment of just compensation for patents and patent rights revoked under the Senate bill, and (3) the grant of awards by the Commission to persons making inventions or discoveries useful solely, or among other purposes, for the production of fissionable material or the utilization of fissionable material or atomic energy for a military weapon. The bill provided that in fixing royalty fees the Commission should take into consideration any defense, general or special, that might be pleaded by a defendant in an action for infringement, the extent to which, if any, the patent was developed through federally financed research, the degree of utility, novelty, and importance of the invention or discovery, and might take into consideration the cost to the owner of the patent of developing the invention or discovery or acquiring the patent. The bill provided that the Commission, in connection with applications for just compensation and awards, should take into account the same factors considered by it in fixing royalty fees, and also the actual use of the invention or discovery. The Senate bill provided that any person aggrieved by a Commission determination upon an application for an award or the fixing of a reasonable royalty fee might obtain a review thereof in the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. The House amendment contained no provisions with respect to the fixing of royalty fees or the payment of awards to inventors.

The House amendment provided that persons dissatisfied with Commission determinations as to just compensation for inventions or discoveries condemned, or tendered to and used, by the Commission should have the right to maintain suit in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia for the purpose of determining the just compensation to be paid. The amendment further provided for an appeal to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia from the decision of the district court. The section of the Senate bill relating to patents contained no specific provisions with respect to judicial determination of just compensation for patents and patent rights revoked by the section or taken, requisitioned, or condemned by the Commission. Section 11 of the Senate bill provided, however, for suit in the Court of Claims in the event the person entitled to just compensation should be dissatisfied with the determination of the Commission.

The House recedes on this amendment.

Amendment No. 38: This amendment struck out the provision authorizing attorneys appointed by the Commission to appear for and represent the Commission in any case in any court. The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 39: This amendment struck out the provisions which waived certain general restrictions of law in the expenditure of funds for the purposes specified in section 10 (b). Since amendment No. 26 struck out section 10 (b), this provision is no longer appropriate. The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 40: This is a clerical amendment and the Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 41: This amendment provides that section 10 of the Administrative Procedure Act should be applicable with respect to agency actions of the Commission immediately upon the enactment of this act and provided that this act should not be held to supersede or modify the Administrative Procedure Act. The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 42: This is a clerical amendment and the Senate recedes.

Amendments Nos. 43, 44, and 45: These amendments increased from 9 to 11 the number of Members from each House who would be members of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, and increased from 5 to 6 the number of Members from each House who might be members of the same political party. The House recedes.

Amendment No. 46: This is a clerical amendment, and the Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 47: This amendment made the heavier criminal penalties provided in subsection (a) of the enforcement section, rather than the lighter penalties under subsection (b), applicable in the case of violations of the act arising out of the failure to report certain inventions and discoveries to the Commission. The House recedes.

Amendment No. 50: This is a clerical amendment, and the Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 51: This amendment eliminated from the bill the provisions which would have provided criminal penalties for violations of regulations or orders issued under specified sections of the act. The Senate recedes with an amendment which restores the provision with a clerical change correcting a cross reference.

Amendments Nos. 52 and 53: These amendments, like some of those referred to above, provided that the death penalty might be imposed upon persons convicted of violating certain provisions of the act, with the intent to injure the United States or to secure an advantage to any foreign nation, and provided that the minimum term of imprisonment for persons convicted of such violations should be 10 years. As the offenses to which these amendments were applicable are likely to be of a less serious nature than the other offenses to which the heavy penalties were made applicable, these penalties were deemed to be excessive in these cases and the House recedes.

Amendments Nos. 54 and 55: These amendments modified the provision relating to enjoining violations of the act or regulations or orders thereunder, so that instead of providing, as did the Senate bill, that upon a showing by the Commission that a person has engaged or is about to engage in such a violation an injunction, restraining order, or other order shall be granted without bond, it will provide that upon such a showing an injunction, restraining order, or other order may be granted. The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 56: This amendment provided that all persons associated in any capacity with the control and development of atomic energy under the Commission, and all violations of this act, should be investigated by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. As the subject matter of this amendment is dealt with in connection with amendment No. 35, the House recedes on this amendment.

Amendments Nos. 57 and 58: These are clerical amendments, and the Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 59: The amendment inserted a definition of the term "nuclear fission". The House recedes.

Amendments Nos. 60, 61, and 62: These are clerical amendments, and the House recedes.

Amendment No. 63: This is a technical amendment, and the Senate recedes.

Amendments Nos. 64, 65, and 66: These are clerical amendments and the House recedes.

Amendment No. 67: The bill as it passed the Senate defined the term "facilities for the production of fissionable material" so as to include any equipment or device capable of such production. This amendment limited the term to any equipment or device peculiarly adopted for and capable of such production. The House recedes.

Amendment No. 68: This is a clerical amendment and the Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 69: This amendment struck out a provision transferring funds available for expenditure in connection with the Manhattan Engineer District to the Commission for expenditure for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the act. The Senate recedes.

Amendments Nos. 70 and 71: These are clerical amendments, and the Senate recedes.

A. J. MAY,
R. EWING THOMASON,
CARL T. DURHAM,
CHARLES R. CLASON,
Managers on the Part of the House.

CALL OF THE HOUSE

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently no quorum is present.

Mr. McCORMACK. I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 238]

Adams	Buffett	Eaton
Allen, Ill.	Bunker	Elston
Allen, La.	Butler	Engel, Mich.
Almond	Cannon, Mo.	Fellows
Anderson, Calif.	Carlson	Gary
Andrews, N. Y.	Chenoweth	Gathings
Bailey	Clements	Gillespie
Baldwin, Md.	Clippinger	Gossett
Baldwin, N. Y.	Cochran	Halleck
Barry	Coffee	Hare
Bates, Ky.	Cole, Kans.	Hart
Bates, Mass.	Combs	Hébert
Beckworth	Cooper	Heffernan
Bell	Courtney	Hendricks
Bender	Cox	Hess
Bennet, N. Y.	Cravens	Hill
Bland	Crawford	Holifield
Boren	Curley	Izac
Boykin	Daughton, Va.	Jennings
Bradley, Mich.	Dawson	Johnson, Ill.
Brooks	Delaney,	Johnson, Okla.
Bryson	John J.	Johnson, Tex.
Buckley	Earthman	Keefe

Kefauver	Norton	Short
Keogh	O'Konski	Simpson, Pa.
Kerr	Patrick	Slaughter
Kilburn	Peterson, Ga.	Somers, N. Y.
Kilday	Pfeifer	Sparkman
Landis	Powell	Starkey
Latham	Priest	Stewart
Ludlow	Rayfiel	Stockman
McGehee	Reece, Tenn.	Tolan
McKenzie	Rees, Kans.	Torrens
Mc Millan, S. C.	Robertson, Va.	Wasielewski
Mahon	Robinson, Utah	Weaver
Maloney	Robsion, Ky.	Weichel
Mankin	Rockwell	Welch
Mansfield, Mont.	Roe, N. Y.	West
	Russell	Wickersham
Mansfield, Tex.	Ryter	Winter
Merrow	Sadowski	Wolfenden, Pa.
Miller, Calif.	Shafer	Wood
Morrison	Sheridan

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SHEPPARD). On this roll call 305 Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

By unanimous consent, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

ATOMIC ENERGY ACT OF 1946

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. THOMASON] is recognized.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, in my judgment your conferees have brought back to you a very splendid report. It bears the signature of all of the Senators and of all the House conferees except my distinguished friend the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. THOMAS].

The conference was in session for the greater part of 3 days and every section of both the Senate and the House bills was given very careful and I may say judicious consideration. I think it is the almost unanimous opinion of the conferees that the subject is so big and so important that legislation, provided it is reasonable in its terms, is absolutely necessary, in view of our national and international situation.

It should not be forgotten that the President urged some legislation on this subject just as soon as possible. It should not be forgotten that the Secretary of State urged action in view of our proposed international agreements. It is my opinion that there must be some solution to the domestic control of atomic energy before we can move into the international field.

What I shall say will be very brief, and then I will yield to members of the committee who desire time. To get right down to the report, I may say that with the exception of two big questions, the Senate receded on practically every amendment. If you will look at the report you will find amendment after amendment, which was adopted by the House, readily accepted by the Senate conferees.

I may say that the conferees on the part of the Senate, composed of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MCMAHON], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG], the very able and, in my judgment after hearing him, the great lawyer, the Senator from Colorado [Mr. MILLIKIN], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. JOHNSON], and the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL], had the same objective as all of us, and that is to do something to get this fissionable material that we hear so much about, and the things that go into making not only atomic bombs but the things we hope will go into peacetime articles under control in this country just as soon as possible. Congress in all its history never had to deal with a more important problem. About it hinges the question of war or peace, and also the matter of destruction or survival. If put to proper and peacetime use, atomic energy, I predict, will become the greatest boon to humanity in all history.

Mr. ARENDS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMASON. I yield.

Mr. ARENDS. Is it not true that on two major provisions in this bill the House receded to the Senate? One was having a military man on the Commission, the other was the patents provision.

Mr. THOMASON. I will explain that as fully as I can. The first one, of course, is this very controversial question as to whether or not anybody from the armed forces should be on the Commission proper. It will be recalled that the amendment that was adopted in the House provided that there must be at least one, and that two were permissible. If you will recall, a little later in the same military section of the bill there is a provision that the Director of Military Application should be a member of the armed forces. That amendment was offered in the House and adopted by the Senate.

The compromise—and that is why we have conference committees—was that the Senate was willing to accept the amendment that the Director of Military Application, the man who is going to make the bombs if any are to be made, or to put atomic energy to military purposes if that is to be done, should be a member of the armed forces. That, as I tried to say the other day, I think is in keeping with our tradition, because the Director of Military Application is not going to be a policy maker. The Senate stood firm, however, and opposed, as did three of the House conferees, that there should be an Army or Navy man on this policy-making committee, the Commission itself. There would be just as good argument to have a general Secretary of War or an admiral as Secretary of the Navy, or that the man in the White House is not to be a civilian, because that has been the policy of our Government from the beginning.

And I might say in this connection that after we met last evening on the report and after it was drafted and put into final form, in order to make assurance doubly sure and to bring some kind of definite information back to this House, I had this report submitted early this morning to none other than the Chief of Staff, General Eisenhower, and asked him to read it over and give me his frank opinion so I would have it for my own satisfaction and to transmit to you if you were interested. About 2 hours after I had submitted the report General Eisenhower called me in person over the phone and told me what he had already told Senator VANDENBERG, and that was that the Army did not want a member of the armed forces on the Commission; and that in view of the Vandenberg amendment he and the War Department were entirely satisfied with the conclusions reached by the conferees and he hoped for the adoption of the conference report. So now the Director of Military Application remains an Army officer and the Vandenberg amendment provides that any representative of the War or Navy Departments, even the Chief of Staff, the Secretary of War, or the Secretary of the Navy or any military persons whom they delegate, shall attend the sessions of the Commission and keep in close touch and be fully informed of everything that goes on in the sessions of the Commission and if they are not satisfied they file their protests with the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy. If they are still dissatisfied they appeal to the Commander in Chief of the United States Army, who is none other than the President. You have got to trust somebody, and all of us have confidence in the honesty and patriotism of these high officials.

I only wish I had the ability and facility of expression so that I could repeat to you the argument Senator VANDENBERG, made in support of this report. He said in view of the military liaison amendment that he had insisted on he felt this arrangement was the best that could possibly be worked out, not only to protect the secrecy of the bomb but also to give us the best national security. I might also add that it was his statement that in the beginning of the consideration of this legislation he stood firm that the armed forces must be represented. I would like for you to look at the personnel of that committee again. I just do not believe you could have a greater committee appointed to consider a matter of this great importance than the Members that constituted the special Atomic Energy Committee, because there were men on it like Senator MCMAHON, Senator MILLIKIN, and Senator VANDENBERG. There was also Senator HART, formerly an admiral in the Navy for many years and with a distinguished record. After 5 months of hearings, comprising four printed volumes and the examination of 110 of the outstanding scientists, military men and industrialists of this Nation that committee unanimously reached the conclusion that it did on this important legislation.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMASON. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DONDERO. What was done by the conferees in regard to the amendment which provided for screening by the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the personnel?

Mr. THOMASON. I will come to that.

Before we get down to the last and perhaps the biggest controversial issue left in the bill, may I say that after we compromised this issue on whether it was necessary to have a member of the armed forces on the Commission, which is purely a civilian affair, we did provide that there must be a member of the armed forces as director of military application. We then got down to such problems as mentioned by the gentleman from Michigan regarding investigation of all these men by the FBI.

A careful analysis of the report will disclose that the House amendment is still in the bill substantially in the same form it left the House except for one thing. The FBI screens all of these employees, especially those having to do with what might be termed the secrets and those having anything to do with critical material, but the FBI does not do the certifying. The unanimous conclusion of the conferees, I think, was that while the FBI does a very splendid and valuable work in matters of investigation and things of that sort, yet we do not want to set the Bureau up as a kind of employment agency where they have to certify employees. However, you will find in the report where there must be a full and complete investigation by the FBI and they, in turn, submit the facts to the Commission. The conferees thought, therefore, that if the FBI furnishes the facts to the Commission that would be sufficient and, of course, we must assume that the President is going to appoint some outstanding men on this Commission. He must accompany their nominations with their qualifications to the Senate before confirmation. We direct that FBI must investigate, but we do not give them the authority to certify the names of the people who should be employed.

Another thing in that same connection, is this matter of the death penalty. That, like the FBI amendment, is substantially retained in the report, except the committee thought just as a matter of justice and also in trying to be practical that where you impose the death penalty it should only apply to men who have disclosed secrets to foreign enemies or foreign governments, or betrayed their country, and that the death penalty should only be imposed by a jury. Otherwise the death-penalty provision is retained in there in substantially the same form as it left the House.

In conclusion, let me make brief reference to the last and perhaps most controversial issue in the report, the matter of patents. That is a big subject in itself. Frankly, I share the views of a great many men in this House, especially my distinguished colleague from Texas [Mr. LANHAM] in saying that I do not want the Government in private business. I have great respect for our present patent laws. I want to encourage individual enterprise and inventive genius. Nevertheless, we are dealing here with a very unusual situation, we are dealing with a very grave and dangerous instrumentality that might mean the life or death of the human race. There was never anything like it in history. The Government has spent $3,000,000,000 to develop atomic energy. It belongs to Uncle Sam. It is in its very nature a monopoly. It has to be kept that way, at least for a time, if we are to keep the secret. There is no use for the Government to take over all fissionable material if we do not also have all the patents to process this dangerous element.

I want to be frank with you as relates to this whole report. Every member had one big objective and that was to tie up the secret of the atomic bomb. You cannot do it without also controlling all patents. Perhaps those restrictions can be lifted later, but this is certainly no time to take a chance. Because these patents have to do with all fissionable material wherever it is. I think, perhaps, with one exception, it was the opinion of the conferees that for the time being, at least until we know what we are going to do with this terrible weapon and this tremendous secret discovery, that there is nothing in the world to do except to give the Government the monopoly that it must have. But in that connection let me say that whenever it takes over an existing patent or does anything else in connection with existing patents or inventions that are later discovered, they must make adequate compensation for the taking of it and also pay a royalty. So, nobody, whose principal interest is in connection with this bomb, can find any fault about that until we settle down and determine what is the best thing for our country and for the peace of the world.

Mr. KUNKEL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMASON. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. KUNKEL. Then you have adopted practically in identical form the Senate amendment on patents?

Mr. THOMASON. That is correct.

Mr. KUNKEL. There are no material changes in it at all?

Mr. THOMASON. That is correct.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMASON. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Do I understand the gentleman to say that when we come to deal with patents and the necessity to protect the secrecy in regard to the bomb, that you let the patents suffer, if I may put it that way, rather than take a chance on revealing the secrets of the bomb?

Mr. THOMASON. The gentleman is exactly right. This is something that we cannot gamble with or take the slightest chance. The secret at present is the important thing. When a man thinks he has an invention, he has to file his application down here in the Patent Office, and that becomes not only known to every Tom, Dick, and Harry who wants to look at it, but any citizen who wants to go down to the Patent Office can look at the application.

As the Senator from Colorado [Mr. MILLIKIN] so ably pointed out, you just cannot take a chance with a thing like this. We are dealing with the most terrible device that has ever been discovered in the history of mankind.

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMASON. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. HINSHAW. If the Lanham amendment had not been agreed to in the House, I had a provision to add to section 3 of the patent provision which related to inventions and discoveries that had not been patented, but must be turned over to the Commission within 60 days and provide that just compensation should be made for turning over the information, but we did not reach that point.

I would like to know, if a man makes an invention or discovery for which no patent application is made, how you can pay compensation under that section by turning it over to the Commission?

Mr. THOMASON. The Commission itself is authorized to make fair and just compensation.

Mr. HINSHAW. You will find under section 3 that no such language was contained, and it was covered in the first two sections relating to patents.

Mr. THOMASON. I cannot answer that technical question.

Mr. CHELF. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMASON. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. CHELF. I might say to the gentleman that the bulk of the patent laws that we are now operating under were enacted back in 1870.

If we were dealing with just an ordinary thing and this were just a normal situation there would be much force, I think, to the argument that has been made that we should not invade the present patent law field, but I need not tell the Members of this House, in view of what happened at Bikini the other day and what happened at Hiroshima, what this means to the peace of the world. It was the opinion, I think, of the conferees, I know it was of most of us, that it is something you cannot trifle with at present. This bill does set up a monopoly. It has to be. If you are going to take over all the fissionable material in the United States, which you do in the bill, certainly you are going to have to take over for the time being everything connected with it including patents.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I am afraid the gentleman misunderstood me. My point was that in dealing with the patents and in protecting the secret you go to the side of protecting the secret. You do not take a chance on letting the secret get loose in order to give some fellow a patent.

Mr. THOMASON. My friend from Texas is absolutely right. Patents and everything else must be subordinated to keeping our great secret. In view of what is going on in some parts of the world today, I am not willing to take the slightest chance. We have tried to tie this thing up with the strongest language that can be written.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Of course.

Mr. THOMASON. Congress is going to be in session after this law goes into effect and after we have, perhaps, an international atomic commission of some sort that will put this thing to peaceful purposes rather than to destructive purposes, so then there will be time to make changes if necessary. But it is the opinion, I think, of everybody on the committee, or nearly so, that for the present we cannot do any gambling.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMASON. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. COLMER. As I understand, under the House bill the appointment of a military representative was compulsory, but under the conference report that would be optional.

Mr. THOMASON. No. I do not want to mislead the gentleman as to the Commission. They will all be civilians, with a military liaison committee sitting in session with them. However, the only member of the armed forces proper who will be in the organization will be the Director of Military Application.

Mr. COLMER. Under the House version of the bill, was not provision made for a military representative?

Mr. THOMASON. Yes.

Mr. COLMER. But that has been changed?

Mr. THOMASON. It was made compulsory that there should be one member of the armed forces, and it was permissive to have two.

Mr. COLMER. Would not the gentleman think the armed forces should be represented on this Commission?

Mr. THOMASON. No; I do not think so, and General Eisenhower does not think so, and Secretary Patterson does not think so, and Secretary Forrestal does not think so. In view of the existence of the military liaison committee, Secretary Patterson and the Under Secretary of the Navy testified before our committee that they felt there was ample and full protection under the Vandenberg amendment, which was the basis on which the Senator from Michigan changed from the position the gentleman from Mississippi now has and offered the liaison committee amendment, which is now part of the conference report.

Mr. COLMER. Of course, I differ with that.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMASON. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. COOLEY. When the gentleman addressed the House recently on this proposition, he seemed to emphasize the necessity and desirability of developing atomic energy for industrial or peaceful purposes. I compliment the gentleman on emphasizing today the necessity for secrecy. Does the gentleman now think that under the bill that has been agreed upon by the conferees the secret is being just as carefully guarded as it possibly can be?

Mr. THOMASON. I will be frank with my friend from North Carolina. I think the bill is stronger than it was when it left the House insofar as the guarding of the secret of the atomic bomb is concerned, because, under the section relating to giving information to other countries, that can only be done after the Congress by a joint resolution has said that all safeguards have been invoked that are necessary for the guarding of the atomic bomb as a military weapon.

Another reason why I am now fully convinced that for the present the Government must control the patents on all matters affecting atomic energy is this. Let me call my friend's attention to this statement, and I hope he will read all of it, that as to this monopoly on patents the law uses the word "solely." No other patents of any kind are touched or in any way affected. It cannot invade any other field. It has to do solely with the atomic energy problem itself and the atomic bomb.

Mr. COOLEY. I have no objection to the monopoly features of the bill. I have no objection to the Government having a monopoly on all the patents. The thing that I am most interested in is that we should agree to keep this secret at the present time.

Mr. THOMASON. I think the bill as reported back to the House is just as strong as it can be. I think it is a splendid report. I hope for its adoption.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CLASON].

Mr. CLASON. Mr. Speaker, as one of the conferees on the McMahon atomic energy bill I can say that the matters which were in dispute were thoroughly discussed by the conferees. We had some very strong arguments on the different amendments which were under discussion. The two main amendments, of course, were those which had to do with whether or not a military man should be placed upon the Commission, and the one dealing with patent law, although there were disputes on other amendments adopted by the House. Further than that, I think I should say that the position of the conferees was not unanimous on any of the important amendments which were in dispute. Nevertheless, I think we have brought back a very fine conference report. I say that because General Eisenhower, Secretary Forrestal, and Secretary Patterson all indicated that they felt even if the bill had not had as much protection in it and had not had the provisions in it which the conferees have finally brought back to you, they still would have felt and believed that the bill ought to be adopted and that they were satisfied with it. The question of whether or not there should be a military man upon the Commission was covered under amendments 1, 2, and 3. The first one, as you probably will recall, had directly to do with whether or not a military man should be appointed to the Commission; the second one had to do with the question of the director of military application, and the third had to do with the law which would permit at least one and not more than two military men to qualify to serve on the Commission at the same time. In connection with that, we had considerable argument. I have been delighted today to hear the distinguished gentleman from Texas quote so often from the two distinguished Republican Senators on the conference committee. I almost gain the impression that if either one of them were nominated for President he would be assured a large Democratic following. They certainly got it in the conference. I have no doubt they deserved it. It is my opinion we are fully protected so far as the military is concerned even though there may not be military men on the Commission itself. We have the military liaison committee which General Eisenhower stated was all he felt was necessary in order for the armed services to be fully protected in connection with atomic research in the future. However, the House added the amendment which did put the Director of Military Application directly into the armed services—he must be a member of the armed services. That being so, we have a much closer and much more important connection with atomic research in the future. Therefore, I feel even though the House did not get all they would like to have had under the amendments 1, 2, and 3, they did obtain a big advantage over the original Senate bill. I feel that the Army and Navy are fully protected, while we have established civilian control of our national policy on atomic energy.

So far as the patent laws are concerned, the conferees called in the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM], who explained fully to them the difference between the patent sections of the Senate bill and the House bill. Many of the members of the conference committee are lawyers and each of them had his own idea of what was meant in the Senate and House versions. On a divided vote the majority of the conferees of each House voted for the provisions of the Senate bill. If they prove inadequate for our national protection, I am sure the Commission will request such changes as are necessary.

This conference report will be of great value in two important avenues: First, it will aid our representatives in the United Nations and in any peace conference to secure international cooperation and lasting peace; second, it will establish a much needed organization to facilitate research and development of atomic energy, not only for military purposes, but for medical, domestic, municipal, and industrial purposes. I urge that the conference report be adopted.

The question came right down to the proposition, Did the McMahon bill provide as much protection as was necessary and was actually needed in order to prevent dissemination of knowledge in regard to atomic energy, which we ought to have to protect our people? We have the know-how, we have the inventions and the patents. Should they be protected to the extent of the provisions of the McMahon bill?

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CLASON] has expired.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman two additional minutes.

Mr. CLASON. As I see it, it came down to the question of whether or not we receive more protection for the United States under the McMahon version or under the Lanham version. I do not think it is proper for a conferee to state how he stood on any one thing, but there was not a unanimous vote on the particular amendment. However, a majority did decide that they preferred the McMahon provision to the Lanham provision. When the conference report was finally drawn, even though I personally did not agree with some of the provisions, I felt strongly it was necessary to have legislation on this subject at this time, and I therefore signed the report. I feel that the conference report added to the legislation which was before you and has resulted in satisfactory legislation and very valuable legislation. I will vote for the conference report, and I hope the rest of you will see it as I see it. I know you will be in disagreement on certain amendments, but on the whole we have good legislation. Otherwise we will not get the benefits for domestic purposes and for industry from atomic energy which we are entitled to obtain.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts has again expired.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DURHAM].

Mr. DURHAM. Mr. Speaker, it has been well explained to you what the conferees did. I think we brought out a good conference report.

My position on this matter is pretty well known with regard to the military men on the Commission. I supported the Lanham amendment when it was on the floor of the House. After hearing the discussion on this matter when the conferees got together on it, I feel that the Senate amendment is more workable and is a far better amendment than the amendment that was adopted in the House.

There has been a little confusion spread around the House in regard to fissionable material. The rumor has been spread that it exists in practically everything. Steel is said to be fissionable material. I am not an authority on fissionable material, but I have had some chemistry, and I have some knowledge of it. We feel that we are at the present primarily dealing with only uranium and thorium to produce this fissionable material and nuclear fission for this atomic weapon.

Looking at this patent provision, which is section 11 and applies solely to fissionable material, that is what we are trying to apply this patent provision to. If we are going to control all of that material, as this bill does, we are going to have something like a man who has a book of blank checks in his pocket and no money in the bank, if he goes down here and secures patents, because he has no material unless he secures it from the Government. Therefore, his patent becomes useless.

Furthermore, these men who have been serving at Oak Ridge and other plants of the Manhattan project will be free when they are discharged or released from that plant. Those people are ambitious, they will apply for patents on what they have already done. I therefore feel that we cannot open this thing up to everybody.

What are the principal differences between Senate section 11 and the so-called Lanham amendment?

The Senate patent provisions differ from the House provisions in five major respects:

First. The Senate makes patents on the production of fissionable material and on atomic weapons nonpatentable; the House permits private patents. Private patent rights in these two fields are inconsistent with the national security because patent litigation and procedures may well result in disclosure of secrets. It would be a risk that one or two companies would control all patents affecting these vital national defense activities.

Second. The Senate bill requires that all new inventions relating to the production of fissionable material be reported to the Commission. The House bill contains no such provisions.

Third. The Senate bill automatically authorizes the use of any patent in atomic-energy research. The House, in omitting this provision, may hamper atomic research by refusal of patentees to license their patents for research.

Fourth. The Senate requires that the patentee license at a reasonable royalty the use of any nonmilitary device of importance to the economy. The House, in omitting this provision permits, for example, one patent holder to take over the entire power industry through control of any atomic-power patents.

Fifth. The Senate bill gives the Commission full authority to condemn all atomic-energy patents, including production of fissionable material, utilization devices, research, and atomic weapons. The House bill confines the condemnation power to patents affecting the national defense.

We must go all the way if we are going to have control of this dreadful weapon.

If this provision, section 11, in any way hinders or affects the further development of our great industrial and private enterprise system, I will be one of the first to advocate doing away with it, but I do feel for the present we cannot take a chance and hope the House will accept the conference report.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. THOMAS].

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, as one of the conferees, I did not sign the report on S. 1717, and I did not because I felt that the House was giving up too much, that this conference report was nothing more than a skimmilk version of the bill that passed in the House; further, the House conferees won all the skirmishes and the Senate conferees won all the big battles, and the two largest battles were: One, whether or not the military would have representation on the Commission; and two, whether or not we were going to take the House version of the patent provision.

Mr. ARENDS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. I yield.

Mr. ARENDS. Would the gentleman say then that the conferees on the part of the House capitulated completely to the Senate in those two major items?

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. I do not like to criticize my good colleagues on either the Democratic side or the Republican side, but I will say that the House conferees did not carry out the version of the House on those two questions.

A great deal has been said about security, that this bill will give us more security than we had in the bill that we passed in the House. I just want to paint this picture. Just as soon as this bill is enacted into law and as soon as the Army engineers have had a reasonable time to get out of Oak Ridge they will get out of there to a man. There will be no more Army Intelligence or Army engineers in Oak Ridge. Then we are going to turn the plant and it secrets over to whom? We are going to turn them over to a lot of persons, and I will admit that in time they will be investigated by the FBI, but we are going to turn Oak Ridge over to a lot of persons who may have had no experience in security. Some of them will be political patronage. Those are the people who are going to guard the atom bomb secrets down there in Oak Ridge.

That is the reason why I say that under the provisions of S. 1717 where we turn everything over to civilian control we may be taking steps that will do the very thing that a potential aggressor or a potential enemy of this country would want us to do, and that is to open the door to the secrets that are so necessary to guard at this time particularly.

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. When the conferees accepted the Senate version of the patent feature they accepted what the Socialists have been trying to do for the last half century?

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. No doubt about that.

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. Completely socializing our patent system in this Nation.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. There is no question about that.

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. When they refused to permit the War Department, the Army, or the military to have one single representative out of five they assured the possibility of giving away the secrets if any may be left in connection with this bomb?

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. Yes.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. CURTIS. I favor the position of the gentleman in regard to both the patent feature and the military control. This conference report should be turned down. There is no more reason to take the Army out of the atomic bomb business than to take it out of aviation, artillery, or any other branch of our defense.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, it was said in conference that the reason we should not have an Army man as one of the commissioners is because it might be considered as a military veto and, in addition, that we were overemphasizing the military. These remarks were made by one of the distinguished gentlemen whom our colleague from Texas referred to and I am sure he is going to vote for him when he runs for President of the United States. I would like to know how anybody could consider that by placing one Army man on a commission of five it would be a military veto. I would like to know how it could be construed by any nation in the world that we were overemphasizing the military.

The reason that we want a military man on there is so that he will be in every conference, so that he will know absolutely what is going on, so that he will be just as close to the picture as possible. When we exclude the military we make them outcasts, something that we are a little ashamed of. I think it is just plain ridiculousness.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. REED of New York. I ran across something that startled me early in the war. An Army officer came to my office and he said, "I am somewhat distressed. I do not care to go to the higher-ups, but I know you, and I am going to talk to you." He said, "Every single day my men are getting communistic literature under the frank of the Patent Office." I have watched this thing very closely and when I saw this patent provision in here I could quickly understand why it was in there.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. I want to say just a word about the patent feature. We House conferees did not have a chance. The cards were stacked against us from the beginning. There was never any time when we thought we were going to gain our objectives.

I think that the thing that amazed me more about the conference we had in regard to patents was this, that it was admitted, by not one conferee but by more than one, that the Senate sections on patents would do this thing above everything else, and that is, bring about a compulsory monopoly, and for the first time in the history of the United States we are now called upon to have a compulsory industrial monopoly. Yet, all of the authorities in the United States on patents tell us that the Lanham features, the sections put in by the House bill, would not only protect the Atomic Energy Commission and protect the United States when it came to the question of atomic energy and the making of the atomic bomb, but would protect the industry of the United States as well.

I disagree with my colleague from Connecticut that the Senate version on patents would benefit private business. I think under the Senate version of patents, private business, whether it had anything to do with atomic energy or not, would be absolutely stifled; it would never get started, and if these features had been in existence some 50 or 75 years ago we would not have the industrial life in America that we enjoy today.

Mr. Speaker, after hearing all the debate in Committee and on the floor of the House and in conference, I am still resolved to oppose this legislation. I think it the most dangerous we have ever considered—likewise the most important. For the safety of 135,000,000 of Americans we should delay further consideration until we have had more time for study. The stakes are too high in the gamble we are taking today.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM].

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, in my judgment this conference report involves most unfortunate legislation, and I certainly shall oppose it.

We have all seen the gradual growth of centralization of power in Washington, depriving the people of their rights and leading them to neglect their responsibilities, and now we see a blow at the fundamental basis of our progress in our patent system.

Here we have the recommendations of the Committee on Military Affairs with reference to patents. Those recommendations, from the standpoint of knowledge or familiarity, might as well have come from the Committee on Claims or the Committee on the District of Columbia.

The small businessmen of this country, the American Bar Association, and the gentleman from the Navy Department who has been from the beginning the adviser with reference to atomic energy on patent matters have all approved this House provision. We voted for it overwhelmingly in this body, and the conferees have not even shown us the courtesy of bringing it back in disagreement in order that we might express our views again.

I wonder if we are beginning to sacrifice and surrender our American way of life to appease those in this country and abroad who have no fondness for our governmental philosophy and principles. What will happen if you support these patent provisions in the conference report? There will be no incentive, outside of those connected with this Commission itself, to stimulate the inventive genius of America to undertake to give us discoveries that will be helpful with reference to atomic energy. Let me bring to your attention the fact that patents, wonderful inventions for our progress, come in the main not from the Government, but from the rank and file who make their research far from Washington, and unless we protect them, unless we get rid of this compulsory licensing which is going to turn our patent system over to an unknown commission, we may undermine and destroy this fundamental basis of our progress and also the initiative and the incentive of the American inventor.

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LANHAM. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. Under this conference report, and under the Senate bill the way it passed the House, the Commission will be the arbitrary and sole judge of what patents are connected with the development of atomic energy.

Mr. LANHAM. Absolutely.

Mr. HARNESS of Indiana. And any invention that might remotely have any connection with atomic energy will be under the control of this Commission.

Mr. LANHAM. And consequently the inventors are not going to try to invent things that will be helpful in reference to atomic energy. There will be no incentive to do it.

Let me call your attention to the fact that the House provision gives the Commission authority to get any invention, any patent, or any application for a patent, that it can use in carrying out its purposes. Why go beyond that to take away property rights from the citizens of this country, to revoke their property rights, and to assure them that they can have no further rights in their property, because you are confiscating and taking the property of the individuals when you undermine and abolish the patent system of this Nation of ours?

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LANHAM. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. CHURCH. If the Lanham amendment were left in the bill, does the gentleman feel the secrecy or the know-how would be endangered in any way?

Mr. LANHAM. Not in the least. As a matter of fact, it would be protected. I think this whole legislation is a bit premature, and we are likely to take steps that will menace our security if we enact legislation of this kind in advance of the agreement with reference to peace treaties and the establishment of peace in the world.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Mrs. LUCE].

Mrs. LUCE. Mr. Speaker, the conference report seems to be about the best legislation we are likely to get for this vital problem. It was often noted during the debate in this House that, while this bill may open the front door to merciful peace and international and national security, it does leave the back door open to socialism. And that still remains true of the conference report, particularly in reference to the patent sections, as the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM] has pointed out to you. Nevertheless, its socialistic features constitute a long-range danger. What we are confronted with today is the short-term danger of not protecting our atomic supremacy now, and the short-term necessity of working for international atomic control. I think we must trust in the patriotism of the President, and we must hope and believe that he will place on the Commission five men of integrity and brains and truly American convictions, who will see that this legislation is not abused in the patent field or any other, to destroy our American free-enterprise system.

There is a good deal of talk about this legislation being premature in view of the facts that international arrangements in atomic control, and peace treaties are not signed. One of the reasons which make this precise legislation necessary is that we cannot get international arrangements in atomic control unless we do have this bill.

You have all read the newspapers. You saw that the Russians have currently turned down the Baruch plan. There will be no incentive for them further to discuss the international control of atomic energy unless we can fortify the position of the Atomic Commission in the UNO with this legislation, which provides domestic controls of the same nature as those proposed internationally. What we will not, or dare not, do ourselves, we cannot expect other nations to do.

We must not forget that within from 5 to 15 years the Russians are going to have all the atomic bombs they want.

It will be 15 years if they have to do it alone, because of their scientific, industrial, and technological backwardness, but probably not more than 5 years if they can communize Germany, or if Germany itself becomes communized, and alines itself as a satellite state of the Soviet Union. Then German technicians, German scientists, German know-how, German skill, all which we certainly should have learned after two world wars are not to be sneezed at, combined with Russian aggressiveness and Russian manpower, would thus shorten the time it would take Soviet Russia to get the bomb. Our choice is between truly international control—and an atom bomb race after that, which would certainly end in atomic war.

In the meanwhile, this bill safeguards our own national security, while allowing us to advance down the road to peace, trying as best we can to persuade our Russian friends that the cause of peace and world prosperity would best be served if they came in with us on an international control plan which would protect all the nations, great and small. I know of nothing that will so strengthen the hands of our statesmen in Paris, and of our United Nations Atomic Commission in New York, as the adoption of this legislation, which will help us to control fissionable materials and also give us some control and direction over scientific research in this field.

If you read the newspapers yesterday you saw the story about the sudden inexplicable disappearance of uranium, which is a fissionable material, in Brazil. Nobody knows where it went, after it was acquired by the Brazilians, apparently we do not know where that material has gone, or to what use it is currently being put. This is a bill which will enable America to keep an eye on the ownership and movement of fissionable material in all countries, including our own.

The conferees were, it seems very plain, men who understood very well what it meant to split the atom. They also being good Americans understand what it is to split their differences. And apart from the highly controversial patent section the Senate receded in a good many matters important to the House, matters which do improve the legislation. I, like others, am deeply alarmed by the implications of the patent section. But in the end, we dare not take any chances on our atomic security in the next crucial 12 months. And let us remember, and take comfort of the fact that the joint committee provided by the bill, of Senators and Representatives, can at all times watch the Commission, review its reports, and see that it is not abusing its authority. They will be, and must be, the custodians of our liberties, wherever they may be threatened by this bill.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. JOHNSON].

Mr. JOHNSON of California. The purpose of taking this minute is to ask a question along this line: If we adopt the conference report, will that mean that in the field of patents every single unique device that is developed, such as a device to improve a cyclotron, for instance, will go into the hands of the Government? I would like to have the gentleman from North Carolina answer that question.

Mr. DURHAM. It is solely for the purpose of covering patents on fissionable material and nuclear material. It says in the bill that it is only for that purpose.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I know, but some of us do not know just how broad that is. Does it mean that it only covers those materials from which bombs can be made?

Mr. DURHAM. That is correct, as I understand it.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. For instance, out in California we have a cyclotron at the University of California that cracks atoms, but that machine cannot make bombs. Now, would any device to perfect that machine, which is patentable, be outside the scope of the provision of this bill as reported back by the conferees?

Mr. DURHAM. I would say if that machine were capable of making fissionable material it would come under this provision.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. This machine only cracks atoms and does not make bombs.

Mr. DURHAM. Then how are they going to get the fissionable material?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I do not know.

Mr. DURHAM. They must get it through the use of the equipment.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. MARTIN].

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I am keenly disappointed in the results of the conference on this legislation. I cannot give up, lying down, the importance of the taking of an active part by a representative of the armed forces in a field that involves one of the greatest potential weapons of all time. I cannot surrender completely the whole field of atomic energy policy making to the scientists or to the manufacturers, and bar absolutely only one class of people, namely, those who know something about military application of any super weapon such as the atomic bomb. In spite of all you say about it, the time has come when our Nation must not appease potential future enemies in that fashion. This is no time to set the stage for the first Munich of World War III. That is exactly what you are doing—exactly that and nothing else. When the time comes when I can prove to you that I am right, it will be too late. You will then be led around by the nose by foreign enemies who are laughing up their sleeves at you now for appeasing them and sticking your ostrich head deeper below the sands than any isolationist that has ever been condemned by the left-wing internationalists of this Nation.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of the time to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. JUDD].

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Speaker, I do not believe anybody can accuse me of being an appeaser of any of these countries which have been mentioned as possible dangers to our security. I support this conference report precisely because I want us to do our utmost to assure the Nation's security.

The Bikini test was called Operations Crossroads, because it was held at the crossroads of the Pacific. It might well have been called that because the unleashing of atomic energy is the crossroads of history. That is where we are this afternoon. We are deciding which way our Nation and the world are to take at the great crossroads.

There are about four possibilities. One, we can ignore atomic energy, rest on our past achievements, fail to keep in the forefront of progress until somebody blows us off the face of the earth or covers our land with radioactive energy, making life impossible.

Second, we can say that since we have the secret now, we can beat other countries by building more and bigger and better bombs than they; therefore we have nothing to fear.

The trouble with that argument is that a nation does not need to have any bigger or better bombs than exist now. If, and when other nations are able to build them, as they will be in a relatively short time, all they need is a few hundred of the present type delivered by plane or rocket, to cripple us hopelessly.

Third, we could wipe out every possible potential enemy right now while we alone have the bomb. The trouble with that course is twofold: First, we could not do it, because the President and the Army do not have any such power, and I think you will agree there would be quite a little discussion before the Congress would do it. The nation to be destroyed would certainly be notified well in advance. Second, we would not do it, because we just are not the sort of people who carry out sneak attacks like Pearl Harbor. We simply would not start such a war. It is unrealistic to imagine we would.

Fourth, we can try to develop international control with rigid and complete supervision of all fissionable materials, factories, and armaments in every country by a real international organization with no vetoes.

Bombs are now made in Tennessee, in Washington, and New Mexico. I live in Minnesota, but I am not scared. Why? Because the use of the bombs made in those three States is controlled by the United States Government on behalf of all the 48 States. They are for the security, not of three States, but of everybody.

I see no hope except in this fourth course. I believe we should take the lead in trying to unite in such a real organization all nations that will join. We cannot make headway in that direction unless we have unified control within our own country of all atomic energy, whether for military or for civilian purposes. That is why I support the conference report. We must have unified civilian control so that we can keep our present processes secret while doing everything possible to improve those processes, to expand our knowledge of atomic energy, and skill in handling it.

Let us not make a wrong decision today at operations crossroads.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Minnesota has expired.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have five legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks at this point in the RECORD on the conference report just agreed to.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

THE CONFEREES HAVE BROUGHT US A SOUND BILL FOR ADOPTION

Mr. DOYLE. Mr. Speaker, a few days ago when debate upon this vital subject of the atomic-energy bill was in progress and it was known that the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM] was to offer an amendment to strike out all the patent section of the committee bill and to offer a substitute which would make unnecessary the obtaining of a license from the United States to obtain, or use, or develop atomic energy, even for military weapons, I naturally hesitated to speak in opposition to his proposals, for I know how deservedly his proposals receive the cordial regard by the Members of this House. However, as a new member of your Patents Committee, I soon discovered that his industry and knowledge and natural "drive" were all big factors in the functioning of that important committee.

Yet, having studied the committee bill at length and also having studied his proposals also at length, I felt I had a duty to speak out emphatically for the patent section of the committee bill and for its retention, as distinguished from the proposals of the gentleman from Texas.

The conferees have now put back the patent section of the House bill for which I spoke. I compliment the House conferees for agreeing to same. During the debate here a few days ago I felt many Members had not had opportunity to carefully study the bill and so must have voted under a mistaken idea of what it did do and did not do.

True it is that this conferees' report as to patents will place exclusive control of atomic energy for military purposes in the hands of Uncle Sam. But, my colleagues, why should it not be there? I have previously argued that such control would help take the profit out of war. I do it again. What a man makes for sale at a money profit, he is going to try to sell at the most profit possible. And, he is not always too choosy about his customers, as long as the customer pays him his price. So, it would be with the private manufacture of atomic energy for military weapons. The Government retaining exclusive control of the source of material and its manufacture for war-weapon uses and purposes should make it far more difficult for the development of international cartels in the field of munitions manufacture. And that is exactly what I said before and now repeat as highly desirable. The less material profit there is in war, the fewer wars we will have.

Because these are unusually hazardous times in the world's history, we must be willing to step forth in unusual pathways to peace. We must dare to pioneer in the field of essential legislation in this field of atomic energy, as much as in any field for world peace.

We must protect our field of free enterprise in patents in due fashion. But, gentlemen, there is no soundness in immediately releasing this most dangerous material to free enterprise to make money profit out of, at the expense of, our national safety and security. This bill guarantees every inventor an adequate compensation for his invention in this field. It assures an applicant for patent the same. We do not yet know the rudiments of need for our national security, and until we know what we need for it, it is unsound and unsafe to let atomic energy loose for promiscuous acquisition and development.

Why the hurry? The war is not even officially ended as yet.

Besides, our executive leaders must know what they can and cannot do in the field of atomic energy. This is a world neighborhood problem now. It is not merely whether or not American inventors shall have full freedom to do as they please immediately.

The problem before us filters into the very fabric of international policy and world peace from atomic warfare. We must keep our President and delegates to Paris and other conferences where world peace is involved, in a position of knowing to what extent America can control atomic energy for war and peace purposes.

Therefore, any private control, without regard to our national security, of and for the purpose of war or military weapons, is fundamentally incompatible with our national welfare and security.

So I am pleased the conferees have confirmed my humble words of several days ago as also being their firm conviction and decision.

SITE ACQUISITION AND DESIGN OF FEDERAL BUILDINGS

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 6917) to provide for site acquisition and design of Federal buildings, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc.—

TITLE I

That the Federal Works Administrator is hereby authorized, under the provisions of the Public Buildings Act of May 25, 1926, as amended (40 U. S. C. 341-347), and as hereby further amended:

For projects outside the District of Columbia: To acquire sites, prepare drawings and specifications, perform other work for the accomplishment thereof, and establish limits of cost for building projects notwithstanding the fact that appropriations for construction work shall not have been made. The Federal Works Administrator (and the Postmaster General, where his Department is involved), shall select projects based upon reasonable geographical distribution and urgency of need. There is authorized to be appropriated $30,000,000 for the foregoing purposes.

SEC. 2. The Federal Works Administrator is hereby authorized under the provisions of the Public Buildings Act of May 25, 1926, as amended (40 U. S. C. 341-347), and as hereby further amended, to provide for the following buildings in or near the District of Columbia and to establish the limits of costs therefor:

(a) General Accounting Office: The project for a building for the General Accounting Office, as authorized in the First Supplemental Civil Functions Appropriation Act of 1941 (54 Stat. 1036), is hereby revised to provide for an additional building on square 529 in the District of Columbia and a tunnel connecting the two buildings, and there is hereby authorized to be appropriated $1,150,000 to acquire square 529, to prepare drawings and specifications for the revised project, and for any costs incident thereto.

(b) Film-storage buildings: A building or buildings on Government-owned land for the servicing and storing of film records for the National Archives and the Library of Congress, and there is hereby authorized to be appropriated $1,160,000 for the drawings and specifications for the whole project and for the construction of the first unit thereof.

(c) Office building, Suitland, Md.: For the preparation of drawings and specifications for an additional office building on Government-owned land, $325,000.

SEC. 3. In carrying out the provisions of this title, the Federal Works Administrator is authorized to acquire lands, or interests in lands, as sites, or additions to sites, by purchase, condemnation, donation, exchange, or otherwise, and may prepare drawings and specifications prior or subsequent to the approval by the Attorney General of the title to sites for selected projects.

SEC. 4. Hereafter, when part of the cost of construction of a public-building project has been appropriated by Congress, the Federal Works Administrator may enter into contracts for construction work within the full limit of cost fixed by Congress therefor.

SEC. 5. Whenever deemed by him desirable or advantageous, the Federal Works Administrator is authorized to employ, by contract or otherwise and without regard to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, or to the civil-service laws, rules, and regulations, or to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes, the services of established architectural or other professional or technical corporations, firms, or individuals, to such extent as he may require for any public-building project which the Public Buildings Administration is authorized by Congress to construct, or for any such project funds for which are transferred by another agency to the Public Buildings Administration for construction of the project, regardless of specific legislation governing such other agency: Provided, That this authorization shall not apply to the employment of such corporations, firms, or individuals on a permanent basis, but their services shall be limited to the individual project for which employed.

SEC. 6. The provisions of section 322 of the act of June 30, 1932, as amended (40 U. S. C. 278a), shall not apply with respect to the rental of temporary quarters for housing Federal activities during the replacement or remodeling of buildings by the Public Buildings Administration.

SEC. 7. The Commissioner of Public Buildings is authorized to contract for seeding, planting, or landscaping the grounds of any public building constructed by the Public Buildings Administration in an amount not exceeding $1,000 without reference to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes.

SEC. 8. Section 5 of the Public Buildings Act of May 25, 1926 (44 Stat. 630), is hereby amended to delete the following words which appear at the end thereof: "and to charge against the total sum of $150,000,000 hereinbefore authorized only the respective net excess cost, if any, over and above the proceeds of such sales, or providing such new sites and buildings", and after the words "miscellaneous receipts" change the comma to a period.

SEC. 9. The Commissioner of Public Buildings, together with the Postmaster General where his office is concerned, is authorized to accept on behalf of the United States unconditional gifts of real, personal, or other property in aid of any project or function within their respective jurisdictions.

SEC. 10. Effective on the date of approval of this act, all office furniture and rugs, excepting that purchased by Government-owned corporations, which are now or may hereafter be located in Government-owned or leased buildings in and outside the District of Columbia, operated by the Public Buildings Administration, shall be and remain in its custody and under its control without exchange of funds and irrespective of the appropriations from which the furniture was or may be procured or the source from which it was obtained. Effective July 1, 1947, unless specifically so provided, appropriations other than appropriations to the Public Buildings Administration shall not be available for the purchase of furniture and rugs in such buildings, except in executive suites.

SEC. 11. The Commissioner of Public Buildings shall have exclusive authority in all buildings operated by the Public Buildings Administration to enter into contracts, upon such terms and conditions as he may find to be in the public interest and without securing competitive bids, for food services in buildings designed to include such facilities or where such services are subsequently found to be necessary; to establish rules and regulations for the operation thereof; and to make all sanitary inspections in connection therewith: Provided, That the Commissioner of Public Buildings wherever he deems it necessary in the public interest may exempt any building operated by the Public Buildings Administration from the provisions of this section.

SEC. 12. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent or in conflict with the foregoing provisions are hereby repealed to the extent of such inconsistency or conflict.

TITLE II

The United States Courts of the District of Columbia Building: The Architect of the Capitol is hereby authorized and directed to prepare drawings and specifications and do all work incidental thereto, for a building (including equipment, approaches, architectural landscape treatment of the grounds and connections with public utilities, and the Federal heating system) for the use of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia and the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, to be located on that part of reservation 10 which is bounded by Constitution Avenue on the south, C Street on the north, John Marshall Place on the west, and Third Street on the east, containing 245,266 square feet, title to which is in the District of Columbia with the exception of two pieces of land having a combined total area of 1,238 square feet, title to which said two pieces of land is in the United States.

SEC. 2. (a) The plans for the building shall be prepared under the direction of, and shall be approved by, a committee of five members to be composed of the chief justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, the chief justice of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, an associate justice of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia to be designated by the chief justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, a member of the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia to be designated by said Board, and the Architect of the Capitol.

(b) The said committee shall establish the limit of cost for such building notwithstanding the fact that appropriations for construction work shall not have been made.

(c) The said committee and such assistants as they may designate are authorized to perform such travel for visiting other court structures as may be necessary to enable them to carry out the purposes of this title.

SEC. 3. The exact location of the building on the site shall be approved by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and the design shall be approved by the Commission of Fine Arts.

SEC. 4. The Commissioners of the District of Columbia are hereby authorized and directed to convey to the United States title to that part of reservation 10 which is owned by the District of Columbia within the area described in section 1 of this title, excepting a strip 5 feet wide immediately adjacent to the south line of C Street and running parallel with said south line of C Street from Third Street to John Marshall Place, said strip to be reserved for the widening of C Street. The compensation for the site, which is herein fixed at $2,420,000, shall constitute a credit to the District of Columbia for its share of the cost of the entire project as hereafter established by the Congress.

SEC. 5. The Architect of the Capitol is hereby authorized to employ the necessary personal and other services, to enter into the necessary contracts, and to make such other expenditures (including expenditures for travel) as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of sections 1 and 2 of this title, and there is hereby authorized to be appropriated $400,000 for such purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. McGREGOR. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas is recognized.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, on last Saturday I made a very full explanation in the RECORD of the purposes of this bill. My interest in it after this session of the Congress will naturally be that of an American citizen and a constituent of some Member of this body, but I think perhaps two-thirds or more of the Members of the House have requested this legislation.

This legislation has to do with the drawing of plans and specifications and the acquisition of sites for Federal structures throughout the United States. There has been no such construction since before the beginning of the World War.

If there are questions to be asked in amplification of the rather lengthy explanation I made on last Saturday, and which you will find in the RECORD, I shall be glad to answer them. If not, I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. McGREGOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 10 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, first I wish to pay my respects to the gentleman who just preceded me, my distinguished chairman, who is retiring from the Congress of his own initiative. As a presiding officer, as a gentleman, as a Member of Congress, and as a friend, he is one individual in whom I am sure we all have great faith, and I am sure we all hate to see him leave Congress. We are losing a real friend and the district which he has represented for so long a time is losing a real representative and a worthy gentleman.

Mr. Speaker, I take exception to this particular piece of legislation, H. R. 6917, for a number of reasons. May I first call your attention to the fact, as the distinguished chairman has said, that it establishes an authorization for $30,000,000 for what? For the drawing of plans and the purchase of sites and arrangements for the construction of Federal buildings outside of the District of Columbia.

We heard a message read from the President a few minutes ago, a letter written to the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency inisisting on housing for veterans. We heard the distinguished chairman of this committee insist that the WET housing bill be brought up so the veterans, the industrial workers, the farmers, might have the critical building material with which to make necessary repairs and to provide them homes in which to live.

What are we going to say to our constituents if you vote for this bill granting an authorization for the planning of thousands of post offices and for the immediate construction of Federal office buildings in or near the District of Columbia? And we are going to be fair. We are acting not in a political sense entirely. There is not a Member of this Congress who does not want to please his constituents, but we are not selling out to them as a whole; they expect us to use our own judgment. What are we going to say when we go back home and find our constituents cannot buy a 2 by 4, a 2 by 6, or a 2 by 8 to build or repair his particular barn and who will say, "Congressman, you voted for $30,000,000 for plans for new post offices throughout the United States, and for several millions of dollars for the construction of new Federal buildings in or near Washington." Our distinguished chairman says they are not going to be constructed and that only planning is contemplated. There are buildings in this bill that are going to be constructed right now. Let me call your attention to page 2, for the General Accounting Office. They are going to construct a building in the District of Columbia, and this carries an authorization for construction, if you please, of $1,150,000. A film storage building likewise is authorized. I call your attention to page 3 for the whole project and the construction of the first item thereof, and I quote line 1, page 3, "$1,160,000 for the drawings and specifications for the whole project and for the construction of the first unit thereof." I call your attention, Mr. Speaker, to the words contained in the bill and I again quote "and for the construction of the first unit thereof."

On page 3: For an office building in Suitland, Md., $325,000. That is for the construction of two units with an underground tunnel. The bill gives the right to purchase and acquire buildings and lands.

Mr. Speaker, let us be fair. We are going to adjourn some of these days. Why the need for the expenditure of approximately $35,000,000 right now when we are doing everything we can to help the veterans and to help our people back home get critical building materials? We are doing everything we can in this Congress to reduce our Federal expenses and to take people off the Federal pay roll; yet we come right along here and in this bill ask for the authorization to construct three buildings in the District of Columbia or the near vicinity to house additional Federal employees.

Is that a fair proposition for our people back home? What are you going to say to the people when they ask you about this? Oh, they say they are going to purchase land. On page 2 they have an authorization of $30,000,000 to go out and purchase land in various congressional districts for the construction of post offices and other Federal buildings. Certainly there is no necessity for this bill at the present time. Why not wait and see if we really need these new buildings. Let us save the building material for our veterans, our industrial workers, and our farmers.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McGREGOR. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. McDONOUGH. If the bill passes, is it a superior authorization over the Civilian Production Administrator, or does he have to pass on it after this bill is passed?

Mr. McGREGOR. It says, "notwithstanding." That is written into the bill, which means, in my opinion, you are going to have a preferential classification for these Federal buildings and for these Federal post offices. Experience has proven to me that the Government always gets a preference. I would like to have a post office in every one of the counties in my district, all of us would, but this is not the time to go into these congressional districts and purchase land or even by inference to tell the people that at some future date we are going to build a post office. Word will get around that a post office is going to be constructed this year. Our distinguished chairman told us it would be 2 years. Suppose it is 2 or 3 years. That being the case, certainly we will need some new plans and specifications; so why set up this $30,000,000 covering plans and specifications for these post offices now? Why set up $1,150,000 for the General Accounting Office? That is for actual construction. There is also an office building in Suitland, Md., $325,000.

Mr. Speaker, as I said before, we certainly do not need this at the present time. Let us save this building material, reduce the number of our Federal employees, and maybe we will not need so many new buildings.

Mr. COLE of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McGREGOR. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. COLE of Missouri. The building the gentleman mentioned for the General Accounting Office is to be started at once if this legislation passes?

Mr. McGREGOR. In my opinion that is correct. I would refer the gentleman to page 2 of the bill.

Mr. COLE of Missouri. Therefore it will take materials that could be used for veterans housing and that could be used for other purposes?

Mr. McGREGOR. That is absolutely correct. It is not only for that building but for a film storage building as shown on pages 2 and 3, which covers $1,150,000 for drawings and specifications for the whole project and for the construction of the first unit thereof. You cannot build buildings without material.

What excuse are we going to give to our people for the construction of Federal buildings in Washington to house more Federal employees when our people cannot get material to construct homes? Certainly we can put the legislation off until the first of next year, until the housing shortage becomes better and critical material becomes more available.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McGREGOR. I yield to the gentlewoman from Illinois.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. I wish the gentleman would explain this. I cannot figure out what they think they are doing. All over this country people are having difficulty. One man will get as far as a foundation and he cannot go any farther. Another man will have a first story built and cannot go any farther. No houses are being finished. Veterans' organizations are complaining. That was in the papers Sunday. What do they mean when they come in here and spread this so thin that nobody will get anything. What is behind it?

Mr. McGREGOR. I want to be fair. First, I want you to understand that the $30,000,000 is simply an authorization for the purchase of land and for the drafting of plans. I refer you to page 2: The Federal Works Administrator and the Postmaster General, where his department is involved, shall select projects based upon reasonable geographical distribution and urgency of need and there is authorized to be appropriated $30,000,000 for the foregoing purposes, namely to arrange plans and so forth for construction of Federal Buildings. That $30,000,000 is simply arranging plans, but the other amount carried in this bill is for actual construction. If you will turn to pages 2, 3, and 4 of the bill you will find it gives authorization for construction immediately.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McGREGOR. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. SPRINGER. May I ask whether or not the bill makes any provision as to the particular location where these buildings are to be constructed or where the real estate is to be obtained?

Mr. McGREGOR. It does, sir, in the three items that are going to be constructed at the present time; definitely. The $30,000,000 is entirely left in the hands of the Post Office Department and the Federal Works Administrator, which refers, I think, 90 percent to new post offices in various districts.

Mr. SPRINGER. As I understood, the three items the gentleman referred to are within the District of Columbia; is that correct?

Mr. McGREGOR. That is right, except the one at Suitland, Md.

Mr. SPRINGER. And all the others relate to the rest of the United States?

Mr. McGREGOR. That is correct.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McGREGOR. I yield to the gentlewoman from Illinois.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. It is pretty obvious that somebody is getting some graft out of it, or this thing would not happen. Who endorsed this piece of legislation?

Mr. McGREGOR. This bill was reported out of this committee, and we turned down a general over-all program for the very reason that we felt we should not get into a Federal construction program at this time. Yet now we have a certain little group that wants three buildings, and then another department wants $30,000,000 to arrange plans and specifications and purchase sites in the various localities so that sometime they can come in and build a new post office. Let us defeat this bill and give to our people who need homes the material that would be required to construct these buildings if this bill should become a law.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, I should like to remove a little of the confusion which I think has been created by my friend from Ohio. The report itself states that this will all be held in abeyance until necessary construction for housing and hospitals has been accomplished. There is no endeavor on the part of the committee to interfere with obtaining materials for those purposes.

We held 3 weeks of hearings last November with reference to a general public buildings bill. We do not ask here for money for construction. There is a great deal of preliminary work necessary in the drawing of plans and in the acquisition of sites for these buildings throughout the country, and this measure simply provides for the necessary funds to carry on this preliminary work of preparation. There will be no interference with housing for veterans or housing for anyone else; that is not the purpose of the measure, and it is clearly understood by the members of the committee and by the administrative authority that there is no such purpose in this bill.

The gentleman refers, for instance, to the provision with reference to this office building out here at Suitland. It is true that it is badly needed. But the provision does not relate to construction; it is for the preparation of plans and specifications for the building when the building can be constructed. The same thing is true with reference to the General Accounting Office. There we have a square to acquire, and it has been contemplated for a long time, and already there are considerable appropriations for the construction of a General Accounting Office, but that is being held in abeyance in the meantime.

So it is confusing the issue to state that the committee, with a unanimous report, is coming in to ask you to take the scarce materials in this country and put them into Federal buildings. Unless this preliminary work is done, when the time comes, when materials are available and when contractors at a reasonable cost can construct these buildings, then we will still have to wait and wait and wait for the preparation of these plans before any buildings can be constructed. At the request of the Members of this body, who are interested in this necessary Federal construction in their districts, this measure is presented in order that Federal construction may be ready for carrying on the building program when the conditions are such that it can be done feasibly and economically and without intereference in any way with the housing of veterans and the housing of the people of the United States. It is a matter for you gentlemen to determine if you are interested in Federal construction in your districts. There has been nothing of that kind since before the war began. If you are interested in repairs of the existing buildings or enlargement of the existing buildings that need extensions, then you should certainly support this legislation.

Let me call it to your attention that there are places in this country where we have paid more in rentals than the appraised value of the buildings. All we are trying to do by this legislation is to inaugurate a program and get ready with the necessary preliminary work in order that when the construction can be carried on, it can be carried on forthwith.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LANHAM. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. McDONOUGH. In paragraph (b) of section 2, in lines 1 and 2 on page 3, you authorize to be appropriated "$1,160,000 for the drawings and specifications for the whole project and for the construction of the first unit thereof."

Mr. LANHAM. Yes.

Mr. McDONOUGH. The drawings and specifications will not cost $1,160,000. That must be a building.

Mr. LANHAM. However, it is not a building that uses the materials that are necessary in housing. This is a building for storing nitrate films that, in the first place, are explosive, and that we have now in such great accumulation, these war films. Unless we do something speedily, we will lose them and perhaps have a great deal of incidental damage in addition.

Let me call your attention to the fact that on Monday of this week the House authorized more money for construction in the District of Columbia than is authorized by way of preparation of plans in this measure for the whole country.

Mr. McDONOUGH. But the gentleman will have to admit that the amount of money we authorized for the District of Columbia is for building and housing purposes. It is for housing human beings, not for building office space.

Mr. LANHAM. I have tried to stress the importance as it is stated in the report of the committee itself and as it is stated by the Public Buildings Administrator that this is not to be done until it will not interfere in any way with housing for veterans and for other people, but we must get these plans ready, or else when construction can be carried on we will not be ready to go forward.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Where in the bill does it state that these will be held up in the event the money and the materials are needed for housing?

Mr. LANHAM. I stated to the gentleman that that appeared in the report of the committee. Naturally, it would not appear in the bill. We held hearings on a general public-buildings bill for 3 weeks and have held it in abeyance because we cannot have construction now. I quote from the committee report:

> Although H. R. 4276 is fundamental and in the public interest and would save substantial sums of money, the committee felt that the critical shortage of materials and labor and the need of concentrating the efforts of the Government in the fields of housing and hospitals dictate that additional time should be devoted to its consideration.

That goes to the matter of construction. We said that in the committee report. That is the clear purpose of the committee.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Will there be any assurance that if this bill passes that policy will be carried out? It is not in the bill.

Mr. LANHAM. If the gentleman had any familiarity at all with Mr. W. E. Reynolds and his service as Public Buildings Administrator, I think he would concur in my judgment that there is no better, fairer, more sensible, or more practical man in the Government service. He will even make statements to his own disadvantage in the operation of his office if those statements are true.

I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CHELF].

Mr. CHELF. Mr. Speaker, I want to say, as a veteran of World War II, I intend to support this measure. I do not yield to any man or woman on this floor in interest or concern for the veterans of World War II. But here is a thing I am concerned about. I think this is a fine postwar plan. How are you going to build these houses for these boys if you do not give them jobs? They must have jobs to build these houses. I am for the bill. I am going to support the bill and nothing you can say is going to change my position.

Mr. LANHAM. May I say furthermore that our committee made provision for the utilization by veterans of the houses which were built for in-migrant war workers at defense plants. There are now approximately 200,000 families of veterans and servicemen living in those dwellings. By the time the program is completed, which will be very shortly, there will be 325,000 families of veterans and servicemen occupying those dwellings. So this committee has taken the lead in the matter of affording housing in these critical times for the veterans and has held in abeyance any Federal construction. We are not asking for it now, but simply asking for the plans and program in order that when the work can be done economically we can go forward with it.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LANHAM. I yield.

Mr. SPRINGER. Just recently I have been endeavoring to secure an allocation of materials from the CPA for the purpose of building a dormitory at Earlham College, in my district. This dormitory is intended to house GI's who are going to attend that college if it can be built. But we have been unable to secure an allocation of materials. May I ask the gentleman if this building program is carried out whether or not that will further limit the opportunity of securing building material for dormitories such as I have mentioned?

Mr. LANHAM. Not in the least, because dormitories can be constructed under the act which was reported out of this committee with reference to the available material. I may say I think there is on the calendar for consideration this afternoon from this same committee the bill that makes funds available for the use of surplus barracks and other materials for classrooms, laboratories, and other such facilities, to help out these colleges and universities throughout the country. We have given first consideration to the universities and colleges with reference to their needs and the needs of the GI's and to municipalities with reference to their needs for housing veterans and servicemen. We are not asking for the construction of these Federal buildings, but are asking for a provision that will enable the country to prepare to go forward with delayed Federal construction when it can be done. This measure is reported to the House not only by a unanimous report of the committee, but it has been brought to the floor of the House at the solicitation, I may say, of more than two-thirds of the Members of the House. I am surprised that you gentlemen are not interested in having any Federal construction in your districts when the time comes when the Federal construction can be carried on.

I yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. DOYLE].

Mr. DOYLE. Mr. Speaker, may I say for the benefit of Members of the House who do not have a copy of the bill before them and who therefore do not see the exact language, on page 1, line 8, there is express provision that Federal projects cutside the District of Columbia are limited to the purpose of acquiring sites, preparing drawings and specifications, and to establish limits of costs. That, legislatively speaking, is an absolute limitation on the purpose for which any of this money is to be spent outside the District.

Mr. McGREGOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. BUCK].

Mr. BUCK. We are told on every hand that it will take from 3 to 5 years to catch up with the dwelling house construction program. If that length of time will elapse before surplus materials and surplus building mechanics will be available for public building construction, what sense is there in proceeding now to draw plans and acquire sites? Proper plans cannot be drawn until the site is known. Every time a site is purchased with Federal money, that site goes off the tax rolls. Your district and my district will thus suffer taxwise for each site the Government buys in advance of the time of use.

There is another point that has not been touched upon this afternoon. It was only last week that an industrial concern from my district came down here to obtain material for an addition to its plant, where 50 or 60 men would be employed. CPA refused approval. The men cannot be hired.

There is no sense in spending $30,000,000 for sites and plans at this time. The bill should be defeated.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. BUCK] has expired.

Mr. McGREGOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. CUNNINGHAM].

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, due to the fact that many of my colleagues from other States have asked me why I rose in opposition to the reorganization bill on final passage, which passed the House yesterday, I wish to make my position and reasons perfectly clear.

I voted "no" not because I am opposed to the reorganization but because I am opposed to the increase in pay and retirement sections of the bill. I also supported the request of my colleague from Iowa [Mr. LECOMPTE] for a record vote because I felt the Members should be recorded on such an important measure.

Mr. McGREGOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. MCDONOUGH].

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Speaker, I dislike to dispute the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM] for whom I have a very high regard and respect. I believe he is doing his duty as chairman of this committee in bringing the bill before the House at this time, but I am vitally concerned about the use of any materials any place in the United States that is going to interfere with the veterans' home-building program in any other place in the United States, especially in southern California.

I have had nothing but complaint after complaint from my district about the lack of efficiency and activity of the Wyatt housing program in southern California. Too many permits are being approved for nonhousing projects. With reference to the situation just recited by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. SPRINGER] about a dormitory for the college in his district, I have had the same complaint from the University of Southern California that has tried for 6 months to get material to build a dormitory to house 27 veterans. They cannot get any authority from the CPA, the OPA, or the ODT, or anybody else. As I recall, the veterans' housing bill which we voted on recently and which I supported we gave Mr. Wyatt this authority; that is, he had authority to supersede the CPA, the OPA, the ODT, and all of the other bureaucrats in order to get this job done, to provide homes for veterans, but he does not seem to be doing it. A congressional investigation is in order in my opinion. Now, I am not critical of the loyalty of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM] to his committee, but I am critical of the terms of any bill that will bring in any proposal to construct office buildings in the District if their construction will interfere with veterans' housing when we had sufficient buildings to operate all the Government during the war. I do not think we need these buildings now or for the next few years, until we have this veterans' housing program taken care of.

Mr. HUBER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McDONOUGH. I yield.

Mr. HUBER. One of the construction provisions of this bill is for the storage of film.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Yes.

Mr. HUBER. If you will check with our colleagues from Ohio [Mrs. BOLTON, Mr. BENDER, Mr. FEIGHAN, and Mr. CROSSER], they will tell you about the terrible disaster which occurred in Cleveland. You might be willing to have this construction go ahead now.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Where are they housed now?

Mr. HUBER. In ramshackle buildings, which certainly do not give any protection to Government employees or those in the vicinity. Those films are highly explosive and inflammable, with gas as poisonous as anything used in the war.

Mr. McDONOUGH. I want to refer to an extension of my own remarks which are published in the RECORD on July 23, of a survey made to find out the Nation-wide results with reference to this veterans' housing. Wires were sent in from all the congested areas of the United States, and every one of them reported back that the priorities on veterans' housing had failed miserably, and that veterans' homes are not being built rapidly enough to supply homes for returning veterans and their families.

I am fearful, for that reason, that this bill would interfere with the veterans' housing program. I shall continue to urge more speed and efficiency in the program of building homes for veterans who need them so badly.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. LANHAM. May I again assure the gentleman that construction is not provided for in this bill; that we have no intention of interfering with the housing for veterans.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. SASSCER].

Mr. SASSCER. Mr. Speaker, everyone knows there is a shortage of veterans' housing. Everyone knows that this Congress has been and is doing everything humanly possible to alleviate that shortage. Everyone who has read this bill knows or can readily see at a glance that it in no way conflicts with the veterans' housing program. It is merely postwar planning for badly needed post-office sites, the buildings to be erected at such time as the materials are available.

In addition there is an item in the bill for planning an office building at Suitland, Md., on Government-owned land, not to be erected at this time, merely to be planned.

The implication was made a moment ago that there was something sinister behind this bill, a lobby back of this bill. That was unjustifiable. If there is any lobby back of it the lobby has been working against it because we all know in Washington, Philadelphia, New York, and the big cities of the Nation this Government is paying hundreds of thousands upon hundreds of thousands of dollars each year for space rented in office buildings. This is planning merely. When in the future the buildings can be built the Government will save thousands upon thousands of dollars in rent.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SASSCER. I yield to the gentleman from West Virginia.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Is it not a fact that when the construction does take place throughout the country the Federal Government will actually be the saver? Is it not a further fact that the use of rented buildings and their upkeep costs now is more costly than will be the ultimate cost of building these structures to house the necessary Federal business?

Mr. SASSCER. That was the point I just tried to make a moment ago. I thank the gentleman for clarifying it.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Maryland has expired.

Mr. McGREGOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of the time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio is recognized.

Mr. McGREGOR. Mr. Speaker, I wish to concur in the statement of the chairman of our committee that this committee as a whole has been doing everything humanly possible for the veterans, and I will not lay my cloak aside for any member of the committee in my loyalty to the veteran, and may I say that I include the distinguished gentleman from Kentucky, who tells us he was a veteran of World War II. May I inform the gentleman that a great number of the Members are veterans of various wars and this statement includes the present speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I call your attention to the fact that this bill does include construction and I hope that each and every one of you will take the bill, H. R. 6917, and read on page 3 the following language, and I quote:

> One million one hundred and sixty thousand dollars for the drawing of plans and specifications for the whole project and for the construction of the first unit thereof.

Then we go down to section 3 and it gives authority to the Federal Works Administrator to purchase or condemn any building that he sees fit for immediate use. This is not a postwar program only. It is a postwar program as far as the $30,000,000 is concerned, which means possibly a post office in every district; but, Mr. Speaker, we need veterans' houses, we need homes for our workers, we need homes for our farmers; and how in the world are you going to square your conscience this afternoon after voting $32,000,000 or $33,000,000, a portion of it for immediate construction when we see the shortage that exists in critical materials and the immediate demand for veterans' homes?

I hope you will read this bill, for I think you will then agree with me that the permission "and for construction" is in this bill. It does not mean that the whole bill is going to be postwar. The $30,000,000 for post offices is postwar, but they can go in now and condemn buildings and purchase buildings.

Mr. Speaker, as I told you a few moments ago, the President sent a message to us saying he wanted us to pass the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill for housing; yet we come along and authorize thirty-two or thirty-three million dollars for new Federal buildings in this bill. It should be defeated and we should forget Federal office building construction until building material is available.

Let us, as I said before, take off the Federal pay roll about 1,000,000 employees and then we will not need so many Federal buildings, and I am certain we can do this and still not hinder the efficiency of our Government.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a vote.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. McGREGOR) there were—ayes 65, noes 58.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present, and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 160, nays 129, not voting 141, as follows:

[Roll No. 239]

YEAS—160

Abernethy	Flannagan	Lanham
Andrews, Ala.	Fogarty	Larcade
Angell	Folger	Lea
Barden	Forand	Lesinski
Barrett, Pa.	Gallagher	Link
Bell	Gardner	Lyle
Biemiller	Geelan	McCormack
Blackney	Gifford	McGlinchey
Bland	Goodwin	Madden
Bloom	Gordon	Manasco
Bonner	Gore	Marcantonio
Bradley, Pa.	Gorski	Michener
Brehm	Granahan	Mills
Brown, Ga.	Granger	Monroney
Buchanan	Grant, Ala.	Morgan
Bulwinkle	Gregory	Murdock
Byrne, N. Y.	Hale	Murray, Tenn.
Camp	Harless, Ariz.	Neely
Carnahan	Harris	O'Brien, Ill.
Celler	Havenner	O'Brien, Mich.
Chapman	Hays	O'Toole
Chelf	Healy	Outland
Clark	Hedrick	Pace
Cooley	Henry	Patman
Crosser	Hinshaw	Patterson
D'Alesandro	Hobbs	Peterson, Fla.
Davis	Hoch	Philbin
De Lacy	Holmes, Mass.	Pickett
Delaney, James J.	Holmes, Wash.	Poage
	Hook	Powell
Dingell	Huber	Pratt
Dondero	Hull	Price, Fla.
Doughton, N. C.	Jackson	Price, Ill.
Douglas, Calif.	Jarman	Quinn, N. Y.
Douglas, Ill.	Jenkins	Rabaut
Doyle	Judd	Rabin
Drewry	Kee	Rains
Durham	Kelley, Pa.	Randolph
Engle, Calif.	Kelly, Ill.	Rankin
Ervin	King	Resa
Fallon	Kirwan	Richards
Feighan	Klein	Riley
Fernandez	Kopplemann	Rivers
Fisher	Lane	Rizley
Roe, Md.	Sikes	Thomason
Rogers, Fla.	Smith, Maine	Traynor
Rogers, Mass.	Smith, Va.	Trimble
Rogers, N. Y.	Smith, Wis.	Voorhis, Calif.
Rooney	Spence	Walter
Rowan	Starkey	Weaver
Sabath	Stevenson	Whitten
Sadowski	Sullivan	Winstead
Sasscer	Sumners, Tex.	Woodhouse
Savage	Thomas, Tex.

NAYS—129

Andersen, H. Carl	Gillette	Miller, Nebr.
	Gillie	Mundt
Andresen, August H.	Graham	Murray, Wis.
	Grant, Ind.	Norblad
Arends	Griffiths	Norrell
Arnold	Gross	O'Hara
Auchincloss	Gwynne, Iowa	Pittenger
Barrett, Wyo.	Hagen	Plumley
Beall	Hall,	Ramey
Bennett, Mo.	Leonard W.	Reed, N. Y.
Bishop	Hand	Rich
Bolton	Herter	Robertson, N. Dak.
Brown, Ohio	Heselton
Brumbaugh	Hoeven	Rodgers, Pa.
Buck	Hoffman, Mich.	Schwabe, Mo.
Byrnes, Wis.	Hoffman, Pa.	Schwabe, Okla.
Campbell	Hope	Scrivner
Canfield	Horan	Schafer
Cannon, Mo.	Howell	Sharp
Case, N. J.	Jensen	Simpson, Ill.
Chiperfield	Johnson, Ill.	Smith, Ohio
Church	Johnson, Ind	Springer
Clason	Jones	Stefan
Clevenger	Jonkman	Sumner, Ill.
Cole, Mo.	Kean	Sundstrom
Cole, N. Y.	Kearney	Taber
Colmer	Kinzer	Talbot
Corbett	Knutson	Talle
Cunningham	Kunkel	Taylor
Curtis	LaFollette	Thom
D'Ewart	Latham	Thomas, N. J
Dirksen	LeCompte	Tibbott
Dolliver	LeFevre	Towe
Dworshak	Lemke	Vorys, Ohio
Eberharter	Lewis	Vursell
Ellis	Luce	Wadsworth
Ellsworth	McConnell	Weichel
Elsaesser	McCowen	Whittington
Fenton	McDonough	Wigglesworth
Fuller	McGregor	Wilson
Fulton	McMillen, Ill.	Wolcott
Gamble	Martin, Iowa	Wolverton, N. J.
Gavin	Martin, Mass.	Woodruff
Gearhart	Mason
Gerlach	Mathews

NOT VOTING—141

Adams	Elston	May
Allen, Ill.	Engel, Mich.	Merrow
Allen, La.	Fellows	Miller, Calif.
Almond	Flood	Morrison
Anderson, Calif.	Gary	Norton
Andrews, N. Y.	Gathings	O'Konski
Bailey	Gibson	O'Neal
Baldwin, Md.	Gillespie	Patrick
Baldwin, N. Y.	Gossett	Peterson, Ga.
Barry	Green	Pfeifer
Bates, Ky.	Gwinn, N. Y.	Phillips
Bates, Mass.	Hall,	Ploeser
Beckworth	Edwin Arthur	Priest
Bender	Halleck	Rayfiel
Bennet, N. Y.	Hancock	Reece, Tenn.
Boren	Hare	Reed, Ill.
Boykin	Harness, Ind.	Rees, Kans.
Bradley, Mich.	Hart	Robertson, Va.
Brooks	Hartley	Robinson, Utah
Bryson	Hébert	Robsion, Ky.
Buckley	Heffernan	Rockwell
Buffett	Hendricks	Roe, N. Y.
Bunker	Hess	Russell
Butler	Hill	Ryter
Cannon, Fla.	Holifield	Sheppard
Carlson	Izac	Sheridan
Case, S. Dak.	Jennings	Short
Chenoweth	Johnson, Calif.	Simpson, Pa.
Clements	Johnson, Okla.	Slaughter
Clippinger	Johnson, Tex.	Somers, N. Y.
Cochran	Keefe	Sparkman
Coffee	Kefauver	Stewart
Cole, Kans.	Keogh	Stigler
Combs	Kerr	Stockman
Cooper	Kilburn	Tarver
Courtney	Kilday	Tolan
Cox	Landis	Torrens
Cravens	Ludlow	Vinson
Crawford	Lynch	Wasielewski
Curley	McGehee	Welch
Daughton, Va.	McKenzie	West
Dawson	McMillan, S. C.	White
Delaney, John J.	Mahon	Wickersham
	Maloney	Winter
Domengeaux	Mankin	Wolfenden, Pa.
Earthman	Mansfield, Mont.	Wood
Eaton		Worley
Elliott	Mansfield, Tex.	Zimmerman

So, two-thirds not having voted in favor thereof, the motion was rejected.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Hébert and Mr. Bailey for, with Mr. Short against.

Mr. Kefauver and Mr. Keogh for, with Mr. Elston against.

Mr. Green and Mr. John J. Delaney for, with Mr. Hess against.

Mr. Flood and Mr. Hart for, with Mr. Hartley against.

Mr. Izac and Mr. Pfeifer for, with Mr. Eaton against.

Mrs. Norton and Mr. Sheridan for, with Mr. Harness of Indiana against.

Mr. Heffernan and Mr. Rayfiel for, with Mr. Bradley of Michigan against.

Mr. Lynch and Mr. Priest for, with Mr. Clippinger against.

General pairs until further notice:

Mr. Vinson with Mr. Ploeser.
Mr. Wood with Mr. Fellows.
Mr. Barry with Mr. Edwin Arthur Hall.
Mr. Sheppard with Mr. Adams.
Mr. Almond with Mr. Bender.
Mr. Boykin with Mr. Allen of Illinois.
Mr. Sparkman with Mr. Jennings.
Mr. Domengeaux with Mr. Hill.
Mr. Roe of New York with Mr. Halleck.
Mr. Buckley with Mr. Crawford.
Mr. Hare with Mr. Buffet.
Mr. Elliott with Mr. Chenoweth.
Mr. McGehee with Mr. Kilburn.
Mr. Gathings with Mr. Cole of Kansas.
Mr. Mansfield of Montana with Mr. Landis.
Mr. Morrison with Mr. Carlson.
Mr. Bates of Kentucky with Mr. Phillips.
Mr. Mahon with Mr. Rees of Kansas.
Mr. Bunker with Mr. Simpson of Illinois.
Mr. Holifield with Mr. Reed of Illinois.
Mr. Dawson with Mr. Stockman.
Mr. McKenzie with Mr. Robsion of Kentucky.
Mr. Somers of New York with Mr. Anderson of California.
Mr. McMillan of South Carolina with Mr. Gillespie.

Mr. BREHM and Mr. STEVENSON changed their votes from "no" to "aye."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The doors were opened.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. LARCADE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks with regard to the bill H. R. 7063 at the point in today's RECORD following the remarks made by the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SIKES] and to include therein several telegrams.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana?

There was no objection.

HOSPITAL SURVEY AND CONSTRUCTION ACT

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 191) to amend the Public Health Service Act to authorize grants to the States for surveying their hospitals and public-health centers and for planning construction of additional facilities, and to authorize grants to assist in such construction, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted etc., That this act may be cited as the "Hospital Survey and Construction Act."

SEC. 2. The Public Health Service Act (consisting of titles I to V, inclusive, of the act of July 1, 1944, 58 Stat. 682) is hereby amended by adding at the end thereof the following new title:

"TITLE VI—CONSTRUCTION OF HOSPITALS

"PART A—DECLARATION OF PURPOSE

"SEC. 601. The purpose of this title is to assist the several States—

"(a) to inventory their existing hospitals (as defined in section 631 (e)), to survey the need for construction of hospitals, and to develop programs for construction of such public and other nonprofit hospitals as will, in conjunction with existing facilities, afford the necessary physical facilities for furnishing adequate hospital, clinic, and similar services to all their people; and

"(b) to construct public and other nonprofit hospitals in accordance with such programs.

"PART B—SURVEYS AND PLANNING

"Authorization of appropriation

"SEC. 611. In order to assist the States in carrying out the purposes of section 601 (a), there is hereby authorized to be appropriated the sum of $3,000,000, to remain available until expended. The sums appropriated under this section shall be used for making payments to States which have submitted, and had approved by the Surgeon General, State applications for funds for carrying out such purposes.

"State applications

"SEC. 612. (a) To be approved, a State application for funds for carrying out the purposes of section 601 (a) must—

"(1) designate a single State agency as the sole agency for carrying out such purposes: Provided, That after a State plan has been approved under section 623, any further survey or programing functions shall be carried out, pursuant to section 623 (a) (10), by the agency designated in accordance with section 623 (a) (1);

"(2) provide for the designation of a State advisory council, which shall include representatives of nongovernment organizations or groups, and of State agencies, concerned with the operation, construction, or utilization of hospitals, including representatives of the consumers of hospital services selected from among persons familiar with the need for such services in urban or rural areas, to consult with the State agency in carrying out such purposes;

"(3) provide for making an inventory and survey in accordance with section 601 (a) containing all information required by the Surgeon General, and for developing a program in accordance with section 601 (a) and with regulations prescribed under section 622; and

"(4) provide that the State agency will make such reports, in such form and containing such information, as the Surgeon General may from time to time reasonably require, and give the Surgeon General, upon demand, access to the records on which such reports are based.

"(b) The Surgeon General shall approve any application for funds which complies with the provisions of subsection (a).

"Allotments to States

"SEC. 613. (a) Each State for which a State application under section 612 has been approved shall be entitled to an allotment of such proportion of any appropriation made pursuant to section 611 as its population bears to the population of all the States, and within such allotment it shall be entitled to receive 33⅓ percent of its expenditures in carrying out the purposes of section 601 (a) in accordance with its application: Provided, That no such allotment to any State shall be less than $10,000. The Surgeon General shall from time to time estimate the sum to which each State will be entitled under this section, during such ensuing period as he may determine, and shall thereupon certify to the Secretary of the Treasury the amount so estimated, reduced, or increased, as the case may be, by any sum by which the Surgeon General finds that his estimate for any prior period was greater or less than the amount to which the State was entitled for such period. The Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon, prior to audit or settlement by the General Accounting Office, pay to the State at the time or times fixed by the Surgeon General the amount so certified.

"(b) Any funds paid to a State under this section and not expended for the purposes for which paid shall be repaid to the Treasury of the United States.

"PART C—CONSTRUCTION OF HOSPITALS AND RELATED FACILITIES

"Authorization of appropriations

"SEC. 621. In order to assist the States in carrying out the purposes of section 601 (b) there is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for each of the four succeeding fiscal years, the sum of $75,000,000 for the construction of public and other nonprofit hospitals; and there are further authorized to be appropriated for such construction the sums provided in section 624. The sums appropriated pursuant to this section shall be used for making payments to States which have submitted, and had approved by the Surgeon General, State plans for carrying out the purposes of section 601 (b); and for making payments to political subdivisions of, and public or other nonprofit agencies in, such States.

"General regulations

"SEC. 622. Within 6 months after the enactment of this title the Surgeon General, with the approval of the Federal Hospital Council and the Administrator, shall by general regulation prescribe—

"(a) The number of general hospital beds required to provide adequate hospital services to the people residing in a State, and the general method or methods by which such beds shall be distributed among base areas, intermediate areas, and rural areas: Provided, That for the purposes of this title the total of such beds for any State shall not exceed 4½ per thousand population, except that in States having less than 12 and more than 6 persons per square mile the limit shall be 5 beds per thousand population, and in States having 6 persons or less per square mile the limit shall be 5½ beds per thousand population; but if, in any area (as defined in the regulations) within the State, there are more beds than required by the standards prescribed by the Surgeon General, the excess over such standards may be eliminated in calculating this maximum allowance.

"(b) The number of beds required to provide adequate hospital services for tuberculous patients, mental patients, and chronic-disease patients in a State, and the general method or methods by which such beds shall be distributed throughout the State: Provided, That for the purposes of this title the total number of beds for tuberculous patients shall not exceed two and one-half times the average annual deaths from tuberculosis in the State over the 5-year period from 1940 to 1944, inclusive, the total number of beds for mental patients shall not exceed five per thousand population, and the total number of beds for chronic disease patients shall not exceed two per thousand population.

"(c) The number of public health centers and the general method of distribution of such centers throughout the State, which for the purposes of this title, shall not exceed one per thirty thousand population, except that in States having less than 12 persons per square mile, it shall not exceed one per twenty thousand population.

"(d) The general manner in which the State agency shall determine the priority of projects based on the relative need of different sections of the population and of different areas lacking adequate hospital facilities, giving special consideration to hospitals serving rural communities and areas with relatively small financial resources.

"(e) General standards of construction and equipment for hospitals of different classes and in different types of location.

"(f) That the State plan shall provide for adequate hospital facilities for the people residing in a State, without discrimination on account of race, creed, or color, and shall provide for adequate hospital facilities for persons unable to pay therefor. Such regulation may require that before approval of any application for a hospital or addition to a hospital is recommended by a State agency, assurance shall be received by the State from the applicant that (1) such hospital or addition to a hospital will be made available to all persons residing in the territorial area of the applicant, without discrimination on account of race, creed, or color, but an exception shall be made in cases where separate hospital facilities are provided for separate population groups, if the plan makes equitable provision on the basis of need for facilities and services of like quality for each such group; and (2) there will be made available in each such hospital or addition to a hospital a reasonable volume of hospital services to persons unable to pay therefor, but an exception shall be made if such a requirement is not feasible from a financial standpoint.

"(g) General methods of administration of the plan by the designated State agency, subject to the limitations set forth in section 623 (a) (6) and (8).

"State plans

"SEC. 623. (a) After such regulations have been issued, any State desiring to take advantage of this part may submit a State plan for carrying out the purposes of section 601 (b). Such State plan must——

"(1) designate a single State agency as the sole agency for the administration of the plan, or designate such agency as the sole agency for supervising the administration of the plan;

"(2) contain satisfactory evidence that the State agency designated in accordance with paragraph (1) hereof will have authority to carry out such plan in conformity with this part;

"(3) provide for the designation of a State advisory council which shall include representatives of nongovernment organizations or groups, and of State agencies, concerned with the operation, construction, or utilization of hospitals, including representatives of the consumers of hospital services selected from among persons familiar with the need for such services in urban or rural areas, to consult with the State agency in carrying out such plans;

"(4) set forth a hospital construction program (A) which is based on a State-wide inventory of existing hospitals and survey of need; (B) which conforms with the regulations prescribed by the Surgeon General under section 622 (a) (b), and (c); (C) which, in the case of a State which has developed a program under part B of this title, conforms to the program so developed except for any modification required in order to comply with regulations prescribed pursuant to section 622 (a), (b), and (c), and except for any modification recommended by the State agency designated pursuant to paragraph (1) of this subsection and approved by the Surgeon General; and (D) which meets the requirements as to lack of discrimination on account of race, creed, or color, and for furnishing needed hospital services to persons unable to pay therefor, required by regulations prescribed under section 622 (f);

"(5) set forth the relative need determined in accordance with the regulations prescribed under section 622 (d) for the several projects included in such programs, and provide for the construction, insofar as financial resources available therefor and for maintenance and operation make possible, in the order of such relative need;

"(6) provide such methods of administration of State plan, including methods relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis (except that the Surgeon General shall exercise no authority with respect to the selection, tenure of office, or compensation of any individual employed in accordance with such methods), as the Surgeon General prescribes by regulation under section 622 (g);

"(7) provide minimum standards (to be fixed in the discretion of the State) for the maintenance and operation of hospitals which receive Federal aid under this part;

"(8) provide for affording to every applicant for a construction project an opportunity for hearing before the State agency;

"(9) provide that the State agency will make such reports in such form and containing such information as the Surgeon General may from time to time reasonably require, and give the Surgeon General, upon demand, access to the records upon which such information is based; and

"(10) provide that the State agency will from time to time review its hospital construction program and submit to the Surgeon General any modifications thereof which it considers necessary.

"(b) The Surgeon General shall approve any State plan and any modification thereof which complies with the provisions of subsection (a). If any such plan or modification thereof shall have been disapproved by the Surgeon General for failure to comply with subsection (a), the Federal Hospital Council shall, upon request of the State agency, afford it an opportunity for hearing. If such Council determines that the plan or modification complies with the provisions of such subsection, the Surgeon General shall thereupon approve such plan or modification.

"(c) No changes in a State plan shall be required within 2 years after initial approval thereof, or within 2 years after any change thereafter required therein, by reason of any change in the regulations prescribed pursuant to section 622, except with the consent of the State, or in accordance with further action by the Congress.

"(d) If any State, prior to July 1, 1948, has not enacted legislation providing that compliance with minimum standards of maintenance and operation shall be required in the case of hospitals which shall have received Federal aid under this title, such State shall not be entitled to any further allotments under section 624.

"Allotments to States

"SEC. 624. Each State for which a State plan has been approved prior to or during a fiscal year shall be entitled for such year to an allotment of a sum bearing the same ratio to the sums authorized to be appropriated pursuant to section 621 for such year as the product of (a) the population of such State and (b) the square of its allotment percentage (as defined in section 631 (a)) bears to the sum of the corresponding products for all of the States. The amount of the allotment to a State shall be available, in accordance with the provisions of this part, for payment of 33⅓ percent of the cost of approved projects within such State. The Surgeon General shall calculate the allotments to be made under this section and notify the Secretary of the Treasury of the amounts thereof. Sums allotted to a State for a fiscal year for construction and remaining unobligated at the end of such year shall remain available to such State for such purpose for the next fiscal year (and for such year only), in addition to the sums allotted for such State for such next fiscal year. Any amount of the sum authorized to be appropriated for a fiscal year which is not appropriated for such year, or which is not allotted in such year by reason of the failure of any State or States to have plans approved under this part, and any amount allotted to a State but remaining unobligated at the end of the period for which it is available to such State, is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the next fiscal year in addition to the sum otherwise authorized under section 621.

"Approval of projects and payments for construction

"SEC. 625. (a) For each project for construction pursuant to a State plan approved under this part, there shall be submitted to the Surgeon General through the State agency an application by the State or a political subdivision thereof or by a public or other nonprofit agency. Such application shall set forth (1) a description of the site for such project, (2) plans and specifications therefor in accordance with the regulations prescribed by the Surgeon General under section 622 (e), (3) reasonable assurance that title to such site is or will be vested solely in the applicant, (4) reasonable assurance that adequate financial support will be available for the construction of the project and for its maintenance and operation when completed, and (5) reasonable assurance that the rates of pay for laborers and mechanics engaged in construction of the project will be not less than the prevailing local wage rates for similar work as determined in accordance with Public Law 403 of the Seventy-fourth Congress, approved August 30, 1935, as amended. The Surgeon General shall approve such application if sufficient funds to pay 33⅓ percent of the cost of construction of such project are available from the allotment to the State, and if the Surgeon General finds (A) that the application contains such reasonable assurance as to title, financial support, and payment of prevailing rates of wages, (B) that the plans and specifications are in accord with the regulations prescribed pursuant to section 622, (C) that the application is in conformity with the State plan approved under section 623 and contains an assurance that the applicant will conform to the applicable requirements of the State plan and of the regulations prescribed pursuant to section 622 (f) regarding the provision of facilities without discrimination on account of race, creed, or color, and for furnishing needed hospital facilities for persons unable to pay therefor, and an assurance that the applicant will conform to State standards for operation and maintenance, and (D) that it has been approved and recommended by the State agency and is entitled to priority over other projects within the State in accordance with the regulations prescribed pursuant to section 622 (d). No application shall be disapproved until the Surgeon General has afforded the State agency an opportunity for a hearing.

"(b) Upon approving an application under this section, the Surgeon General shall certify to the Secretary of the Treasury an amount equal to 33⅓ percent of the estimated cost of construction of the project and designate the appropriation from which it is to be paid. Such certification shall provide for payment to the State, except that if the State is not authorized by law to make payments to the applicant the certification shall provide for payment direct to the applicant. Upon certification by the State agency, based upon inspection by it, that work has been performed upon a project, or purchases have been made, in accordance with the approved plans and specifications, and that payment of an installment is due to the applicant, the Surgeon General shall certify such installment for payment by the Secretary of the Treasury; except that if the Surgeon General, after investigation or otherwise, has ground to believe that a default has occurred requiring action pursuant to section 632 (a) he may, upon giving notice of hearing pursuant to such subsection, withhold certification pending action based on such hearing.

"(c) Amendment of any approved application shall be subject to approval in the same manner as an original application. Certification under subsection (b) may be amended, either upon approval of an amendment of the application or upon revision of the estimated cost of a project. An amended certification may direct that any additional payment be made from the applicable allotment for the fiscal year in which such amended certification is made.

"(d) The funds paid under this section for the construction of an approved project shall be used solely for carrying out such project as so approved.

"(e) If any hospital for which funds have been paid under this section shall, at any time within 20 years after the completion of construction, (A) be sold or transferred to any person, agency, or organization, (1) which is not qualified to file an application under this section, or (2) which is not approved as a transferee by the State agency designated pursuant to section 623 (a) (1), or its successor, or (B) cease to be a nonprofit hospital as defined in section 631 (g), the United States shall be entitled to recover from either the transferor or the transferee (or, in the case of a hospital which has ceased to be a nonprofit hospital, from the owners thereof) 33⅓ percent of the then value of such hospital, as determined by agreement of the parties or by action brought in the district court of the United States for the district in which such hospital is situated.

"PART D—MISCELLANEOUS

"Definitions

"SEC. 631. For the purposes of this title—

"(a) the allotment percentage for any State shall be 100 percent less that percentage which bears the same ratio to 50 percent as the per capita income of such State bears to the per capita income of the continental United States (excluding Alaska), except that (1) the allotment percentage shall in no case be more than 75 percent or less than 33⅓ percent, and (2) the allotment percentage for Alaska and Hawaii shall be 50 percent each, and the allotment percentage for Puerto Rico shall be 75 percent;

"(b) the allotment percentages shall be promulgated by the Surgeon General between July 1 and August 31 of each even-numbered year, on the basis of the average of the per capita incomes of the States and of the continental United States for the three most recent consecutive years for which satisfactory data are available from the Department of Commerce. Such promulgation shall be conclusive for each of the two fiscal years in the period beginning July 1 next succeeding such promulgation: Provided, That the Surgeon General shall promulgate such percentages as soon as possible after the enactment of this title, which promulgation shall be conclusive for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947;

"(c) the population of the several States shall be determined on the basis of the latest figures certified by the Department of Commerce;

"(d) the term 'State' includes Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and the District of Columbia;

"(e) the term 'hospital' (except as used in section 622 (a) and (b)) includes public health centers and general, tuberculosis, mental, chronic disease, and other types of hospitals, and related facilities, such as laboratories, out-patient departments, nurses' home and training facilities, and central service facilities operated in connection with hospitals, but does not include any hospital furnishing primarily domiciliary care;

"(f) the term 'public health center' means a publicly owned facility for the provision of public health services, including related facilities such as laboratories, clinics, and administrative offices operated in connection with public health centers;

"(g) the term 'nonprofit hospital' means any hospital owned and operated by a corporation or association, no part of the net earnings of which inures, or may lawfully inure, to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual;

"(h) the term 'construction' includes construction of new buildings, expansion, remodeling, and alteration of existing buildings, and initial equipment of any such buildings; including architects' fees, but excluding the cost of off-site improvements and, except with respect to public health centers, the cost of the acquisition of land; and

"(i) the term 'cost of construction' means the amount found by the Surgeon General to be necessary for the construction of a project.

"Withholding of certification

"SEC. 632 (a) Whenever the Surgeon General, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the State agency designated in accordance with section 612 (a) (1), finds that the State agency is not complying substantially with the provisions required by section 612 (a) to be contained in its application for funds under part B, or after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the State agency designated in accordance with section 623 (a) (1) finds (1) that the State agency is not complying substantially with the provisions required by section 623 (a), or by regulations prescribed pursuant to section 622, to be contained in its plan submitted under section 623 (a), or (2) that any funds have been diverted from the purposes for which they have been allotted or paid, or (3) that any assurance given in an application filed under section 625 is not being or cannot be carried out, or (4) that there is a substantial failure to carry out plans and specifications approved by the Surgeon General under section 625, the Surgeon General may forthwith notify the Secretary of the Treasury and the State agency that no further certification will be made under part B or part C, as the case may be, or that no further certification will be made for any project or projects designated by the Surgeon General as being affected by the default, as the Surgeon General may determine to be appropriate under the circumstances; and, except with regard to any project for which the application has already been approved and which is not directly affected by such default, he may withhold further certifications until there is no longer any failure to comply, or, if compliance is impossible, until the State repays or arranges for the repayment of Federal moneys which have been diverted or improperly expended.

"(b) (1) If the Surgeon General refuses to approve any application under section 625, the State agency through which the application was submitted, or if any State is dissatisfied with the Surgeon General's action under subsection (a) of this section, such State may appeal to the United States circuit court of appeals for the circuit in which such State is located. The summons and notice of appeal may be served at any place in the United States. The Surgeon General shall forthwith certify and file in the court the transcript of the proceedings and the record on which he based his action.

"(2) The findings of fact by the Surgeon General, unless substantially contrary to the weight of the evidence, shall be conclusive; but the court, for good cause shown, may remand the case to the Surgeon General to take further evidence, and the Surgeon General may thereupon make new or modified findings of fact and may modify his previous action, and shall certify to the court the transcript and record of the further proceedings. Such new or modified findings of fact shall likewise be conclusive unless substantially contrary to the weight of the evidence.

"(3) The court shall have jurisdiction to affirm the action of the Surgeon General or to set it aside, in whole or in part. The judgment of the court shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States upon certiorari or certification as provided in sections 239 and 240 of the Judicial Code, as amended.

"Federal hospital council; administration of title

"SEC. 633. (a) The Surgeon General is authorized to make such administrative regulations and perform such other functions as he finds necessary to carry out the provisions of this title. Any such regulations shall be subject to the approval of the Administrator.

"(b) In administering this title, the Surgeon General shall consult with a Federal Hospital Council consisting of the Surgeon General, who shall serve as chairman ex officio, and eight members appointed by the Administrator. Four of the eight appointed members shall be persons who are outstanding in fields pertaining to hospital and health activities, three of whom shall be authorities in matters relating to the operation of hospitals, and the other four members shall be appointed to represent the consumers of hospital services and shall be persons familiar with the need for hospital services in urban or rural areas. Each appointed member shall hold office for a term of 4 years, except that any member appointed to fill a vacancy occurring prior to the expiration of the term for which his predecessor was appointed shall be appointed for the remainder of such term, and the terms of office of the members first taking office shall expire, as designated by the Administrator at the time of appointment, two at the end of the first year, two at the end of the second year, two at the end of the third year, and two at the end of the fourth year after the date of appointment. An appointed member shall not be eligible to serve continuously for more than two terms but shall be eligible for reappointment if he has not served immediately preceding his reappointment. The Council is authorized to appoint such special advisory and technical committees as may be useful in carrying out its functions. Appointed Council members and members of advisory or technical committees, while serving on business of the Council, shall receive compensation at rates fixed by the Administrator, but not exceeding $25 per day, and shall also be entitled to receive an allowance for actual and necessary travel and subsistence expenses while so serving away from their places of residence. The Council shall meet as frequently as the Surgeon General deems necessary, but not less than once each year. Upon request by three or more members, it shall be the duty of the Surgeon General to call a meeting of the Council.

"(c) In administering the provisions of this title, the Surgeon General, with the approval of the Administrator, is authorized to utilize the services and facilities of any executive department in accordance with an agreement with the head thereof. Payment for such services and facilities shall be made in advance or by way of reimbursement, as may be agreed upon between the Administrator and the head of the executive department furnishing them.

"Conferences of State agencies

"SEC. 634. Whenever in his opinion the purposes of this title would be promoted by a conference, the Surgeon General may invite representatives of as many State agencies, designated in accordance with section 612 (a) (1) or section 623 (a) (1), to confer as he deems necessary or proper. Upon the application of five or more such State agencies, it shall be the duty of the Surgeon General to call a conference of representatives of all State agencies joining in the request. A conference of the representatives of all such State agencies shall be called annually by the Surgeon General.

"State control of operations

"SEC. 635. Except as otherwise specifically provided, nothing in this title shall be construed as conferring on any Federal officer or employee the right to exercise any supervision or control over the administration, personnel, maintenance, or operation of any hospital with respect to which any funds have been or may be expended under this title."

SEC. 3. Paragraph (2) of section 208 (b) of the Public Health Service Act, as amended, is amended by inserting "(A)" before the words "to assist"; by striking out the word "paragraph" and inserting in lieu thereof the word "clause"; and by striking out the period at the end of such paragraph and inserting in lieu thereof a comma and the following: "and (B) to assist in carrying out the purposes of title VI of this act, but not more than 20 such officers appointed pursuant to this clause shall hold office at the same time."

SEC. 4. Section 1 of the Public Health Service Act is amended to read:

"SECTION 1. Titles I to VI, of this act may be cited as the 'Public Health Service Act.'"

SEC. 5. The act of July 1, 1944 (58 Stat. 682), is hereby further amended by changing the number of title VI to title VII and by changing the number of section 601 to 612, inclusive, and references thereto, to sections 701 to 712, respectively.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. WOLVERTON of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 6 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina is recognized.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, the bill, S. 191, which we are now considering is known as the Hospital Survey and Construction Act.

The Subcommittee on Public Health of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce had hearings upon this bill and gave careful consideration to all of its provisions.

It is a known fact that in every State in the Union there is a lack of hospitals and hospital beds for those who are ill. In order to meet this situation, and in order therefore to encourage the construction of public and nonprofit hospitals, and the construction of public health centers, a grant of Federal funds is proposed through the various States to the sponsors of the projects, amounting to $75,000,000 per year, for 5 years, and it is hoped to relieve in part the situation that now exists.

It might be well for me to call to your attention that this bill only provides for an appropriation for 5 years, and it does not provide for the maintenance of any of these institutions. I do this because there is a fear in the minds of many that after the 5-year program is over that Congress will be called upon to extend it for another period of time. Probably it would take Federal appropriations amounting to one and one-half or two billion dollars to provide even at the present time the necessary hospital facilities. I do not think that this program should be carried on indefinitely, nor do I think that the Federal Government should enter into the maintenance of these hospitals after they are constructed.

It is true that there are too many calls upon the Federal Government to assist or to encourage States and communities in various projects. I took this all into consideration, and I weighed the aspects of future demands against the present needs of humanity. There are a great many people in many areas of this country who are unable to obtain hospital care. There are many people who are unable in some of the areas to even obtain medical treatment that they should have. I strongly feel that each and every State in the Union should assist this program and not just place the burden of construction upon the Federal Government and the localities. The House amendments to S. 191 reduced the amount of the grant from the Federal Government to the project down to a fixed sum of 33⅓ percent.

I know of no organization, or group, that opposes the passage of the bill. It has the unqualified endorsement of the American Medical Association. The doctors realize the necessity for the number of increased hospital beds in the United States. Personally, I feel that there should be a fixed allotment and that the allotment should be more than the 33⅓ percent, but be that as it may, the payment of one-third of the cost of any hospital, or clinic, will be a great help as well as a great incentive to provide the necessary beds for those who need hospitalization. To those of you who recently voted for a very large appropriation for the Army for next year in order to have proper national defense, may I remind you that the first great fundamental which is necessary in this Nation for national defense, as well as the safety and preservation of the Nation, is the health and happiness of its citizens. In order, therefore, that everyone might have a proper explanation of this bill, I wish to take in part statements from the general statement filed in the report as to this bill:

Basic purpose: The bill would amend the Public Health Service Act so as to authorize Federal grants-in-aid for two purposes:

1. To help the States survey all existing hospitals and public-health centers, determine their adequacy to afford the facilities necessary for adequate service to all the people of the State, and plan State-wide construction programs of the facilities needed, in conjunction with existing facilities, to supply such service, and

2. To assist in the construction of needed facilities for public and other nonprofit hospitals and for public-health centers, which State and local resources can help build and can maintain, and which are in conformity with the approved State construction program and the standards for construction projects required under the bill.

Appropriations: For survey and planning, the bill, as proposed to be amended, authorizes an appropriation of $3,000,000. For construction, appropriations of $75,000,000 per year for each of 5 years, beginning with the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, are authorized.

Administration: Federal administration of the program would be the responsibility of the Surgeon General of the Public Health Service in the Federal Security Agency. A Federal Hospital Council, consisting of the Surgeon General as Chairman and eight members, representative of consumers and producers of hospital and health services, appointed by the Administrator, is given the responsibility of approving the Surgeon General's general regulations governing State construction plans. The Council would also be the body to which an appeal could be taken by States whose construction plans are disapproved by the Surgeon General. The Council's other functions would be advisory.

The bill would require that the State construction plan be administered, or that the administration be supervised, by a single State agency, with consultative assistance from a State advisory council composed of representatives of both professional and consumer interests. For the period of survey and planning, there would be a similar requirement of administration by a single State agency and consultation with a State advisory council.

Allotments and grants: Federal funds for survey and planning would be allotted on a straight population basis and, within its allotment, each State with an approved application would receive a Federal grant, under the bill as proposed to be amended, equal to 33⅓ percent of its survey and planning expenses.

Federal funds for construction would be allotted annually to the States in accordance with a formula based on relative State populations and average per capita income. Federal grants for construction of individual projects, under the bill as proposed to be amended, would be 33⅓ percent of construction costs.

Type of program: The type of program set forth in the bill—one of cooperation with State agencies through grants-in-aid and through technical assistance and of similar cooperation with other public and nongovernmental institutions—fits into the general pattern already established by the various programs carried on by the Public Health Service under its basic law, the Public Health Service Act.

In the hearings on the bill, the great need for additional hospital and health-center facilities was described, and the objectives of the bill were strongly supported by representatives of many professional and consumer organizations. Among others, the supporting organizations include the American Hospital Association, Catholic Hospital Association, Protestant Hospital Association, American Medical Association, American Public Health Association, Physicians Forum, National Grange, American Farm Bureau Federation, National Farmers Union, Congress of Industrial Organizations, American Federation of Labor, Cooperative League of the United States of America, National Cooperatives, Inc., and the United States Conference of Mayors.

In conclusion, let me remind you that this bill, S. 191, with the amendments, will do much to alleviate suffering, and to make the lot of many people easier. It will place this Nation of ours in the forefront of all nations in public health and public welfare, so Mr. Speaker, I have requested that the rules be suspended and that the bill be passed as amended. I hope and trust that each and every Member of the House will vote for it.

Mr. WOLVERTON of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, this measure carries an authorization for $350,000,000 for the construction of hospitals throughout the several States.

I am wondering if you have examined some of these bills that are presently being called up for consideration under suspension of the rules and if you have noted how many hundreds of millions of dollars are involved in them?

Mr. Speaker, in my experience in the practice of medicine I learned something about the humanitarian end of medical practice and I believe that I can approach this measure without being accused of not sharing an interest in the hospital needs of the country. The fact is that the Federal Government can ill afford to lay out this money. There is not a man in this House who does not know that every State in the Union is better off financially than the Federal Government.

You must first extract this money from the States before you can give it to them. This is another entrenchment on the part of the Federal Government upon the States. It is supposed the States will have control of these funds for the construction of hospitals but it just will not work out that way. The Federal Government will have control. It seems to me to be absurd to think anything else.

Nor should we assume that this would be the end of the program so far as Federal appropriations are concerned. We may be certain that this would only be the beginning. More funds will be asked later.

Not only will the Federal Government have something to say about the construction of these hospitals but it will have much to do with running them.

This bill does not, as I understand, have the full support of the committee. I learned that only six or eight members voted to report it out. I think we ought to go slow in matters of this kind. It is easy for us to spend other people's money; oh, so easy.

Mr. MASON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. MASON. Uncle Sam today is in the red to the tune of $280,000,000,000. Every State in the Union has a surplus in its treasury. Practically every city in the Union has a surplus in its treasury. Then they come and ask Uncle Sam to hand out Federal aid to educate their children, to feed their children, to build hospitals, houses, and every other thing. Does it make sense?

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. I do not think it does.

Let me say a word about the recommendation of the American Medical Association for the enactment of this legislation. I am a member of the American Medical Association, and I respect its views, but the American Medical Association is not always right, and I think it is altogether wrong in respect to this proposition. The American Medical Association is not responsible for maintaining the soundness and integrity of the Federal finances.

Mr. RABIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. RABIN. Will the gentleman be good enough to point out in what respect the Federal Government has any control over the maintenance or operation of these hospitals after the money has been given?

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. The gentleman can answer his own question, for he knows, or ought to know, that Federal control accompanies every Federal dollar that is handed out.

Mr. RABIN. Will the gentleman let me answer it?

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. The Federal Government is not in this business just for its health either.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. WOLVERTON of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman one additional minute.

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. Let us view this matter in the light of the facts before us. We do not have the money to spend. We speak about inflation. This is an inflationary measure. The OPA has been set up to control prices, but the OPA cannot control the inflationary effect of these expenditures; that is simply out of the question.

I ask the Members of this body to be reasonable. Let us turn this proposition down by all means. The condition of the Treasury prompts us to do this.

The building of hospitals by the Federal Government as proposed in this bill is a long step toward bureaucratizing medicine in the United States. It should be defeated upon that ground if no other.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK].

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, this is a bill in which every prominent humane organization, religious and otherwise, of the country, is deeply interested. This is a bill which has received the deep and profound consideration of outstanding citizens of all walks of life and of all sections of our country. My friend the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SMITH] is opposed to everything. He opposes any kind of legislation relating to housing, and the gentleman is sincere in his convictions. But I think the gentleman is absolutely wrong in taking the adamant position he does against everything, when we have in mind the complex economic system that envelops the people of our country today. When he says it is another entrenchment on the part of the Federal Government I cannot agree with him. This is absolutely along the line of our road-building program, along the line of Federal aid in other activities. Nobody says that is entrenchment on the part of the Federal Government on the several States.

Who are some of the organizations that are in support of this bill? Among others, the supporting organizations include the American Hospital Association, Catholic Hospital Association, Protestant Hospital Association, American Medical Association, American Public Health Association, Physicians Forum, National Grange, American Farm Bureau Federation, National Farmers Union, Congress of Industrial Organizations, American Federation of Labor, Cooperative League of the United States of America, National Cooperatives, Inc., and the United States Conference of Mayors. I never thought I would see the day when all those associations would be in support of a bill of this kind.

As we know, this legislation has been discussed for years. To me, the pleasing thing is that after years of consideration and discussion many disturbing details have been ironed out and these various fine American philanthropic and religious organizations, all interested in the welfare of the human being, have agreed in support of this bill.

This bill is a fair bill; this bill is consistent with our scheme of government; this bill is not an entrenchment upon the part of the Federal Government on our several States of the Union; this bill constitutes a strengthening influence; this bill takes into consideration human beings; it stresses human values and uses dollars in order to bring about benefits for sick human beings in the districts of our country which need hospitalization and medical care. I quote from the report:

> Of the more than 3,000 counties in the Nation, approximately 40 percent of them, containing some 15,000,000 people, are, according to testimony in the hearing, without any registered hospital.

In the year 1946, with the conditions confronting us economically in particular as they do, I contend that legislation of this kind is proper for the Congress of the United States and the Federal Government to consider and pass. It is legislation aimed to improve the health of human beings. My State may not benefit so much as others and I am not concerned about that, because I view this and other legislation of this kind from the angle of benefit to the people nationally. I am not a sectionalist.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. HENRY. There are municipalities within my district back home in Wisconsin that are desperately in need of hospital facilities. I like to think of myself as being one who is economy-minded, but as the gentleman says, I do not believe we can be so economy-minded when it comes to matters of human values and human health.

Mr. McCORMACK. I thank the gentleman for his contribution.

Mr. D'ALESANDRO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Maryland.

Mr. D'ALESANDRO. The directors of Johns Hopkins and many other hospitals throughout the State of Maryland urge the passage of this bill.

Mr. McCORMACK. Yes; we have all received letters from outstanding people in all walks of life. This is the first time that I have ever seen such unanimity on a bill of this kind among people and organizations that we all have profound respect for. As a Catholic, I respect the Protestant Hospital Association. I know non-Catholics respect the Catholic Hospital Association. I respect every one of these fine associations. They are all behind this humane bill. The bill provides $75,000,000 a year for 5 years in order to provide hospitals in sections of the country where they are needed to bring relief to suffering human beings who, like you and me, are citizens of our country. I hope that two-thirds of the membership will vote to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

Mr. WOLVERTON of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BROWN].

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, as ranking minority member of the subcommittee on public health, I am supporting this legislation. I want to discuss it with you for a few minutes very frankly, if I may, to give you my thoughts on the subject.

I have had considerable doubt in my mind as to the propriety of this legislation, yet I am supporting it because my sympathy, and perhaps my sentiment, overcomes my opposition to the establishment of another Government-sponsored Federal-aid program. This bill, in my opinion, should be enacted into law because of the great need for hospital facilities throughout the United States at this time, and because a great war has created a great emergency. In almost every section of the country there exists a serious shortage of hospital facilities. There has been very little or no construction except for military and naval hospitals during the war, or during the past 5 or 6 years. There are a great many local communities and political subdivisions which have issued bonds in preparation for building additions to existing hospitals or constructing new hospitals as soon as building-supply conditions will permit. Such bonds have already been issued, and taxes have been levied, yet, because of the unexpected and unforeseeable increase in the cost of construction, unless some aid is given, these badly needed hospital facilities may not be constructed. The same situation exists as far as church-supported and charity hospitals are concerned. So this bill is designed by its authors to give a lift, as it were, over this war-created hump so the present great shortage in hospital facilities can be ended at the earliest possible moment.

My sympathy and my heart tell me that this need does exist and that it must be met. On the other hand—and I want to be very frank with you, as I said in the beginning—I see the danger of establishing by this law a program of Federal aid for the construction of hospitals which may become more or less permanent. I realize that the amount of Federal aid included in this bill—$75,000,000 per year for 5 years—which must be matched by the States, their political subdivisions, or the recipient hospitals, by an amount double that contributed by the Federal Government, or on a one-third and two-thirds basis, will not meet the present needs, for increased hospital facilities, and that there may be demands in the future for this program to be extended. Therefore, the question comes as to whether or not we can and will, in the future, have the courage and the fortitude to refuse to continue or extend the program, once the present emergency is over.

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I yield.

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. Is it not a fact that the States are more able to do this work than the Federal Government, financially?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Yes; but many States cannot do this work, financially, because of limitations in the State constitutions. There are other reasons as well. For instance, there are some of the States which need and must have this help.

This measure has the support, as Dr. Smith has told you of most of the medical and hospital associations of the Nation. Is has the general support of almost every welfare group and State health organization. Yet I must admit there is a danger that, as a result of the enactment of this legislation, we may create a demand in the future for financial aid from the Federal Government for the maintenance and operation of the hospitals which will be erected under this program.

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I yield.

Mr. JENSEN. Not only that, but there is no question but what the Federal Government will try to control these hospitals in my town and your town. Not only that, you will have State control of these hospitals.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Let me say to the gentleman, we have tried to write in every safeguard we could in connection with that particular problem. I realize there is a danger that the Federal Government may try to step into the field of control and operation of these local institutions. Also, there does exist some danger that we may be taking a step toward socialized medicine.

Mr. JENSEN. The gentleman knows wherever Federal dollars go, there goes Federal control, even in our Federal aid to roads.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Too often that has been true in the past, yet we are faced today with a situation that there is urgent need, almost beyond estimate, for hospital facilities in this country, especially right in the rural areas such as the gentleman from Iowa represents in the Congress.

The whole question before us today is whether or not we are going to meet the demand and the need, be guided by our hearts and our sympathies and vote for this legislation, or whether we are going to follow only the cold logic which warns us of the danger that threatens from greater Federal control and increased Federal expenditures. That is the decision which each of you must make. I, myself, knowing of the great need which exists for more hospital facilities, have decided to support this legislation.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BIEMILLER].

Mr. BIEMILLER. Mr. Speaker, when the Hospital Construction Act, S. 191, left the Senate there were two or three features that I thought were not good. It was my privilege to appear before the subcommittee which handled this measure and discuss those sections. I am happy to note that they have accepted two of the amendments that I suggested at that time.

There is one feature of the bill, however, that I view with great misgiving. I think the creation of an administrative council rather than an advisory council may lead in the long run to a bad governmental structure. It does not seem to me to be good governmental practice to permit part time, practically dollar-a-year persons, who represent outside interests, such as the medical profession, the hospital associations, farm organizations, labor unions, or chambers of commerce, to exert a veto power over the decisions of a Government administrator, particularly when those decisions involve the expenditure of funds voted by the Congress. If this bill were before us under a rule, instead of under suspension, I would certainly offer an amendment and endeavor to correct what I deem to be a very bad practice.

But in spite of the fact that I have strong objections to this one feature of the bill, I think the over-all objectives are so important and so worthy that I sincerely hope the House will see fit today to suspend the rules and pass this very meritorious measure. The need for new hospitals is unquestionable and this splendid humanitarian bill deserves the support of every Member of the Congress.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. COLMER].

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, I am keenly interested in seeing this bill, S. 191, pass the House today so that it may be sent to conference thereafter and subsequently become the law before the Congress adjourns as scheduled next week. I am also happy in the thought that I have contributed something in my humble way toward seeing that goal accomplished.

When this bill was before the subcommittee of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, I appeared before that subcommittee and urged that it be reported to the full committee. Subsequently that was done and the full Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce reported the bill. The chairman of that committee with others then appeared before the Rules Committee seeking a rule for the consideration of the bill on the floor of the House. Because of my keen interest in the bill I contributed what I could toward getting a rule, and I get considerable satisfaction out of the fact that I was authorized on behalf of the Rules Committee to report the rule to the floor of the House. Moreover, I am glad that in the interest of expediting consideration of the bill we have been given this opportunity to suspend the rules and consider the bill today.

Of course, this procedure means that it will be necessary for the friends of this legislation to be on the alert and to be present when the vote is taken, requiring two-thirds vote as it does under this procedure.

Mr. Speaker, the Senate has already passed this bill, and if we can pass this bill today it can be sent to conference and become law.

I dare say that possibly the greatest need in the country today is the need for additional hospital facilities. While this bill is not all that could be desired, it will go a long way toward meeting the needs.

The bill amends the Senate bill in some respects, but this can be ironed out in conference. In the main the bill would help the States conduct a survey of all existing hospitals and public health centers, determine their adequacy to afford the facilities necessary for adequate service to all the people of the State, and plan State-wide construction programs of the facilities needed in conjunction with existing facilities to supply such service.

It would assist in the construction of needed facilities for public health centers.

It authorizes an appropriation of $3,000,000 for these surveys and $75,000,000 per year for 5 years beginning with the fiscal year beginning June 30, 1947, for assisting the States in construction of the needed hospitals.

It would authorize a 33⅓ percent Federal contribution to the funds raised by States, counties, or other subdivisions of government to bring about this needed construction. The bill would set up a Federal Hospital Council consisting of the Surgeon General, as chairman, and eight members which would be the Federal administrative body, but the administration of the hospitals themselves would be under the State agency.

Federal funds for survey and planning would be allotted on a straight population basis and within its allotment each State with an approved application would receive a Federal grant under the bill equal to 33⅓ percent of its survey and planning expenses. Federal grants for construction of the individual projects under the bill would be 33⅓ percent of the construction cost.

The bill, if it becomes law, will prove to be one of the greatest steps in our public health program yet undertaken. Moreover, this program, as provided for in this bill, will take cognizance for the first time of the fact that the rural States are in the greatest need of an expanded hospitalization program. It will prove a great boon to those States like Mississippi.

Mr. Speaker, as I stated a moment ago, when this matter was before the subcommittee of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee of the House in March of this year, I appeared before that committee and urged that the bill be reported favorably. The statement I made then was as follows:

STATEMENT OF HON. WILLIAM M. COLMER, MEMBER OF CONGRESS FROM THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I am very grateful for the opportunity to appear before your committee in behalf of S. 191. I am in accord with the objectives of this bill. The Senate has already in its wisdom seen fit to pass the bill, and I am very much in hopes that this subcommittee will see fit to make an early endorsement of the bill to the full committee and that that committee will in turn report the bill favorably. In that connection I assure you that as a member of the Rules Committee when you apply for a rule for the consideration of this measure you will find a sympathetic reception awaits you.

There is nothing more important in the life of our citizens than the necessity for adequate medical care. In fact, life itself is dependent upon the benefits of such care. The United States has long been the leader in the world not only in political advancement but for advancement in the standards of living and medical care. However, during the war it must be realized that the health of our civilian population has of necessity been neglected. So many of our doctors were called into the service to minister to those who fought the country's battles abroad, as well as those who were preparing in camps for that objective, that our civilian population did not always have the proper medical attention.

It is obvious also that during the past 5 years our efforts have been largely to win that war. The result has been that hospitals, both public and private, for the reception of our unfortunate ill have not been constructed as during the peacetime period. In other words, few hospitals, except for military personnel, were with rare exceptions constructed during the war period. The result has been that our hospital facilities have not been expanded along with our normal population increase; construction materials, labor, and other necessities for construction have been unavailable during that period. As a result our hospital facilities have lagged behind the rest of our program. Moreover, there is an ever-increasing demand, which goes hand in hand with our advancement in civilization, for new hospital facilities.

In addition thereto, heretofore communities, counties, and States have had to depend upon their own resources for the construction of public hospital facilities. This bill offers an opportunity to these various subdivisions of government to have their own funds locally raised augmented by Federal funds on the theory that the public health is in the interest of the public welfare.

In my own section of the country this will prove a great boon. For, unfortunately, in many agricultural sections of the South the revenue secured by the various governmental subdivisions is not sufficient to bring about the desired facilities for hospitalization. In my own congressional district there are many communities which would like to take advantage of the provisions of this bill. For instance, in Jones County, Miss., the enlightened and progressive people of that county have long been striving to provide adequate hospital facilities for that community. The largest city in that county is Laurel, with a population of some 30,000. In the several counties surrounding that county there is only one county with hospital facilities. The hospital at Laurel has a capacity of only approximately 50 beds, and yet the people of the surrounding counties with no hospital facilities and numbering some 100,000 are dependent upon this small hospital for their medical treatment. If this bill is enacted into law, the people of that county will go forward with their plans to erect a modern construction, which will prove a boon to 100,000 people in that vicinity.

I sincerely hope, Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, that you will see fit to report this bill.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. PHILBIN].

Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Speaker, I am very much interested in this bill. Several privately endowed hospitals in my district will be greatly assisted in their plans to expand their present facilities if this measure is adopted. Similar institutions all over the country have funds on hand to commence new building operations and to provide urgently needed additional facilities. At the time these funds were accumulated, in many cases they were sufficient for the purposes intended, but as was brought out by my distinguished colleague from Ohio, the rapidly advancing postwar costs in building construction require that these funds be supplemented by Federal grants. This measure will afford necessary assistance for this worthy and humane work and will enable publicly supported and privately endowed hospitals all over the Nation to set up vitally, and not infrequently desperately, needed hospital facilities.

There is no question of overextended or intrusive Federal control, Federal manipulation, or Federal influence involved in this bill in my opinion; and I urge and plead with the House that we may suspend the rules and pass the bill.

Let me thank the committee, particularly the distinguished gentleman from North Carolina, for expediting action on this measure which I regard to be so very vital to the public welfare, and let me especially acknowledge with great approval and deep gratitude the brilliant and persuasive speech of my good friend, the majority leader, which has contributed so materially and, I believe, effectively, to this discussion.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. HARLESS].

Mr. HARLESS of Arizona. Mr. Speaker, I shall support this bill wholeheartedly.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. MILLER].

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, 25 years ago people did not go to a hospital except to die. Today, when people get ill they want to go to hospitals. It is for that reason I feel this bill should be supported—more beds must be available to the public.

While I am generally opposed to Federal participation of this type. I think that when you read the hearings and the bill you will find that the purpose of the bill is to take care of those thinly populated communities that need hospital facilities but do not have them now. I know something about the problems of small hospitals, for I operated a small hospital in Kimball, Nebr., the first in the county, 27 years ago.

I recommend this bill to you. The State legislatures must have enabling legislation. The procedure remains under State control. The Federal Government matches one-third of the funds. I do feel that it will make it possible for sparsely settled communities to have public-health facilities that they could not otherwise have. Those counties, cities, and nonprofit hospitals that have little bonded indebtedness and a healthy financial condition should build their own hospitals without Federal assistance. That detail is left to the States. This bill has sufficient merit to have my support.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTINGTON].

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I favor the passage of the pending measure. It was passed by the Senate and was reported to the House after careful consideration by the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce on July 13, 1946. The bill authorizes appropriations for Federal aid to hosiptals amounting to $75,000,000 annually for a period of 5 years. The Senate bill provided for the Federal Government paying one-half of the costs. The House bill, which under the rules cannot be amended, provides for the Federal Government contributing one-third of the cost of the hospitals. The bill also provides for Federal aid in planning for construction.

There is widespread need for additional hospitals, especially in the agricultural and rural areas. In some counties there are no hospitals. The bill will enable several counties to cooperate and thus provide hospitalization on more reasonable terms. Many of the States provide for aid in hospitalization. With Federal and State aid, hospitals should be widely constructed.

There is an inadequacy of hospital and health facilities in many of the States. The lack is not due to the want of interest or initiative. Rural and other relatively poor areas are unable to construct their hospitals. There is an opportunity for the demonstration of the principle of Federal aid to promote health not only in the rural, but in the urban areas.

The bill does not contemplate Federal supervision. It is planned to leave to the State and local agencies, including not only public but private nonprofit hospitals, the supervision and control of these hospitals. I believe that the public interest will be promoted by the passage of the bill to enable the Federal Government to make grants and to provide aid in the planning and construction of hospitals where there are no existing adequate hospital facilities.

Mr. WOLVERTON of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BRUMBAUGH] as he may desire.

Mr. BRUMBAUGH. Mr. Speaker, I am wholeheartedly in favor of the enactment of S. 191 because of its far-reaching benefits to the American people.

There is no doubt that the hospitals in the United States are facing difficulties that are a menace to the health and welfare of our citizens. Because of overcrowded conditions, obsolete equipment, old buildings, and increased operating expenses the care of medical and surgical patients has been carried on under difficult conditions.

In the past decade mounting taxes have been a factor in the loss of contributions to hospitals by industrial concerns and private benefactors. Many community hospitals depended upon these annual contributions as an aid in meeting the operating expenses. They have had to rely on State aid as the only means of outside revenue.

The cost of maintaining old buildings is in itself a great hardship and prevents hospital authorities from expanding the facilities of these important institutions.

The great strides made in the field of medicine and surgery have revealed new and revolutionary methods of caring for the sick and wounded. Modern apparatus is needed that cannot be purchased by hospitals that are faced with the difficult task of keeping their doors open.

I am certain that when we approved the grant of $20,000,000 for hospitals in the District of Columbia we were conscious of the dilapidated buildings and outmoded equipment that hospital staffs are forced to use in the Nation's Capital. The same situation prevails in every State of the Union.

Therefore, in the interest of the health and welfare of the American people I am in favor of prompt approval of S. 191.

Certainly if we can open the Nation's purse to foreign countries on the plea that we should aid our neighbors overseas with unsecured loans, we should consider our obligation to the people of the United States by recognizing the immediate need for adequate hospital facilities in promoting the health of our own American citizens.

Mr. WOLVERTON of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. BUCK].

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, are there no limits to these new and unusual drains upon the Federal Treasury? Here, it seems to me, is the most startling one yet. More than a third of a billion dollars, only 40 minutes to consider it, and the bill reaches the floor on the vote of only 8 out of the 26 members of the committee. Even if we could afford it, this would be a bad bill.

And this is a strange aspect of the matter: Every State in the country is better off financially than the Federal Government. Yet it remains for us here in Washington, in our great wisdom, to recognize crying hospital needs in the far reaches of the country when local and State communities do not feel those needs sufficiently to spend their own money for that purpose.

Mr. WOLVERTON of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. O'HARA].

Mr. O'HARA. Mr. Speaker, I am supporting this bill for the benefit of those municipalities and those hospitals that do not have the financial ability to finance the building of such hospitals. I do not support it on the theory that we ought to build hospitals all over the country at Government expense. I say that in view of the fact that the Federal Government on a matching basis of only 33⅓ percent is reducing what was passed by the Senate in S. 191. I believe the subcommittee of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee have improved this bill otherwise. It is in such shape and upon the condition that we will not be asked again to go into the hospital business that I am supporting this bill.

Mr. WOLVERTON of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOWELL].

Mr. HOWELL. Mr. Speaker, as a member of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce who had the opportunity to learn as much about this bill as most Members of the House of Representatives, I am supporting it. The gentleman who preceded me, my colleague the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. O'HARA], mentioned the fact that the Federal contribution has been reduced in the House version of this bill to 33⅓ percent. It was my privilege to offer this amendment and it was done for the specific purpose of making the program a little more all inclusive, a little more expansive than where the States were required to put up only 50 percent of the matched funds. Under the House version the program can be expanded to $225,000,000 annually with the States contributing two-thirds of the total and the Federal Government only one-third.

Another feature of the House measure, something everyone should be interested in who is opposed to Federal control of hospitals, is section 635. The committee has gone just as far as possible to insure the fact that there will be no Federal control by providing:

> Except as otherwise specifically provided, nothing in this title shall be construed as conferring on any Federal officer or employee the right to exercise any supervision or control over the administration, personnel, maintenance, or operation of any hospital with respect to which any funds have been or may be expended under this title.

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOWELL. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. JUDD. What does it mean when it says that the plan must meet specified minimum standards for maintenance and operation? Does that mean the Federal Government can decide how they shall operate and maintain a hospital?

Mr. HOWELL. No; not in my opinion. It is assumed that the States will have a responsible agency that is qualified to judge just what the minimum standards for the efficient maintenance and operation of hospitals ought to be.

Mr. WOLVERTON of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. JENSEN].

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, now is the time to stop, look, and think what we are doing here today. This bill S. 191, is a part of the Wagner-Murray-Dingell cradle-to-the-grave bill. We are legislating that socialized-medicine bill into law piecemeal. Our New Deal planners hope finally to get the cradle-to-the-grave bill made law in toto by this scheme. But if this bill S. 191 is made law we will have taken a big step toward socialized medicine, that is a certainty. With rare exceptions every doctor and nurse in my district who has studied this bill is opposed to its adoption. Let us stop this mad rush to socialism or worse before it is too late. Certainly, if the people of America have lost that sense of neighborly feeling and benevolence toward their loved ones, their friends, and their neighbors to the end that they refuse to provide adequate hospital facilities for their own sick and suffering, then this Nation is in a mighty bad fix. I cannot believe they have come to that yet, unless we wish it upon them.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

Mr. WOLVERTON of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. GILLIE].

Mr. GILLIE. Mr. Speaker, as a general rule I have opposed Federal subsidies to the States, as my voting record will show, but I am fully in accord with the objectives of this bill and believe that it should be enacted without delay.

I know of several instances in my own district where hospital facilities are urgently required and cannot be provided without the assistance contemplated in this measure. I am sure that many other sections of the country are in a similar position with respect to such facilities and that this legislation will be a godsend to them.

There is nothing more important to the welfare of the Nation than adequate medical care. Our country has always been a world leader in the advancement of standards of living and medical assistance. However, during the war, our medical program was necessarily neglected. Many communities suffered due to the calling into service of young physicians. Hospital construction virtually ceased, with the exception of military construction.

The result has been that hospital facilities in most communities have been badly neglected and are in great need of expansion and repair. Local communities, in many instances, do not have the financial resources to bring their hospital facilities up to minimum standards, and there is a very definite need for Federal help in the form of grants in aid.

I believe that it is incumbent upon the people of the United States, through their Congress, to rectify this situation by means of the logical and well-planned program proposed in this legislation. I am not in favor of socialized medicine in any form, but I do believe that the Federal Government should lend financial assistance to public hospitals served by individual doctors operating under a system of free enterprise.

Mr. WOLVERTON of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California [Mr. HINSHAW].

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Speaker, when considering this legislation we should remember that $75,000,000 per year, when divided by 435, which is the number of congressional districts and hence a proper measure of apportionment of the funds, will yield about $172,000 a year for 5 years to each district. Everyone should know that the cost of building hospitals and equipping them is somewhere in the neighborhood of $3,500 to $4,000 per bed, which means that this bill provides about 40 or 50 beds for each congressional district. To my congressional district that is important, but it does not mean too much.

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HINSHAW. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. JENSEN. This is simply a means of getting the camel's nose under the tent.

Mr. HINSHAW. It will have to be $500,000,000 in another year.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CHAPMAN].

Mr. CHAPMAN. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Iowa is right in saying that the people in these small towns and rural communities are neighborly and generous, and are actuated by humanitarian impulses. But the fact remains that they are unable to provide these hospitals for themselves. As the distinguished majority, the gentleman from Massachusetts said, 40 percent of the more than 3,000 counties in the United States have no hospital facilities at all. We know that the scarcity of physicians is in almost direct ratio to the scarcity of hospital beds. For example, up to the time of the World War, when so many of our doctors answered the call to the colors and put on the uniform of the Army and the Navy, in communities having 4.6 hospital beds per 1,000 population, there was 1 doctor for every 600 people. In communities—and there are many of them—where there was less than 1 hospital bed per 1,000 population there was 1 doctor for every 1,350 people.

Infant mortality, because of medical progress and sanitary improvement, has been reduced in this country until there are about 40 deaths to every 1,000 births, but in communities that do not have adequate hospitals the infant mortality rate is appalling. We must not permit this condition to continue anywhere in the United States.

There are three kinds of hospitals: Proprietary, which are privately owned and operated for profit; public, which are supported at public expense, and the voluntary nonprofit hospitals, which include most of the hospitals operated by churches of various denominations, fraternal organizations, and local nonprofit hospital associations, in which classification probably the major portion of hospitals belong. This bill would grant aid to the public hospitals and to all of these nonprofit voluntary hospitals, the ones that serve most of our country. For rural communities unable to support a hospital this bill makes provision for grants in aid for the establishment of local health centers, which would be of incalculable benefit to millions of our fellow citizens "far from the maddening crowd's ignoble strife."

The old-fashioned country doctor, who visited alike the hovels of the poor and the mansions of the rich, ministered to all classes and conditions of society, and alleviated the pains of suffering humanity, with or without hope of remuneration, was more than a great personality. He was a great and beloved American institution. Now, with rare exceptions, he has become a part of the history and folklore of America, and is a tender memory of this generation of American people. Yes, Mr. Speaker, but the doctor of the future is going to practice his profession where he has laboratory and hospital facilities, and can make the best of modern equipment and well-trained nurses available for the treatment of his patients.

Many great hospitals have been endowed by the possessors of large personal fortunes, but our present and prospective economic system and tax structure indicate that there will be fewer such fortunes in the future than in the past. This measure would induce endowments, and would be an incentive to communities to wage subscription campaigns and issue bonds for 66⅔ percent of the hospital cost in order to make available the 33⅓-percent Federal grant. It is expressly and explicitly written in this bill that there shall be no Federal control when this grant is made to a local organization to build a hospital. That local hospital organization will have control of that hospital and will operate it without Federal supervision or Federal dictation. It is provided that if within a period of 20 years the hospital should pass into the hands of an agency not authorized to accept this grant, such as a hospital company operating for profit, a refund would have to be made to the Government of the money that had been advanced for the construction of the hospital.

In passing this bill we are answering the call of humanity.

Years ago in France a referendum was held to determine which was the greatest name in French history. The people of France in that referendum did not select the name of one of the literary geniuses whose names illumine the pages of French literature. They did not go into the field of French statesmanship. They did not even select that renowned soldier "who born no king made monarchs draw his car," whose stakes were empires, whose dice were human bones, the first Napoleon. Rather, by a majority of millions the people of the French Republic selected as the greatest name in the annals of France the name of the man of science, the man who labored through long hours, day and night, in the laboratories, evolving formulas, not to kill people but to save lives, the father of modern medicine, Louis Pasteur.

Mr. Speaker, let us find our just reward in serving humanity, in answering suffering humanity's crying need. Let us pass this bill by the necessary two-thirds majority, to relieve suffering and save lives.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members who desire to do so may extend their remarks at this point in the RECORD on the bill now under consideration.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Speaker, I am in favor of S. 191 which will provide funds to build hospitals in States, counties, and cities on a matching basis of one-third by the Federal Government and two-thirds by the States, counties, and cities.

I favor the bill especially because of the urgent need for additional hospitals in southern California and in Los Angeles County in particular, where thousands of people from all States in the Union have come to live since the war, which has overtaxed the capacity of all facilities including hospitals. We need more hospitals in Los Angeles County. I know this bill will help us get them. Therefore I urge that S. 191 be passed.

Mr. SAVAGE. Mr. Speaker, I realize the time for discussing this bill is very short and I will not take much time. However, I want to point out that I approached the study of this legislation with a background of several years' experience as a member of the board of directors of the General Hospital, a nonprofit institution, in Mason County, in my congressional district.

First, the depression left many communities short of hospital facilities and by the time they had begun to get on their feet again the defense program began to absorb building materials. Then came the war, which not only prevented the building of hospitals, but actually aggravated the already great need for more hospital facilities. Furthermore, we on the west coast have an influx of additional population to care for.

This bill is as free from Federal control as it is possible to make it and see that high standards are maintained. It appropriates $75,000,000 a year for the next 5 years. This isn't much but will help considerably and should be passed.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, when are we going to recognize that the United States Government is broke?

When are we going to recognize that the Federal Government is the unit of government in this country least able at this time to embark on programs involving the expenditure of money?

Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to this bill. The local units of government in those localities where an emergency exists are much better able to finance such a program as is contemplated by this bill than can the Federal Government.

With the expenditure of Federal dollars goes Federal control. I am unalterably opposed to the continuation of that trend which would concentrate control over local affairs and local problems in Washington. With the passage of this bill the door will be opened for socialized medicine. This is unwise and unsound Federal legislation. I must vote against this bill.

The SPEAKER. The question is, Will the House suspend the rules and pass the bill S. 191, as amended?

The question was taken; and on a division (demand by Mr. BUCK) there were—ayes 136, noes 28.

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

House Resolution 718 was laid on the table.

DISPOSAL OF SURPLUS PROPERTY ABROAD

Mr. MANASCO. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 1636) to amend the Surplus Property Act of 1944 to designate the Department of State as the disposal agency for surplus property outside the continental United States, its Territories and possessions, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 10 of the Surplus Property Act of 1944, as amended, is hereby amended by adding a new subsection (c) to read as follows:

"(c) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this section, the Department of State shall be the sole disposal agency for surplus property located outside the continental United States, Hawaii, Alaska (including the Aleutian Islands), Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands, and with respect to such property the Secretary of State shall exercise the functions heretofore conferred upon the Surplus Property Administrator by Public Law 181, Seventy-ninth Congress. The Secretary of State shall, subject to the provisions of the War Mobilization and Reconversion Act of 1944, have sole responsibility for carrying out the provisions of the Surplus Property Act of 1944, with respect to surplus property located outside the continental United States, Hawaii, Alaska (including the Aleutian Islands), Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands."

SEC. 2. Section 32 (b) of such act, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(b) (1) The provisions of this act shall be applicable to disposition of property within the United States and elsewhere, but the Secretary of State may exempt from some or all of the provisions hereof dispositions of property located outside of the continental United States, Hawaii, Alaska (including the Aleutian Islands), Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands, whenever he deems that such provisions would obstruct the efficient and economic disposition of such property in accordance with the objectives of this act. In addition to the authority conferred by section 15 of this act, the Department of State may dispose of surplus property located outside the continental United States, Hawaii, Alaska (including the Aleutian Islands), Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands, for foreign currencies or credits, or substantial benefits or the discharge of claims resulting from the compromise or settlement of such claims by any Government agency in accordance with the law, whenever the Secretary of State determines that it is in the interest of the United States to do so and upon such terms and conditions as he may deem proper. Any foreign currencies or credits acquired by the Department of State pursuant to this subsection shall be administered in accordance with procedures that may from time to time be established by the Secretary of the Treasury and, if and when reduced to United States currency, shall be covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

"(2) In carrying out the provisions of this section, the Secretary of State is hereby authorized to enter into an executive agreement or agreements with any foreign government for the use of currencies, or credits for currencies, of such government acquired as a result of such surplus property disposals, for the purpose of providing by the formation of foundations or otherwise, for (A) financing studies, research, instruction, and other educational activities of or for American citizens in schools and institutions of higher learning located in such foreign country, or of the citizens of such foreign country in American schools and institutions of higher learning located outside the continental United States, Hawaii, Alaska (including the Aleutian Islands), Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands, including payment for transportation, tuition, maintenance, and other expenses incident to scholastic activities; or (B) furnishing transportation for citizens of such foreign country who desire to attend American schools and institutions of higher learning in the continental United States, Hawaii, Alaska (including the Aleutian Islands), Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands, and whose attendance will not deprive citizens of the United States of an opportunity to attend such schools and institutions: Provided, however, That no such agreement or agreements shall provide for the use of an aggregate amount of the currencies, or credits for currencies, of any one country in excess of $20,000,000 or for the expenditure of the currencies, or credits for currencies of any one foreign country in excess of $1,000,000 annually at the official rate of exchange for such currencies, unless otherwise authorized by Congress, nor shall any such agreement relate to any subject other than the use and expenditure of such currencies or credits for currencies for the purposes herein set forth: Provided further, That for the purpose of selecting students and educational institutions qualified to participate in this program, and to supervise the exchange program authorized herein, the President of the United States is hereby authorized to appoint a Board of Foreign Scholarships, consisting of 10 members, who shall serve without compensation, composed of representatives of cultural, educational, student, and war veterans groups, and including representatives of the Unitd States Office of Education, the United States Veterans' Administration, State educational institutions, and privately endowed educational institutions: And provided further, That in the selection of American citizens for study in foreign countries under this paragraph preference shall be given to applicants who shall have served in the military or naval forces of the United States during World War I or World War II, and due consideration shall be given to applicants from all geographical areas of the United States. The Secretary of State shall transmit to the Congress not later than the 1st day of March of each year a report of operations under this paragraph during the preceding calendar year. Such report shall include the text of any agreements which have been entered into hereunder during the preceding calendar year, and shall specify the names and addresses of American citizens who are attending schools or institutions of higher learning in foreign countries pursuant to such agreements, the names and locations of such schools and institutions, and the amounts of the currencies or credits for currencies expended for any of the purposes under this paragraph in each such foreign country during the preceding calendar year."

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, a second is considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. MANASCO. Mr. Speaker, this bill makes the State Department the disposal agency for surplus property in foreign countries. As a matter of fact, they have already been designated by the War Assets Administrator as the disposal agency in foreign countries; but this does it by law. The other principal feature of this bill is that it permits the State Department to use the currency of foreign countries for educational purposes in permitting American students to go into those foreign countries and attend schools there. At the present time, it is almost impossible to get dollars in many foreign countries where we have tremendous amounts of surplus property. If we can use this educational feature and permit those countries to pay our American students in their currency, we feel it will do much to further the good relationship between our Government and the governments of other countries. It will also work to the advantage of many veterans who are anxious to go to those countries to study. That is the principal feature of this bill.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, will my chairman yield?

Mr. MANASCO. I yield.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. As I understand, the gentleman's motion is to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill as amended by the House Committee on Expenditures so as to embody in the bill that we ought to pass the amendments of our committee?

Mr. MANASCO. That is correct.

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Speaker, I demanded a second in order to be sure that the House understands this bill because I think it is very worth while. We have a lot of surplus property in many foreign countries that do not have dollar exchange and that cannot pay us in American dollars. It would cost too much to bring the property back to this country, so the bill allows those countries to buy the surplus property with their own currency and since it cannot be converted into ours, we will use it to pay the expenses of selected Americans who want to go to those countries to study their civilization or their culture, or their economy, or what not, with the idea of helping build better understanding and better relations between those countries and ours.

It is in a sense a Boxer indemnity in reverse. Never in history has any nation made a greater or better-paying investment than the United States made when it allowed the Chinese to use their indemnity to us of about $30,000,000 after the Boxer Rebellion, to send almost 5,000 selected Chinese students to this country during the last 40 years to study in our universities. Almost every one of them went back completely sold on the United States and our type of government. They naturally achieved positions of influence in China, and perhaps more than any other single factor, were responsible for holding their country on our side in this war, even when we were helping Japan.

I hope there will be no objection to this bill. It does not cost us a cent. It enables us to salvage something out of surplus property abroad which otherwise would be total loss.

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JUDD. I yield.

Mr. MUNDT. Is there anything in this legislation which would also help students in countries which lack dollar exchange, which students want to come to this country to pursue their education?

Mr. JUDD. No.

Mr. MUNDT. Is there anything that would provide for the necessary financial transfer to give them credit so that they can come over here?

Mr. JUDD. No. If they can get dollar exchange it has to go into the Federal Treasury in payment for the surplus property purchase. What you mention would be covered in the Bloom bill as I understand it, which came out of your own committee and was passed the other day. If students wanted to come to this country traveling in a ship of their own land and using its currency, that could be done. But if they wanted to travel in an American ship which requires American dollars to pay for their passage, they could not do that. That is, the bill protects our taxpayers. If anyone can get American dollars to pay for our surplus property, the money must go into the United States Treasury. But if they cannot get American dollars, they can buy our property with their own currency and it is used for the support and training of our students over there.

Mr. MUNDT. That is right, and I am for it as far as it goes, but it still leaves unsolved the problem of a large number of students in countries like Egypt and Iraq who want to come to this country and attend the colleges and universities and who have resources enough of their own in their own currency and yet do not have any way in which they can get the required dollar exchange to spend their currency in this country and, consequently, are denied an American education.

Mr. JUDD. This bill does not provide America educations for those individuals.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JUDD. I yield.

Mr. WHITE. Is this property to be disposed of in any countries outside of the so-called sterling area?

Mr. JUDD. Yes; wherever the State Department and the Secretary of the Treasury determine that a nation where we have surplus property does not have American dollars and cannot get exchange with which it can pay us in our own currency, it applies to any such country.

Mr. WHITE. From the record made by the State Department, I regret to say I am going to vote against this bill. I think this is detrimental to the best interests of the people of this country.

Mr. JUDD. Whether a nation's unfavorable exchange position makes it eligible or not is to be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JUDD. I yield.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. It must be understood that there is no question of donation.

Mr. JUDD. That is right.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Donation to foreign governments or to institutions in foreign lands.

Mr. JUDD. That is right.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. The purpose of this bill as recommended by the State Department is to utilize foreign currencies that are received in the purchase of surplus property in those countries for education of Americans in those countries who desire to go there.

Mr. JUDD. That is right.

Mr. MANASCO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JUDD. I yield.

Mr. MANASCO. It may be added, it would cost the taxpayers more to bring this property back here. If it is not brought back it will be abandoned.

Mr. JUDD. Yes. Everything we get under this bill is to the good. If the bill is passed we get a great deal of educational service for our citizens. If it is not passed, we get nothing.

Mr. MANASCO. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is, Will the House suspend the rules and pass the bill S. 1636, as amended?

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDING THE FIRST WAR POWERS ACT, 1941

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 6890) to amend the First War Powers Act, 1941, as amended.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the First War Powers Act, 1941 (55 Stat. 838), as amended, is hereby further amended by adding at the end of title III thereof the following:

"SEC. 305. The Trading With the Enemy Act of October 6, 1917 (40 Stat. 411), as amended, is hereby further amended by inserting after section 32 thereof, and before the section added by Public Law 382, Seventy-ninth Congress, the following sections:

"'SEC. 33. No return may be made pursuant to section 9 (a) or 32 (a) unless notice of claim for return has been filed within 2 years from the seizure by or vesting in the Alien Property Custodian, as the case may be, of the property or interest in respect of which the claim is made or within 2 years from the date of enactment of this section, whichever is later. No suit pursuant to section 9 (a) may be instituted after the expiration of 2 years from the date of seizure by or vesting in the Alien Property Custodian, as the case may be, of the property or interest in respect of which relief is sought or from the date of enactment of this section, whichever is later, but in computing such 2 years there shall be excluded any period during which there was pending a claim for return pursuant to section 9 (a) or 32 hereof.

"'SEC. 34. (a) Any property or interest vested in or transferred to the Alien Property Custodian (other than any property or interest acquired by the United States prior to December 18, 1941), or the net proceeds thereof, shall be equitably applied by the Custodian in accordance with the provisions of this section to the payment of debts owed by the person who owned such property or interest immediately prior to its vesting in or transfer to the Alien Property Custodian. No debt claim shall be allowed under this section if it was not due and owing at the time of such vesting or transfer, or if it arose from any action or transactions prohibited by or pursuant to this act and not licensed or otherwise authorized pursuant thereto, or (except in the case of debt claims acquired by the Custodian) if it was at the time of such vesting or transfer due and owing to any person who has since the beginning of the war been convicted of violation of this act, as amended, sections 1-6 of the Criminal Code (18 U. S. C. 1-6), title I of the act of June 15, 1917 (ch. 30, 40 Stat. 217), as amended; the act of April 20, 1918 (ch. 59, 40 Stat. 534), as amended; the act of June 8, 1934 (ch. 327, 52 Stat. 631), as amended; the act of January 12, 1938 (ch. 2, 52 Stat. 3); title I, Alien Registration Act, 1940 (ch. 439, 54 Stat. 670); the act of October 17, 1940 (ch. 897, 54 Stat. 1201); or the act of June 25, 1942 (ch. 447, 56 Stat. 390). Any defense to the payment of such claims which would have been available to the debtor shall be available to the Custodian, except that the period from and after the beginning of the war shall not be included for the purpose of determining the application of any statute of limitations. Debt claims allowable here under shall include only those of citizens of the United States or of the Philippine Islands; those of corporations organized under the laws of the United States or any State, Territory, or possession thereof, or the District of Columbia or the Philippine Islands; those of other natural persons who are and have been since the beginning of the war residents of the United States and who have not during the war been interned or paroled pursuant to the Alien Enemy Act (50 U. S. C. 21); and those acquired by the Custodian. Legal representatives (whether or not appointed by a court in the United States) or successors in interest by inheritance, devise, request, or operation of law of debt claimants, other than persons who would themselves be disqualified hereunder from allowance of a debt claim, shall be eligible for payment to the same extent as their principals or predecessors would have been.

"'(b) The Custodian shall fix a date or dates after which the filing of debt claims in respect of any or all debtors shall be barred, and may extend the time so fixed, and shall give at least 60 days' notice thereof by publication in the Federal Register. In no event shall the time extend beyond the expiration of 2 years from the date of the last vesting in or transfer to the Custodian of any property or interest of a debtor in respect of whose debts the date is fixed, or from the date of enactment of this section, whichever is later. No debt shall be paid prior to the expiration of 120 days after publication of the first such notice in respect of the debtor, nor in any event shall any payment of a debt claim be made out of any property or interest or proceeds in respect of which a proceeding pursuant to this act for return or for just compensation is pending and was instituted prior to the expiration of such 120 days.

"'(c) The Custodian shall examine the claims, and such evidence in respect thereof as may be presented to him or as he may introduce into the record, and shall make a determination, with respect to each claim, of allowance or disallowance, in whole or in part.

"'(d) Payment of debt claims shall be made only out of such money included in, or received as net proceeds from the sale, use, or other disposition of, any property or interest owned by the debtor immediately prior to its vesting in or transfer to the Alien Property Custodian, as shall remain after deduction of (1) the amount of the expenses of the Office of Alien Property Custodian (including both expenses in connection with such property or interest or proceeds thereof, and such portion as the Custodian shall fix of the other expenses of the Office of Alien Property Custodian), and of taxes, as defined in section 36 hereof, paid by the Custodian in respect of such property or interest or proceeds, and (2) such amount, if any, as the Custodian may establish as a cash reserve for the future payment of such expenses and taxes. If the money available hereunder for the payment of debt claims against the debtor is insufficient for the satisfaction of all claims allowed by the Custodian, ratable payments shall be made in accordance with subsection (g) hereof to the extent permitted by the money available and additional payments shall be made whenever the Custodian shall determine that substantial further money has become available, through liquidation of any such property or interest or otherwise. The Custodian shall not be required through any judgment of any court, levy of execution, or otherwise to sell or liquidate any property or interest vested in or transferred to him, for the purpose of paying or satisfying any debt claim.

"'(e) If the aggregate of debt claims filed as prescribed does not exceed the money from which, in accordance with subsection (d) hereof, payment may be made, the Custodian shall pay each claim to the extent allowed, and shall serve by registered mail, on each claimant whose claim is disallowed in whole or in part, a notice of such disallowance. Within 60 days after the date of mailing of the Custodian's determination, any debt claimant whose claim has been disallowed in whole or in part may file in the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia a complaint for review of such disallowance naming the Custodian as defendant. Such complaint shall be served on the Custodian. The Custodian, within 45 days after service on him, shall certify and file in said court a transcript of the record of proceedings in the Office of Alien Property Custodian with respect to the claim in question. Upon good cause shown such time may be extended by the court. Such record shall include the claim as field, such evidence with respect thereto as may have been presented to the Custodian or introduced into the record by him, and the determination of the Custodian with respect thereto, including any finding made by him. The court may, in its discretion, take additional evidence, upon a showing that such evidence was offered to and excluded by the Custodian, or could not reasonably have been adduced before him or was not available to him. The court shall enter judgment affirming, modifying, or reversing the Custodian's determination, and directing payment in the amount, if any, which it finds due.

"'(f) If the aggregate of debt claims filed as prescribed exceeds the money from which, in accordance with subsection (d) hereof, payment may be made, the Custodian shall prepare and serve by registered mail on all claimants a schedule of all debt claims allowed and the proposed payment to each claimant. In preparing such schedule, the Custodian shall assign priorities in accordance with the provisions of subsection (g) hereof. Within 60 days after the date of mailing of such schedule, any claimant considering himself aggrieved may file in the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia a complaint for review of such schedule, naming the Custodian as defendant. A copy of such complaint shall be served upon the Custodian and on each claimant named in the schedule. The Custodian, within 45 days after service on him, shall certify and file in said court a transcript of the record of proceedings in the Office of Alien Property Custodian with respect to such schedule. Upon good cause shown such time may be extended by the court. Such record shall include the claims in question as filed, such evidence with respect thereto as may have been presented to the Custodian or introduced into the record by him, any findings or other determinations made by the Custodian with respect thereto, and the schedule prepared by the Custodian. The court may, in its discretion, take additional evidence, upon a showing that such evidence was offered to and excluded by the Custodian or could not reasonably have been adduced before him or was not available to him. Any interested debt claimant who has filed a claim with the Custodian pursuant to this section, upon timely application to the court, shall be permitted to intervene in such review proceedings. The court shall enter judgment affirming or modifying the schedule as prepared by the Custodian and directing payment, if any be found due, pursuant to the schedule as affirmed or modified and to the extent of the money from which, in accordance with subsection (d) hereof, payment may be made. Pending the decision of the court on such complaint for review, and pending final determination of any appeal from such decision, payment may be made only to an extent, if any, consistent with the contentions of all claimants for review.

"'(g) Debt claims shall be paid in the following order of priority: (1) Wage and salary claims, not to exceed $600; (2) claims entitled to priority under sections 191 and 193 of title 31 of the United States Code, except as provided in subsection (h) hereof; (3) all other claims for services rendered, for expenses incurred in connection with such services, for rent, for goods and materials delivered to the debtor, and for payments made to the debtor for goods or services not received by the claimant; (4) all other debt claims. No payment shall be made to claimants within a subordinate class unless the money from which, in accordannce with subsection (d) hereof, payment may be made permits payment in full of all allowed claims in every prior class.

"'(h) No debt of any kind shall be entitled to priority under any law of the United States or any State, Territory, or possession thereof, or the District of Columbia, solely by reason of becoming a debt due or owing to the United States as a result of its acquisition by the Alien Property Custodian.

"'(i) The sole relief and remedy available to any person seeking satisfaction of a debt claim out of any property or interest which shall have been vested in or transferred to the Alien Property Custodian (other than any property or interest acquired by the United State prior to December 18, 1941), or the proceeds thereof, shall be the relief and remedy provided in this section, and suits for the satisfaction of debt claims shall not be instituted, prosecuted, or further maintained except in conformity with this section: Provided, That no person asserting any interest, right, or title in any property or interest or proceeds acquired by the Alien Property Custodian, shall be barred from proceeding pursuant to this act for the return thereof or for just compensation in respect hereof, by reason of any proceeding which he may have brought pursuant to this section; nor shall any security interest asserted by the creditor in any such property or interest or proceeds be deemed to have been waived solely by reason of such proceeding. The Alien Property Custodian shall treat all debt claims now filed with him as claims filed pursuant to this section. Nothing contained in this section shall bar any person from the prosecution of any suit at law or in equity against the original debtor or against any other person who may be liable for the payment of any debt for which a claim might have been filed hereunder. No purchaser, lessee, licensee, or other transferee of any property or interest from the Alien Property Custodian shall, solely by reason of such purchase, lease, license, or transfer, become liable for the payment of any debt owed by the person who owned such property or interest prior to its vesting in or transfer to the Alien Property Custodian. Payment by the Alien Property Custodian to any debt claimant shall constitute, to the exent of payment, a discharge of the indebtedness represented by the claim.

"'SEC. 35. The officer or agency empowered to entertain claims under sections 9 (a), 32, and 34 hereof shall have power to hold such hearings as may be deemed necessary; to prescribe rules and regulations governing the form and contents of claims, the proof thereof, and all other matters related to proceedings on such claims; and in connection with such proceedings to issue subpenas, administer oaths, and examine witnesses. Such powers, and any other powers conferred upon such officer or agency by sections 9 (a), 32, and 34 hereof may be exercised through subordinate officers designated by such officer or agency.

"'SEC. 36. (a) The vesting in or transfer to the Alien Property Custodian of any property or interest (other than any property or interest acquired by the United States prior to December 18, 1941), or the receipt by him of any earnings, increment, or proceeds thereof shall not render inapplicable any Federal, State, Territorial, or local tax for any period prior or subsequent to the date of such vesting or transfer, nor render applicable the exemptions provided in title II of the Social Security Act with respect to service performed in the employ of the United States Government or of any instrumentality of the United States.

"'(b) The Alien Property Custodian shall, notwithstanding the filing of any claim or the institution of any suit under this act pay any tax incident to any such property or interest, or the earnings, increment, or proceeds thereof, at the earliest time appearing to him to be not contrary to the interest of the United States. The former owner shall not be liable for any such tax accruing while such property, interest, earnings, increment, or proceeds are held by the Alien Property Custodian, unless they are returned pursuant to this act without payment of such tax by the Alien Property Custodian. Every such tax shall be paid by the Alien Property Custodian to the same extent, as nearly as may be deemed practicable, as though the property or interest had not been vested in or transferred to the Alien Property Custodian, and shall be paid only out of the property or interest, or earnings, increment, or proceeds thereof, to which they are incident or out of other property or interests acquired from the same former owner, or earnings, increment, or proceeds thereof. No tax liability may be enforced from any property or interest or the earnings, increment, or proceeds thereof while held by the Alien Property Custodian except with his consent. Where any property or interest is transferred, otherwise than pursuant to section 9 (a) or 32 hereof, the Alien Property Custodian may transfer the property or interest free and clear of any tax, except to the extent of any lien for a tax existing and perfected at the date of vesting, and the proceeds of such transfer shall, for tax purposes, replace the property or interest in the hands of the Alien Property Custodian.

"'(c) Subject to the provisions of subsection (b) hereof, the manner of computing any Federal taxes, including without limitation by reason of this enumeration, the applicability in such computation of credits, deductions, and exemptions to which the former owner is or would be entitled, and the time and manner of any payment of such taxes and the extent of any compliance by the Custodian with provisions of Federal law and regulations applicable with respect to Federal taxes, shall be in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury to effectuate this section. Statutes of limitations on assessment, collection, refund, or credit of Federal taxes shall be suspended, with respect to any vested property or interest, or the earnings, increment or proceeds thereof, while vested and for 6 months thereafter; but no interest shall be paid upon any refund with respect to any period during which the statute of limitations is so suspended.

"'(d) The word "tax" as used in this section shall include, without limitation by reason of this enumeration, any property, income, excess-profits, war-profits, excise, estate and employment tax, import duty, and special assessment; and also any interest, penalty, additional amount, or addition thereto not arising from any act, omission, neglect, failure, or delay on the part of the Custodian.

"'(e) Any tax exemption accorded to the Alien Property Custodian by specific provision of existing law shall not be affected by this section.

"'SEC. 37. The Alien Property Custodian may procure insurance in such amounts, and from such insurers, as he believes will adequately protect him against loss in connection with property or interests or proceeds held by him.'"

SEC. 2. Subdivisions (C) and (D) of section 32 (a) (2) of the Trading With the Enemy Act are hereby amended to read as follows:

"(C) an individual voluntarily resident at any time since December 7, 1941, within the territory of such nation, other than a citizen of the United States or a diplomatic or consular officer of a nation with which the United States has not at any time since December 7, 1941, been at war: Provided, That an individual who, while in the territory of a nation with which the United States has at any time since December 7, 1941, been at war, was deprived of life or substantially deprived of liberty pursuant to any law, decree, or regulation of such nation discriminating against political, racial, or religious groups, shall not be deemed to have voluntarily resided in such territory; or

"(D) an individual who was at any time after December 7, 1941, a citizen or subject of a nation with which the United States has at any time since December 7, 1941, been at war, and who on or after December 7, 1941, and prior to the date of the enactment of this section, was present (other than in the service of the United States) in the territory of such nation or in any territory occupied by the military or naval forces thereof or engaged in any business in any such territory: Provided, That notwithstanding the provisions of this subdivision (D), return may be made to an individual who, as a consequence of any law, decree, or regulation of the nation of which he was then a citizen or subject, discriminating against political, racial, or religious groups, has at no time between December 7, 1941, and the time when such law, decree, or regulation was abrogated, enjoyed full rights of citizenship under the law of such nation; or."

SEC. 3. The section added to the Trading With the Enemy Act by Public Law 382, Seventy-ninth Congress, is hereby amended by inserting "38" after "SEC."

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. CELLER. The purpose of this bill, Mr. Speaker, among other things, is to provide machinery for paying the claims of American creditors against the former owners of property vested in the Alien Property Custodian's Office, vested because the property belonged to enemy aliens or their allies or their stooges and cloaks. At the present time there is something like $113,000,000 worth of claims filed for American citizens against property seized and vested by the Alien Property Custodian's Office. A recent decision coming from the district court, provides that if any debt claimant against that property brings suit it is within the power of that claimant to exhaust the entire property to the detriment of other claimants; that is, the claimant would recover upon a "first come, first served" basis. Such an arrangement might preclude other claimants and is more unjust. The bill before us provides that the Alien Property Custodian takes the property and sells it and divides the proceeds equitably among all creditors as pari passu, in bankruptcy.

In addition, this bill provides that the Alien Property Custodian shall have authority to pay taxes. Under present conditions it is questionable whether he has the right to pay taxes. Municipalities, States, and the Federal Government suffer for the lack of those taxes, as well as for lack of payment of penalties added to the taxes.

This bill also provides authority to the Alien Property Custodian to insure the property that he has under his control. It has been stated that the United States Government, which is represented by the Alien Property Custodian, is a self-insurer, and need not take out insurance. Therefore, if some property is destroyed, the claimant or claimants against this property may be deprived of their rightful dues. Since the property, say, was totally burned, the claims cannot attach to anything. Since the claimants cannot sue the vested owner, the United States, he is without remedy.

In addition thereto, there is set up a statute of limitations, 2 years for the purpose of filing claims and 2 years for the purpose of filing suits. Under the old Alien Property Custodian Act after the last war there was no statute of limitations. The result was that that office continued for over 20 years.

The present Alien Property Custodian is anxious to wind up his affairs in short order and asks, therefore, for this 2-year period.

Furthermore, this bill would authorize the Alien Property Custodian to set up rules and regulations governing the procedure of filing claims and the hearing of claims in his office. There is an amendment which would give a section number to Public Law 382 which we passed permitting the shipment of relief supplies to enemy countries. We passed that bill which amended the Trading With the Enemy Act without any number. This bill would provide a number for that section.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CELLER. I yield.

Mr. SPRINGER. Under the Alien Property Custodian Act following World War I how long a period of time did the Alien Property Custodian operate in winding up his business matters?

Mr. CELLER. I think he turned over eventually this authority to the Department of Justice 4 years ago. He continued his activities from the time of the ending of the war until the Department of Justice took on—after a period exceeding 20 years.

Mr. SPRINGER. In other words, the Alien Property Custodian operated for more than 20 years following World War I.

Mr. CELLER. Correct.

Mr. SPRINGER. Under this particular act the Alien Property Custodian will have a 2-year period in which to close up all matters.

Mr. CELLER. At least 2 years' time within which claims must be filed, but suitably thereafter he would wind up his affairs.

I may say, Mr. Speaker, that this bill was reported out of the Judiciary Committee unanimously. It has the support of the State Department, the Department of Justice, the Treasury Department, and the Alien Property Custodian's office.

Mr. Speaker, I send to the Clerk's desk amendments which will make this bill conform to the bill as reported by——

The SPEAKER. That is not the way to pass a bill under suspension. There is no amendment period; under a motion to suspend the rules the bill is reported as amended by the Committee.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, I think this is the situation. This bill, H. R. 6890, was favorably reported by the Judiciary Committee. A similar bill was presented to the Senate and reported with section 33 beginning on line 11, page 1, stricken out.

This is a very important bill. It has to do largely with the Alien Property Custodian. Extensive, and I mean extensive, hearings have been held before the subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee and the full Committee considered it. All the departments interested are in agreement, the Attorney General, the War Department, Navy Department, everybody; but the Senate committee struck out section 33. If we get anything at this session, therefore, it will not be this bill with section 33 included.

I talked this morning with the Alien Property Custodian and with Mr. Cutler, the very capable counsel for the Alien Custodian, who is very much interested in this.

I understood that the gentleman from New York would move to pass the bill, H. R. 6890, with an amendment to strike out section 33. Am I correct?

Mr. CELLER. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the RECORD be modified so that the request of the gentleman from New York will read accordingly.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CELLER. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. McCORMACK. My understanding of the matter is that there was some controversy over the first section, which is section 33, and that the amendment of the gentleman from New York would strike that section out, which is the controversial section.

Mr. CELLER. It is not controversial so far as the Judiciary Committee is concerned.

Mr. McCORMACK. Yes, but there was some controversy.

Mr. CELLER. There was some question.

Mr. MICHENER. We must take the bill without section 33. Every department, including the Justice Department, is asking for this legislation. They want this passed without 33 if that is necessary.

Mr. McCORMACK. That is my understanding.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER] be modified so that it will be: "I move to suspend the rules and pass H. R. 6890 with amendments."

Mr. CELLER. It is not an amendment but several amendments, because if you strike out 33 you would have to renumber the other sections.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, if section 33 is eliminated from this bill, then the law as then written would give to foreign friendly nationals the right to be sued and to sue in our courts and have their rights adjudicated?

Mr. CELLER. I may say to the gentleman that the elimination of section 33 gives the right to a foreign national to sue for the return of his property, either in law or in equity. That does not apply to an enemy alien, only to a friendly foreign national. That right remains unchanged if we eliminate section 33.

Mr. PHILBIN. Under this bill foreign friendly nationals would no longer be prohibited from being sued or bringing suit in law or equity.

Mr. CELLER. No. But the court has held that the suit cannot result in a judgment against the United States.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I merely want to observe that I am very sorry myself that this section has been stricken from the bill. It is a section of great importance if an effective job is to be done with regard to German external assets. That is all I have to say. I realize you have to do what you are doing, but I regret it very sincerely.

Mr. CELLER. In the interest of getting something done, we had to eliminate it.

Mr. MICHENER. I think the entire committee regrets it. It is a half loaf or no loaf at all, and the Alien Property Custodian needs as much of this bill as he can get now.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended, and the bill was passed.

House Resolution 705 was laid on the table.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NEW CONFEREES APPOINTED ON TERMINAL LEAVE PAY BILL

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, one of the conferees the Chair appointed on the terminal-leave pay bill, H. R. 4051, the gentlemen from Kentucky [Mr. MAY], is ill. Another conferee on the same bill, the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BROOKS] is out of the city. I ask unanimous consent that they may be excused from serving and that the Chair appoint other conferees in their stead.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints as conferees the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DURHAM] and the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SIKES].

HOUR OF MEETING TOMORROW

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today it adjourn to meet tomorrow at 11 o'clock.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

SUSPENSION OF THE RULES

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it may be in order for the Speaker to recognize Members tomorrow to suspend the rules.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

FARMERS' HOME CORPORATION ACT OF 1946

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the conferees on the bill (H. R. 5991) may have until midnight tomorrow night to file a conference report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

TEMPORARY EDUCATIONAL FACILITIES FOR VETERANS

Mr. MANASCO. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 2085) to amend title V of the act entitled "An act to expedite the provision of housing in connection with the national defense, and for other purposes," approved October 14, 1940, as amended, to authorize the Federal Works Administrator to provide needed educational facilities, other than housing, to educational institutions furnishing courses of training or education to persons under title II of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended, with amendments.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That (a) subsection (a) of section 502 of the act entitled "An act to expedite the provision of housing in connection with the national defense, and for other purposes," approved October 14, 1940, as amended, is amended by striking out "this title V," and inserting in lieu thereof "sections 501, 502, and 503 of this title."

(b) Subsection (b) of section 502 of such act, as amended, is amended by inserting after the word "institutions" the words "or for members of faculties (including the families of such members) of educational institutions furnishing education and training to veterans under title II of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended."

(c) Subsection (c) of such section is amended by inserting after the word "institutions" the words "or for members of faculties (including the families of such members) of educational institutions furnishing education and training to veterans under title II of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended."

(d) Subsection (e) of section 502 of such act, as amended, is amended by striking out "title V,", and inserting in lieu thereof "section."

SEC. 2. Title V of such act, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 504. (a) At any educational institution including any educational facility operated by the Indian Service where the Commissioner of Education shall find that there exists or impends an acute shortage of educational facilities, other than housing, required for persons engaged in the pursuit of courses of training or education under title II of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended, the Federal Works Administrator is authorized, upon request of such educational institution, to provide such educational facilities (1) by the use or reuse (including disassembling, transporting, and reerecting) of structures or facilities (including improvements, equipments, materials, or furnishings but not including site acquisition and preparation or the installation of streets and utility mains) under the jurisdiction or control of any Federal agency which are no longer required by such agency and which, in the determination of said Administrator can be utilized to provide the needed educational facilities and which, in the determination of the War Assets Administrator are available for such use or reuse and (2) by connecting utilities from buildings to mains. Upon request of the Federal Works Administrator any Federal agency having jurisdiction or control of any such structure or facilities may, with the approval of the War Assets Administrator, notwithstanding any other provisions of law, transfer such structures or facilities to the Federal Works Administrator, without reimbursement, for such use or reuse. Without regard to the provisions of any other law, said Administrator is authorized to transfer to any educational institution any educational facilities provided for such educational institution under this subsection.

"(b) In carrying out the provisions of this section, said Administrator is authorized to exercise all the powers contained in sections 202 (a) and (b) and title III of this act, subject to all the limitations contained in sections 203 (a) and (b) and title III of this act: Provided, That nothing herein shall exclude the Indian Service from participation in the educational benefits provided by this act.

"(c) To carry out the provisions of this section, and for administrative expenses in connection therewith, any funds made available under title II of this act are hereby made available, and for such purposes there is also authorized to be appropriated the sum of $100,000,000.

"(d) Nothing in this section 504 shall affect the transfer to the National Housing Administrator of any structures or facilities requisitioned by him pursuant to section 502 (b) of this act, for housing for veterans and distressed families of servicemen prior to any request therefor made by the Federal Works Administrator pursuant to the authority contained in said section 504.

"(e) Except with respect to contracts previously entered into and court proceedings then pending, this section shall cease to be effective on the last date on which courses of education or training may be provided under title II of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended.

"(f) As used in this act the term 'educational institution' shall mean (a) any public educational institution or (b) any private educational institution, no part of the net earnings of which shall inure to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual.

"(g) Nothing in this section shall authorize the transfer of any property to the Federal Works Administrator until the preference to veterans provided by section 16 of the Surplus Property Act of 1944, as amended, has been fully satisfied in accordance with its terms; and for the purposes of such section 16 transfers to such Administrator under this section shall not be considered as transfers to a Government agency."

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. MANASCO. Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this bill is to provide classrooms, dormitories, and other facilities for veterans in colleges and universities and other nonprofit educational institutions in the training program under the GI bill of rights.

Our committee held hearings on this bill and we found that thousands upon thousands of veterans are being turned away from schools because they do not have classroom and other facilities to give them an opportunity to instruct these boys. This bill received the unanimous report of our committee and it has the support of the Veterans' Administration, the Office of Education, and the representatives of all of the colleges and universities of the United States.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANASCO. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Is this a unanimous report?

Mr. MANASCO. Yes.

Mr. McGREGOR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANASCO. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. McGREGOR. I just want to concur in the statement made by my distinguished colleague and add that in the various hearings that were held there was not a single person or group of persons or individuals that appeared against this particular legislation. I concur in this statement that it was passed by the unanimous vote of our committee.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield further, is this in conflict with any other housing legislation?

Mr. MANASCO. No.

Mr. PACE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANASCO. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. PACE. Does the gentleman know how soon this money will become available?

Mr. MANASCO. The funds are available now. There was $75,000,000 appropriated in the last deficiency bill, and it has already been signed by the President.

Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANASCO. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin. Does this legislation in any way overlap any of the other numerous building programs that we have appropriated money for?

Mr. MANASCO. No; it does not.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANASCO. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Does this embrace the amendment that was adopted by the committee?

Mr. MANASCO. Yes. It protects the veterans under the Surplus Property Act.

The SPEAKER. The question is, Will the House suspend the rules and pass the bill S. 2085, as amended?

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATIONAL ACT OF 1946

Mr. BARDEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 619) to amend the act of June 8, 1936, relating to vocational education, so as to provide for the further development of vocational education in the several States and Territories, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act approved June 8, 1936, entitled "An act to provide for the further development of vocational education in the several States and Territories" (49 Stat. 1488, ch. 541), is amended to read as follows:

"SHORT TITLE

"SECTION 1. This act may be cited as the 'Vocational Education Act of 1946.'

"DEFINITIONS

"SEC. 2. As used in this act—

"(1) the term 'States and Territories' means the several States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii, the island of Puerto Rico, and the District of Columbia;

"(2) the terms 'State plan' and 'State board' shall have the meaning which said terms have in the Smith-Hughes Vocational Education Act; and

"(3) the term 'Smith-Hughes Vocational Education Act' means the act approved February 23, 1917 (39 Stat. 929, ch. 114).

"AUTHORIZATION FOR APPROPRIATION FOR VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

"SEC. 3. (a) For the purpose of assisting the several States and Territories in the further development of vocational education, there is authorized to be appropriated for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1946, and annually thereafter—

"(1) $10,000,000 for vocational education in agriculture, including supervision by the vocational agriculture teachers of the activities, related to vocational education in agriculture, of the Future Farmers of America and the New Farmers of America, to be apportioned for expenditure in the several States and Territories in the proportion that their farm population bears to the total farm population of the States and Territories, according to the last preceding United States census;

"(2) $8,000,000 for vocational education in home economics, to be apportioned for expenditure in the several States and Territories in the proportion that their rural population bears to the total rural population of the States and Territories, according to the last preceding United States census;

"(3) $8,000,000 for vocational education in trades and industry, to be apportioned for expenditure in the several States and Territories in the proportion that their nonfarm population bears to the total nonfarm population of the States and Territories, according to the last preceding United States census; and

"(4) $2,500,000 for vocational education in distributive occupations, to be apportioned for expenditure in the several States and Territories in the proportion that their total population bears to the total population of the States and Territories, according to the last preceding United States census;

"(b) The funds appropriated under authority of paragraphs (1) to (4), inclusive, of subsection (a) of this section may be used for assisting the several States and Territories, for the purposes therein specified, in the maintenance of adequate programs of administration, supervision, and teacher-training; for salaries and necessary travel expenses of teachers, teacher-trainers, vocational counselors, supervisors and directors of vocational education and vocational guidance; for securing necessary educational information and data as a basis for the proper development of programs of vocational education and vocational guidance; for training and work-experience training programs for out-of-school youth; for training programs for apprentices; for purchase or rent of equipment and supplies for vocational instruction: Provided, That all expenditures for the purposes as set forth in this section shall be made in accordance with the State plan for vocational education.

"(c) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a), the amount to be available for expenditure in any State or Territory shall be not less, for any fiscal year, than $40,000 each for vocational education in agriculture, in home economics, and in trades and industry; $15,000 for vocational education in distributive occupations and there is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1946, and annually thereafter, such additional sums as may be needed for the purpose of providing such minimum amounts.

"REQUIREMENTS AS TO MATCHING OF FUNDS

"SEC. 4. The several States and Territories, in order to receive the benefits of this act, shall be required to match by State and local funds or both 100 percent of the appropriations made under authority of section 3.

"MAKING OF PAYMENTS

"SEC. 5. The Secretary of the Treasury, through the Fiscal Service of the Treasury Department, shall, upon the certification of the United States Commissioner of Education, pay, in equal semiannual payments, on the 1st day of July and January of each year, to the custodian for vocational education of each State and Territory designated in the Smith-Hughes Vocational Educational Act, the moneys to which the State or Territory is entitled under the provisions of this act.

"AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS FOR SALARY AND EXPENSES OF STATE DIRECTORS

"SEC. 6. Funds appropriated under authority of section 3 shall be available, on a prorated basis determined by the State board, for the salary and necessary travel expenses of a State director of vocational education selected by the State board, in accordance with the requirements of the State plan, on the basis of his technical and professional qualifications, including experience in vocational education.

"APPLICABILITY OF SMITH-HUGHES VOCATIONAL EDUCATION ACT

"SEC. 7. The appropriations made under authority of this act shall be in addition to, and shall be subject to the same conditions and limitations as, the appropriations made to carry out the Smith-Hughes Vocational Education Act; except that (1) the appropriations made under authority of this act for home economics shall be subject to the conditions and limitations applicable to the appropriation for agricultural purposes under the Smith-Hughes Vocational Education Act, with the exception of that part of section 10 thereof which requires directed or supervised practice for at least 6 months per year;

(2) such moneys as are provided under authority of this act for trade and industrial subjects, and public and other service occupations, may be expended for part-time classes operated for less than 144 hours per year; (3) the provisions of section 11 of the Smith-Hughes Vocational Education Act, requiring at least one-third of the sum appropriated to any State to be expended for part-time schools or classes shall be held to include any part-time day-school classes for workers 16 years of age and over, and evening-school classes for workers 16 years of age and over; (4) the appropriations made by this act for distributive occupational subjects shall be limited to part-time and evening schools as provided in the Smith-Hughes Vocational Education Act, for trade, home economics, and industrial subjects and as qualified by the provisions of this section; (5) preemployment schools and classes organized for persons over 16 years of age or who have left the full-time school may be operated for less than 9 months per year and less than 30 hours per week and without the requirement that a minimum of 50 percent of the time must be given to shop work on a useful or productive basis; and (6) the appropriations available under section 9 of this act shall be available for expenses of attendance at meetings of educational associations and other organizations and for expenses of conferees called to meet in the District of Columbia or elsewhere, which, in the opinion of the Commissioner, are necessary for the efficient discharge of the provisions of this act.

"RESTRICTIONS AND CONDITIONS

"SEC. 8. (a) No part of the appropriations made under authority of this act shall be expended in industrial-plant training programs, except such industrial-plant training be bona fide vocational training, and not a device to utilize the services of vocational trainees for private profit.

"(b) After June 30, 1951; not more than 10 percent of the amount appropriated for each of the purposes specified in section 3 (a) shall be used for the purchase or acquisition of equipment.

"APPROPRIATIONS FOR OFFICE OF EDUCATION

"SEC. 9. For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act there is hereby authorized to be appropriated to the Office of Education, Federal Security Agency, for vocational education, for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1937, and annually thereafter the sum of $350,000, to be expended for the same purposes and in the same manner as provided in section 7 of the Smith-Hughes Vocational Education Act, as amended October 6, 1917."

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. BARDEN. Mr. Speaker, this is a piece of legislation that I am quite sure the entire House is familiar with. It expands the program carried on under the Smith-Hughes and George-Deen Acts. Those acts have been in operation for a number of years. We do not materially change the basic law of either one of these acts. It is principally an increase in the authorization. The present authorization stands at approximately $22,000,000, and this increases it to approximately $36,000,000.

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARDEN. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. JENSEN. In what respect does it expand the Smith-Hughes Act?

Mr. BARDEN. It authorizes more funds.

Mr. JENSEN. There is no change in the method? There is no more control than we have had? We just spend more money?

Mr. BARDEN. Absolutely no more control. As I said a minute ago, the basic law with regard to the present State set-up is not changed.

Mr. JENSEN. Why is it necessary to spend more money, to have more money appropriated?

Mr. BARDEN. That is a very appropriate question. It is for the simple reason that the program has been such a tremendous success throughout the Nation over many, many years.

Mr. JENSEN. I will agree with the gentleman on that score.

Mr. BARDEN. The number of those enrolling in the schools has been on an upward trend. At this time the veterans are almost taking over. I have telegrams from virtually every State in the Union saying that this number is tremendously increased, and I have statistics that I have just gathered showing the number of thousands that are now taking this training. At the present time 165,982 veterans are taking the training, and there is a long waiting list.

Let me give a brief history of this legislation. Back in February a bill was introduced in the Senate by Senator GEORGE, S. 619, and one was drawn and introduced by me in the House, H. R. 4384, on the same subject matter. The House Committee on Education conducted rather extensive hearings on this subject and so did the Senate. The Senate after its hearings adopted the House bill, H. R. 4384, almost verbatim. It cut out a few paragraphs, but it otherwise adopted the House bill and passed it unanimously and sent it to the House. Of course, the bill was then referred to the Committee on Education. We, having held hearings on exactly the same subject matter, did not see any necessity for continued hearings, and this bill was reported out from the Committee on Education unanimously. I do not think there is one particle of controversy over it, because we do not affect the set-up as it relates to the States.

Mr. JENSEN. This bill does not come in the category of some of the rest of the bills that they are now trying to shove through the House?

Mr. BARDEN. I will say to the gentleman that this gentleman is not in the habit of indulging in that practice with the House.

Mr. JENSEN. I know the gentleman is not. I have a great respect for the gentleman. For that reason I shall not object to this bill.

Mr. BARDEN. I might say to the gentleman that in 1937 the matching started with the Federal Government furnishing $2 and the State $1, and it went up 5 percent a year. It has now reached the 100-percent basis. The principal difference between the Senate bill and the House bill is that the Senate went back to the 50-percent matching basis, that is, the Federal Government providing $2 and the State $1, and we of the Committee on Education in the House set it back on a 100-percent matching basis, where the State puts up a dollar for every dollar the Federal Government puts up.

Briefly, S. 619 as amended provides additional Federal grants-in-aid for the purpose of taking care of the expanding need and of stimulating the extension of the present program in vocational education in the following fields of training, particularly in communities not now being served:

(a) Agriculture.
(b) Home economics.
(c) Trades and industry.
(d) Distributive occupations.

The public vocational schools, in peacetime and in wartime, have demonstrated their ability to train people for gainful and useful employment. The availability of additional funds provided by S. 619 will make it possible for the public vocational schools to make a necessary contribution to the Nation's postwar reconversion program.

New occupational fields in industry requiring new skills, new tools requiring the development of other new skills, new materials, and new processes will require additional vocational and technical knowledge and skills. Many of the new developments of wartime production will be applied to peacetime pursuits if there are persons sufficiently trained to make the applications to the economy of the world of peace. The vocational training program is one for both the in-school and out-of-school older youth group and adults—it is a program of training and retraining and reeducation.

At the urgent request of the Future Farmers of America and the New Farmers of America, this bill provides for the supervision of their local chapters by the teacher of vocational agriculture located in that particular school. This requirement is already in the charters of these organizations and this has been the accepted practice and responsibility of the local vocational teacher since the organization of the Future Farmers of America and the New Farmers of America. These organizations are for students enrolled in vocational agriculture classes. Briefly discussing the Future Farmers of America, this organization has a motto worth noting, "Learning to do, doing to learn, earning to live, and living to serve." This organization has 6,502 local chapters and a membership of 204,175 active members. The teacher of vocational agriculture serves as local adviser to these boys. Two of the officers of this national organization appeared before the committee and presented some very wholesome, typically American philosophy regarding thrift and work. There has been a lot of talking about the American way of life. This bill provides a way to encourage it. This is building and doing in the American way by Americans.

Mr. JENSEN. The main reason for asking for the additional appropriation is because of the fact that so many veterans want to take this educational and vocational training.

Mr. BARDEN. That is one thing. Another is the natural popular demand for it. Another is that in virtually every State in the Union they are woefully short of vocational schools. They are doing the finest job, I know, and it is an inexpensive operation when compared with the accomplishments. This will provide for more of these schools which are operated in connection with the established high schools and provide some facilities where they are not now accessible.

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARDEN. I yield.

Mr. JUDD. Is it not true that this is not in any sense setting up a new program, but merely makes available the same program we have had hitherto, to a good many districts where they either have not taken advantage of it or did not previously have the resources to take advantage of it?

Mr. BARDEN. Absolutely.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARDEN. I yield.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I want to thank the gentleman and his committee for bringing up this bill. It has very strong and widespread support in my State. I believe, as the people of my State believe, that it is very greatly needed at the present time in order to take care of vocational and educational demands.

Mr. BARDEN. I thank the gentleman. I want to encourage this program by giving more funds and more equipment—every dollar invested in this program is a sound investment backed by the youth of America.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 3 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, this bill comes to the House, as the chairman of the Committee on Education has indicated, by a unanimous vote of the committee. The Smith-Hughes Act has been in effect since 1917 and the George-Deen Act since 1936. The amount of money appropriated under both of those acts is approximately $21,000,000 annually. If this bill is passed, it will add about $15,000,000 for the same program now being carried on in this country under the two acts which I have mentioned. It provides a 50–50 matching with the States. While there were some of us who thought that the expansion might be a little more than it should be at the present time, nevertheless I recognized, and I think every member of the committee did, that the demand on the part of the veterans for the program set forth in this proposed legislation is so great that it justifies us in expanding the program 75 percent of the present program in accordance with the terms of the bill. I think it is a good bill, and I hope it will pass the House unanimously.

Mr. Speaker, I yield one-half minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. BUCK].

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, I hope the Members will prepare themselves for a shock: I am in favor of this expenditure.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MINERAL LEASING ACT

Mr. FERNANDEZ. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill S. 1236, an act to amend the Mineral Leasing Act of February 25, 1920, as amended, in order to promote the development of oil and gas on the public domain, and for other purposes, and ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers on the part of the House be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Mexico?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1236) to amend the Mineral Leasing Act of February 25, 1920, as amended, in order to promote the development of oil and gas on the public domain, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its amendments numbered 7, 8, 20, and 21.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the House numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 10, 11, 12, 14, 15, 16, 17, and 18, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 6: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 6, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Restore the language stricken out and omit the language inserted; and on page 7 of the Senate engrossed bill strike out the matter in lines 16 through 19 and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Act, and (2) any production on a lease from an oil or gas deposit which was discovered after May 27, 1941, by a well or wells drilled within the boundaries of the lease, and which is determined by the Secretary to be a new deposit; and (3) any production on or allocated to a lease pursuant to an approved unit or cooperative agreement from an oil or gas deposit which was discovered after May 27, 1941, on land committed to such agreement, and which is determined by the Secretary to be a new deposit, where such lease, or a lease for which it is exchanged, was included in such agreement at the time of discovery, or was included in a duly executed and filed application for the approval of such agreement at the time of discovery."

And the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 9: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 9, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: At the end of the matter inserted by the House amendment insert a colon and the following: "Provided, That the total acreage so held in common by two or more persons shall not exceed, in the aggregate, an amount equivalent to the maximum number of acres of the respective kind of minerals allowed to any one lessee or permittee under this Act."

And the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 13: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 13, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: At the end of the matter inserted by the House amendment insert a period and add the following: "Upon approval of any assignment or sublease, the assignee or sublessee shall be bound by the terms of the lease to the same extent as if such assignee or sublessee were the original lessee, any conditions in the assignment or sublease to the contrary notwithstanding." And the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 19: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 19, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Restore the language stricken out and omit the language inserted. On page 20 of the Senate engrossed bill strike out the matter in line 24, and on page 21, strike out the matter on lines 1 to 4, inclusive, and insert in lieu thereof the following: "limits exist on the effective date of this Act, and (2) any production on a lease from an oil or gas deposit which was discovered after May 27, 1941, by a well or wells drilled within the boundaries of the lease, and which is determined by the Secretary to be a new deposit; and (3) any production on or allocated to a lease pursuant to an approved unit or cooperative agreement from an oil or gas deposit which was discovered after May 27, 1941, on land committed to such agreement, and which is determined by the Secretary to be a new deposit, where such lease, or a lease for which it is exchanged, was included in such agreement at the time of discovery, or was included in a duly executed and filed application for the approval of such agreement at the time of discovery." And the House agree to the same.

J. HARDIN PETERSON,
ANTONIO M. FERNANDEZ,
COMPTON I. WHITE,
K. M. LECOMPTE,
FRANK A. BARRETT,
Managers on the Part of the House.

JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY,
ROBERT F. WAGNER,
JAMES E. MURRAY,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1236) to amend the Mineral Leasing Act of February 25, 1920, as amended, in order to promote the development of oil and gas on the public domain, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

Amendment No. 1: This amendment strikes out a provision of the Senate bill which was intended to authorize the leasing for oil and gas on certain lands adjacent to the Navajo Indian Reservation in New Mexico. It is the understanding of the conferees that these lands are already subject to leasing by the Secretary of the Interior and that the provision of the Senate bill is, accordingly, unnecessary. The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 2: This amendment corrects a typographical error. The Senate recedes.

Amendments Nos. 3, 4, and 5: These amendments are intended to further effectuate the purposes of the legislation, namely, to provide an incentive for exploration on the peripheral areas believed to contain oil and gas. Encouragement is needed to stimulate prospecting and the drilling of exploratory wells. The Senate recedes.

Amendments Nos. 6, 7, and 8: The conference agreement substitutes for these amendments language which clarifies the objectives sought to be obtained by the amendment and will tend to facilitate administration of these provisions.

Amendment No. 9: The conference agreement accepted this amendment with an addition which is intended to assure that the acreage limitations for holdings under the Mineral Leasing Act will not be exceeded by individuals.

Amendments Nos. 10, 11, and 12: These amendments clarify the assignment provisions of the bill. The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 13: The conference agreement accepts the House amendment with an amendment which is intended to assure that the assignee will carry out and fulfill those obligations important to the development of oil and gas resources which are the responsibility of the assignor.

Amendment No. 14: This is a technical clarifying amendment. The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 15: This amendment corrects a clerical error in the Senate bill. The Senate recedes.

Amendments Nos. 16, 17, and 18: These amendments are counterparts of amendments Nos. 3, 4, and 5, and are disposed of by the conference agreement in the same manner.

Amendments Nos. 19, 20, and 21: These amendments are counterparts of amendments Nos. 6, 7, and 8, and are disposed of by the conference agreement in the same manner.

J. HARDIN PETERSON,
COMPTON I. WHITE,
ANTONIO M. FERNANDEZ,
K. M. LECOMPTE,
FRANK A. BARRETT,
Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman explain the conference report?

Mr. FERNANDEZ. Mr. Speaker, this bill, S. 1236, as now approved by the conferees is the culmination of long and diligent work on the part of the Senate and House Committees on Public Lands during the last 2 or 3 years. It constitutes the first general revision of the oil and gas provisions of the Mineral Leasing Act since the act of August 21, 1935. The changes which have occurred since that date have demonstrated the need for the general revision of the Mineral Leasing Act. In the words of Senator O'MAHONEY, in reporting the bill out:

> The bill is designed to stimulate the discovery of new petroleum reserves; to promote the development of oil and gas on the some 300,000 square miles of potential oil lands of the public domain; to grant incentives which will bear as their rewards American leadership in industry and world affairs.

When the Senate bill came to the House, our committee requested the Department of the Interior for additional comment on the bill as enacted by the Senate. A number of suggestions were made to our committee by the Department of the Interior designed to improve the language of the bill and to safeguard the public interest against possible misinterpretation of some of the language contained in the Senate bill.

Our committee adopted a number of amendments in the light of the recommendations of the Department of the Interior, which were incorporated in the bill as it passed the House.

We were happy to find the Senate conferees well disposed to accept the House amendments, and they will report to the Senate, as we did to the House, that the Senate recede and concur with nearly all of our amendments as described in the report made to the House on passage of the bill. Only three amendments were changed.

The conferees on the part of the House, finding that there was still some apprehension on the part of the Department of the Interior with respect to three of these amendments, met with representatives of the Department of the Interior, and worked out additional language to the first two of these amendments.

It was provided in the bill that two or more persons may hold leases as tenants in common to facilitate exploration and development. To safeguard against monopoly in the industry, the law has always limited the acreage which may be held by any one person, and we amended the bill so as to require that each person holding lands in common should be charged with his pro rata share of the acreage so held. At the suggestion of the Department, the conferees on the part of the House worked out an amendment further providing that the aggregate holdings under such arrangement should not exceed the total permitted to any one person, and this amendment was submitted to the Senate conferees, and was accepted by them. It is now incorporated in the amendment as adopted here today.

The second of these amendments did not meet with the full approval of the Department. The amendment was intended to facilitate the assignment of leases in order to relieve the bottleneck in the Department of the Interior, which has created a backlog of unapproved leases and which necessarily tends to impede and delay discovery of new petroleum reserves. The Department was fearful that assignments could be so conditioned as to relieve assignees from some of the obligations of the original lessee, and to fully safeguard the Government and to meet the criticism of the Department, the conferees on the part of the House drafted an amendment providing that upon approval of any assignment, the assignee must be bound by the obligations of the lease to the same extent as if he were the original lessee. This latter amendment was approved by the Department and was accepted by the Senate conferees and is now incorporated in the amendments.

The third and perhaps the most important amendment made by the House was with respect to clause (2) in sections 4 and 12 of the bill. The Department, as well as some commentators familiar with the oil industry, feared that this clause could be so interpreted as to reduce certain royalties on producing fields to the detriment of the Reclamation fund and the States.

The House committee, having worked closely with the Senate committee in the investigation of the problem, realized that no such purpose was intended and we amended the language on passage of the Senate bill in the House. The Department of the Interior submitted additional modifications of the language in clause (2) to further guard against any such interpretation, and this modification, divided in two parts as clauses (2) and (3), was accepted by the House and Senate conferees and is now incorporated in the bill.

In concluding, I desire, on behalf of the House committee, to express our appreciation, for the close and valuable cooperation received from the Department of the Interior, and, also, to the clerks in the House and Senate committees for the excellent manner in which they arranged and rearranged the many suggested amendments to the bill, so as to keep before the committees at all times during the progress of the work a clear picture of the many suggested changes necessary to an intelligent and effective revision of this complicated law.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. BARRETT of Wyoming. Mr. Speaker, I rise merely to clarify certain of the provisions of sections 4 and 12 of the act. In addition to other leases that may be entitled to a 12½-percent royalty, it was intended to grant a 12½-percent royalty as an incentive for exploratory wells drilled outside of the known productive limits of a field or deposit for the purpose of increasing development and production on the flanks of a known producing structure or down structure from the crest of a producing oil or gas field. I might state that drilling operations under such conditions, generally speaking, are as big a risk as a wholly wildcat operation. For the purpose of encouraging new production, it is just as important to encourage such operations as it is to promote the drilling of ordinary wildcat wells.

CITIZENS ENGAGED IN CONSTRUCTION OF THE PANAMA CANAL

Mr. PETERSON of Florida submitted a conference report and statement on the bill (H. R. 3748) to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the recognition of the services of the civilian officials and employees, citizens of the United States, engaged in and about the construction of the Panama Canal," approved May 29, 1944.

MEDAL OF HONOR TO THE LATE WILLIAM MITCHELL

Mr. SIKES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the House vacate the proceedings whereby the bill (S. 881) authorizing the President of the United States to award posthumously in the name of Congress a Medal of Honor to William Mitchell, was amended and read the third time and passed on yesterday.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is that the General Mitchell award?

Mr. SIKES. Yes. I would like to state to my distinguished friend that the House Military Affairs Committee had intended to report a bill providing that the medal for General Mitchell be given to his son, the namesake of General Mitchell, but through an error the bill was passed yesterday containing another name. We did not notice it until this morning. We are asking that the House vacate its proceedings so that we can correct the bill and place General Mitchell's medal in the hands of his son.

Mr. BIEMILLER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SIKES. I yield.

Mr. BIEMILLER. Do I understand the committee will report the bill in another form immediately, or what is the plan?

Mr. SIKES. I will offer an amendment at this time to correct the situation so that the bill can be passed. All of us, I believe, realize the importance of General Mitchell's great work and we want him to be honored accordingly.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

Mr. SIKES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 881) authorizing the President of the United States to award posthumously in the name of Congress a Medal of Honor to William Mitchell.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President is authorized to award posthumously, in the name of Congress, a Medal of Honor to the late William Lendrum Mitchell, formerly a colonel, United States Army, in recognition of his outstanding pioneer service and foresight in the field of American military aviation. The President may present such Medal of Honor to Mrs. Martin Fladoes, of Milwaukee, Wis., sister of the said William Lendrum Mitchell.

Mr. SIKES. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment offered by Mr. SIKES: Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following: "That the President of the United States is requested to cause a gold medal to be struck, with suitable emblems, devices, and inscriptions, to be presented to the late William Mitchell, formerly a colonel, United States Army, in recognition of his outstanding pioneer service and foresight in the field of American military aviation.

"SEC. 2. When the medal provided for in section 1 of this act shall have been struck the President shall transmit the same to William Mitchell, Jr., son of the said William Mitchell, to be presented to him in the name of the people of the United States.

"SEC. 3. A sufficient sum of money to carry this act into effect is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. TALBOT (at the request of Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts) was granted permission to extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

Mrs. LUCE (at the request of Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts) was granted permission to extend her remarks in the RECORD and include several excerpts and letters.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and include a letter from the chairman of the Middletown Town Meeting Committee notwithstanding the fact that the estimate of the printer is that it will cost $345.

The SPEAKER. Notwithstanding and without objection, the extension may be made.

There was no objection.

Mr. BARRETT of Pennsylvania was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD on the deplorable registration situation in Pennsylvania and insert a letter which was sent to him.

Mr. PRICE of Illinois asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an editorial from the Washington Post of today.

Mr. HAYS asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in two instances in the RECORD and include a short editorial.

Mr. LINK asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. LANE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances, in one to include some articles written by Ruth Kreuger, of the New York Post, foreign correspondent on Palestine, and in the other to include a resolution.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD on the subject of social medicine, including therein a statement of an eminent doctor of Minnesota.

Mr. STEVENSON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include a statement prepared by him entitled "The Stevenson Antidisease Bill Provides Research for the Cure of Incurable Diseases."

PROGRAM FOR SATURDAY, JULY 27, 1946

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MCCORMACK] tell us what bills have been scheduled for consideration tomorrow?

Mr. McCORMACK. There is one bill that was not reached today.

As the Speaker has stated, of course, the question of recognition for suspension rests with the Speaker, and we always respect that, but there are certain bills which I would recommend to the Speaker that he recognize to be called up under suspension of the rules tomorrow. In addition to whatever others the Speaker has in mind, one I would recommend is a bill out of the World War Veterans' Committee providing automobiles for amputees. I have just conferred with the gentlewoman from Massachusetts [Mrs. ROGERS], and it is agreeable to her that it be brought up under suspension.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I yield.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I thought that bill was before the Rules Committee for consideration.

Mr. McCORMACK. There is a bill coming out of the Committee on World War Veterans' Affairs relating to Filipinos who served during the war.

Then there is a bill that comes out of the Committee on the Judiciary in relation to establishing a commission with reference to the claims of certain companies.

There is the bill S. 2127, establishing a commission to pass upon Japanese claims, create an Evacuation Claims Commission under the general supervision of the Secretary of the Interior, and to provide for the powers, duties, and functions thereof.

That is the tentative program.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Is it expected to take up the RFC and the Philippine loan bills also?

The SPEAKER. Yes; tomorrow in some form.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Does the gentleman know anything about the program for next week yet?

Mr. McCORMACK. Not now.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. The gentleman is not ready to announce any additional program now?

Mr. McCORMACK. No.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to dispose of the RFC bill and the Philippine loan bill tomorrow and trusts that the members of the Committee on Banking and Currency can get together and agree on a bill that can be called up by unanimous consent. Otherwise, the Chair will recognize someone to call them up under a suspension of the rules.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. We can take it pretty much for granted that no other matters will be called up under suspension so far as the gentleman from Massachusetts knows?

Mr. McCORMACK. That is all I know about. On yesterday, I believe, the Speaker mentioned something about consideration of a Senate amendment to the tidelands bill, sending the bill to conference. I do not know what action will be taken on that.

There is also the matter of whether or not the Public Buildings bill will come up under a rule, but that has not been determined as yet.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Can the gentleman tell us when he thinks we will be through with legislative matters?

Mr. McCORMACK. I think about the latter part of next week. The difficulty, of course, in connection with that is the exigencies that confront the other body.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. What are those exigencies?

Mr. McCORMACK. There is legislation over there that the Senate has to pass upon.

The SPEAKER. Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. DE LACY] is recognized for 30 minutes.

AMERICA'S RESPONSIBILITY FOR CIVIL WAR IN CHINA

Mr. DE LACY. Mr. Speaker, on November 26, 1945, six Members of this House introduced identical resolutions calling for the immediate withdrawal of all troops, transports, and supplies from China and urging that America use every effort to bring together the contending parties there in a representative coalition government, based upon free elections and dedicated to popular land, tax, and governmental reforms.

Although former Ambassador Hurley's angry resignation the next day led to the sending of General Marshall to China and the announcement by President Truman of a policy identical in important respects with that urged in our resolutions and in my speech, to this day, with all the national and international interest there is in heading off civil war in China, it has proved impossible to get hearings on House Resolution 408.

It is in the hope that airing on this floor the extent of America's responsibility for the present civil war in China may be of some small help in arousing the American people to stop our shameful military intervention against the forces of Chinese democracy that I address these words to my colleagues and invite participation of other interested Members.

If you are not too sure of your argument—

The distinguished newspaper columnist, Marquis Childs, once observed—the easiest way to dispose of your opponent is to yell Communist.

Such yells have tended to obscure the real nature of the conflict in China.

In a hush-hush State Department document, prepared by its Interim Research and Intelligence Service, entitled "Economy of Communist North China," is to be found an objective assessment by hard-headed Americans of the main difference between the Kuomintang and Communist policies.

The Kuomintang—

Says this report—page 13—

also endorses this principle of "land-to-the-toilers" but differs with the Communists as to its interpretation. * * * The Kuomintang, which is dominated by big landholders * * * advocates making more land available to the people as tenants rather than as owners. * * *

The decisive dividing line between the Kuomintang and the Communists may be drawn between a Kuomintang policy of safeguarding the emoluments of land ownership and the Communist policy of demanding enough land to guard the economic security of the peasant.

The Communists—

Says this State Department report—

have clearly identified the Chinese Communist Party as the party of the peasants. Its present program—reduction of rent and interest, progressive taxation, assistance to production, promotion of cooperatives, and institution of popularly elected governments—is designed to meet needs felt by the peasants and to bring about their participation in the solution of their problems (p. 26).

The Kuomintang and the Communists are also at odds on the course each recommends for China's future industrial development. Chiang and his official family dream of a state-controlled heavy industry, run of course, by the present corrupt officialdom, with a light consumers' goods industry part owned by government and part by private Chinese capital, to utilize cheap labor and export into world markets to build up credits.

The Communists, according to this unpublished State Department report, "argue that the Kuomintang policy of controlling completely the course of economic development will limit foreign participation and adversely affect China's industrial growth." They "consequently inveigh against 'bureaucratic capitalism,' which they contend discourages private enterprise and the initiative needed in China's further growth"—pages 29–30.

These conclusions as to the respective economic aims of the Chinese Communists and the Kuomintang are confirmed by Owen Lattimore and Laurence Salisbury, editor of Far Eastern Survey, in conversations with me; by Gunther Stein, former correspondent in China for the Manchester Guardian and the Christian Science Monitor; by Lawrence Rosinger, in China's Crisis, and by Phillip Jaffee's Frontiers in Asia.

The Kuomintang is thus the party of the big Chinese landholder. It resists agrarian reform. Proclaiming a necessary period of party tutelage, the Kuomintang's reactionary leadership rejects elections, appoints all officials, including university professors, and maintains three large secret-service systems which employ concentration camps, kidnapings, torture, and murder as political weapons. It is now trying to conquer Manchuria, which was never previously under Kuomintang rule.

The Chinese Communists, although the only other armed group, are not alone in opposing Chiang's dictatorship. The Democratic League, composed of six minor groups, though not large in membership, has great influence among China's professional and intellectual class. It demands political liberty, a representative coalition government, the adoption of a democratic constitution, cessation of the civil war, and withdrawal of American aid to Chiang and his warmakers.

Two of the leaders of the Democratic League were recently assassinated in Kunming by Kuomintang gangsters. On July 11 Li Kung-po, a liberal writer and educator, was shot while out on a walk with his wife and children, and on July 17, Prof. Wen I-tu, of the Southwest Associated University, was killed in front of the office of Kunming's Democratic Weekly.

It is not only the Communists, therefore, who are fighting and dying in the cause of freedom and progress in China. As Prof. J. Spencer Kennard, Jr., teacher of history and resident in China for 26 years, wrote the New York Tribune:

It is not just Communists who are crying imperialism to America's policies in China, but every Chinese patriot of whatever party affiliation. I except only the cliques whose rule we are now fastening upon a resentful people by force of American arms.

Referring to the anti-civil war demonstration of 100,000 which swept through the streets of Shanghai on June 23 demanding peace and that America get its troops and supplies out of China, Professor Kennard said:

By no stretch of the imagination can "Communist" be pinned to the 69-year-old Professor Ma Hsu-lin, formerly of Chekiang University, and to the 50-year-old Dr. Lei Chieh-chuen, woman professor in Soochow University, who headed the delegation expressing these demands to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and to our American Embassy.

The whole world—

He adds—

was horrified by the brutality with which the hoodlums, incited by the Nanking Gestapo, slugged them and their companions, some into unconsciousness.

On November 28, 2 days after the introduction of House Resolution 408 and 10 days before President Truman issued his statement on China policy, Kunming students from 30 schools appealed to President Truman.

Today we witness—

These students said—that your Government is practicing various policies that entirely transgress the spirit of Roosevelt's Atlantic Charter, annihilate the welfare of the Chinese people, and hinder the establishment of a new democratic China. * * *

We * * * humbly propose * * * that your Government reconsider the policy toward China * * * evacuate American soldiers in China and stop supplying the Chinese Government with weapons to carry on the civil war.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DE LACY. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. The gentleman spoke about the Atlantic Charter. That was the "four freedoms" business, as I remember it. Does the gentleman think it is consistent with the principles of that Charter for the CIO-PAC to charge veterans—according to the letter I put in the RECORD from that young man—$5 special assessment for propaganda purposes to reestablish the OPA and $5 for their campaign to organize the South and $2 toward flowers for Hilman?

Mr. DE LACY. I think the distinguished gentleman from Michigan is well aware that those issues are not involved in the speech which I am making.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. The gentleman was talking about the Atlantic Charter. Does that not apply to all Americans?

Mr. DE LACY. I decline to yield further to the distinguished gentleman.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Of course, if the gentleman thinks it is just for foreigners; that is all right, but I thought he wanted liberty for the Americans.

Mr. DE LACY. In the same vein, 19 prominent Chinese professors wrote General Marshall, expressing their people's opposition to civil war, urging the United States to stop transporting Kuomintang troops and stop equipping them for civil war; demanding that the Kuomintang government release all political prisoners, punish those who have massacred innocent people, remove its reactionaries from office, permit consideration of the draft constitution written by the All-Party Political Consultative Council; and urging America not to loan money to the present Chinese Government until it takes the road to democratic reform.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield further, I just want to make one other inquiry. Would the gentleman like to have a quorum present so that the other Members could hear his remarks?

Mr. DE LACY. I think the distinguished gentleman will have to follow his own best advice in that respect.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. I do not want one, but it is just an act of kindness on my part, that is all.

Mr. DE LACY. And only a few days ago the calm and powerful voice of Mme. Sun Yat-sen appealed to America to stop supporting the reactionaries in her brother-in-law's government. She warned that the Kuomintang leadership, flirting with American reactionaries, was gambling on a war in Asia between the United States and the Soviet Union.

So the picture in China emerges: On the one side a powerful, oppressive, landholding, grafting clique, maintaining itself by terror, by force of arms, and by wily anti-Soviet diplomacy; on the other side the educators, the intellectuals, the liberals among the businessmen, merchants, and landlords, the peasants, and the Communists, demanding political liberty, agrarian reform, coalition government looking to the adoption of a basic constitution with government by law.

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LE LACY. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. JENSEN. I have listened to the gentleman with interest, and I have not yet decided what point the gentleman is trying to make. I am wondering what interest the people of the United States have in the gentleman's remarks.

Mr. DE LACY. If the gentleman will have a little patience, I think he will understand, and I will say to the gentleman that all I can do is to furnish the facts as I see them. The gentleman will have to interpret them himself.

Mr. JENSEN. Are we supposed to take sides in that fight over there?

Mr. DE LACY. We have taken sides, and I am pointing out how we are taking sides.

Mr. JENSEN. I have been listening very attentively and I do not know which side the gentleman is supporting.

Mr. DE LACY. There is no doubt, either, as to which side the American Government is supporting. Although President Truman's statement of December 15 pledged "As China moves toward peace and unity, the United States would be prepared to assist the National Government in every reasonable way," in actual fact, we have continued to place vast quantities of arms and supplies at Chiang's disposal, and have transported not five central government armies into Manchuria, as agreed at the January 10 meeting under General Marshall's guidance, but nine armies, at a reported cost to the American taxpayer of well over $300,000,000.

These nine armies, carried into Manchuria by American warships are the new Sixth, the new First, the Seventy-first, Sixtieth, Ninety-third, Ninety-ninth, Fifth, Eleventh, and Fifty-third, according to the July bulletin of the Committee for a Democratic Far Eastern Policy.

Plans are also under way, this bulletin reports, for transporting three more Kuomintang Party armies, the Fifty-fourth, Forty-third, and Sixteenth, into Manchuria or North China.

Chiang's government has also had, since VJ-day, $602,000,000 in lend-lease. This compares with $631,000,000 in lend-lease to China before VJ-day.

The Kuomintang government has gotten tremendous quantities of American military surplus, more than $500,000,000 worth in the India-Burma theater, it is reported, including 700 planes.

We have also trained and equipped 40 divisions since VJ-day, as compared to the 20 divisions trained and equipped to fight the Japs.

And even UNRRA shipments have been distributed to strengthen Chinese reaction. As William Newton wrote from Yangchow June 7, in an article appearing in the Washington Daily News:

> Thirteen barge loads of American wheat destined for the starving people of Communist-controlled towns * * * have been refused passage * * * by the National Government military commander here.

But the most ironic perversion of all is to be found in the conclusion, to which we are reluctantly driven, that the chief result of General Marshall's labors has been to win time for Chiang's clique to pile up supplies and get their armies moved into position, by American ships, for further fighting.

Mr. Speaker, there is only one way to stop the spreading civil war in China. There is only one way to prevent that war from involving other powers and lighting the flames of another world war.

We must stop helping one side. We must get our troops and our supplies and our ships out of China.

Let the Chinese parties find their own natural level of political strength. Then Chiang will be compelled to bargain in good faith with his opposition. Then he will be compelled to make concessions to the nearly universal cry in China for freedom and economic justice. Then there will be hope for a representative people's government, friendly to the United States, friendly to the Soviet Union, raising its peoples' living standards, making them more able to absorb American exports, a great and growing market, a flourishing center for world trade, a bulwark for world peace.

The very least we can do here is to have hearings even at this late date on House Resolution 408, so that all views can be heard and the public can be acquainted with the grave threat which China's civil war and our responsibility for feeding its flames present to world peace.

Mr. RAMEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DE LACY. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. RAMEY. Just last night I talked with Roger Kerr, a soldier just returned from China. He informed me that they purchased meals for 60 cents, steak and everything. He told of the deplorable conditions there. He said right out on the street were children being hauled away, completely starved. They could get no food whatsoever, and the American boys could not remedy it. There was nothing they could do.

Mr. DE LACY. Yes. I think the gentleman also knows that until UNRRA was recently stopped the relief supplies we were contributing were not going to those starving people but into the pockets of the selfish few.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DE LACY. I yield.

Mr. WHITE. The gentleman speaks about Chiang Kai-shek, the present dictator in China. As a matter of fact, he is closely related to the famous Soong family, the great capitalists over there. There is little to be expected in the way of real democracy in China as long as those capitalists and the Soongs dominate the affairs of China.

Mr. DE LACY. I thank the gentleman for his contribution.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DE LACY. I yield.

GENERAL MARSHALL'S MISSION AND THE CIVIL WAR IN CHINA

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. Speaker, the American people placed great hope in General Marshall, when he left for China early last December. I was a little doubtful and desired the appointment of General Stillwell or Latimer.

I would like to review briefly the circumstances under which General Marshall departed on his mission to assist in the democratic unification of China, the instructions given him by our President, and the events which have taken place since he undertook his onerous duties.

Members of the House will recall that when Ambassador Hurley exploded and resigned on November 27, 1945, President Truman immediately telephoned General Marshall at his home in Leesburg, Va., and asked him to go to China as his special envoy "to handle a particular job that needs to be done." On November 29 the President proclaimed in his press conference that General Marshall would receive his specific instructions before he leaves for China and that these instructions would be made public. So on December 15, 1946, when General Marshall was on his way to China, the President issued a public statement on the United States policy toward China, which clearly declared:

> The United States is cognizant that the present National Government of China is a one-party government and believes that peace, unity, and democratic reform in China will be furthered if the basis of this Government is broadened to include other political elements in the country. Hence, the United States strongly advocates that the national conference of representatives of major political elements in the country agree upon arrangements which would give those elements an effective representation in the Chinese National Government. It is recognized that this would require modification of the one-party political tutelage established as an interim arrangement in the progress of the nation toward democracy by the father of the Chinese Republic, Dr. Sun Yat-sen.

With the institution of a broadly representative government, autonomous armies should be eliminated as such and all armed forces in China integrated effectively into the Chinese National Army.

As China moves toward peace and unity along the lines described above, the United States would be prepared to assist the National Government in every reasonable way to rehabilitate the country, improve the agrarian and industrial economy, and establish a military organization capable of discharging China's national and international responsibilities for the maintenance of peace and order.

In furtherance of such assistance, it would be prepared to give favorable consideration to Chinese requests for credits and loans under reasonable conditions for projects which would contribute toward the development of a healthy economy throughout China and healthy trade relations between China and the United States.

It is clear from this public statement of policy, which was announced to the people of the United States and other peoples of the world, that the United States considers the Kuomintang one-party dictatorship as incompatible with peace and unity in China and that therefore such a government must be reorganized so as to give other political parties and groups an effective voice in the new democratic coalition. The statement also made it clear that the reorganization of the Communist and Kuomintang Party armies would take place upon the institution of a broadly represented democratic coalition government, and that loans and credits for China would only be considered after the establishment of peace and unity in China.

On December 18 the State Department, through Michael J. McDermott, public-relations officer, disclosed that it had directed the War Department to obtain approval from General Marshall, special envoy to China, before giving any further assistance to northward-moving Chinese Central Government forces.

The Big Three Conference of Foreign Ministers in Moscow announced in a night communiqué on December 27 that they agreed on "the need for a unified and democratic China under the National Government, for broad participation by democratic elements in all branches of the National Government, and for a cessation of civil strife." In addition, they "reaffirmed their adherence to the policy of noninterference in the internal affairs of China."

And as part of the over-all arrangement James F. Byrnes and V. M. Molotov reached an understanding for the withdrawal of both American and Russian forces from China "at the earliest practicable moment consistent with the discharge of their obligations and responsibilities."

Armed with the Truman and Moscow statements, together with the unprecedented power vested in him by the State and War Departments, General Marshall succeeded in bringing about a truce between the Kuomintang and Communist factions on January 10, 1946, exactly 19 days since his arrival at Chungking, where he immediately began conferences with all political groups.

On the same day that the truce was proclaimed the Political Consultive Conference of all political parties and groups was called. At the opening session Chiang Kai-shek pledged to carry out instantly four measures to protect the civil rights of the people:

First. To insure freedom of person, of conscience, of publication, and of assembly.

Second. To abrogate secret policy activity, assure that rulings were being made under which only proper judicial and police authorities would be permitted to arrest, try, or punish individuals.

Third. Equality of all legal parties before the law and their right to open activity within the law.

Fourth. Release of all political prisoners except traitors and those found to have committed definite acts injurious to the Republic.

After 3 weeks of conferences, the PCC unanimously came to an agreement on the establishment of a democratic coalition government. The following were the principal results of the conference:

First. It was agreed to set up an interim government, pending the establishment of a permanent constitutional government. This interim government, which was to be composed of representatives of all the major political groups, was to be formed through the expansion of the state council.

Second. It was agreed to set up a multiparty review committee to revise the draft constitution. The new draft was to be submitted to a national assembly in approximately 2 months.

Third. Agreement was reached on the composition of this national assembly. At the same time an understanding was reached—outside the formal agreements—regarding the changes to be made in the current draft of the constitution and these changes, it was also agreed would be approved by the national assembly. The latter, in other words, by common understanding was to provide merely a formal method for ratification of the new constitution.

Fourth. Following the adoption of a constitution, the interim government would give way to a permanent constitutional government. This new government, it was generally understood, would take over in the fall of 1946.

Fifth. Principals were adopted regarding the unification and nationalization of all armies in China, including a program for gradual demilitarization and civilian control. Military reorganization was to be conditional upon the carrying out of the political agreements.

Not one of the pledges contained in Chiang Kai-shek's opening speech nor one of the provisions of the PCC agreements has been carried out. On the contrary on every single point the situation has worsened.

The attitude of Kuomintang leaders in sabotaging these pledges and agreements is seen not only in assassinations, terrorization, renewed civil-war provocations, and failure to implement the PCC agreements, but also in the official position of the Kuomintang Party. This point has been little understood in the United States.

The central committee of the Kuomintang was convened, purportedly to ratify the PCC agreements, in the middle of March. After a 15-day session the central committee announced unanimous acceptance of the unity agreements. What the Kuomintang failed to publicize was the fact that these agreements had been accepted only after being subjected to such drastic amendments as to alter their meaning altogether.

The first change made by the central committee was in the terms of the establishment of a coalition government as worked out by the PCC. The Kuomintang central committee voted that all members of any new government, including non-Kuomintang ones, would have to be appointed by the Kuomintang. Thus the essence of the one-party dictatorship, the right to form governments and veto any unacceptable candidates, was perpetuated.

The second change was made in the procedure of constitution-making. The Kuomintang draft constitution prepared in 1936 gave dictatorial powers to the President between meetings of the national assembly, which were to take place only once in 3 years and last not more than 1 month. It also denied the principle of local self-government. The PCC in January agreed to form a special committee representative of all groups to redraft the constitution to eliminate all such undemocratic features.

The Kuomintang central committee, however, bypassed this agreement as well as the PCC agreement to call a new national assembly and voted to submit the old draft constitution directly to the national assembly, which had been handpicked by the Kuomintang 10 years before, had never met, and contained a large majority of unreconstructed reactionaries.

The third change made by the Kuomintang central committee had to do with the reorganization of the Army. The original PCC agreement provided for the early reduction of the whole Army to 90 divisions and a further reduction to 60 divisions—48 Kuomintang and 12 Communist—within a year and a half, prior to merging into a single national force.

The central committee decided to keep 60 more of its divisions under arms, giving it a total of 108 against the Communists' 12.

Thus the highest body of the Kuomintang repudiated the PCC January agreements.

That this sabotage of Chinese unity, democracy, and cessation of civil war got the official encouragement of the American Government is clear.

While the Kuomintang central committee was still in session—March 20—General Marshall, then in Washington, called for a $500,000,000 credit to the Chiang Kai-shek government.

Throughout this period, the United States was supplying the Kuomintang armies with extensive lend-lease. It was training Kuomintang divisions—40 have been trained and equipped by the United States since VJ-day in contrast to only 20 during the war. It was transporting Kuomintang armies to north China and to Manchuria. American marines were on active patrol duty in the north. American naval craft and airplanes were placed at the disposal of the Kuomintang.

On June 14 President Truman announced the continuation of lend-lease to China.

On June 13, S. 2337 was introduced in the Senate and on June 14 the identical bill, H. R. 6795, was introduced in the House. This administration bill would authorize virtually unlimited military aid to China as well as the establishment of an extensive United States military mission to the Chinese Government.

In July the Kuomintang was further encouraged by passage of the bill authorizing transfer of an additional 271 United States Navy vessels to Chiang Kai-shek.

If there was any doubt left in the minds of Kuomintang reactionaries as to the true intent of American policy it was dissipated by the growing official American antagonism to the U. S. S. R., and by other events in the international area all of which confirmed the strong antidemocratic and preimperialist orientation of United States foreign policy.

We cannot but conclude from all of the foregoing that our hopes for the successful outcome of General Marshall's mission have been tragically frustrated.

The present National Government of China is still "a one-party government"; the basis of this government has not been "broadened to include other political elements in the country," and therefore "peace, unity, and democratic reform in China" have not been furthered but retarded since General Marshall's arrival in that land.

The whole program for the peaceful development of China, toward unification, democracy, agrarian, and industrial reform—which President Truman instructed General Marshall to further—has been obstructed and set back by American policies in China.

We must ask ourselves who is responsible for the tragic failure of the Marshall mission, from which such great gains, both for China and world peace, were anticipated.

It is my conviction, Mr. Speaker, that evil forces both in China and in this country have taken shameful advantage of the Marshall mission to advance their private interests at the expense of Chinese democracy, American security, and world peace.

Whenever a new crisis has arisen in the Chinese situation, General Marshall, faithful to his mission, has demanded a truce in hostilities. The central government has repeatedly agreed to a truce—only to use the lull in fighting to regroup and augment its forces for a new attack on the Chinese Communists and Nanking's other democratic opponents. These same periods of truce have been utilized by certain circles in the United States to increase and improve the quantity and quality of United States aid to the central government. And thus, as soon as full advantage has been extracted from the successive periods of peace in China by the central government and its allies in this country—the armies of Nanking have returned to more violent and brutal civil warfare.

This is the tragedy of General Marshall's failure. It is now, I think, quite clear that his mission cannot any longer be expected to succeed. The time has come to serve notice on the central government that it can look for no further help from the United States until it has fundamentally changed its own character, along the lines indicated in the President's statement of last December 15. The recall of General Marshall, together with that of American troops and the termination of all American military and economic aid to the Nanking government would constitute such notice. Without any reflection either on the good intentions or great ability of General Marshall, I believe that he can now only accomplish his mission, and serve both the interests of China and of our own country by publicizing his failure and returning home. It may well be that by such unprecedentedly frank and courageous action our former Chief of Staff would achieve what he has not achieved by other means in the furthering of Chinese peace and democracy and the unification of our great wartime ally.

Mr. SAVAGE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DE LACY. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. SAVAGE. Mr. Speaker, in light of the present crucial situation in China where thousands of our armed forces are stationed at present, I think it important to review the conduct of our policy on military supplies, loans, and credits from the United States to China. The differences between our words on policy and our acts are, I believe, responsible to a great degree for the confidence with which the present central government is spreading the civil war and refusing to form a democratic coalition.

The basic United States policy on these matters was laid down by President Truman in his statement of December 15, 1945, when he said:

> United States support will not extend to United States military intervention to influence the course of any Chinese internal strife.
>
> As China moves toward peace and unity along the lines described above, the United States would be prepared to assist the National Government in every reasonable way to rehabilitate the country, improve the agrarian and industrial economy, and establish a military organization capable of discharging China's national and international responsibilities for the maintenance of peace and order. In furtherance of such assistance, it would be prepared to give favorable consideration to Chinese requests for credits and loans under reasonable conditions for projects which would contribute toward the development of a healthy economy throughout China and healthy trade relations between China and the United States.

The practice of American policy has been at sharp variance with the above statement. It will be noted that with respect to the financial and military aid, President Truman established three conditions, namely: First, that United States support would not be used to influence the course of the Chinese internal struggle; second, that United States aid would be conditional upon China moving toward internal peace and unity; and third, that United States credits and loans would be granted for specific, not general, projects.

What has happened since the enunciation of that policy which met with such broad approval among the people of the United States and China?

Following VJ-day, lend-lease was canceled to all countries except China, which received a special extension of 6 months. That 6-month period ended in March 1946. Yet, it was not until June 14 that President Truman revealed that lend-lease operations to China had continued beyond that date and were still continuing. Under what authority was this further extension carried out? Certainly the matter had not come before Congress. During the months which elapsed between March and June 14, this matter was apparently kept secret not only from the American people but from Members of Congress as well.

In his June 14 quarterly report on lend-lease, President Truman indicated that China had received $602,045,000 since VJ-day to last December 31. If to this sum is added funds which are commonly supposed to have been earmarked for China lend-lease, though not expended at the time of President Truman's report, funds amounting to another two hundred and fifty-million-odd dollars, and the amount shipped since the first of the year, the total lend-lease aid to China after VJ-day considerably exceed such aid China received prior to the war's end.

At the same time, President Truman indicated lend-lease operations had virtually ceased. Informed Washington correspondents have indicated that lend-lease to China was terminated by June 30 and infer that this information came from official sources. In the July 23 Herald Tribune, for instance, James E. Warner, writing from Washington, reports that—

> Shipments of arms and ammunition under lend-lease to the Chinese National Government forces ceased before June 30, and no more will be shipped until Congress approves a bill calling for American aid in training a unified National-Communist Chinese Army.

Yet, in the New York Times of July 25, a dispatch from Hulutac, Manchuria, by Benjamin Welles, asserts that—

> Since the end of April, between 75,000 and 100,000 tons of American lend-lease have been landed for the use of the northeast China command.

The dispatch states further:

> On April 27, the first lend-lease shipment arrived and further shipments continued to arrive steadily thereafter, both by American-manned vessels and also by American-built, but Chinese-operated ships. These shipments covered a wide range of military and medical equipment.

At no place does this dispatch suggest that lend-lease shipments have stopped.

As all of these lend-lease activities have gone exclusively to the Kuomintang forces—which, incidentally, were transported into Manchuria and North China by American planes and ships—how can this activity be reconciled with President Truman's declaration on December 15, 1945, that—

> United States support will not extend to United States military intervention to influence the course of any Chinese internal strife?

How can it be reconciled with the other two conditions set down by the President? How can it be said that lend-lease activities have virtually ceased when on-the-spot evidence indicates the contrary?

The same course of action that has enabled lend-lease to be used as a tool by the Kuomintang forces, charged by Mme. Sun Yat-sen this week with fomenting another world war, has been followed in the case of loans and credits to the Chinese Government.

On February 7, 1942, a stabilization credit of $500,000,000 was granted to the Chinese Government by the Export-Import Bank. An estimated $300,000,000 of this was unused and available to the Chinese on VJ-day.

During and immediately after the war, various Kuomintang officials are said to have deposited to their personal accounts in the United States an aggregate sum estimated to be between one and two billion American dollars. The larger part of these funds are hidden in various dummy corporations, financial syndicates, and so forth. It is believed that the Treasury Department has pretty accurate estimates of the exact amount involved and they show totals near the higher estimate.

The Treasury Department should make public the facts and answer these questions: First, what happens to money advanced to the Chinese Government? Second. Why does not the Chinese Government use the balances in the personal accounts of its officials before appealing for further credits? And, third, is there any point in advancing further funds to the Kuomintang regime merely to line the pockets of its corrupt officialdom?

In light of the unused credits available to China on VJ-day and the Chinese officials' deposits here, and particularly in view of the conditions set by President Truman before further aid would be granted, it is noteworthy that on March 20, 1946, General Marshall made a strong plea for an additional $500,000,000 credit to the Chinese Government.

At this point the chronology of events must be borne in mind. The military truce of early January between the Kuomintang and the Communists had been broken long before General Marshall's March 20 appeal for more funds for Chiang Kai-shek. Furthermore, the central committee of the Kuomintang later repudiated the series of agreements reached among all Chinese parties at the end of January.

There could have been no doubt as to this action by the Kuomintang. If any advance warning was needed it was dramatically furnished immediately following the January agreements when the right-wing Kuomintang elements savagely attacked and beat members of the Democratic League who were celebrating this victory for Chinese democracy. These same right-wing elements were known to control the Kuomintang central committee.

The question naturally arises: Why at the very time when there were unmistakable signs of a break-down of Chinese unity and a return to civil warfare did President Truman's special envoy to China give encouragement to one side—the Kuomintang—by publicly advocating credits under conditions completely different from those set down in December by the President?

The facts regarding our handling of lend-lease aid, loans, and credits to the Chinese Government, in direct contradiction to the stated policy of this Government, are certainly not calculated to inspire the people of China, the United States, and the rest of the world with confidence in our wisdom or diplomatic integrity.

The same pattern of uttering hopeful words for unity and democracy in China and then turning around to perform deeds with the exact opposite results is also shaping up in reference to our disposal of military surpluses in the Pacific.

Over and above the tremendous amount of lend-lease military equipment sent exclusively to the Kuomintang armies, we have turned over additional equipment through surplus disposal. And present plans call for a much larger deal of the same kind in the near future.

Immediately after VJ-day practically all United States Army equipment in inland China was turned over to the Kuomintang. At the same time, much equipment was rushed to the China coast. Little, if any, of this has been declared surplus. United States Army equipment on Okinawa—enough to equip 1,000,000 men—and on other Pacific bases has likewise been withheld from surplus disposal.

First-hand information from both American and Chinese sources indicate that the United States Government has been working out a deal with the Kuomintang dictatorship whereby the Chiang Kai-shek government will acquire all of these military supplies, including what is left in the India-Burma area. This would be accomplished through the granting of an additional five- to six-hundred-million-dollar credit—this to be in addition to the one Marshall requested on March 20.

One might make excuses for these variations from policy were he to take each of them individually and separate them from the warp and whoof of our entire maneuvering in China. But the evidence piles up higher and higher to convict those responsible for a criminal policy of aiding the spread of civil war in China and threatening the peace and security of our own Nation and the world.

For instance, how can we explain the transfer of naval vessels to China before proper congressional authority. On July 16, 1946, President Truman signed the bill authorizing the transfer of 27 naval vessels to the Chinese Government. Yet, a wire dated June 9 from Honolulu to the New York Times, reported the arrival of six former United States naval vessels on their way to China under Chinese commanders.

This one-sided playing of the military and diplomatic games can have nothing but disastrous effects for ourselves and the people of China. By our overwhelming military aid through lend-lease, naval and surplus turn-overs to the Kuomintang armies, we are adding fuel to fires of civil war that are ravaging that unfortunate land. We are building up one side to a strength that encourages it to seek a solution by force instead of unity to the political crisis that faces that country. By our extension of credits and military assistance before the Kuomintang effectuates the political democracy it promised, we are declaring to China and the world that the statements of our President are not to be taken at their face value. We are proclaiming our active intervention in a boiling, internal fight and casting our influence in favor of a government that is strongly opposed in many quarters in its own country.

I say this two-faced policy must stop. I say our support of civil war must stop and the Chinese people must be left to find a democratic solution by themselves. I say there is no need for 75,000 American troops in a land where 10,000 were all we thought necessary when a major war was being fought. We must withdraw our troops from China. We must cease this mad and entangling financial aid that is draining our Treasury to line the pockets of corrupt Chinese officials. President Truman's enunciated policy of December 15, 1945, must be the basis for our acts in China. I repeat it so that it may stand as a guide to our Nation's actions in the interests of Chinese democracy and world peace:

First. United States support would not be used to influence the course of China's internal struggle.

Second. United States aid would be conditional upon China moving toward internal peace and unity.

Third. United States credits and loans would be granted for specific, not general, projects.

Gentlemen, either we return to this policy in deeds as well as words or we take on ourselves the responsibility for a bloody civil war.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. WHITE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances and include certain extracts.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HAYS). Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. LANE] is recognized for 15 minutes.

MERRIMACK VALLEY AUTHORITY

Mr. LANE. Mr. Speaker, in the valley of the Merrimack River, which runs through Massachusetts and New Hampshire, is the heart of our Nation's textile industry. The city of Lawrence, in Massachusetts, has the largest mill devoted to the manufacture of woolen worsteds in the world.

The industry settled here, because of the abundance of cheap water power fed directly to the mills which line the banks of the Merrimack. Time, however, brought technological changes, and the mills now generate most of their own power from coal and oil which is hauled in from great distances.

In the early days, the War Department made surveys, with a view toward extending the navigability of this industrial river. But the question of navigability and the question of power, as matters of public concern, were too long neglected.

Then, in the spring of 1936, a disastrous flood swept through the valley, causing millions of dollars of damage. Subsequently, the War Department, in cooperation with the States, worked on projects to prevent a recurrence of the ruinous flood of 1936.

The people of this valley, noting the success of the Tennessee Valley Authority, want a similar project for this area. Though the TVA is primarily a power project, we seek one on the basis of flood control, navigability—and cheaper power for the farmers and mill workers of the Merrimack Valley as a byproduct.

The Beards, in their history of America in Midpassage, referring to the second regular session of the Seventy-fifth Congress—1938—write:

> Authorization was given for a system of flood-control works extending from the Merrimack River to the lower Mississippi Valley and westward to the basin of the Willamette.

During the war, President Roosevelt told the Congress that he thought there should be more TVA's.

The people of the Merrimack Valley are thinking in the same manner.

In conformity with their interest, I am introducing the following measure:

> A bill to establish a Merrimack Valley Authority to provide for unified control and resources development on the Merrimack River and surrounding region, to promote navigation, to prevent floods, to encourage family-type farming, to develop the recreational possibilities and general welfare of this area, to strengthen our national defense, and for other related purposes.

Mr. GORE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LANE. I yield.

Mr. GORE. In connection with the President's statement that he thought there should be more TVA's, I wonder if the gentleman recalls the very long editorial in the Times-Herald of this city, whose political leanings are well known, in which they said that what we needed were more TVA's.

Mr. LANE. I thank the gentleman from Tennessee for his contribution.

Mr. GORE. I congratulate the distinguished and able gentleman for his foresight, courage, and vision in introducing this measure. If this dream and this plan of his come to fruition, it will redound to the great benefit of his people. As a representative of an area which is served by the TVA, I know it has served the people well and has been most beneficial to them and to the upbuilding of that entire region.

I hope some benefits can be brought to the gentleman's State, and his efforts will do much to bring that about.

Mr. LANE. I thank the gentleman from Tennessee.

Bear in mind, that the textile industry was attracted to and developed in this area by the availability of cheap water power. Today, however, that is not the case. Some of this power at the headwaters is in the control of a private monopoly. The rest of the potential power in the river is not being utilized to provide the cheap energy which will cut the operating costs of present industries and serve to attract new ones.

In textile manufacturing, the workers, periodically, suffer from lay-offs and slack times. To provide economic security on a self-sustaining basis, it is wise to encourage family-type farming on a small-unit scale, so that the workers may be able to tide themselves over these gaps in employment.

This was originally a farming region. The countryside is dotted with unused farming lands whose impoverished soil has been abandoned. If we bring fertilizer and cheap power within reach of the rural districts, we shall help to revive local small-scale farming as insurance against the uncertainties of textile employment. No less an authority than Henry Ford has advocated such a plan. Apart from its economic advantages, it will bring spiritual and social gains to our people. Industrial employment, complemented by part-time farming, will return to the people some measure of the economic independence which they have lost, and the individual dignity which they have lost to the collectivist power of private monopoly.

As Senator O'MAHONEY, of Wyoming, said:

> What we need is an economic constitution just as 160 years ago America needed a political constitution. Modern America requires public management and it requires private management. The economy in which most men use their own capital and manage their own business in their own localities is completely different from the interlocking combination of capital and industry which has raised huge economic empires controlled by a few men who have more power over the people than the Government of their choice.

Mr. SAVAGE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LANE. I yield.

Mr. SAVAGE. I just want to say the gentleman is certainly advocating something that can be of great benefit to his people. I have noticed the electric rates, for instance, in that part of the country. Just at this moment I cannot recall the rates in the gentleman's district, but in Pawtucket, for instance, I notice that electricity which costs $90, the people in my State could buy for $17.50. So if the gentleman can help cut the rates to the point where his people can use more electricity for production, for farming, and for homes, he will certainly raise the standard of living and the happiness of his people.

Mr. LANE. I thank the gentleman. Of course, that is the purpose of filing this bill, with the hope in mind that perhaps we can get some relief in power and electric rates.

Mr. GORE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LANE. I yield.

Mr. GORE. I would like to point out the difference in the cost of electricity in the Tennessee Valley area. Before the TVA came, the average domestic consumer used 600 kilowatt-hours of electricity per year. That cost an average of $35 per consumer. Now the average domestic consumer uses almost three times that much, 1,780 kilowatts, and he gets this three times as much for $2 less.

Mr. LANE. I thank the gentleman. Those figures are very interesting. I know the gentleman knows whereof he speaks.

Some measure of Government control is necessary. The people must be alert to preserve a balance and prevent excesses, whether committed by public or private managers.

The interstate waterways properly belong to the people, under State control, coordinated by the Federal Government. Various Federal agencies, directed from Washington, already control various aspects of the problem. There is a certain hit-and-miss cooperation but no uniform control on the spot to secure complete and effective utilization of these waters in the public interest.

Flood control is, essentially, a function of Government. It also has the right and authority to enter upon and undertake improvements in and on our rivers, in order to make them more navigable. The advantages of this for industry, for recreation and for national defense are too obvious for argument.

In our time, we have gone further. As democracy grows, we have had to make certain adjustments to safeguard the public's interest. We have come to the conclusion that the resources of our waterways must not be neglected or exploited by the few at the expense of the many. In 1933, the Congress took the first, decisive step in this direction. The Tennessee Valley Authority was created and was authorized to issue securities; to construct dams, reservoirs, powerhouses, transmission lines, and incidental works on the Tennessee River and its tributaries; to contract with commercial concerns or produce fertilizers and ingredients; to cooperate with agricultural experiment stations and farmers; and to produce, distribute, and sell electric power to private corporations, individuals, States, counties, and municipalities. In arranging for the sale of power to private concerns for redistribution, the authority was required to make sure that the electrical rates to ultimate consumers were reasonable, just, and fair.

There were individual precedents for this consolidated project, scattered from the old Muscle Shoals plant to Boulder Dam and Alaska. In 1936 the Supreme Court decided that Congress had the power to construct the Wilson Dam for war purposes and other constitutional ends and to sell surplus power to the Alabama Power Co.

The TVA began as an experiment. It is now an established success. There is almost no debate about this project among the people of the Tennessee Valley. Businessmen, labor leaders, farmers, and consumers agree that it has made for a better distribution of power, has developed navigation, promoted new industries, and has given fair rates to the people. They like the decentralization under which the TVA has put democracy to work. Rather than set up a bureaucracy of its own, it has used the local agencies in the State and in the community, the land-grant colleges, the Extension Service, and all other interested parties, so that there has been a true meeting of the minds. State and local governments have joined with the Federal Government in a common effort which has produced an harmonious development of the Valley's resources.

Patterned on this, the Merrimack Valley Authority, which I propose, will cost far, far less than the TVA. It will be much simpler, embracing portions of only two States—New Hampshire and Massachusetts. The Merrimack River is polluted by industrial and human waste, yet it is from this river that some cities must take and purify the water for drinking purposes. Under a coordinated Federal plan which gives voice to the States and communities concerned I foresee a solution to this part of the overall problem. It will promote the health of the people, restore fish life to the river, and open up untold recreational opportunities for the workers in this valley.

To extend navigation, to insure flood control, to encourage small-scale farming by industrial workers, and to reduce power rates for all, I ask for the Congress to approve the bill which establishes the Merrimack Valley Authority.

A greater diversification of industrial activity, attracted by the fullest and fairest use of the water-power resources of the Merrimack Valley, is an economic necessity for this region.

The key to it is the MVA.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. ELSTON, for 10 days, on account of official business.

RAINEY NOT RAMEY

Mr. RAMEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAMEY. Mr. Speaker, I have received not too many phone calls but several that make it necessary perhaps to state that my name is not Homer Rainey, it is R-A-M-E-Y.

The retired university president running for Governor of Texas is Homer P. Rainey not HOMER A. RAMEY.

The reason for this explanation is that I am not a carpet-bagger running for the governorship of Texas. I love Texas, I like to visit Texas, and I admire all the gentlemen from Texas in this body. However, having been accused of running for the governorship of that State also that I have been the president of the University of Texas and wrote sex books may I say that although I have taught school, I have never written a book, I know nothing about advanced sex or any other kind of sex either in theory or in practice.

Mr. GORE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAMEY. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. GORE. We have every confidence that the gentleman from Ohio would be very proficient in all fields and subjects.

Mr. RAMEY. I thank the gentleman.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SCHWABE of Missouri asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances.

SENATE BILL REFERRED

A bill of the Senate of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred as follows:

S. 2359. An act to close the Office of the Recorder of Deeds on Saturdays; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

Mr. ROGERS of New York, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills and a joint resolution of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H. R. 388. An act to amend section 201 (g) of the Nationality Act of 1940 (54 Stat. 1138-1139; 8 U. S. C. 601);

H. R. 2091. An act to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims of the United States to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim, or claims, of Joseph E. Bennett, doing business as Joseph E. Bennett Co.;

H. R. 2192. An act for the relief of Andre Dacharry;

H. R. 3543. An act for the relief of Elmer D. Thompson and the legal guardian of James Thompson;

H. R. 5311. An act to amend Revised Statutes, 4921 (U. S. C. A., title 35, Patents, sec. 70), providing that damages be ascertained on the basis of compensation for infringement;

H. R. 5590. An act to provide for the uniform administration of efficiency ratings;

H. R. 5911. An act to establish an Office of Naval Research in the Department of the Navy; to plan, foster, and encourage scientific research in recognition of its paramount importance as related to the maintenance of future naval power, and the preservation of national security; to provide within the Department of the Navy a single office, which, by contract and otherwise, shall be able to obtain, coordinate, and make available to all bureaus and activities of the Department of the Navy, world-wide scientific information and the necessary services for conducting specialized and imaginative research; to establish a Naval Research Advisory Committee consisting of persons preeminent in the fields of science and research to consult with and advise the Chief of such Office in matters pertaining to research;

H. R. 6528. An act to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces to commemorate the life and perpetuate the ideals and teachings of Booker T. Washington; and

H. J. Res. 305. Joint resolution providing for membership and participation by the United States in the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization, and authorizing an appropriation therefor.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the Senate of the following titles:

S. 162. An act for the relief of Walter S. Faulkner;

S. 496. An act to make it a criminal offense for certain escaped convicts to travel from one State to another;

S. 1235. An act to authorize the use of the funds of any tribe of Indians for insurance premiums;

S. 1477. An act to authorize relief in certain cases where work, supplies, or services have been furnished for the Government under contracts during the war;

S. 1549. An act for the relief of the legal guardian of Duane N. Thompson;

S. 1561. An act to amend the act entitled "Compensation for injury, death, or detention of employees of contractors with the United States outside the United States," as amended, for the purpose of making the 100-percent earning provisions effective as of January 1, 1942;

S. 1573. An act for the relief of James H. Wilkinson;

S. 1640. An act to provide for the acquisition by the United States of certain real property in the District of Columbia;

S. 1674. An act for the relief of Michael Joseph Bennett, a minor;

S. 1731. An act for the relief of Lester A. Dessez;

S. 1751. An act for the relief of Wayne Parker;

S. 1880. An act for the relief of the Crosby Yacht Building & Storage Co., Inc.;

S. 1910. An act for the relief of George D. King;

S. 2036. An act granting the consent of Congress to the State of Rhode Island to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Sakonnet River between the towns of Tiverton and Portsmouth in Newport County, R. I.;

S. 2247. An act to permit the Secretary of the Navy to delegate the authority to compromise and settle claims against the United States caused by vessels of the Navy or in the naval service, or for towage or salvage services to such vessels, and for other purposes;

S. 2253. An act to further amend the act of January 16, 1936, as amended, entitled "An act to provide for the retirement and retirement annuities of civilian members of the teaching staff at the United States Naval Academy and the Postgraduate School, United States Naval Academy";

S. 2259. An act to amend the Philippine Rehabilitation Act of 1946, for the purpose of making a clerical correction;

S. 2260. An act for the relief of Roy M. Davidson;

S. 2349. An act to permit the Secretary of the Navy to delegate the authority to compromise and settle claims for damages to property under the jurisdiction of the Navy Department, and for other purposes;

S. 2369. An act for the relief of Col. S. V. Constant, General Staff Corps; and

S. 2405. An act to define the area of the United States Capitol Grounds, to regulate the use thereof, and for other purposes.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. ROGERS of New York, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee did on this day present to the President, for his approval, bills and a joint resolution of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 388. An act to amend section 201 (g) of the Nationality Act of 1940 (54 Stat. 1138-1139; 8 U. S. C. 601);

H. R. 2091. An act to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims of the United States to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim, or claims, of Joseph E. Bennett, doing business as Joseph E. Bennett Co.;

H. R. 2192. An act for the relief of Andre Dacharry;

H. R. 3543. An act for the relief of Elmer D. Thompson and the legal guardian of James Thompson;

H. R. 5311. An act to amend Revised Statutes 4921 (U. S. C. A., title 35, Patents, sec. 700), providing that damages be ascertained on the basis of compensation for infringement;

H. R. 5590. An act to provide for the uniform administration of efficiency ratings;

H. R. 5911. An act to establish an Office of Naval Research in the Department of the Navy; to plan, foster, and encourage scientific research in recognition of its paramount importance as related to the maintenance of future naval power, and the preservation of national security; to provide within the Department of the Navy a single office, which, by contract and otherwise, shall be able to obtain, coordinate, and make available to all bureaus and activities of the Department of the Navy, world-wide scientific information and the necessary services for conducting specialized and imaginative research; to establish a Naval Research Advisory Committee consisting of persons preeminent in the fields of science and research, to consult with and advise the Chief of such Office in matters pertaining to research;

H. R. 6528. An act to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces to commemorate the life and perpetuate the ideals and teachings of Booker T. Washington; and

H. J. Res. 305. Joint resolution providing for membership and participation by the United States in the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization, and authorizing an appropriation therefor.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. GORE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 56 minutes p. m.), under its previous order, the House adjourned until tomorrow, Saturday, July 27, 1946, at 11 o'clock a. m.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1499. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting drafts of proposed provisions pertaining to existing appropriations for the fiscal year 1947 of the Military Establishment of the War Department (H. Doc. No. 747); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

1500. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the fiscal year 1947, in the amount of $250,000,000, for the Treasury Department (H. Doc. No. 748); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

1501. A letter from the Comptroller General of the United States, transmitting report on the audit of United States Spruce Production Corporation for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1945 (H. Doc. No. 750); to the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments and ordered to be printed.

1502. A letter from the Director, Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion, transmitting the second report of the Interagency Policy Committee on Rubber; to the Committee on Agriculture.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. SPENCE: Committee on Banking and Currency. House Joint Resolution 388. Joint resolution to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to render financial aid to the Republic of the Philippines, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 2671). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. JARMAN: Committee on Printing. House Concurrent Resolution 66. Concurrent resolution authorizing the printing of the pamphlet entitled "Manual Explanatory of the Privileges, Rights, and Benefits Provided for All Persons Who Are, or Have Been, Members of the Armed Forces of the United States and of Those Dependent Upon Them" as a House document, and providing for additional copies thereof; without amendment (Rept. No. 2672). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. JARMAN: Committee on Printing. House Concurrent Resolution 163. Concurrent resolution authorizing the printing of a revised edition of the Biographical Directory of the American Congress up to and including the Eightieth Congress; without amendment (Rept. No. 2673). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. HEALY: Committee on the District of Columbia. S. 2125. An act to amend the act entitled "An act to establish a code of law for the District of Columbia," approved March 3, 1901, and the acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto; without amendment (Rept. No. 2674). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. HEALY: Committee on the District of Columbia. S. 2359. An act to close the office of the Recorder of Deeds on Saturdays; without amendment (Rept. No. 2675). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Committee on Accounts. House Resolution 744. Resolution granting 6 months' salary and $250 funeral expenses to Mrs. Agnes H. Hartman, mother of Martena R. Ambrose, late an employee of the House; without amendment (Rept. No. 2676). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. HEALY: Committee on the District of Columbia. H. R. 7114. A bill to amend the act entitled "An act to regulate within the District of Columbia the sale of milk, cream, and ice cream, and for other purposes," approved February 27, 1925; without amendment (Rept. No. 2677). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. HEALY: Committee on the District of Columbia. H. R. 7126. A bill to amend section 2 of the act of July 16, 1946 (Public Law 514, 79th Cong.), relating to the establishment and operation in the District of Columbia of nurseries and nursery schools, so as to permit payment of compensation for services rendered after June 30, 1946, and prior to the enactment of such act; without amendment (Rept. No. 2678). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 6780. A bill to create an Evacuation Claims Commission under the general supervision of the Secretary of the Interior, and to provide for the powers, duties, and functions thereof, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 2679). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Committee on the Public Lands. S. 1602. An act to confirm title to certain railroad-grant lands located in the county of Kern, State of California; without amendment (Rept. No. 2681). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. HOBBS: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 7147. A bill to repeal certain statutes relating to the war and emergencies; with amendment (Rept. No. 2682). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. FORAND:

H. R. 7163. A bill to provide annuities under section 1 (e) of the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended, to certain officers and employees under the age of 55; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. JOHNSON of Illinois:

H. R. 7164. A bill to provide equitable relief to contractors supplying dairy products to the armed forces; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. LaFOLLETTE (by request):

H. R. 7165. A bill to establish a national program and policy for full employment and full production in a fully democratic society, by means of democratically operated production facilities financially assisted by a Federal Government lending agency; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. MAY:

H. R. 7166. A bill to establish the Women's Army Corps in the Regular Army, in the Officers' Reserve Corps, and in the Enlisted Reserve Corps, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

H. R. 7167. A bill to create the Medical Service Corps in the Medical Department of the Army, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

H. R. 7168. A bill to establish the Army Nurse Corps, the Dietitian Corps, the Physical Therapist Corps, and the Occupational Therapist Corps in the Medical Department of the Regular Army and in the Officers' Reserve Corps, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. PETERSON of Florida:

H. R. 7169. A bill to authorize the transfer of the Joseph Conrad to the city of St. Petersburg, Fla., for museum purposes; to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. POWELL:

H. R. 7170. A bill to amend the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, to provide for return of amounts deducted from compensation in all cases of separation from positions within the purview of such act; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. RANKIN (by request):

H. R. 7171. A bill to authorize the payment by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs of the purchase price of automobiles or other conveyances purchased by certain disabled veterans, and for other purposes; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

By Mr. PIÑERO:

H. R. 7172. A bill to amend the Organic Act of the Virgin Islands of the United States to provide for a Resident Commissioner from the Virgin Islands; to the Committee on Insular Affairs.

By Mr. FULTON:

H. R. 7173. A bill to provide for the establishment of the Indian Mound National Park in the State of Pennsylvania, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. JACKSON:

H. R. 7174. A bill to amend section 23 of the Internal Revenue Code to permit deductions from gross income by corporations that turn over their facilities for a period of time to veterans' organizations; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LANE:

H. R. 7175. A bill to establish a Merrimack Valley Authority to provide for unified water control and resource development on the Merrimack River and surrounding region in the interest of the control and prevention of floods, the promotion of navigation and reclamation of the public lands, the promotion of family-type farming, the development of the recreational possibilities, and the promotion of the general welfare of the area, the strengthening of the national defense, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. McCORMACK:

H. R. 7176. A bill to authorize the attendance of the Marine Band at the National Encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States to be held in Boston, Mass., September 1 to 6, inclusive, 1946; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. PATTERSON:

H. Con. Res. 164. Concurrent resolution relative to the political situation in Greece; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. EBERHARTER:

H. R. 7177. A bill for the relief of Constantino Peribolares (also known as Constantinos Perivolaris or Gust Aspiotes); to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. FARRINGTON:

H. R. 7178. A bill for the relief of Ruby Mui Sing Chang Inn; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

H. R. 7179. A bill for the relief of Mrs. Wei-Hue Huang Mau; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

H. R. 7180. A bill for the relief of Mona Florence Ching; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. GRANAHAN:

H. R. 7181. A bill for the relief of Samuel Augenblick; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. LATHAM:

H. R. 7182. A bill for the relief of John Schneider and his wife, Elizabeth Schneider; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. MANSFIELD of Montana:

H. R. 7183. A bill for the relief of H. C. Biering; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. O'BRIEN of Michigan:

H. R. 7184. A bill for the relief of Georgios Ecaterinis; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. PATRICK:

H. R. 7185. A bill for the relief of Moody L. Smitherman, Jr., a minor, and Moody L. Smitherman; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. RESA:

H. R. 7186. A bill for the relief of Emma Thompson Martinez; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SCHWABE of Oklahoma:

H. R. 7187. A bill for the relief of Harry Paalberg, Ellen Paalberg, Juta Paalberg, Mina Paalberg, Maia Andre, Julianna Altenburn, 'Arvid Kuun, Elenora Kuun, Aime Kuun, Inga Kuun, Ulla Kuun, Valdermar Veedam, Lembit Rheinholm, Paul William Rheinholm, Heino Alfred Lutts, and Roman Ubaikivi; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey:

H. R. 7188. A bill for the relief of Carlos S. De Marco; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

2127. By Mr. COLE of Missouri: Petition of Rev. Tom E. Bray and 32 other citizens of Clarksdale, Stewartsville, and St. Joseph, Mo., to pass the Voorhis resolution (H. J. Res. 325), which provides that as long as famine conditions exist, no grain shall be allowed for the manufacture of liquor or other nonessential purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture.

2128. By Mr. HANCOCK: Petition signed by Mr. H. Weiss and other residents of Onondaga County, N. Y., protesting against the reduction in the amount of grain allocated to the brewing industry; to the Committee on Agriculture.

2129. By Mr. VOORHIS of California: Petition of Mrs. F. S. Woody and 221 others, all citizens of Doniphan, Mo., urging passage of legislation by Congress (H. J. Res. 325), which would authorize the President and Secretary of Agriculture to issue directives preventing the use of grain for beverage purposes until the world's food shortage is relieved; to the Committee on Agriculture.

2130. By the SPEAKER: Petition of the Boston City Council, petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to endorsement of Senate bill 1592; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

SENATE

SATURDAY, JULY 27, 1946

(Legislative day of Friday, July 5, 1946)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

Dr. James H. Phillips, professor of religion, the American University, Washington, D. C., offered the following prayer:

O God, our Heavenly Father, we lift voices of prayer to Thee from this place hallowed by the events of the past. For those decisions which have promoted the general welfare of the people of this dear land, we give Thee thanks, for Thou art the source of all true justice. But we do not pray merely because of the past. The pressing needs of our time, of this day, cause us to turn to Thee in this moment of prayer.

We pray especially for Thy blessing upon this body of the people's representatives. Sustain them in their many tasks with Thy wisdon and courage. Whenever the way of decision is not plain, speak to them from Thy word: "He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God."

Grant to them at the beginning of each day a faith in their countrymen that conquers doubt and skepticism, a will to do the right that subdues all temptations, a kindly patience that sweetens human fellowship.

And, in the end, may each one merit the approbation of Thy people, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

We ask our prayer in the name of Christ. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. BARKLEY, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Friday, July 26, 1947, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT—APPROVAL OF BILLS

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Miller, one of his secretaries, and he announced that on July 27, 1946, the President had approved and signed the act (S. 1516) to amend section 12 of the Bonneville Project Act, as amended.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Maurer, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed, without amendment, the following bills of the Senate:

S. 1602. An act to confirm title to certain railroad-grant lands located in the county of Kern, State of California; and

S. 2375. An act to change the name of the Chemical Warfare Service to the Chemical Corps.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills of the Senate, each with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

S. 191. An act to amend the Public Health Service Act to authorize grants to the States for surveying their hospitals and public-health centers and for planning construction of additional facilities, and to authorize grants to assist in such construction; and

S. 881. An act authorizing the President of the United States to award posthumously in the name of Congress a Medal of Honor to William Mitchell.

The message further announced that the House passed the following bills of the Senate, severally, with amendments, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

S. 619. An act to amend the act of June 8, 1936, relating to vocational education, so as to provide for the further development of vocational education in the several States and Territories;

S. 1636. An act to amend the Surplus Property Act of 1944 to designate the Department of State as the disposal agency for surplus property outside the continental United States, its Territories and possessions, and for other purposes; and

S. 2085. An act to amend title V of the act entitled "An act to expedite the provision of housing in connection with the national defense, and for other purposes," approved October 14, 1940, as amended, to authorize the Federal Works Administrator to provide needed educational facilities, other than housing, to educational institutions furnishing courses of training or education to persons under title II of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6702) to clarify the rights of former owners of real property to reacquire such property under the Surplus Property Act of 1944.

The message also further announced that the House had passed the following bills, joint resolution, and concurrent resolution, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 1459. An act for the relief of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Williams, Jr.;

H. R. 3209. An act for the relief of Edward A. Mason;

H. R. 3619. An act for the relief of Harry D. Koons;

H. R. 4374. An act for the relief of the legal guardian of Rudolph K. Bartels, Jr., a minor;

H. R. 5093. An act to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of Albert Whilden;

H. R. 5847. An act for the relief of Watson Airfotos, Inc.;

H. R. 6455. An act to amend the act entitled "An act to provide books for the adult blind;

H. R. 6896. An act to grant to the city of Miles City, State of Montana, certain land in Custer County, Mont., for industrial and recreational purposes and as a museum site;

H. R. 6899. An act to authorize the Indiana State Toll Bridge Commission to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge, or a free bridge, across the Ohio River at or near Lawrenceburg, Dearborn County, Ind.;

H. R. 6953. An act authorizing the city of East St. Louis, Ill., its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Mississippi River at or near a point between Delmar Boulevard and Cole Street in the city of St. Louis, Mo., and a point opposite thereto in the city of East St. Louis, Ill.;

H. R. 7039. An act to further amend section 304 of the Naval Reserve Act of 1938, as amended, so as to grant certain benefits to naval personnel engaged in training duty prior to official termination of World War II;

H. R. 7063. An act to provide for the selection for elimination and retirement of officers of the Regular Army, for the equalization of retirement benefits for members of the Army of the United States, and for other purposes; and

H. J. Res. 387. Joint resolution granting permission to Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the Public Health Service; Rolla E. Dyer, Assistant Surgeon General, Public Health Service; Howard F. Smith, Assistant Surgeon General, Public Health Service; Herbert A. Spencer, medical director, Public Health Service; Vance B. Murray, medical director, Public Health Service; and Gilbert L. Dunnahoo, medical director, Public Health Service, to accept and wear certain decorations bestowed upon them by France, Cuba, Mexico, Chile, Finland, and Luang-Prabang.

The message also further announced that the House had agreed to a concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 66) authorizing the printing of the pamphlet entitled "Manual Explanatory of the Privileges, Rights, and Benefits Provided for All Persons Who Are, or Have Been, Members of the Armed Forces of the United States and of Those Dependent Upon Them" as a House document, and providing for additional copies thereof.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED

The Secretary of the Senate reported that on July 26, 1946, he presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills:

S. 1426. An act to provide for the replanning and rebuilding of slum, blighted, and other areas of the District of Columbia and the assembly, by purchase or condemnation, of real property in such areas and the sale or lease thereof for the redevelopment of such area in accordance with said plans; and to provide for the organization of, procedure for, and the financing of such planning, acquisition, and sale or lease; and for other purposes;

S. 1466. An act authorizing rehabilitation on the island of Guam; and

S. 2246. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to acquire in fee or otherwise certain lands and rights in land on the island of Guam, and for other purposes.

PETITION

Mr. CAPPER presented a petition of sundry citizens of the State of Maryland, praying for the enactment of Senate bill 599, to prohibit the advertising of alcoholic beverages in periodicals and newspapers and over the radio, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following reports of committees were submitted:

By Mr. EASTLAND, from the Committee on Claims:

H. R. 1459. A bill for the relief of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Williams, Jr.; without amendment (Rept. No. 1853);

H. R. 1887. A bill for the relief of Mrs. Leroy A. Robbins; without amendment (Rept. No. 1854);

H. R. 5851. A bill for the relief of Second Lt. Francis W. Anderson; without amendment (Rept. No. 1855); and

H. R. 6423. A bill for the relief of Mrs. Ivan B. Hofman; without amendment (Rept. No. 1856).

By Mr. McCARRAN, from the Committee on the Judiciary:

H. R. 43. A bill to safeguard the admission of evidence in certain cases; with amendments (Rept. No. 1857).

By Mr. ANDREWS, from the Committee on the Judiciary:

S. J. Res. 163. Joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States to prohibit the denial or infringement of the inherent right of a citizen to work and bargain freely with his employer; with amendments (Rept. No. 1858).

By Mr. OVERTON, from the Committee on Commerce:

H. R. 6899. A bill to authorize the Indiana State Toll Bridge Commission to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge, or a free bridge, across the Ohio River at or near Lawrenceburg, Dearborn County, Ind.; without amendment (Rept. No. 1859);

H. R. 6953. A bill authorizing the city of East St. Louis, Ill., its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Mississippi River at or near a point between Delmar Boulevard and Cole Street, in the city of St. Louis, Mo., and a point opposite thereto in the city of East St. Louis, Ill.; without amendment (Rept. No. 1860); and

H. R. 7030. A bill granting the consent of Congress to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Allegheny River between a point in or near the Borough of Tarentum, in the county of Allegheny, and a point near the boundary of the city of New Kensington and Lower Burrel Township, in Westmoreland County, in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania; without amendment (Rept. No. 1861).

By Mr. GEORGE, from the Committee on Finance:

S. J. Res. 160. Joint resolution granting permission to Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the Public Health Service; Rolla E. Dyer, Assistant Surgeon General, Public Health Service; Howard F. Smith, Assistant Surgeon General, Public Health Service; Herbert A. Spencer, medical director, Public Health Service; Vance B. Murray, medical director, Public Health Service; and Gilbert L. Dunnahoo, medical director, Public Health Service, to accept and wear certain decorations bestowed upon them by France, Cuba, Mexico, Chile, Finland, and Luang-Prabang; without amendment.

AUTHORIZATION TO REPORT A BILL

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, during the recess or adjournment of the Senate following today's session, I ask unanimous consent to file a report on House bill 7037, the so-called social-security bill, which has been ordered reported by the Finance Committee today, though it is not quite ready to file.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. WHITE. The request covers only House bill 7037?

Mr. GEORGE. Yes. I have requested the right to file the report during the recess of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED

Bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. STANFILL:

S. 2488. A bill to provide for the regulation of labor unions, the appointment of fact-finding boards, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Mr. FERGUSON:

S. 2489. A bill for the relief of Mrs. Clinton R. Sharp; to the Committee on Immigration.

By Mr. DOWNEY:

S. 2490. A bill for the relief of Lucy Jefferson Weil; to the Committee on Civil Service.

By Mr. WALSH:

S. 2491. A bill to authorize the attendance of the Marine Band at the national encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States to be held in Boston, Mass., September 1 to 6, inclusive, 1946; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

S. 2492. A bill to extend dependency benefits to dependents of enlisted personnel of the armed forces who enlist or reenlist prior to July 1, 1949; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. LANGER:

S. J. Res. 183. Joint resolution to suspend deportation of Indonesians; to the Committee on Immigration.

S. J. Res. 184. Joint resolution further amending section 2 of the Emergency Price Control Act of 1942, as amended; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

HEARINGS BEFORE COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC LANDS AND SURVEYS

Mr. MURDOCK submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 315), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, for the purpose of making a study and investigation of any matter referred to such committee, is authorized to hold such hearings, to sit and act at such times and places during the sessions, recesses, and adjourned periods of the Senate in the Seventy-ninth Congress, to employ such experts, and such clerical, stenographic, and other assistants to require by subpena or otherwise the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such correspondence, books, papers, and documents, to administer such oaths, to take such testimony, and to make such expenditures, as it deems advisable. The cost of stenographic services to report such hearings shall not be in excess of 25 cents per hundred words. The expenses of the committee under this resolution, which shall not exceed $5,000, shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers approved by the chairman, and the authority of such committee to make expenditures under Senate Resolution 281, Seventy-ninth Congress, agreed to June 25, 1946, is hereby revoked.

INVESTIGATION OF USE AND ADMINISTRATION OF PUBLIC LANDS—INCREASE IN LIMIT OF EXPENDITURES

Mr. McCARRAN submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 316), which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys:

Resolved, That the limit of expenditures under Senate Resolution 241, Seventy-sixth Congress, agreed to May 24, 1940, and Senate Resolution 147, Seventy-seventh Congress, agreed to September 8, 1941, and Senate Resolution 39, Seventy-eighth Congress, agreed to May 24, 1944, and Senate Resolution 18, Seventy-ninth Congress, agreed to January 29, 1945, and Senate Resolution 139, Seventy-ninth Congress, agreed to June 19, 1945 (relating to the investigation of the use and administration of public lands), is hereby increased by $1,500; and the limit of expenditures of the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, or any subcommittee thereof, under Senate Resolution 9, agreed to January 6, 1945, is hereby reduced by $1,500.

TIME LIMIT ON INSTITUTION OF CERTAIN ACTIONS—AMENDMENT

Mr. WHERRY submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 2788) to limit the time during which certain actions under the laws of the United States may be brought, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

AMENDMENT OF SOCIAL SECURITY ACT AND INTERNAL REVENUE CODE—AMENDMENTS

Mr. DOWNEY (for himself, Mr. PEPPER, and Mr. TAYLOR) submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them, jointly, to the bill (H. R. 7037) to amend the Social Security Act and the Internal Revenue Code, and for other purposes, which were ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

HOUSE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED OR PLACED ON CALENDAR

The following bills and joint resolution were severally read twice by their titles and referred, or ordered to be placed on the calendar, as indicated:

H. R. 1459. An act for the relief of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Williams, Jr.;

H. R. 3209. An act for the relief of Edward A. Mason;

H. R. 3619. An act for the relief of Harry D. Koons;

H. R. 4374. An act for the relief of the legal guardian of Rudolph K. Bartels, Jr., a minor;

H. R. 5093. An act to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of Albert Whilden; and

H. R. 5847. An act for the relief of Watson Airfotos, Inc.; to the Committee on Claims.

H. R. 6455. An act to amend the act entitled "An act to provide books for the adult blind"; to the Committee on the Library.

H. R. 6896. An act to grant to the city of Miles City, State of Montana, certain land in Custer County, Mont., for industrial and recreational purposes and as a museum site; to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

H. R. 6899. An act to authorize the Indiana State Toll Bridge Commission to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge, or a free bridge, across the Ohio River at or near Lawrenceburg, Dearborn County, Ind.; and

H. R. 6953. An act authorizing the city of East St. Louis, Ill., its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Mississippi River at or near a point between Delmar Boulevard and Cole Street in the city of St. Louis, Mo., and a point opposite thereto in the city of East St. Louis, Ill.; to the Committee on Commerce.

H. R. 7039. An act to further amend section 304 of the Naval Reserve Act of 1938, as amended, so as to grant certain benefits to naval personnel engaged in training duty prior to official termination of World War II;

H. R. 7063. An act to provide for the selection for elimination and retirement of officers of the Regular Army, for the equalization of retirement benefits for members of the Army of the United States, and for other purposes; and

H. J. Res. 387. Joint resolution granting permission to Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the Public Health Service; Rolla E. Dyer, Assistant Surgeon General, Public Health Service; Howard F. Smith, Assistant Surgeon General, Public Health Service; Herbert A. Spencer, medical director, Public Health Service; Vance B. Murray, medical director, Public Health Service; and Gilbert L. Dunnahoo, medical director, Public Health Service, to accept and wear certain decorations bestowed upon them by France, Cuba, Mexico, Chile, Finland, and Luang-Prabang; ordered to be placed on the calendar.

A DECADE OF PROGRESS FOR PENNSYLVANIA FARMERS—ADDRESS BY SENATOR GUFFEY

[Mr. GUFFEY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address on the subject A Decade of Progress for Pennsylvania Farmers, delivered by him to a group of farmers in the State of Pennsylvania, which appears in the Appendix.]

GOVERNMENT LOANS TO BUSINESS ENTERPRISES—ADDRESS BY HENRY T. BODMAN

[Mr. FERGUSON asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address entitled "Government Loans to Business Enterprises," delivered by Henry T. Bodman, Director, Reconstruction Finance Corporation, at the annual convention of the Michigan Bankers Association at Mackinac Island, Mich., on June 27, 1946, which appears in the Appendix.]

OUR EX-PRESIDENTS—ARTICLE BY CLARENCE J. ROOT

[Mr. FERGUSON asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article entitled "Our Ex-Presidents," written by Clarence J. Root, of Highland Park, Mich., which appears in the Appendix.]

SENATOR SWIFT, OF ALABAMA—ARTICLE FROM ALABAMA LOCAL GOVERNMENT JOURNAL

[Mr. PEPPER asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial entitled "The Senator From Alabama," published in the Alabama Local Government Journal for July 1946, which appears in the Appendix.]

THE FUTURE OF ECONOMIC LIBERALISM—ADDRESS BY HON. WENDELL BERGE

[Mr. PEPPER asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address entitled "The Future of Economic Liberalism," delivered by Hon. Wendell Berge, Assistant Attorney General of the United States, at the annual meeting of the National Lawyers Guild at Cleveland Ohio, on July 6, 1946, which appears in the Appendix.]

AMERICAN LEGION ADDRESS BY LT. GEN. GEORGE E. STRATEMEYER

[Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address by Lt. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer to the convention of the American Legion of South Carolina, at Greenville, S. C., July 22, 1946, which appears in the Appendix.]

AMENDMENT OF INTERSTATE COMMERCE ACT WITH RESPECT TO AGREEMENTS BETWEEN CARRIERS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Kansas that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 2536, to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, with respect to certain agreements between carriers.

Mr. REED obtained the floor.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I think we ought to have a quorum present while the motion is being discussed. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Hoey	Overton
Andrews	Huffman	Pepper
Austin	Johnson, Colo.	Radcliffe
Ball	Johnston, S. C.	Reed
Barkley	Kilgore	Revercomb
Bilbo	Knowland	Russell
Burch	La Follette	Shipstead
Capper	Langer	Smith
Carville	Lucas	Stanfill
Connally	McCarran	Stewart
Cordon	McClellan	Swift
Donnell	McFarland	Taylor
Downey	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Eastland	McMahon	Thomas, Utah
Ferguson	Magnuson	Tunnell
Fulbright	Mead	Vandenberg
George	Millikin	Wagner
Gerry	Mitchell	Walsh
Green	Moore	Wheeler
Guffey	Morse	Wherry
Gurney	Murdock	White
Hart	Murray	Wiley
Hawkes	Myers	Willis
Hayden	O'Daniel	Young
Hill	O'Mahoney

Mr. HILL. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] and the Senator from Idaho [Mr. GOSSETT] are absent because of illness.

The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. MAYBANK] is absent because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Missouri [Mr. BRIGGS] and the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ] are detained on public business.

The Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] is absent on official business.

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH] is absent on official business, having been appointed a member of the President's Evaluation Commission in connection with the test of atomic bombs on naval vessels at Bikini.

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER] and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] are absent on official business, having been appointed to the commission on the part of the Senate to participate in the Philippine independence ceremonies.

Mr. WHERRY. The Senator from Maine [Mr. BREWSTER], the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], and the Senator from Delaware [Mr. BUCK], are necessarily absent.

The Senator from Illinois [Mr. BROOKS], the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. BUSHFIELD], the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART], the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. ROBERTSON], and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY], are absent by leave of the Senate.

The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BUTLER] is absent on official business, being a member of the commission appointed to attend the Philippine independence ceremonies.

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HICKENLOOPER] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business as a member of the Special Committee on Atomic Energy.

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL] is absent on official business, having been appointed a member of the President's Evaluation Commission in connection with the test of atomic bombs on naval vessels at Bikini.

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON] is absent on official business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Seventy-four Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Mr. CARVILLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to be excused from the Senate for an indefinite period.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, leave is granted.

AMENDMENT OF CIVIL RETIREMENT ACT PROVIDING ANNUITIES FOR CERTAIN OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. DOWNEY submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4718) to amend the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended, to provide annuities for certain officers and employees who have rendered at least twenty-five years of service, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "That section 1 of the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"'(e) Any officer or employee to whom this Act applies who, after having attained the age of fifty-five and after having rendered at least twenty-five years of service computed as prescribed in section 5 of this Act,

"'(1) shall have been involuntarily separated from the service not by removal for cause on charges of misconduct or delinquency between July 1, 1945, and June 30, 1947, both dates inclusive; or

"'(2) shall have been voluntarily separated from the service between such dates if such officer or employee had accepted a position with a lower rate of basic salary, pay, or compensation after having been involuntarily separated (not by removal for cause on charges of misconduct or delinquency) between such dates from a position with a higher rate of basic salary, pay, or compensation, and was receiving less than such higher rate at the time of his voluntary separation, shall be paid an immediate life annuity beginning on the first day of the month following the date of final separation from the service. Such annuity shall have a value equal to an annuity computed as provided in section 4 of this Act reduced by one-sixth of 1 per centum for each full month any such officer or employee is (A) under the age of sixty years if he has rendered at least thirty years of service computed as prescribed in section 5 of this Act, or (B) under the age of sixty-two years if he has rendered less than thirty years of service computed as prescribed in section 5 of this Act.'"

And the Senate agree to the same.

SHERIDAN DOWNEY,
WALTER F. GEORGE,
HARRY F. BYRD,
WILLIAM LANGER,
THOS. C. HART,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

HENRY M. JACKSON,
CARTER MANASCO,
LEO RAYFIEL,
EDWARD H. REES,
JOHN W. BYRNES,
Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. DOWNEY. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the conference report.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report.

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. President, the bill is now in a form satisfactory to the Senate committee on the major point of argument between the House and Senate. The House gave way, including action on the provision making the minimum age 55, sponsored by the distinguished Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HART].

I move that the conference report be agreed to.

The report was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF REVISED STATUTES PROVIDING FOR OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES OF THE PATENT OFFICE—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. PEPPER submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4080) to amend section 476, Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 35, sec. 2), providing for officers and employees of the Patent Office, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the text of the bill and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"That notwithstanding the provisions of section 476 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 35, sec. 2), the Commissioner of Patents is authorized to designate examiners of the principal examiner grade or higher, having the requisite ability, to serve as examiners in chief and such examiners so designated shall be fully qualified to act as members of the board of appeals constituted by section 482 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 35, sec. 7): Provided, That no such examiner shall so serve for more than ninety days in any calendar year but thereafter they shall have authority to act and sign decisions and papers necessary to complete action on cases heard during such ninety days: And provided further, That not more than one such examiner shall be among the members of the board of appeals hearing an appeal.

"SEC. 2. This Act shall take effect on the date of approval and shall expire three years after such date."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the title of the bill be amended to read as follows: "An Act to authorize the Commissioner of Patents to designate examiners to serve temporarily as examiners in chief."

CLAUDE PEPPER,
SCOTT LUCAS,
A. W. HAWKES,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

FRANK W. BOYKIN,
FRITZ G. LANHAM,
FRED A. HARTLEY, Jr.,
Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the conference report.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, the minority was represented on the conference, and the conferees were unanimous. The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HAWKES] is on the floor of the Senate now. I move that the conference report be agreed to.

The report was agreed to.

TRIBUTES TO SENATOR BARKLEY ON HIS NINTH ANNIVERSARY AS MAJORITY LEADER

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, within the last few minutes it has been brought to my attention that today marks the ninth anniversary of the elevation of the distinguished Senator from Kentucky to the leadership of the majority in the Senate. I want for this side of the Chamber to express our great admiration of this leader of the majority. We marvel at his intimate knowledge of the legislation which has been before the Senate during these long years. We appreciate his uniform courtesy. We wish for him everything worth while in life, save only permanence in the office of majority leader.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, permit me to thank the Senator from Maine for calling attention to my ninth anniversary here as occupant of this seat. I could not forego the pleasure of expressing to him my deep appreciation of his fine memory in calling attention to it, and also the uniform courtesy shown to me by him and by his colleagues on the other side of the Chamber as well as my own colleagues on this side of the Chamber during these very hectic 9 years.

Nine years seem a long time to be carved out of any man's life to be victim of so many situations as have confronted us, but I do deeply appreciate the Senator's reference to that fact and that service, and I am profoundly grateful to all my colleagues for the uniform courtesy and patience and forbearance with which my shortcomings have been overlooked and in some measure compensated for by their cooperation and sympathy.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I meant to say just a word before the able majority leader spoke, and I hope he will not mind another expression from his admiring colleagues.

I want to be one of those to join in the deserved tribute that has been paid to our majority leader by his distinguished and friendly opposite number in this Chamber.

I know of no man who could have experienced the difficult trials and tribulations which our able leader has known and have equaled him in the good humor and the cheerful courage and in the persistent determination with which he has constantly pursued his great responsibilities in this body.

I know of no one who exceeds his nimbleness of wit or mind, not only the distinguished leader but he is truly the gallant and happy warrior of the Senate beloved as he is honored by every Senator.

I am sure that every one of us in this body is proud that we are led by the able Senator from Kentucky, whose immense contribution to his times will not only be recorded in the affections of his colleagues but on the grateful pages of history.

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, I marvel at the capacity exhibited by the majority leader, and at his great ability. I am deeply sympathetic with him because of the tremendous load he is carrying in the Senate, and I want to pay tribute to him and to say further that I believe every Member of the Senate, on both sides of the aisle, has for him a deep respect and affection.

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. President, as a new Member, one of the younger Members of the Senate, I feel that I should not omit this opportunity and privilege of expressing my high regard for our able and beloved leader. At times I have stood in amazement at his patience, and his knowledge of all the measures that come before the Senate. I have heard any number of Senators express the sentiment that they simply do not understand how he is able to familiarize himself in detail with every measure that comes before us.

I wish to say that I have a very sincere feeling toward him. I could say that I feel toward him almost as if he were my father, and if he objects to that, why then I will say that I feel toward him as a brother.

Mr. BARKLEY. I accept the Senator's amendment.

Mr. TAYLOR. I was afraid of that.

Mr. PEPPER. The Senator means a younger brother.

Mr. TAYLOR. There are members of my immediate family who are old as the Senator from Kentucky, so I still can feel towards him as a brother.

Mr. CARVILLE. Mr. President, I wish to add my expression of commendation of our majority leader. It just occurred to me last night that yesterday was the anniversary of my first year in the Senate. I was sworn in as a Senator 1 year ago. I remember meeting our distinguished majority leader on that day, and I wish to say for my part, that since that day he has been very helpful to me, has been very kind to me, and has assisted me over many tough spots during my year in the Senate. I simply wish to pay tribute to him in my capacity, not as the baby Senator, but as one of the baby Senators.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, as one of the junior Senators on this side of the aisle I should like to say that I have pleasure today in paying tribute to the able majority leader. I might say that some 32 years ago in the other House of Congress my father served with the able majority leader, so I speak as one of the second generation who has served with him in the Halls of Congress. He is a great leader of the majority and a great citizen of the United States.

Mr. HUFFMAN. Mr. President, as a young Member of this body, at least young in experience here, if not in years, I cannot let this moment pass without rising to pay tribute publicly to a man who is a scholar, a gentleman, and a great leader. He knows what I think of him personally. I first met him at Houston, Tex., as he will recall, in 1928. My admiration for him, although it was great at that time has grown steadily through the years, and I am pleased to say that I think he is the ablest leader the Senate has ever had.

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. President, I wish to associate myself enthusiastically with all the tributes that have been paid our majority leader. The burden which he carries and the work he does is of such magnitude as to be beyond my personal conception. I do not know how our majority leader is consistently able to perform the many tasks as well as he does, and with so kindly a spirit and such brilliant exhibition of talent.

Recently I pointed out to a Senator that in his 8 years as President, Andrew Jackson confronted only four or five great emergencies. One was his argument with Biddle, of Philadelphia, over the National Bank. Another had to do with the dispute with South Carolina over importation duties of the Federal Government. Another involved the question of public-land treaties with the Indians. There were one or two others. I expressed the opinion that in the Senate we have more great complicated measures in 1 week than Andrew Jackson dealt with in the entire 8 years. We all know that the burden of these measures falls principally upon our majority and minority leaders in the Senate.

The Senator with whom I was talking said, "Yes; but Andrew Jackson did one thing which our majority leader has not yet done. He killed two men." I replied, "That is true; but every week our majority leader refrains from killing two or three Senators, and I think that is a still greater accomplishment." [Laughter.]

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, I have just learned the occasion for these eulogies of the Senator from Kentucky. I have had the privilege of serving my State for nearly a quarter of a century, and I have served under great leaders, including the present majority and minority leaders. I venture to say that no leader of either party in the Senate has shown greater skill or greater courtesy to an opponent than has the present majority leader. It has been a privilege for me to sit here and watch him handle very difficult and intricate legislation with great understanding and ability. I would not let this occasion pass without expressing my admiration for his ability, integrity, and industry.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I wish to add a word in tribute to the Senator from Kentucky. I think the Senator from California [Mr. DOWNEY] best stated the matter when he said that he could not understand how the Senator from Kentucky could possess the mental and physical strength necessary to perform all the tasks which he does perform. The Senator needs no assurance from this side of the aisle of our esteem and affection, and also our very deep regret that the Senator from Kentucky holds so many unsound political views that we cannot always vote with him, and on occasion find it necessary to disagree with him.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I again express my deep appreciation for these generous words. In proof of my effort to be entirely nonpartisan—although it has nothing to do with this particular anniversary—I hope that all Senators will find on their desks a little pamphlet about Kentucky issued by the Republican governor of my State.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, notwithstanding our great respect and affection for the able leader, let me say that there are many of us on this side of the aisle who do not feel constrained to accept the invitation to contribute to the Republican Central Committee of Kentucky. [Laughter.]

Mr. O'MAHONEY subsequently said: Mr. President, earlier this morning when I entered the Chamber, I was immediately called out to answer the telephone, and so was unable to participate in the statements of appreciation of the majority leader which were being made at that time.

I cannot fail, Mr. President, to make a record of my complete agreement with what has been said by numerous Senators of the remarkable service which has been rendered to the Senate of the United States and to the people of the country by the most able majority leader.

I have had the opportunity to observe the Senate in action for a long period. I first came upon the floor of the Senate in a minor capacity early in 1917. I have seen majority leaders come and go, and I know that in all this time the service of the Senator from Kentucky has never been surpassed. In point of time, of course, he has made a completely new record; no leader in all history has served so long as he has served. We all know that no leader in history has had heavier burdens than he has had. He has discharged all these burdens with rare good humor and with rare common sense. The result of it all has been that over and over again there has been exhibited by Senators on both sides of the Chamber warm and cordial approval of the personality and the ability of this great statesman from the State of Kentucky.

Mr. President, I was commenting only a few days ago with a group of newspapermen and radio commentators that frequently the service which public men render is overlooked. Of course, in a democracy, criticism which is intended to improve the public service oftentimes has a dominant place in publicity. It has always seemed to me that opportunity to make acknowledgment of actual service should not be overlooked.

Now, Mr. President, my attention has been called by one of the radio men to the fact that over the Mutual Broadcasting System on the evening of July 20, 1946, the well-known commenator, Mr. Albert L. Warner, of the Mutual System, commented upon the service which has been rendered by the senior Senator from Kentucky. I ask unanimous consent that this brief tribute may be read from the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TUNNELL in the chair). Without objection, the clerk will read, as requested.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Radio commentators are usually full of criticism. I'd like to set a precedent and say a few kind words.

The Senate majority leader, ALBEN BARKLEY, has a balky Senate and, at times, a balky President to deal with. But in a tough position, he grows as a legislative leader. His unfailing good nature, his unremitting hard work, his native sense of justice that insists upon giving both sides of every question a fair chance, have won him the confidence and respect of his colleagues to a remarkable degree. A testimony to his standing was the reaction in Senate cloak rooms when Mr. BARKLEY's name was mentioned in the current war-profits investigation. Now, Senate cloak rooms are a great place for gossip, but in this case the Senators knew their man too well for suspicion to come into play. That was even before Mr. BARKLEY's appearance before the committee with his simple disclaimer of any knowledge of the affairs of the munitions combine under investigation.

After his brief testimony to the committee, he remarked to reporters with a characteristic grin: "Why, I got off easy. Not only they didn't indict me, they didn't even make me put up bail bond."

In the early days of his Senate leadership Mr. BARKLEY was handicapped by the feud in the Democratic Party and his election as floor leader with the help of a "Dear ALBEN" letter from the late President Roosevelt. The phrase "Dear ALBEN" was tossed at him as a slur on all occasions. His senatorial labors were eclipsed, too, by the brilliance of the then Senator James Byrnes, now Secretary of State, who had an inside trail with Mr. Roosevelt and often the New Deal fights were led by him. For a long time it was the fashion to regard Mr. BARKLEY as a wheel horse, but rather dull. Yet over the years he has grown steadily to the position of high respect in which he is now held.

His colleagues say that BARKLEY's genuine leadership of the Senate dates from his declaration of independence from President Roosevelt in the famous tax-bill battle in 1944. Then he resigned as the Senate's floor leader and was reelected unanimously. And he continued to fight for the administration thereafter with the same loyalty as ever, a loyalty that carries over in his service to President Truman. According to Senator TAFT, of Ohio, it was due only to the adroit skill of Senator BARKLEY, of Kentucky, that the administration got any kind of a price-control bill at all prior to OPA's expiration on June 30. And if a compromise acceptable to the President comes out of Congress, it will be largely due to the patient, graying, bluff-jawed ALBEN BARKLEY.

When things are going well for his legislation on the Senate floor, Mr. BARKLEY sits placidly in his front-row chair, munching chewing gum and gazing vacantly in front of him. When things go bad, he rises and flails the air with his arms like an oak tree in a windstorm, and fairly bellows with the vigor of his argument. But, in a couple of minutes, a vast store of BARKLEY humor that is always just below the surface will break out in a grin and a joke, and the chances are the situation in the Senate is under control again.

A severe test of loyalty confronted Mr. BARKLEY on President Truman's ill-starred proposal to draft strikers into the Army. Mr. BARKLEY's record is strongly liberal. Yet he drove the strike draft measure to a vote and calmly registered one of the 13 votes in favor of it. "If one vote is going to destroy my whole record of 20 years in the Senate," he said calmly, "then so be it."

Of his boyhood, in Kentucky, Senator Barkley tells me this: "My father was a farmer, and I was the oldest of eight children. I did the ordinary work of a farm boy in the way of plowing, raising all sorts of crops, clearing new grounds, and the like."

Senator BARKLEY is still patiently clearing legislative ground and raising good crops.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, let me add that of course, we all recognize freedom of speech in this Chamber and freedom of comment by the press, and by radio commentators. I presented this broadcast exactly as it was delivered by Mr. Warner over the air, and there is only one word in it I would wish to change, the word "vacantly." The Senator from Kentucky never "gazed vacantly" in his life.

I wish to say—and I know I speak the mind of every Member of the Senate—that the intellectual capacity which the Senator from Kentucky has brought to his tasks upon the floor of the Senate has been the primary factor in enabling him to master the details of more diverse bills than ever have had to be handled by any other leader in history. The Senator from Kentucky knows more about the legislation which is passed by this body—and I say it without fear of any contradiction—than any other Member of the body, regardless of whether he belongs to the committees which have presented the measures.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I wish to thank my friend the Senator from Wyoming for his very gracious words, and, through him to thank Albert Warner for his kind radio comment a few nights ago. I did not hear it, and I have not seen it. Someone told me this morning that Mr. Warner had made a very generous comment over the radio, but I had not seen it and had not heard it. I deeply appreciate not only Mr. Warner's remarks, but what the Senator from Wyoming, my good friend, has said with reference to my service in the Senate.

DESMARK WRIGHT AND OTHERS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1733) for the relief of Desmark Wright; the estates of Alberta Wright, Desmark Wright, Jr., and Harold Evans; and the legal guardians of Bobby Dennis Wright and Irvin Lee Wright, minors, which were, on page 1, line 8, to strike out "$2,000" and insert "$1,000"; and on page 1, line 9, to strike out "$2,000" and insert "$1,500."

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, I shall move that the Senate concur in the House amendment. I shall do so simply because we are at the close of the session of Congress, and not because I feel that the amendments are at all justified. The bill as it passed the Senate, with the amounts authorized in the bill, by no means did justice to these innocent victims, for whom the Government is responsible. However, in order to bring the matter to a conclusion and avoid further delay until the next session of Congress, I move that the Senate concur in the House amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

DISPOSAL OF SURPLUS PROPERTY OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1636) to amend the Surpus Property Act of 1944 to designate the Department of State as the disposal agency for surplus property outside the continental United States, its Territories and possessions, and for other purposes, which were, on page 3, lines 3 and 4, to strike out "intangible rights, or" and insert "or substantial"; on page 3, line 23, to strike out "library operation,"; on page 4, line 18, to strike out "$2,500,000" and insert "$1,000,000"; and on page 4, line 22, after "fourth", to insert "Provided further, That for the purpose of selecting students and educational institutions qualified to participate in this program, and to supervise the exchange program authorized herein, the President of the United States is hereby authorized to appoint a Board of Foreign Scholarships, consisting of 10 members, who shall serve without compensation, composed of representatives of cultural, educational, student, and war veterans groups, and including representatives of the United States Office of Education, the United States Veterans' Administration, State educational institutions, and privately endowed educational institutions."

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, what is this bill?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. This is a bill which passed the Senate about 3 months ago, involving the disposition of surplus property abroad, a part of the proceeds from which is to be used for exchange scholarships. It was unanimously approved by the Committee on Military Affairs, and passed the House.

I move that the Senate concur in the House amendments.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, I inquire of the Senator from Arkansas if this is the bill which permits the sale of surplus property abroad, the proceeds to be devoted to an exchange of students.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. This is the bill. That is not exactly an accurate description of it, but the Senator is acquainted with the bill. It came from the Committee on Military Affairs.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Arkansas.

The motion was agreed to.

DEVELOPMENT OF OIL AND GAS ON THE PUBLIC DOMAIN—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. O'MAHONEY submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1236) to amend the Mineral Leasing Act of February 25, 1920, as amended, in order to promote the development of oil and gas on the public domain, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its amendments numbered 7, 8, 20, and 21.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the House numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 10, 11, 12, 14, 15, 16, 17, and 18, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 6: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 6, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Restore the language stricken out and omit the language inserted; and on page 7 of the Senate engrossed bill strike out the matter in lines 16 through 19 and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Act, and (2) any production on a lease from an oil or gas deposit which was discovered after May 27, 1941, by a well or wells drilled within the boundaries of the lease, and which is determined by the Secretary to be a new deposit; and (3) any production on or allocated to a lease pursuant to an approved unit or cooperative agreement from an oil or gas deposit which was discovered after May 27, 1941, on land committed to such agreement, and which is determined by the Secretary to be a new deposit, where such lease, or a lease for which it is exchanged, was included in such agreement at the time of discovery, or was included in a duly executed and filed application for the approval of such agreement at the time of discovery."

And the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 9: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 9, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: At the end of the matter inserted by the House amendment insert a colon and the following: "Provided, That the total acreage so held in common by two or more persons shall not exceed, in the aggregate, an amount equivalent to the maximum number of acres of the respective kind of minerals allowed to any one lessee or permittee under this Act."

And the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 13: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 13, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: At the end of the matter inserted by the House amendment insert a period and add the following: "Upon approval of any assignment or sublease, the assignee or sublessee shall be bound by the terms of the lease to the same extent as if such assignee or sublessee were the original lessee, any conditions in the assignment or sublease to the contrary notwithstanding."

And the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 19: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 19, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Restore the language stricken out and omit the language inserted. On page 20 of the Senate engrossed bill strike out the matter in line 24, and on page 21, strike out the matter on lines 1 to 4, inclusive, and insert in lieu thereof the following: "limits exist on the effective date of this Act; and (2) any production on a lease from an oil or gas deposit which was discovered after May 27, 1941, by a well or wells drilled within the boundaries of the lease, and which is determined by the Secretary to be a new deposit; and (3) any production on or allocated to a lease pursuant to an approved unit or cooperative agreement from an oil or gas deposit which was discovered after May 27, 1941, on land committed to such agreement, and which is determined by the Secretary to be a new deposit, where such lease, or a lease for which it is exchanged, was included in such agreement at the time of discovery, or was included in a duly executed and filed application for the approval of such agreement at the time of discovery."

And the House agree to the same.

JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY,
ROBERT F. WAGNER,
JAMES E. MURRAY,
CHAN GURNEY,
E. V. ROBERTSON,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

J. HARDIN PETERSON,
ANTONIO M. FERNANDEZ,
COMPTON I. WHITE,
K. M. LECOMPTE,
FRANK A. BARRETT,
Managers on the Part of the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the conference report?

There being no objection, the report was considered and agreed to.

GRANTS TO STATES FOR SURVEYING HOSPITALS AND PUBLIC HEALTH CENTERS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 191) to amend the Public Health Service Act to authorize grants to the States for surveying their hospitals and public health centers and for planning construction of additional facilities, and to authorize grants to assist in such construction, which was, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That this act may be cited as the "Hospital Survey and Construction Act."

SEC. 2. The Public Health Service Act (consisting of titles I to V, inclusive, of the act of July 1, 1944, 58 Stat. 682) is hereby amended by adding at the end thereof the following new title:

"TITLE VI—CONSTRUCTION OF HOSPITALS

"PART A—DECLARATION OF PURPOSE

"SEC. 601. The purpose of this title is to assist the several States—

"(a) to inventory their existing hospitals (as defined in sec. 631 (e)), to survey the need for construction of hospitals, and to develop programs for construction of such public and other nonprofit hospitals as will, in conjunction with existing facilities, afford the necessary physical facilities for furnishing adequate hospital, clinic, and similar services to all their people; and

"(b) to construct public and other nonprofit hospitals in accordance with such programs.

"PART B—SURVEYS AND PLANNING

"Authorization of appropriation

"SEC. 611. In order to assist the States in carrying out the purposes of section 601 (a), there is hereby authorized to be appropriated the sum of $3,000,000, to remain available until expended. The sums appropriated under this section shall be used for making payments to States which have submitted, and had approved by the Surgeon General, State applications for funds for carrying out such purposes.

"State applications

"SEC. 612. (a) To be approved, a State application for funds for carrying out the purposes of section 601 (a) must—

"(1) designate a single State agency as the sole agency for carrying out such purposes: Provided, That after a State plan has been approved under section 623, any further survey or programing functions shall be carried out, pursuant to section 623 (a) (10), by the agency designated in accordance with section 623 (a) (1);

"(2) provide for the designation of a State advisory council, which shall include representatives of nongovernment organizations or groups, and of State agencies, concerned with the operation, construction, or utilization of hospitals, including representatives of the consumers of hospital services selected from among persons familiar with the need for such services in urban or rural areas, to consult with the State agency in carrying out such purposes;

"(3) provide for making an inventory and survey in accordance with section 601 (a) containing all information required by the Surgeon General, and for developing a program in accordance with section 601 (a) and with regulations prescribed under section 622; and

"(4) provide that the State agency will make such reports, in such form and containing such information, as the Surgeon General may from time to time reasonably require, and give the Surgeon General, upon demand, access to the records on which such reports are based

"(b) The Surgeon General shall approve any application for funds which complies with the provisions of subsection (a).

"Allotments to States

"SEC. 613. (a) Each State for which a State application under section 612 has been approved shall be entitled to an allotment of such proportion of any appropriation made pursuant to section 611 as its population bears to the population of all the States, and within such allotment it shall be entitled to receive 33⅓ percent of its expenditures in carrying out the purposes of section 601 (a) in accordance with its application: Provided, That no such allotment to any State shall be less than $10,000. The Surgeon General shall from time to time estimate the sum to which each State will be entitled under this section, during such ensuing period as he may determine, and shall thereupon certify to the Secretary of the Treasury the amount so estimated, reduced or increased, as the case may be, by any sum by which the Surgeon General finds that his estimate for any prior period was greater or less than the amount to which the State was entitled for such period. The Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon, prior to audit or settlement by the General Accounting Office, pay to the State, at the time or times fixed by the Surgeon General, the amount so certified.

"(b) Any funds paid to a State under this section and not expended for the purposes for which paid shall be repaid to the Treasury of the United States.

"PART C—CONSTRUCTION OF HOSPITALS AND RELATED FACILITIES

"Authorization of appropriations

"SEC. 621. In order to assist the States in carrying out the purposes of section 601 (b) there is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, and for each of the four succeeding fiscal years, the sum of $75,000,000 for the construction of public and other nonprofit hospitals; and there are further authorized to be appropriated for such construction the sums provided in section 624. The sums appropriated pursuant to this section shall be used for making payments to States which have submitted, and had approved by the Surgeon General, State plans for carrying out the purposes of section 601 (b); and for making payments to political subdivisions of, and public or other nonprofit agencies in, such States.

"General regulations

"SEC. 622. Within 6 months after the enactment of this title, the Surgeon General, with the approval of the Federal Hospital Council and the Administrator, shall by general regulation prescribe—

"(a) The number of general hospital beds required to provide adequate hospital services to the people residing in a State, and the general method or methods by which such beds shall be distributed among base areas, intermediate areas, and rural areas: Provided, That for the purposes of this title, the total of such beds for any State shall not exceed four and one-half per thousand population, except that in States having less than 12 and more than 6 persons per square mile the limit shall be five beds per thousand population, and in States having 6 persons or less per square mile the limit shall be five and one-half beds per thousand population; but if, in any area (as defined in the regulations) within the State, there are more beds than required by the standards prescribed by the Surgeon General, the excess over such standards may be eliminated in calculating this maximum allowance.

"(b) The number of beds required to provide adequate hospital services for tuberculous patients, mental patients, and chronic-disease patients in a State, and the general method or methods by which such beds shall be distributed throughout the State: Provided, That for the purposes of this title the total number of beds for tuberculous patients shall not exceed two and one-half times the average annual deaths from tuberculosis in the State over the 5-year period from 1940 to 1944, inclusive, the total number of beds for mental patients shall not exceed five per thousand population, and the total number of beds for chronic disease patients shall not exceed two per thousand population.

"(c) The number of public health centers and the general method of distribution of such centers throughout the State, which for the purposes of this title, shall not exceed 1 per 30,000 population, except that in States having less than 12 persons per square mile, it shall not exceed 1 per 20,000 population.

"(d) The general manner in which the State agency shall determine the priority of projects based on the relative need of different sections of the population and of different areas lacking adequate hospital facilities, giving special consideration to hospitals serving rural communities and areas with relatively small financial resources.

"(e) General standards of construction and equipment for hospitals of different classes and in different types of location.

"(f) That the State plan shall provide for adequate hospital facilities for the people residing in a State, without discrimination on account of race, creed, or color, and shall provide for adequate hospital facilities for persons unable to pay therefor. Such regulation may require that before approval of any application for a hospital or addition to a hospital is recommended by a State agency, assurance shall be received by the State from the applicant that (1) such hospital or addition to a hospital will be made available to all persons residing in the territorial area of the applicant, without discrimination on account of race, creed, or color, but an exception shall be made in cases where separate hospital facilities are provided for separate population groups, if the plan makes equitable provision on the basis of need for facilities and services of like quality for each such group; and (2) there will be made available in each such hospital or addition to a hospital a reasonable volume of hospital services to persons unable to pay therefor, but an exception shall be made if such a requirement is not feasible from a financial standpoint.

"(g) General methods of administration of the plan by the designated State agency, subject to the limitations set forth in section 623 (a) (6) and (8).

"State plans

"SEC. 623. (a) After such regulations have been issued, any State desiring to take advantage of this part may submit a State plan for carrying out the purposes of section 601 (b). Such State plan must—

"(1) designate a single State agency as the sole agency for the administration of the plan, or designate such agency as the sole agency for supervising the administration of the plan;

"(2) contain satisfactory evidence that the State agency designated in accordance with paragraph (1) hereof will have authority to carry out such plan in conformity with this part;

"(3) provide for the designation of a State advisory council which shall include representatives of nongovernment organizations or groups, and of State agencies, concerned with the operation, construction, or utilization of hospitals, including representatives of the consumers of hospital services selected from among persons familiar with the need for such services in urban or rural areas, to consult with the State agency in carrying out such plans;

"(4) set forth a hospital construction program (A) which is based on a State-wide inventory of existing hospitals and survey of need; (B) which conforms with the regulations prescribed by the Surgeon General under section 622 (a), (b), and (c); (C) which, in the case of a State which has developed a program under part B of this title, conforms to the program so developed except for any modification required in order to comply with regulations prescribed pursuant to section 622 (a), (b), and (c), and except for any modification recommended by the State agency designated pursuant to paragraph (1) of this subsection and approved by the Surgeon General; and (D) which meets the requirements as to lack of discrimination on account of race, creed, or color, and for furnishing needed hospital services to persons unable to pay therefor, required by regulations prescribed under section 622 (f);

"(5) set forth the relative need determined in accordance with the regulations prescribed under section 622 (d) for the several projects included in such programs, and provide for the construction, insofar as financial resources available therefor and for maintenance and operation make possible, in the order of such relative need;

"(6) provide such methods of administration of the State plan, including methods relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis (except that the Surgeon General shall exercise no authority with respect to the selection, tenure of office, or compensation of any individual employed in accordance with such methods), as the Surgeon General prescribes by regulation under section 622 (g);

"(7) provide minimum standards (to be fixed in the discretion of the State) for the maintenance and operation of hospitals which receive Federal aid under this part;

"(8) provide for affording to every applicant for a construction project an opportunity for hearing before the State agency;

"(9) provide that the State agency will make such reports in such form and containing such information as the Surgeon General may from time to time reasonably require, and give the Surgeon General, upon demand, access to the records upon which such information is based; and

"(10) provide that the State agency will from time to time review its hospital construction program and submit to the Surgeon General any modifications thereof which it considers necessary.

"(b) The Surgeon General shall approve any State plan and any modification thereof which complies with the provisions of subsection (a). If any such plan or modification thereof shall have been disapproved by the Surgeon General for failure to comply with subsection (a), the Federal Hospital Council shall, upon request of the State agency, afford it an opportunity for hearing. If such Council determines that the plan or modification complies with the provisions of such subsection, the Surgeon General shall thereupon approve such plan or modification.

"(c) No changes in a State plan shall be required within 2 years after initial approval thereof, or within 2 years after any change thereafter required therein, by reason of any change in the regulations prescribed pursuant to section 622, except with the consent of the State, or in accordance with further action by the Congress.

"(d) If any State, prior to July 1, 1948, has not enacted legislation providing that compliance with minimum standards of maintenance and operation shall be required in the case of hospitals which shall have received Federal aid under this title, such State shall not be entitled to any further allotments under section 624.

"Allotments to States

"SEC. 624. Each State for which a State plan has been approved prior to or during a fiscal year shall be entitled for such year to an allotment of a sum bearing the same ratio to the sums authorized to be appropriated pursuant to section 621 for such year as the product of (a) the population of such State and (b) the square of its allotment percentage (as defined in sec. 631 (a)) bears to the sum of the corresponding products for all of the States. The amount of the allotment to a State shall be available, in accordance with the provisions of this part, for payment of 33⅓ percent of the cost of approved projects within such State. The Surgeon General shall calculate the allotments to be made under this section and notify the Secretary of the Treasury of the amounts thereof. Sums allotted to a State for a fiscal year for construction and remaining unobligated at the end of such year shall remain available to such State for such purpose for the next fiscal year (and for such year only), in addition to the sums allotted for such State for such next fiscal year. Any amount of the sum authorized to be appropriated for a fiscal year which is not appropriated for such year, or which is not allotted in such year by reason of the failure of any State or States to have plans approved under this part, and any amount allotted to a State but remaining unobligated at the end of the period for which it is available to such State, is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the next fiscal year in addition to the sum otherwise authorized under section 621.

"Approval of projects and payments for construction

"SEC. 625. (a) For each project for construction pursuant to a State plan approved under this part, there shall be submitted to the Surgeon General through the State agency an application by the State or a political subdivision thereof or by a public or other nonprofit agency. Such application shall set forth (1) a description of the site for such project, (2) plans and specifications therefor in accordance with the regulations prescribed by the Surgeon General under section 622 (e), (3) reasonable assurance that title to such site is or will be vested solely in the applicant, (4) reasonable assurance that adequate financial support will be available for the construction of the project and for its maintenance and operation when completed, and (5) reasonable assurance that the rates of pay for laborers and mechanics engaged in construction of the project will be not less than the prevailing local wage rates for similar work as determined in accordance with Public Law 403 of the Seventy-fourth Congress, approved August 30, 1935, as amended. The Surgeon General shall approve such application if sufficient funds to pay 33⅓ percent of the cost of construction of such project are available from the allotment to the State, and if the Surgeon General finds (A) that the application contains such reasonable assurance as to title, financial support, and payment of prevailing rates of wages, (B) that the plans and specifications are in accord with the regulations prescribed pursuant to section 622, (C) that the application is in conformity with the State plan approved under section 623 and contains an assurance that the applicant will conform to the applicable requirements of the State plan and of the regulations prescribed pursuant to section 622 (f) regarding the provision of facilities without discrimination on account of race, creed, or color, and for furnishing needed hospital facilities for persons unable to pay therefor, and an assurance that the applicant will conform to State standards for operation and maintenance, and (D) that it has been approved and recommended by the State agency and is entitled to priority over other projects within the State in accordance with the regulations prescribed pursuant to section 622 (d). No application shall be disapproved until the Surgeon General has afforded the State agency an opportunity for a hearing.

"(b) Upon approving an application under this section, the Surgeon General shall certify to the Secretary of the Treasury an amount equal to 33⅓ percent of the estimated cost of construction of the project and designate the appropriation from which it is to be paid. Such certification shall provide for payment to the State, except that if the State is not authorized by law to make payments to the applicant the certification shall provide for payment direct to the applicant. Upon certification by the State agency, based upon inspection by it, that work has been performed upon a project, or purchases have been made, in accordance with the approved plans and specifications, and that payment of an installment is due to the applicant, the Surgeon General shall certify such installment for payment by the Secretary of the Treasury; except that if the Surgeon General, after investigation or otherwise, has ground to believe that a default has occurred requiring action pursuant to section 632 (a) he may, upon giving notice of hearing pursuant to such subsection, withhold certification pending action based on such hearing.

"(c) Amendment of any approved application shall be subject to approval in the same manner as an original application. Certification under subsection (b) may be amended, either upon approval of an amendment of the application or upon revision of the estimated cost of a project. An amended certification may direct that any additional payment be made from the applicable allotment for the fiscal year in which such amended certification is made.

"(d) The funds paid under this section for the construction of an approved project shall be used solely for carrying out such project as so approved.

"(e) If any hospital for which funds have been paid under this section shall, at any time within 20 years after the completion of construction, (A) be sold or transferred to any person, agency, or organization, (1) which is not qualified to file an application under this section, or (2) which is not approved as a transferee by the State agency designated pursuant to section 623 (a) (1), or its successor, or (B) cease to be a nonprofit hospital as defined in section 631 (g), the United States shall be entitled to recover from either the transferor or the transferee (or, in the case of a hospital which has ceased to be a nonprofit hospital, from the owners thereof) 33⅓ percent of the then value of such hospital, as determined by agreement of the parties or by action brought in the district court of the United States for the district in which such hospital is situated.

"PART D—MISCELLANEOUS

"Definitions

"SEC. 631. For the purposes of this title—

"(a) the allotment percentage for any State shall be 100 percent less that percentage which bears the same ratio to 50 percent as the per capita income of such State bears to the per capita income of the continental United States (excluding Alaska), except that (1) the allotment percentage shall in no case be more than 75 percent or less than 33⅓ percent, and (2) the allotment percentage for Alaska and Hawaii shall be 50 percent each, and the allotment percentage for Puerto Rico shall be 75 percent;

"(b) the allotment percentages shall be promulgated by the Surgeon General between July 1 and August 31 of each even-numbered year, on the basis of the average of the per capita incomes of the States and of the continental United States for the three most recent consecutive years for which satisfactory data are available from the Department of Commerce. Such promulgation shall be conclusive for each of the two fiscal years in the period beginning July 1 next succeeding such promulgation: Provided, That the Surgeon General shall promulgate such percentages as soon as possible after the enactment of this title, which promulgation shall be conclusive for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947;

"(c) the population of the several States shall be determined on the basis of the latest figures certified by the Department of Commerce;

"(d) the term 'State' includes Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and the District of Columbia;

"(e) the term 'hospital' (except as used in sec. 622 (a) and (b) includes public health centers and general, tuberculosis, mental, chronic disease, and other types of hospitals, and related facilities, such as laboratories, out-patient departments, nurses' home and training facilities, and central service facilities operated in connection with hospitals, but does not include any hospital furnishing primarily domiciliary care;

"(f) the term 'public health center' means a publicly owned facility for the provision of public health services, including related facilities such as laboratories, clinics, and administrative offices operated in connection with public health centers;

"(g) the term 'nonprofit hospital' means any hospital owned and operated by a corporation or association no part of the net earnings of which inures, or may lawfully inure, to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual;

"(h) the term 'construction' includes construction of new buildings, expansion, remodeling, and alteration of existing buildings, and initial equipment of any such buildings; including architects' fees, but excluding the cost of off-site improvements and, except with respect to public health centers, the cost of the acquisition of land; and

"(i) the term 'cost of construction' means the amount found by the Surgeon General to be necessary for the construction of a project.

"Withholding of certification

"SEC. 632. (a) Whenever the Surgeon General, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the State agency designated in accordance with section 612 (a) (1), finds that the State agency is not complying substantially with the provisions required by section 612 (a) to be contained in its application for funds under part B, or after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the State agency designated in accordance with section 623 (a) (1) finds (1) that the State agency is not complying substantially with the provisions required by section 623 (a), or by regulations prescribed pursuant to section 622, to be contained in its plan submitted under section 623 (a), or (2) that any funds have been diverted from the purposes for which they have been allotted or paid, or (3) that any assurance given in an application filed under section 625 is not being or cannot be carried out, or (4) that there is a substantial failure to carry out plans and specifications approved by the Surgeon General under section 625, the Surgeon General may forthwith notify the Secretary of the Treasury and the State agency that no further certification will be made under part B or part C, as the case may be, or that no further certification will be made for any project or projects designated by the Surgeon General as being affected by the default, as the Surgeon General may determine to be appropriate under the circumstances; and, except with regard to any project for which the application has already been approved and which is not directly affected by such default, he may withhold further certifications until there is no longer any failure to comply, or, if compliance is impossible, until the State repays or arranges for the repayment of Federal moneys which have been diverted or improperly expended.

"(b) (1) If the Surgeon General refuses to approve any application under section 625, the State agency through which the application was submitted, or if any State is dissatisfied with the Surgeon General's action under subsection (a) of this section, such State may appeal to the United States circuit court of appeals for the circuit in which such State is located. The summons and notice of appeal may be served at any place in the United States. The Surgeon General shall forthwith certify and file in the court the transcript of the proceedings and the record on which he based his action.

"(2) The findings of fact by the Surgeon General, unless substantially contrary to the weight of the evidence, shall be conclusive; but the court, for good cause shown, may remand the case to the Surgeon General to take further evidence, and the Surgeon General may thereupon make new or modified finding of fact and may modify his previous action, and shall certify to the court the transcript and record of the further proceedings. Such new or modified findings of fact shall likewise be conclusive unless substantially contrary to the weight of the evidence.

"(3) The court shall have jurisdiction to affirm the action of the Surgeon General or to set it aside, in whole or in part. The judgment of the court shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States upon certiorari or certification as provided in sections 239 and 240 of the Judicial Code, as amended.

"Federal hospital council; administration of title

"SEC. 633. (a) The Surgeon General is authorized to make such administrative regulations and perform such other functions as he finds necessary to carry out the provisions of this title. Any such regulations shall be subject to the approval of the Administrator.

"(b) In administering this title, the Surgeon General shall consult with a Federal Hospital Council consisting of the Surgeon General, who shall serve as Chairman ex officio, and eight members appointed by the Administrator. Four of the eight appointed members shall be persons who are outstanding in fields pertaining to hospital and health activities, three of whom shall be authorities in matters relating to the operation of hospitals, and the other four members shall be appointed to represent the consumers of hospital services and shall be persons familiar with the need for hospital services in urban or rural areas. Each appointed member shall hold office for a term of 4 years, except that any member appointed to fill a vacancy occurring prior to the expiration of the term for which his predecessor was appointed shall be appointed for the remainder of such term, and the terms of office of the members first taking office shall expire, as designated by the Administrator at the time of appointment, two at the end of the first year, two at the end of the second year, two at the end of the third year, and two at the end of the fourth year after the date of appointment. An appointed member shall not be eligible to serve continuously for more than two terms but shall be eligible for reappointment if he has not served immediately preceding his reappointment. The Council is authorized to appoint such special advisory and technical committees as may be useful in carrying out its functions. Appointed Council members and members of advisory or technical committees, while serving on business of the Council, shall receive compensation at rates fixed by the Administrator, but not exceeding $25 per day, and shall also be entitled to receive an allowance for actual and necessary travel and subsistence expenses while so serving away from their places of residence. The Council shall meet as frequently as the Surgeon General deems necessary, but not less than once each year. Upon request by three or more members, it shall be the duty of the Surgeon General to call a meeting of the Council.

"(c) In administering the provisions of this title, the Surgeon General, with the approval of the Administrator, is authorized to utilize the services and facilities of any executive department in accordance with an agreement with the head thereof. Payment for such services and facilities shall be made in advance or by way of reimbursement, as may be agreed upon between the Administrator and the head of the executive department furnishing them.

"Conferences of State agencies

"SEC. 634. Whenever in his opinion the purposes of this title would be promoted by a conference, the Surgeon General may invite representatives of as many State agencies, designated in accordance with section 612 (a) (1) or section 623 (a) (1), to confer as he deems necessary or proper. Upon the application of five or more of such State agencies, it shall be the duty of the Surgeon General to call a conference of representatives of all State agencies joining in the request. A conference of the representatives of all such State agencies shall be called annually by the Surgeon General.

"State control of operations

"SEC. 635. Except as otherwise specifically provided, nothing in this title shall be construed as conferring on any Federal officer or employee the right to exercise any supervision or control over the administration, personnel, mainenance, or operation of any hospital with respect to which any funds have been or may be expended under this title."

SEC. 3. Paragraph (2) of section 208 (b) of the Public Health Service Act, as amended, is amended by inserting "(A)" before the words "to assist"; by striking out the word "paragraph" and inserting in lieu thereof the word "clause"; and by striking out the period at the end of such paragraph and inserting in lieu thereof a comma and the following: "and (B) to assist in carrying out the purposes of title VI of this act, but not more than 20 such officers appointed pursuant to this clause shall hold office at the same time."

SEC. 4. Section 1 of the Public Health Service Act is amended to read:

"SECTION 1. Titles I to VI, inclusive, of this act may be cited as the 'Public Health Service Act'."

SEC. 5. The act of July 1, 1944 (58 Stat. 682), is hereby further amended by changing the number of title VI to title VII and by changing the numbers of sections 601 to 612, inclusive, and references thereto, to sections 701 to 712, respectively.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, I move that the Senate disagree to the amendment of the House, ask a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the President pro tempore appointed Mr. HILL, Mr. TUNNELL, Mr. THOMAS of Utah, Mr. LA FOLLETTE, and Mr. TAFT conferees on the part of the Senate.

DEVELOPMENT OF VOCATIONAL EDUCATION IN THE STATES AND TERRITORIES

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 619) to amend the act of June 8, 1936, relating to vocational education, so as to provide for the further development of vocational education in the several States and Territories, which were, on page 2, line 7, after "which" to insert "said"; on page 2, line 20, after "supervision", insert "by the vocational agriculture teachers"; on page 3, strike out lines 15 to 19, inclusive; on page 3, line 20, strike out "(5)" and insert "(4)"; on page 4, line 2, strike out "(5)" and insert "(4)"; on page 4, lines 22 and 23, strike out "each for vocational guidance and" and insert "for"; on page 5, line 7, strike out "50" and insert "100"; on page 5, line 8, strike out all after "3" down to and including "made" in line 13; on page 6, lines 9 and 10, strike out "as a teacher and supervisor"; on page 8, strike out lines 9 to 15, inclusive; and on page 8, line 16, strike out "(c)" and insert "(b)".

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, only two substantial amendments have been made to the bill, one striking out the appropriation of $1,500,000 for vocational guidance, and the other requiring matching by the States or local communities on a 50-50 basis. The other amendments are technical. I therefore move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF INTERSTATE COMMERCE ACT WITH RESPECT TO AGREEMENTS BETWEEN CARRIERS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the motion of Mr. REED to proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 2536) to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, with respect to certain agreements between carriers.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, the motion before the Senate involves a bill which has to do with certain agreements between carriers, particularly railroad carriers. It is known as the Bulwinkle bill. I think that title gives it a quicker identity than the title of the bill itself.

When we buy a coat, a suit of clothes, or a new automobile we dicker with the seller over the price. When we ship something over a railroad we cannot do so. A shipper may not lawfully pay to a railroad, and a railroad may not lawfully collect, charges for any services unless the charges are included in a published tariff.

To give the Senate an idea of the complexity and extent of the question of rate tariffs, it may be said that in a report covering the year 1935, the Interstate Commerce Commission had filed with it approximately 500,000 tariffs, and in the years from 1933 to approximately 3 years ago the Interstate Commerce Commission had filed with it an average of from 89,000 to 124,000 tariff changes every year. That gives an idea of the enormous spread of the work of printing and publishing and filing tariffs.

One hundred years ago the railroad business was more limited than it is now, and the railroad lines were shorter. There were more railroads in number, but the total mileage was not so great as now. Each railroad started out to publish its own tariffs. But as the business of the country grew, as the railroad mileage expanded, as the commerce increased, the system of having each railroad publish its own tariffs was superseded very largely, through the years, by a system of employing publishing agents, of setting up committees and bureaus and rate associations, through which the numerous tariff changes could be made known and could be legally and lawfully filed, so as to make the charges lawful.

There are approximately 30 rate bureaus and rate publishing agents throughout the country, and virtually all the tariffs, although not entirely all, are made through those bureaus. Those bureaus invariably have dockets, hold public hearings, and give the shippers a chance to be heard as to published changes. Then, after the action is decided upon, they file with the Interstate Commerce Commission the rates which are agreed upon. But even then, Mr. President, no common carrier can collect a single dollar or, for that matter, a single cent until the rate which has been published and filed has received the sanction of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

If there were only one railroad in the United States, this bill would be unnecessary. There happens to be 131 class I railroads. A class 1 railroad is a railroad whose gross revenue exceeds $1,000,000 a year. There are 131 of them. There are about 50 important railroads in the country. In order to carry out the obligation imposed upon them, they must hold conferences. They must deal with each other.

The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. does not have to do that, insofar as it is concerned, because it comes as near to being a complete monopoly as there is in this country. All it has to do, if it wishes to change its practices or its rates, is to talk with itself, and then file the rates with the Federal Communications Commission. But not so with the railroads; and we lay on the railroads the injunction which is contained in the Transportation Act itself. The bureaus and associations to which I have adverted are only a method of coordinating the obligation that is devolved by the Transportation Act upon the common carriers.

The question then fairly arises, why is this bill here? The rate bureaus have had a growth and an expansion of their practices consistent with the growth of commerce and the growth of the amount of railroad business handled. About 1900, at the turn of the century, a case was brought in which it was charged that the rate bureaus, in particular the Transcontinental Rate Bureau, were operating in violation of the antitrust laws. I think the courts did find some basis for that charge. As I recall, that case was not pushed to a complete finality. But at that time the Interstate Commerce Commission could only find a rate unreasonable; it did not have the power, which it now has, to find a maximum rate, a minimum rate, a maximum and a minimum, and to prescribe rates to be charged in lieu of the rates found to be unreasonable or discriminatory. At the present time the Interstate Commerce Commission has complete power to do those things.

Since 1900, and up to 1942, no question, so far as I know, was ever raised that these rate bureaus and conferences between railroads were in any way in conflict with the Sherman Antitrust Act.

The reason this bill is here is that in 1942 an investigation was begun by the Department of Justice of certain rate bureaus in Chicago, involving, as I recall, both rail and water carrier rate bureaus. I think that investigation began in 1941. A grand jury proceeding was commenced in 1942. That grand jury proceeding was discontinued only upon the insistence of the late Joseph B. Eastman, who then was Coordinator of Transportation, and also upon the insistence of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the War Department, the Navy Department, and other Government agencies. They stated, and correctly so, that if that proceeding were continued the rate-making process would be demoralized and transportation in this country would fall into chaos. So that proceeding was discontinued, or at least suspended.

In 1943 a bill to regulate rate bureaus was introduced by the chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee [Mr. WHEELER]. That bill was written in the Department of Justice. I mention that only to show that even the Department of Justice concedes that there is a field in which these bureaus can operate and not be in conflict with the antitrust laws.

Mr. President, I am making this preliminary statement only for the information of the Senate, so that there will be some understanding of the general outline of this question.

Extensive hearings were held on the bill introduced by the Senator from Montana and then it was dropped. Nothing was done with it. Later, this question came up in other forms.

The shippers of the country universally desire this bill to be passed and they are supporting it. In my long years of contact with transportation questions, I have never known of a single instance in which any legislative proposal has had the universal support from the shippers and the shipping public which this bill has. This bill has been approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Office of Defense Transportation, the War Department, the Navy Department, and every shipper organization of importance in the United States. It has been approved by the American Farm Bureau Federation, by the National Grange, by the National Association of Railroad and Utilities Commissioners, and by the State commissions of virtually every State in the Union. In other words, the regulatory authorities, both National and State, are universally in favor of the passage of this bill so as to remove any doubt of the legality of the present system of holding conferences and agreeing on the rates and practices to be filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. President, I have made this statement so that the general outline of this bill may be before the Senate, because I understand there is some opposition to the adoption of the motion to consider the bill. I have tried to make a brief and a fair explanation. Later I shall make a fuller and more complete explanation of the bill.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TUNNELL in the chair). The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Bilbo	Cordon
Andrews	Burch	Donnell
Austin	Capper	Downey
Ball	Carville	Eastland
Barkley	Connally	Ferguson
Fulbright	McClellan	Russell
George	McFarland	Shipstead
Gerry	McKellar	Smith
Green	McMahon	Stanfill
Guffey	Magnuson	Stewart
Gurney	Mead	Swift
Hart	Millikin	Taylor
Hawkes	Mitchell	Thomas, Okla.
Hayden	Moore	Thomas, Utah
Hill	Morse	Tunnell
Hoey	Murdock	Vandenberg
Huffman	Murray	Wagner
Johnson, Colo.	Myers	Walsh
Johnston, S. C.	O'Daniel	Wheeler
Kilgore	O'Mahoney	Wherry
Knowland	Overton	White
La Follette	Pepper	Wiley
Langer	Radcliffe	Willis
Lucas	Reed	Young
McCarran	Revercomb

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Seventy-four Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I rise in opposition to the motion now pending before the Senate to proceed to the consideration of calendar 1539, House bill 2536, known as the Bulwinkle bill.

Ordinarily I do not oppose motions to proceed to the consideration of legislative proposals. I think I have very rarely opposed such motions, but I think my opposition to the pending motion, and the opposition of other Senators, has a sound basis.

In the first place, the bill is very controversial and will involve considerable discussion. It has been amended by the committee. Of course, any amendments would have to go back to the House of Representatives. I am advised that the legislative situation in the House next week will likely assume such a posture that it will be difficult to get anything considered except by unanimous consent. But, aside from that, if the bill had not been amended at all by the committee, I still feel that a bill of this character, controversial in nature, should not be taken up and considered in the Senate at this time.

The hearings held by the Committee on Interstate Commerce have never been printed. They are not available to Members of the Senate. The bill was passed in the House on December 10, 1945, came to the Senate, and was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce. The committee held some hearings during the spring. I do not know why they have not been printed and are not available to the Members of the Senate, but they are not. No one outside the few members of the committee who were present at the time knows what the testimony was. Frequently, when bills have been brought up in the Senate, Senators have even objected to their consideration until the hearings could become available, and no one seriously questioned the propriety of such a request for postponement.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, will the Senator from Kentucky yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. RUSSELL. I appreciate the Senator from Kentucky making this point very clear. Here we have a very highly controversial bill, involving one of the most complicated subjects in the entire American economy, that of freight rates, on which hearings were held for several weeks, and we are asked to take up the bill and consider it without having been able to secure a copy of the hearings and read them. The members of the Committee on Interstate Commerce may have had the hearings available, and may have had an opportunity to hear the witnesses themselves. The Senator from Kansas [Mr. REED] is familiar with these subjects by virtue of his long background in dealing with public-utility matters.

Mr. President, this bill affects my State. It affects litigation which the Supreme Court of the United States has permitted my State to file in that Court, and which has been referred to a master for determination. In view of the fact that I have not been able even to secure copies of the hearings, to see what the witnesses submitted in behalf of my State, I certainly feel justified in using any means at my command which are legal to see that the bill is not passed by the Senate, or taken up for consideration, in view of the fact that we have had no opportunity whatever to read the hearings. I appreciate the fact that the Senator from Kentucky has made that point clear.

Mr. BARKLEY. I thank the Senator.

What this bill does, Mr. President, in effect is to lift railroads out from under the antitrust laws so that the antitrust laws cannot be invoked in respect to any combination or agreement or any practice in which one or more railroads might indulge.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, I inquire if this bill has the same effect on the railroad case which has been brought in the Supreme Court that the tidelands bill had with respect to the case in the Supreme Court involving such lands? Is it a similar situation?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; it is a similar situation. I am coming to that in a moment.

Congress passed the Interstate Commerce Act back in 1887. It was amended from time to time. In 1920 we passed the Transportation Act to amend the Interstate Commerce Act. I happened to be one of the conferees on the part of the House in the resolving of the differences between the two Houses on the Transportation Act. It was first passed in the House as the Esch bill, coming out of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. It came over to the Senate at the time Senator Cummins, of Iowa, was the chairman of the Committee on Interstate Commerce of the Senate. The bill was extensively amended, went to conference, and was in conference 6 weeks. Out of that conference came the Transportation Act of 1920. Neither in the original law nor in any of the amendments ever adopted to it, nor in the Transportation Act of 1920, nor in any other act since that time has Congress ever seriously considered lifting railroad transportation out from under the antitrust laws.

Now, we are confronted with another bill to take away from the courts the right to pass upon practices indulged in by railroads. There is now one case dealing with such practices in the Supreme Court of the United States, and there is litigation pending in Nebraska brought by the Attorney General of the United States against certain railroads in that area for practices which the Department of Justice feels are in violation of the antitrust laws.

I ask the Senate in all seriousness, how often and to what extent are we to constitute ourselves into a supreme court in order to take away from the court litigation which has gone there properly under the law, in order that we may cut the ground out from under the Supreme Court in determining what is the law in regard to these situations? That is what this bill attempts to do.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. LANGER. Is this bill with respect to the railroads similar to legislation proposed when the insurance cases were in the Supreme Court some time ago?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; very similar. The introduction of such bills seems to have become a habit here. If someone brings a lawsuit in the Federal court, and it gets to the Supreme Court, or does not get to the Supreme Court, a case which involves an interpretation of the laws which Congress has passed to protect the American people, instead of fighting the question out in the courts and allowing the courts to exercise their jurisdiction, Congress is asked to enact a law passing upon the question in advance of the courts having an opportunity to pass upon it. I think it is a vicious practice; I think it is a vicious habit; it ought never to have been indulged in. This measure involves the same principle as that involved in the insurance cases. It involves the same sort of situation as existed last week when the Senate passed a bill taking away from the courts its jurisdiction of passing on the tidelands controversies. And now for the third time we are asked to take similar action, by lifting the railroads out from under the antitrust laws so that no court can pass on the validity of agreements, combinations, all sorts of things that involve practices and rates and agreements and combinations. Everything we can think of that the antitrust laws were enacted to outlaw would be possible under this bill if it should become law, only subject to the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the Interstate Commerce Commission has no power and will have no power under the bill nor under the law to inflict any penalty for violation, even if it is in connection with approved combinations that might be entered into under this legislation.

I am deeply in earnest about this matter. It seems to me extremely bad practice. It is a violation of the traditional field of legislation for us to undertake to do this in the Senate, because a lawsuit has been brought. The State of Georgia, through the governor of that State, has been permitted to institute litigation in the Supreme Court.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TUNNELL in the chair). Does the Senator from Kentucky yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. HILL. The Senator has referred to the case brought by the State of Georgia. I happen to have an excerpt from the complaint of the State of Georgia in that case. It might be of interest to the Senate to hear a part of what is set forth in the complaint. I shall not read all of it, but what I shall read will throw light on what we are asked to do in throwing this case out of court. We are asked to say to the State of Georgia, "In spite of whatever rights you have, we are going to pass this legislation and not permit the Supreme Court to pass on your case." I read:

> The State of Georgia is hindered and harassed in the discharge of these powers, rights, and obligations of sovereignty by a conspiracy of persons of other States, in violation of the common law against conspiracy, and in violation of the antitrust laws of the United States, all as recited herein in sections 9 to 16, inclusive. The defendants, a group of common carriers, have conspired to establish and to maintain freight rates which are unjust, unfair, and harmful to the State and the people of Georgia.

Yet, Mr. President we are asked, without having the hearings in the Committee on Interstate Commerce on this bill before us, to pass the measure and to deny to the sovereign State of Georgia her day in court, though her complaint is even now pending in the Supreme Court.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator from Alabama, that if the bill is passed and becomes law it not only takes away all the rights Georgia is now asserting in the Supreme Court of the United States, and which case awaits determination, but it also denies to every other State which may have an equally justified complaint, even the right to go into the court to determine what its rights are. It seems to me that for the Congress to start out on the career of undertaking to nullify lawsuits, undertaking to set itself up as a master in chancery in the Supreme Court to determine what are the rights of these litigants, is an unjustified invasion of the jurisdiction of the court.

Mr. HILL. And the Senate at this moment does not even have the hearings, does not even have the testimony, does not even have the evidence on this bill available to it for study.

Mr. BARKLEY. Complaint was made yesterday on the floor because Senators had not had an opportunity to read the hearings that had been printed, in connection with the bill which was then before us. But in this particular case the hearings have not even been printed. They are not available to any Senator.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. KILGORE. Does the Senator know that in an investigation of the Western carriers which operate in Texas, Arizona, and New Mexico it was found that by an agreement between the railroads air conditioning, although existing in the cars, was to be cut off at Dallas, Tex., for all cars going south of Dallas, in order that there might be no competition of service? That matter is pending now with the Department of Justice on the question of whether the agreement is in violation of the Sherman Act and various other acts. If we remove these railroads from those acts, they can continue this intolerable condition south of Dallas, Tex., and various other parts of the Southwest, by which air conditioning installed in the cars cannot be used by reason of an inter-railroad agreement not to use such service south of Dallas, although it will cost no more to use it than it costs at the present time to use it. That is another thing the correction of which the bill would preclude.

Mr. BARKLEY. I appreciate the Senator's reference to that situation. I am not so familiar with the facts brought out in that investigation as is the Senator from West Virginia. I know that investigation of the subject was made. Under this bill the Department of Justice would have no occasion to make such an investigation to determine the facts, because we are proposing to say to the Government of the United States, to the Department of Justice, and to the Federal courts, "The railroads are to be put on an island of safety, beyond the reach of the antitrust laws."

Mr. KILGORE. That is abolutely correct. It is proposed to remove the protection of citizens who must ride on those railroads under the conditions described, and to take away from the Federal Government and its executive agencies the right to protect those people against improper agreements which have been entered into in the past.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. I should like to ask a question for information, as to whether or not the case pending in the Supreme Court involves an order which has been approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I can answer that question. It does not.

Mr. BARKLEY. It does not involve a specific order. It involves certain existing traffic and rate situations which are the basis of the complaint that there is a violation of the antitrust laws.

Mr. FERGUSON. I am trying to ascertain whether or not this bill would stop that suit or in any way interfere with it. I read from section 8, on page 6, line 9, of the bill:

> No order shall be entered under this section except after interested parties (including in all cases the Attorney General of the United States) have been afforded reasonable opportunity for hearing.

Mr. BARKLEY. That applies to future orders which may be issued or applied for by a railroad company or combination of railroads before the Interstate Commerce Commission. It merely gives the Attorney General the right to be heard, but it does not give the court the right to be heard.

Mr. FERGUSON. As I read that provision, the bill would not interfere with the litigation before the Supreme Court. If certain railroads have violated the antitrust laws, they certainly should be punished. The last thing I would wish to do would be to interfere with a suit for the punishment of such railroads. As I read the bill, I do not feel that it would stop such a case, because under the terms of the bill any order made by a rate bureau would have to be approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and under section 8 no such order could be entered until after the Attorney General had full notice. From a reading of the bill I have been unable to discover that it would in the least interfere with the litigation which has been referred to. I should like to have an explanation of the situation.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. Let me answer the question of the Senator from Michigan. I think it would interfere; but even if it should not interfere, if the bill were passed the decision of the Supreme Court on the question would be a moot decision in the future, because the railroads could continue to do the very same things, although the Supreme Court might hold that they should not have done them at the time the acts complained of were committed.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. RUSSELL. The State of Georgia sought injunctive relief against the railroads from the conspiracy which was alleged, a conspiracy to combine to fix rates which were detrimental to the State of Georgia. If we pass this bill it will permit the railroads to get together and fix rates. The very heart will be cut out of the case of the State of Georgia which seeks to enjoin the conspiracy to discriminate against the State of Georgia and other States similarly situated.

Mr. BARKLEY. In that connection, let me add that in my judgment, if this bill passes and the things provided for by the bill are permitted, the railroads can get together, by reason of these practices being legalized, and do the very same things, or even worse things, than those out of which grew the Georgia complaint. All the Supreme Court would be permitted to say would be that at the time the acts complained of occurred they were unlawful, and therefore a penalty might be assessed. The Court could grant relief as of the date when the evils existed; but if we take the heart out of the statute we shall preclude the Supreme Court from ever again passing on the question. That is the difficulty with this legislation, as I see it, not only with respect to this case, but any other case which may arise under similar circumstances.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. Under the fair construction of all criminal statutes, if a crime has been committed or a criminal statute has been violated, and the legislative body changes the rules or changes the statute, unless there is a specific provision stopping the trial, the crime having been complete, the court can try the case. That is why I was trying to find out whether or not there was any attempt through this bill to stop the litigation which has been referred to. If a crime has been committed under either the Clayton Act or the Sherman Act—and I understand that those are the acts under which the Supreme Court and the Attorney General are proceeding—unless there is some provision in the bill which interferes with the court or prevents it from proceeding, or something which makes the question a moot question, we would not be interfering with that litigation. As I read the bill, it would apply only to cases in the future, and it would apply only to rate bureaus established in the future. It would apply only to orders approved in the future, as provided in section 8.

Mr. BARKLEY. I respectfully submit that it would do the State of Georgia, or any other State in the United States, no good simply to obtain a decision of the Supreme Court holding that what the railroads did at the time stated in the complaint was unlawful, when we are proposing to make it lawful hereafter for the railroads to do the same things which are involved in the lawsuit in the Supreme Court. The decision would be moot. It would not grant any relief. There would be no particular efficacy in having the Supreme Court decide that something which happened a year or two ago was unlawful then, and to have the Congress say that from now on it shall be lawful to do the same thing.

Mr. FERGUSON. I would agree with the able Senator from Kentucky if we were permitting the same things to be done. But we are not doing so in this bill, as I read it. We are not permitting the same things to be done that are complained of in that case. We say that legal rate bureaus may be established, and that when they are established—

> No order shall be entered under this section except after interested parties (including in all cases the Attorney General of the United States) have been afforded reasonable opportunity for hearing.

As I understand, in the case in the Supreme Court there was no such order. A conspiracy between the railroads was alleged. There was no notice to the Attorney General or anyone else. So we are not legalizing what was done there. We are legalizing a new procedure.

Mr. BARKLEY. All the Attorney General would be permitted to do under this bill would be to appear before the Interstate Commerce Commission and protest. He could not act after the Commission had acted. He could not go into court and say that what had been done was a violation of the antitrust law. He might exercise some moral influence over the Interstate Commerce Commission, but that is all. He would have no remedy if the Commission should disregard his protest and act contrary to his advice.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. LANGER. I invite the attention of the distinguished Senator from Michigan to the fact that the Georgia case is only a test case. At the Governors' Conference, attended by the Governor of Michigan himself, the State of North Dakota joined with the State of Georgia, and Governor Moses, who later became a United States Senator, assured the Governor of the State of Georgia, as has been so ably expressed by the distinguished Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL], that the State of North Dakota joined with the State of Georgia, and that if the Georgia case were successful, similar cases would be brought in State after State. The distinguished majority leader is exactly correct, in my opinion, when he says that, even though it may be contended that the bill would not apply to the Georgia case, it would apply to all other lawsuits brought by other States.

Mr. BARKLEY. The principle—whatever it might be—laid down in the Georgia case would be applicable to every other State in which such evils exist. In addition to the case now pending in the Supreme Court, there is pending in the Federal court in Lincoln, Nebr., a proceeding instituted by the Attorney General, affecting the practices of railroads in that section of the country. The passage of this bill would knock that suit into a cocked hat.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. RUSSELL. I should like to read a paragraph from the decision of the Supreme Court when it granted the motion of the State of Georgia for leave to file a bill of complaint against certain railroads:

> If the allegations of the bill are taken as true, the economy of Georgia and the welfare of her citizens have seriously suffered as the result of this alleged conspiracy. Discriminatory rates are but one form of trade barriers. They may cause a blight no less serious than the spread of noxious gas over the land or the deposit of sewage in the streams. They may affect the prosperity and welfare of a State as profoundly as any diversion of waters from the rivers. They may stifle, impede, or cripple old industries and prevent the establishment of new ones. They may arrest the development of a State, or put it at a decided disadvantage in competitive markets. Such a charge at least equals in gravity the one which Pennsylvania and Ohio had with West Virginia over the curtailment of the flow of natural gas from the West Virginia fields. There are substitute fuels to which the economy of a State might be adjusted. But discriminatory rates fastened on a region have a more permanent and insidious quality. Georgia as a representative of the public is complaining of a wrong, which if proven limits the opportunities of her people, shackles her industries, retards her development, and relegates her to an inferior economic position among her sister States. These are matters of grave public concern in which Georgia has an interest apart from that of particular individuals who may be affected. Georgia's interest is not remote; it is immediate. If we denied Georgia as parens patriae the right to invoke the original jurisdiction of the Court in a matter of that gravity, we would whittle the concept of justifiability down to the stature of minor or conventional controversies. There is no warrant for such a restriction.

Mr. President, that is what the Supreme Court said in permitting the filing of this suit which alleges a conspiracy through combinations and agreements such as would be permitted by this bill, if it were enacted. The enactment of the bill might not destroy the jurisdiction of the Court in the Georgia case, but it would effectively deny any relief. If this bill were enacted into law, all that the Court could hold would be that the conspiracy had existed, that it was well proven in the hearing before the masters that the conspiracy existed, that it had been very damaging to Georgia, and that the Court would grant an injunction against past wrongs, but that the Congress by passing the Bulwinkle bill had decided to permit those powerful masters to dominate the economic life of the Nation; and that would throw our State back into economic thralldom. That would be what would happen if this situation, which has been declared illegal, were permitted to continue.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, what would happen, I think, would be as follows: Assuming that the Supreme Court in deciding that case held that the practices were illegal and in violation of the antitrust laws, all anyone could do, provided this bill has been enacted by that time, would be to say, "If the law were now what it was when these things happened, we could do something about it; but Congress has taken time by the forelock and has nullified the decision of the Supreme Court before it was rendered."

Mr. RUSSELL. That is precisely what would happen, and that would deny us any relief.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. REED. As the Senator knows, I do not make a practice of breaking in on the opponent's time to make my arguments. But this is one of the few times when I shall interrupt, if the Senator will permit. I wish to say to him that in my judgment and in the judgment of the Interstate Commerce Committee, the passage of this bill will have no possible effect upon either the Georgia case or the Nebraska case.

Mr. BARKLEY. The only effect it would have would be to say that, regardless of whatever the decision in those cases might be, they would be ineffective in the future.

I wish to say that I was not present in the Interstate Commerce Committee when this bill was under consideration there. I was engrossed in other duties of a more or less variegated character while this bill was under consideration in the commitee. If I had been present in the committee at that time, I would have voted against reporting the bill; and if I had been advised that minority views would be filed by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. JOHNSTON] and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY], I would have joined in those views.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. This matter is as important to Arkansas as it is to Georgia. I cannot understand why there is any urgency that the bill be considered. It seems to me that it would be wholly inappropriate to have the Senate consider the bill at this time. The hearings have not been printed, and it is obvious that the subject matter of the bill is controversial.

So I was a little curious why the majority leader permitted the matter to be brought up.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I have never tried to prevent a Senator from making a motion that the Senate take up any particular bill. I do not think that is within my province. I told the Senator from Kansas that I did not think he should make his motion until certain other matters were out of the way. They are now out of the way. Therefore, I told the Senator that I would not oppose his making the motion, although I would vigorously oppose its adoption.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Until we get the hearings on the bill, so that we may understand its significance, it seems to me that it would obviously be improper to have the Senate take it up at all.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is obviously true, and the present situation is in contrast to the situation which existed yesterday. Yesterday Senators complained that various Senators had not had an opportunity to read the hearings on the railroad retirement bill. Complaint was made on that ground. Yesterday, when we had under consideration the railroad retirement bill for the benefit of a million and a half railroad employees, the same Senators complained because the hearings were so voluminous that Senators had not had a chance to read them.

The bill now under discussion has come from the same committee, but it is a different sort of bill. We do not have any printed hearings on it. Yesterday the same Senators complained because of that situation, and they took the position that the action of the same committee in reporting the railroad retirement bill was not entitled to any consideration. But now they take the position that the report on this bill is sacred and sacrosanct.

Mr. President, I hope the motion of the Senator from Kansas will be rejected.

ACQUISITION OF REAL PROPERTY UNDER THE SURPLUS PROPERTY ACT

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, on behalf of the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY], who is chairman of the subcommittee of the Military Affairs Committee which handled House bill 6702, and who is one of the conferees on that bill, I submit the conference report on it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The legislative clerk read the report, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6702) to clarify the rights of former owners of real property to reacquire such property under the Surplus Property Act of 1944, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same.

JAMES E. MURRAY,
BURNET R. MAYBANK,
CHAPMAN REVERCOMB,
GEO. A. WILSON,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.
CARTER MANASCO,
WILLIAM M. WHITTINGTON,
CLARE E. HOFFMAN,
GEORGE H. BENDER,
Managers on the Part of the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the report?

Mr. RUSSELL. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Ball	Burch
Andrews	Barkley	Capper
Austin	Bilbo	Carville
Connally	La Follette	Reed
Cordon	Langer	Revercomb
Donnell	Lucas	Russell
Downey	McCarran	Shipstead
Eastland	McClellan	Smith
Ferguson	McFarland	Stanfill
Fulbright	McKellar	Stewart
George	McMahon	Swift
Gerry	Magnuson	Taylor
Green	Mead	Thomas, Okla.
Guffey	Millikin	Thomas, Utah
Gurney	Mitchell	Tunnell
Hart	Moore	Vandenberg
Hawkes	Morse	Wagner
Hayden	Murdock	Walsh
Hill	Murray	Wheeler
Hoey	Myers	Wherry
Huffman	O'Daniel	White
Johnson, Colo.	O'Mahoney	Wiley
Johnston, S. C.	Overton	Willis
Kilgore	Pepper	Young
Knowland	Radcliffe

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Seventy-four Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Is there objection to the present consideration of the conference report on House bill 6702?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, I now move that the conference report be agreed to.

The report was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Maurer, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed, without amendment, the following bills of the Senate:

S. 1198. An act to authorize the Secretary of Commerce to sell certain property in the State of Michigan now occupied by the Weather Bureau and to acquire land in the State of Michigan for the erection of a Weather Bureau station;

S. 1478. An act to record the lawful admission to the United States for permanent residence of Edith Frances de Becker Sebald;

S. 1607. An act to provide for the naturalization of Peter Kim;

S. 2310. An act to further extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Friar Point, Miss., and Helena, Ark.; and

S. 2359. An act to close the Office of the Recorder of Deeds on Saturdays.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3748) to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the recognition of the services of the civilian officials and employees, citizens of the United States, engaged in and about the construction of the Panama Canal," approved May 29, 1944.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to a concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 165), in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the two Houses of Congress shall adjourn on Friday, August 2, 1946, and that when they adjourn on said day they stand adjourned sine die.

STATUS OF KEETOWAH INDIANS IN OKLAHOMA—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two House on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 341) which relates to the status of the Keetowah Indians of the Cherokee Nation in Oklahoma, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to section 2 and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment, section 2 is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 2. That there is hereby set aside for the use and benefit of the Indians of the Cheyenne and Arapaho Reservation in Oklahoma the remainder of the lands comprising the diminished Seger School Reserve containing approximately five hundred and thirty-seven acres, and the improvements thereon, in section 15, township 10 north, range 14 west, of the Indian meridian, Oklahoma. Subject to the consent of the business committee of the Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes thereto, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to enter into an agreement with the Colony Union Graded School District numbered 1, Colony, Oklahoma, for the use by the district of all or any portion of the land, and improvements thereon, described in this act: Provided, That any such agreement shall contain the express condition that the land therein described and the improvements thereon shall revert to the use of the Indians of the Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes when no longer used by the said school district for school purposes."

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the title of the bill and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"That the title be amended by striking out the words 'Colony Union Graded School District numbered 1, Colony, Oklahoma, and substitute therefor 'the Cheyenne and Arapaho Indians of Oklahoma.'"

ELMER THOMAS,
HENRIK SHIPSTEAD,
E. H. MOORE,
B. K. WHEELER,
JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

HENRY M. JACKSON,
JOHN R. MURDOCK,
W. G. STIGLER,
KARL E. MUNDT,
Managers on the Part of the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the report?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I move that the conference report be agreed to.

The report was agreed to.

THE OPA AND AGRICULTURAL COMMODITIES

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, as chairman of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, I have received a great many letters from all parts of the country relating to the OPA, and I have not facilities for answering each of them individually. I have prepared a statement, in the nature of questions and answers, and I submit the statement for the RECORD and ask that it be printed in the body of the RECORD at this point in connection with my remarks.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

To Commissioners, Directors, and Secretaries of Agriculture:

To the many questions submitted to me as chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture, I am replying as follows:

Question: How does the new OPA law affect the cotton industry?

Answer: The law does not authorize the OPA to either fix maximum price ceilings on raw cotton or to make any rule or regulation with respect to margin requirements on futures transactions. Further, the new law authorizes manufacturers and processors to receive for their products costs of raw cotton and costs of manufacture plus reasonable profits.

Question: What is the power and jurisdiction of the Price Decontrol Board?

Answer: The Price Decontrol Board has power and jurisdiction over livestock and milk, cottonseed, soybeans and grains, and food and feed products produced therefrom. Neither the OPA Administrator nor the Board has any control over raw cotton.

Question: What is the average production of cotton in the United States?

Answer: The 10-year average production was 12,553,000 bales of 500 pounds each. The cotton produced last year, 1945, was 9,015,000 bales.

Question: What is the average number of acres planted to cotton?

Answer: The 10-year average number of acres planted was twenty-five and one-half million. The number of acres planted this year, 1946, is eighteen and one-third million, which is some 7,000,000 acres less than the 10-year average.

Question: What is the Department of Agriculture estimate of the production for this year?

Answer: The latest estimate is 9,200,000 bales, or some three and one-third million bales less than the 10-year average.

Question: What is the carry-over or amount of cotton now in the United States?

Answer: The domestic carry-over as of August 1 is estimated to be 7,600,000 bales of all kinds of cotton. This is the lowest carry-over since 1938. This year's crop of some 9,200,000 bales plus the carry-over of 7,600,000 bales totals 16,800,000 bales. The Agriculture Department reports that the carry-over plus this year's crop will "be at the lowest level in 17 years, or about the same as in 1928."

Question: What is the estimated domestic consumption of cotton for the next 12 months?

Answer: The Department estimates that this year's cotton crop will hardly supply the domestic demand.

Question: How much cotton will probably be exported during the current year?

Answer: Hearings held before the Bankhead subcommittee revealed probable exports of from 3½ to 4 million bales. The Army has requested some 154,000 bales to be shipped to occupied European zones and has commitments for some 1,360,000 bales for Japan. Credit has been extended to Czechoslovakia in the sum of $20,000,000 for purchases of cotton in the United States. The demand for cotton is great and if the war-torn countries can secure funds or credit with which to buy cotton our supply will not nearly equal the demand.

Question: What did cotton sell for during or after World War I?

Answer: In October 1918 cotton sold for 37.25 cents per pound, in December 1919 the price was 36.23 cents, and in July 1920 the price was 43.75 cents per pound. Cotton is a world commodity and is based on the value of gold. World War I prices were based on the old gold dollar which was 40 percent heavier hence 40 percent more valuable than the gold dollar of today. In 1920 there was less than $6,200,000,000 of money in circulation while now (July 17), we have $28,241,000,000 in circulation.

Eminent economists have demonstrated before the Senate Agricultural Committee that cotton growers receive per hour for their labor the amount they receive per pound for the cotton they produce. Cotton is quoted at some 32 cents per pound hence this means that cotton growers may receive only about 32 cents per hour for their work in producing this year's crop. If this price prevails it is obvious that much of the 1946 crop will not be picked and the existing shortage will be increased.

The Atlanta conference of cotton growers and officials should have all the facts pertaining to the cotton industry in order to plan and make recommendations for marketing the 1946 cotton crop. The facilities of the committee are available to you for securing additional information.

Respectfully,

ELMER THOMAS,
Chairman, Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

JULY 27, 1946.

GOVERNMENT HOUSING STATISTICS

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, recently when we were discussing the proposed emergency housing act, contradictory statements were made relative to the housing needs of the country. At that time I was told that a survey had been made, but for some reason it was unobtainable.

To throw a little light on the subject for the future, and also to show how difficult it is to get a Government report when there is a desire that it be withheld by some agency, or when there is an interpretation the agency wants to place upon the report itself, especially when legislation is under consideration, I should like to place in the RECORD at this time, for the benefit of Senators, a letter which reflects great credit on the integrity of the Bureau of the Census and upon the statisticians to the Bureau of the Budget, a letter which at the same time raises serious doubt as to the intentions and policies of some of the individuals who are charged with the conduct of housing matters in the Federal Government.

First, let me explain the background. Last fall, the President of the United States told the Nation that 5,000,000 new homes were needed in this country. The National Housing Agency, which among other things is interested in building up a case for a huge public housing program, backed up the President with a statistical statement purporting to show that 4,660,000 homes were needed.

Then a new face came among us, a Housing Expediter, who also is Administrator of the National Housing Agency. Soon we were told that there was an urgent need for 2,700,000 new homes for veterans alone. That figure also was backed up with an impressive statistical analysis.

It will be recalled that I asked in the debate how many homes were needed, and I asked the officials to furnish the statistics. All we got were the figures furnished by the National Housing Agency. As I said then, and I say now, I think it was a guess.

Meanwhile, it apparently had occurred to some of our Government leaders concerned with housing that they should check the figures they were quoting so confidently. At any rate, the National Housing Agency requested the Bureau of the Census to make a sample survey of housing conditions, rents, occupancy, and vacancy. The funds were provided by the National Housing Agency, and the Bureau of the Census undertook the work as an agent of the National Housing Agency.

The results of the survey were made available to the NHA during January and February 1946, which was prior to the debate upon that issue, and those results, gathered by a factual, nonpolitical, impartial branch of the Federal Government, were withheld from the public by the NHA. The Bureau of the Census did not feel, under the circumstances, that it had the authority to release the figures independently.

Why were the results of this impartial survey withheld from the public and from Congress? They were withheld because they convincingly contradicted some of the loose statements which had been made about the dire housing emergency. Those statements had been based on results of the 1940 census, although the official census figures had been subject to partisan interpretation.

The 1945–46 census, which the NHA refused to make public, showed that, contrary to popular opinion, a rather drastic improvement had been made in housing conditions since 1940. The survey in question showed fewer homes in need of major repair, fewer homes lacking adequate toilet and bathing facilities, fewer homes lacking central heating or electric wiring. It showed fewer persons residing in the average home than was true before the war, even though demobilization was well under way at the time. It showed that the median rent in occupied dwellings had risen more than other evidence had indicated.

These are the facts that were withheld. They were withheld for one single and obvious reason—because they deflated the dire housing emergency which the Government housers and the public housers had built up. No one denies that there is a critical housing shortage today. We all know that, and we want to eliminate it, so that every veteran can have a decent home.

But we want to know what we are doing. We want to know how great the need really is. The Bureau of the Census produced the facts, and the NHA apparently concealed them, or withheld them, until after the legislation was passed. As time passed, the Director of the Bureau of the Census became concerned over the difficult position in which his branch of the Government had been placed. Doubtless, he anticipated that his agency might be criticized. So, on April 18, the Director of the Bureau of the Census addressed to the Bureau of the Budget a letter asking advice regarding the issuance of the suppressed housing statistics. For that act I commend Mr. J. C. Capt, Director of the Bureau of the Census. He did his duty as a public official.

On April 26 Stuart A. Rice, Assistant in Charge of Statistical Standards in the Bureau of the Budget, addressed a reply to Mr. Capt. It is that reply which I wish to read to the Senate at this time. This is the letter:

BUREAU OF THE BUDGET,
Washington, D. C., April 26, 1946.

Mr. J. C. CAPT,
Director, Bureau of the Census,
Department of Commerce,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. CAPT: In your letter of April 18 you ask my advice regarding the issuance of the Special Report on Housing, Series H–46, No. 1. I am glad to express my opinions upon the questions of Government policy which seem to be involved. These questions affect the integrity of all governmental statistical and research activities.

As I understand from your letter and from members of my staff who have discussed the matter with Census personnel and others, no serious questions have been raised concerning the technical adequacy of the data included in the above-named report. As is customary, we are giving you below such suggestions of a technical character as occur to us. However, none of these suggestions is a challenge to the technical soundness of the work, into which we have had no occasion to inquire in detail. Good faith and good workmanship on the part of the Nation's technical agencies are traditional within our Government.

The question at issue arises from the possibility that the data will be misinterpreted or misused. Specifically they may be improperly compared with data on rents obtained by the Bureau of Labor Statistics for its cost-of-living index. These latter data measure changes in rent charged for identical residential facilities. The Census figures pertain to median rents for all tenant-occupied nonfarm dwelling units, and are thus affected by very different factors and considerations than are those of the BLS. Although the increases since 1940 appearing in the Census data are greater than those shown by the BLS, the differences are without significance, since different things are measured. But since they appear (though erroneously) to measure the same thing, it might be contended that the new Census data should be withheld from release.

I would regard such a conclusion as illogical and offensive. It would reflect upon the professional standards and integrity of every Federal statistician. To the statistician, as to other scientists in a free country, facts are facts—whatever the consequences to which they lead. Except for security reasons, governmentally collected facts must be made available to all who have concern with them. I know of no instance in which statistical data collected by the Federal Government have been suppressed in order to support or protect a special public or private interest. I therefore believe that your report should be released.

It is part of the same high standard, however, that data released to the public must be presented in such form as to maximize understanding and minimize misuse. If it is inexcusably dishonest to suppress information it is inexcusably negligent to permit information to be misunderstood. Part of this responsibility is a sound explanation of the relationships to similar data. It is here that your report in my opinion falls short of meeting its full responsibilities. Admittedly its text sets forth the fact that the Census and BLS data on rents are noncomparable. But this unduly brief exposition is tucked away in the technical notes where the great majority of unwary readers are almost certain to miss its significance.

Moreover, the discussion itself does not seem strong enough in view of what I believe to be the facts. The fact that in 1940, 48 percent of occupied nonfarm units were tenant-occupied and at the time of the survey only 36 percent were tenant-occupied appears to indicate a terrific shift in the two universes covered and greater emphasis should be given to the point that this is not a change in median rent for a reasonably common group of units. This shift seems something different from the addition to the group of the war housing units at a diffent rent level. I am under the impression that many of the users have underestimated the importance of this factor. The factor that aside from the composition of the group certain qualitative changes in a unit can affect the rents actually paid and that the BLS index holds constant the quality and therefore does not measure a general improvement in equipment, seems more adequately covered, except for its location in the text.

Finally, it would seem desirable to include in the report the discussion on variation due to sampling rather than waiting until some later release. This is always good practice but especially does it seem so in this case.

Sincerely yours,

STUART A. RICE,
Assistant Director in Charge of Statistical Standards.

Here we have an instance of one official condemning the withholding of statistics, and the misinterpretation of statistics, at the very time when the Senate was reaching for those statistics in order that we might be properly guided as to the needs of housing units, and then, after that is all over, an outcry is raised because we go after the agencies to release the reports.

Shortly after the date of the letter I read, the statistics in question began to appear as public information. The Government officials knew they would have to submit them some time after this particular challenge had been made.

In view of these facts, it is my opinion, Mr. President, that we shall have to examine with the greatest of care any statistics or so-called facts which the National Housing Agency may place before us in the future. The housing shortage is serious enough without exaggerating it. Those who seek to dot the Nation with unnecessarily large public housing projects at the expense of the Federal Treasury, and who suppress facts and distort statistics to serve their purpose, are doing this country a great disservice. I shall welcome the day when the Senate may be able to inquire into these matters in considerable detail.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield?

Mr. WHERRY. I yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. As a member of the Committee on Appropriations, of which the able Senator from Nebraska is also a member, I will say that we find we are appropriating millions of dollars for the preparation of statistics, and then after the statistics are prepared, we discover that they are used for propaganda purposes, not only in the legislative halls, but throughout the country, for the accomplishment of certain things desired by those who prepare the statistics.

Mr. WHERRY. That is true.

Mr. FERGUSON. Some time ago I called to the attention of the Senate the fact that the Department of Commerce permitted the dissemination of statistics reflecting increase in wages, but not with respect to the increase in cost of manufacturing automobiles. It was discovered that a young man in the Department of Justice had prepared certain data, had taken them over to the Department of Commerce, and that they had been made public without conference even with the Under Secretary or with the Committee of Business Men who are called to meet at various times in the Department. So we find again that the millions of dollars appropriated by Congress and paid out of the pockets of the taxpayers are being used for propaganda purposes, either to accomplish legislation or accomplish other things which the bureaus and the departments seek to have accomplished.

Mr. President, it is not the executive department itself, that is the President, that is responsible, because he cannot know of these things. It comes about through the domination of the bureaus, not only over the legislative branch, but over the executive branch; but the people of America must wake up to this situation, and look into and ascertain what are the true facts, or we will no longer have a representative government in this Nation. The people must understand that danger lies in the control by bureaus over the executive branch.

Mr. WHERRY. I wish to thank the distinguished Senator from Michigan for his contribution. He has with greater force and clarity brought this matter to the attention of the Senate than I possibly could have done.

In conclusion, Mr. President, I wish to emphasize that it required a letter from the executive branch, from the Bureau of the Budget, to one of the agencies of government, to pry loose the statistics which should have been here and available to Senators during the debate on the housing question.

But, instead of the Senate having that information, the National Housing Authority submitted statistics which are in direct contradiction with these two reports. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the first two reports which have been released by the Department of Commerce, which contradict the figures of the National Housing Authority. These figures were suppressed. They were not available to us. Had we had the figures we could have discussed the question of housing needs more intelligently at the time the legislation was under consideration.

Mr. President, I do not want to minimize the fact that there is a housing shortage, but I wish to emphasize, as the Senator from Michigan has done, that these two bureaus, apparently with a dictatorial hand, can release and can interpret statistics at will. While we appropriate millions upon millions of dollars annually for the preparation and distribution of statistics which are supposed to be of service not only to the Congress, but to the people of the United States generally, yet they are either suppressed or turned against us in the form of propaganda.

I ask that the two reports to which I previously referred may be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the reports were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CHARACTERISTICS OF OCCUPIED DWELLING UNITS FOR THE UNITED STATES: NOVEMBER 1945

Some improvement has been shown between 1940 and 1945 in the average condition and facilities of homes in the United States according to estimates released today by Director J. C. Capt of the Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. Greatest advance was shown in rural areas while urban communities showed much less over-all improvement.

Occupied dwelling units in the United States increased about two and three-quarter millions between 1940 and 1945. The estimated number of occupied dwelling units in November 1945 is 37,600,000. The number of urban occupied dwelling units increased by more than 3,000,000. In contrast to this increase the number of rural farm occupied dwelling units declined by nearly 800,000 and the number of rural nonfarm increased by only about 400,000 (table 1).

TABLE 1.—Occupied dwelling units, by tenure, for the United States, urban and rural, 1945 and 1940

Area and tenure	Estimated number		Increase, 1940 to 1945[1]		Percent
	1945	1940	Number	Percent	1945	1940
UNITED STATES
Total occupied dwelling units	37,600,000	34,855,000	2,745,000	7.9	100.0	100.0
Urban	23,748,000	20,597,000	3,151,000	15.3	63.2	59.1
Rural nonfarm	7,533,000	7,151,000	382,000	5.3	20.0	20.5
Rural farm	6,319,000	7,107,000	−788,000	−11.1	16.8	20.4
Owner	20,009,000	15,196,000	4,813,000	31.7	53.2	43.6
Tenant	17,591,000	19,659,000	−2,068,000	−10.5	46.8	56.4
URBAN
Total occupied dwelling units	23,748,000	20,597,000	3,151,000	15.3	100.0	100.0
Owner	11,047,000	7,715,000	3,332,000	43.2	46.5	37.5
Tenant	12,701,000	12,882,000	−181,000	−1.4	53.5	62.5
RURAL NONFARM
Total occupied dwelling units	7,533,000	7,151,000	382,000	5.3	100.0	100.0
Owner	4,831,000	3,698,000	1,133,000	30.6	64.1	51.7
Tenant	2,702,000	3,453,000	−751,000	−21.7	35.9	48.3
RURAL FARM
Total occupied dwelling units	6,319,000	7,107,000	−788,000	−11.1	100.0	100.0
Owner	4,131,000	3,783,000	348,000	9.2	65.4	53.2
Tenant	2,188,000	3,324,000	−1,136,000	−34.2	34.6	46.8

[1] A minus sign (−) denotes decrease.

TENURE

In November 1945 there were 20,009,000 dwelling units occupied by owners, as compared with the 15,196,000 owner-occupied homes in April 1940. In contrast, since April 1940 the number of dwelling units occupied by tenants declined 11 percent to 17,591,000 in 1945. Thus, homes occupied by their owners represented 53 percent of all occupied dwelling units in 1945, as compared to 44 percent in 1940. In the urban areas, the percent of homes occupied by their owners increased from 38 percent in 1940 to 47 percent in 1945. The increase in the rural farm areas was from 53 percent to 65 percent, and in the rural nonfarm areas was from 52 percent in 1940 to 64 percent in 1945.

STATE OF REPAIR AND FACILITIES

In 1945, 33,258,000, or 89 percent, of the occupied dwelling units were not in need of major repairs, with 92 percent, 87 percent, and 78 percent for urban, rural nonfarm, and rural farm, respectively. Corresponding percentages in 1940 showed that 82 percent of the occupied units were not in need of major repairs, with 89 percent, 78 percent, and 67 percent for the urban, rural nonfarm, and rural farm areas. (See table 2.)

In 1945, 23,438,000, or 71 percent, of the 33,258,000 dwelling units needing no major repairs contained both a private bath and a private flush toilet. Seventy-eight percent of all urban occupied dwelling units contained both private bath and private flush toilet and needed no major repairs, while 52 percent of the rural nonfarm dwellings and only 15 percent of the rural farm dwellings were reported in this class.

Almost 1,000,000 of the 4,342,000 units needing repairs contained both a private bath and a private flush toilet. In this group are 3 percent of all urban units, 2 percent of the rural nonfarm units, and 1 percent of the rural farm units.

Of the 37,600,000 occupied dwelling units in 1945, more than 24,500,000, or 65 percent, had a private bath or shower in the structure for the exclusive use of the occupants of the dwelling unit (table 3). The corresponding figure for 1940 was less than 20,000,000, or 57 percent. In 1945, 1,566,000 dwelling units (4 percent) reported a bathtub or shower shared with other dwelling units, and more than 11,000,000 (30 percent) reported no equipment for bathing. In 1940, approximately the same number of dwelling units had bathing equipment shared with other dwelling units, but 2,000,000 more dwelling units in 1940, or 39 percent, of the total occupied dwelling units reported no facilities for bathing. The greatest percentage of homes with a private bathtub or shower for the exclusive use of its occupants was in the urban areas, where 82 percent were reported with such equipment in 1945, as compared with 17 percent of the rural farm homes.

A private flush toilet in the structure was reported for 69 percent of the occupied dwelling units in the United States in 1945, as compared with 60 percent in 1940. Only 5 percent, or about 1,684,000 dwelling units, in 1945 reported flush toilets for the joint use of two or more families, and more than one-fourth (27 percent) of the dwelling units reported that they had other types of toilet facilities or no toilet facilities (table 4).

In 1945, 29,500,000, or 79 percent, of the occupied dwelling units, had running water within the unit. Most of the remaining units had no running water, although 1 percent of the occupied dwelling units had running water within the structure but not within the unit.

Ninety-five percent of urban homes had running water within the unit, as compared with 70 percent for rural nonfarm and 28 percent for rural farm units. However the rural nonfarm and rural farm showed a one-third increase from 1940 while the urban percentage showed little change. The percentage having no running water within the unit was 5 percent of urban dwelling units, 30 percent of rural nonfarm, and 72 percent of rural farm dwelling units.

Approximately 18,000,000 dwelling units in 1945 had central heating equipment and they represent 48 percent of the occupied dwelling units. (See table 6.) More than 14,000,000 of the dwelling units with central heating were in urban places.

Ninety-five percent, or almost 36,000,000, of the occupied dwelling units in 1945 had installed cooking facilities. The urban and rural nonfarm areas had 96 and 95 percent, respectively, while in rural farm areas 93 percent of the occupied dwelling units had installed cooking facilities.

More than seven-eighths of the occupied dwelling units in the United States had electric-lighting equipment. This type of lighting equipment was provided in 33,356,000, or 89 percent, of the total occupied dwelling units in 1945. The percentages of urban and rural nonfarm homes with electric lighting were 98 and 90, respectively, and the corresponding figure for rural farm homes was 52 percent. Although there were fewer rural farm occupied dwelling units in 1945 than in 1940, a million more of these rural farm homes had electric lighting.

Almost 34,000,000, or 90 percent, of the occupied dwelling units had radios in 1945, as compared with less than 29,000,000, or 83 percent, in 1940. Almost 22,500,000, or 95 percent, of the urban occupied dwellings reported radios in 1945, while rural nonfarm reported almost 7,000,000, or 90 percent, and rural farm almost 5,000,000, or 77 percent.

SIZE OF HOUSEHOLD AND DWELLING UNITS

The median size of household in the United States declined to three and one-tenth persons in 1945, as compared with three and three-tenths persons in 1940. There were more two-person households in the United States in 1945 than households of any other size. These two-person households totaled 10,529,000 and constituted 28 percent of all households. One-person households accounted for 9 percent of the total, three-person households for 23 percent, and four-person households for 18 percent. Thus, nearly three-eighths (37 percent) of all dwelling units in the United States were used as the living quarters of one or two persons, and more than three-fourths (78 percent) housed not more than 4 persons.

Households of five or more persons represented 22 percent of all households; the percentage in this size group varied from 18 in the urban areas to 34 in the rural farm areas. Three percent of all households had eight persons or more—2 percent of the urban households, 3 percent of the rural nonfarm, and 8 percent of the rural farm.

The size of a household is defined as the number of persons who live in an occupied dwelling unit. The figures include not only related family members but also lodgers, servants, and other unrelated persons who regularly live at home.

Occupied dwelling units in 1945 contained about the same number of rooms as those in 1940. In the United States four- and five-room dwelling units represented 43 percent of all reporting units, while 35 percent had more than five rooms, and 22 percent had fewer than four rooms. The number of rooms includes all rooms available for use throughout the year. Bathrooms, closets, halls, screened porches, and unfinished rooms in the basement or attic were not counted as rooms.

MONTHLY RENT

The median rent for tenant-occupied dwelling units in 1945 was $27.88 in total urban and rural nonfarm areas; $30.25 in urban areas, and $15.50 in rural nonfarm areas (table 13). More than 4,500,000 of the urban and rural nonfarm dwelling units had rents of less than $20 per month, and 54 percent had rents of less than $30 per month. Monthly rents of $50 or more were reported for 1,508,000 of the 15,403,000 reporting units, or approximately 1 in every 10 units, while rents of less than $10 were reported for 1,242,000 dwelling units, or approximately 1 in every 12.

These rent figures are based on the amount paid per month as rent for tenant-occupied dwelling units. If no money rent was paid, for example, in the case of a minister who uses the parsonage rent-free, the estimated monthly rent based on the monthly rent paid for similar dwelling units in the neighborhood was entered on the schedules.

The rental data presented in this report are not comparable with the figures on changes in rent obtained by the Bureau of Labor Statistics for its cost of living index. The data compiled by the Bureau of Labor Statistics represent changes in rent charged for identical qualities of housing, essentially rents for identical units with identical services and facilities. The data in this release on the other hand reflect any shift in the size and type of rented units, the rent level of new war housing and other units coming on the rental market for the first time, and possibly also a trend toward more frequent inclusion in rent of charges for furnishings and utilities. Furthermore, the comparisons between 1940 and 1945 shown in this release may be affected by changes in vacancy rates among units in various rental groups.

The statistics presented in this release make it clear that the rental figures for 1940 and for 1945 do not pertain to the same group of units since there took place between those years a considerable shift in the groups of occupied dwelling units to which the rental data pertain. Over this 5-year period there was an increase of 4,533,000, or 16 percent, in the number of occupied dwelling units in urban and rural nonfarm areas. However, the percentage of units occupied by their owners increased sharply over the 5-year period rising from 49 percent in 1940 to 59 percent in 1945.

TECHNICAL NOTES

For this report, the urban and rural areas are those that were classified as urban or rural in 1940 on the basis of the results of the 1940 census. The classification of rural population by farm and nonfarm residence is based on the residence at the time of enumeration. Thus, the 1945 rural farm population is the population living on farms in 1945 in areas that were classified as rural in 1940.

SOURCE AND RELIABILITY OF ESTIMATES

Data on home ownership and other housing data, such as size of household, size of dwelling unit, bathing equipment, toilet facilities, heating equipment, and monthly rent were obtained for occupied dwelling units as a supplement to the monthly report on the Labor Force for November 1945. The Monthly Report on the Labor Force is a sample survey which is conducted each month in order to obtain information on labor supply, employment, and other characteristics of the population. The sample is distributed in 68 areas, each area comprising one or more counties. These areas are located in 42 States and the District of Columbia. Approximately 20,000 households were included in the housing inquiry.

Since the estimates for 1945 are based on a sample, they are subject to error due to sampling variability. Apparent small changes between 1940 and 1945 may not in all cases be significant, either in the amount of the change or its direction. The following table gives approximate measures of the reliability of the estimates for 1945. The measures of reliability are shown for several different sizes of numbers:

Size of estimate	Difference between the estimate and the number that would have been obtained from a complete census
	Chances are about 2 in 3 that the difference would be less than the figure in this column	Chances are about 19 in 20 that the difference would be less than the figure in this column
100,000	40,000	75,000
300,000	60,000	115,000
500,000	90,000	180,000
1,000,000	135,000	270,000
2,500,000	195,000	390,000
5,000,000	240,000	475,000
10,000,000	380,000	760,000
15,000,000	420,000	840,000
20,000,000	425,000	850,000
30,000,000	430,000	860,000

The sampling error of any percentage shown depends not only on the value of the percent but also on the size of base on which the percentage is determined. For example, the estimate of occupied dwelling units needing major repairs in rural nonfarm areas in the United States in November 1945 is 12.9 percent. The estimate of all occupied dwelling units needing major repairs in the United States in November 1945 is 11.5 percent. Since the latter percent has a considerably larger base it is more reliable than the percent based on rural nonfarm occupied dwelling units.

For percentages based on the total number of occupied dwelling units, the table below indicates the reliability for several different sizes of estimated percentages.

Size of estimated percentage	Difference between estimated percentage and percentage which would have been obtained from a complete census
	Chances are about 2 in 3 that the difference would be less than the figure in this column	Chances are about 19 in 20 that the difference would be less than the figure in this column
	Percent	Percent
1 percent	0.2	0.4
5 percent	.5	1.0
10 percent	.6	1.2
25 percent	1.0	1.9
50 percent	1.1	2.3
75 percent	1.1	2.3

The measure of reliability given in these tables are only approximate. They are intended as indications of the general level of sampling reliability of the estimates. In addition to sampling variations, the estimates are subject to errors of response, but the possibilities of such errors are not included in these measures of reliability.

The 1940 data shown were obtained from the 1940 census of housing with the data presented in thousands of dwelling units and with dwelling units not reporting on an item distributed in the same proportion as the reporting units. Estimates for 1945 are presented in thousands of dwelling units, not because they are assumed to be accurate to thousands of dwelling units but for convenience in summation.

TABLE 2.—Occupied dwelling units, by state of repair and plumbing equipment, for the United States, urban and rural, 1945 and 1940

Area and state of repair and plumbing equipment	Estimated number		Increase, 1940 to 1945[1]		Percent
	1945	1940	Number	Percent	1945	1940
UNITED STATES
Total occupied dwelling units	37,600,000	34,855,000	2,745,000	7.9	100.0	100.0
With private bath and private flush toilet	24,385,000	19,429,000	4,956,000	25.5	64.9	55.7
With private flush toilet, no private bath	1,536,000	1,487,000	49,000	3.3	4.1	4.3
With running water, no private flush toilet	3,622,000	3,614,000	8,000	.2	9.6	10.4
No running water in dwelling unit	8,057,000	10,325,000	−2,268,000	−22.0	21.4	29.6
Dwelling units not needing major repairs	33,258,000	28,588,000	4,670,000	16.3	88.5	82.0
With private bath and private flush toilet	23,438,000	18,039,000	5,399,000	29.9	62.3	51.8
With private flush toilet, no private bath	1,225,000	1,151,000	74,000	6.4	3.3	3.3
With running water, no private flush toilet	2,938,000	2,807,000	131,000	4.7	7.8	8.1
No running water in dwelling unit	5,657,000	6,591,000	−934,000	−14.2	15.0	18.9
Dwelling units needing major repairs	4,342,000	6,267,000	−1,925,000	−30.7	11.5	18.0
With private bath and private flush toilet	947,000	1,390,000	−443,000	−31.9	2.5	4.0
With private flush toilet, no private bath	311,000	336,000	−25,000	−7.4	.8	1.0
With running water, no private flush toilet	684,000	807,000	−123,000	−15.2	1.8	2.3
No running water in dwelling unit	2,400,000	3,734,000	−1,334,000	−35.7	6.4	10.7
URBAN
Total occupied dwelling units	23,748,000	20,597,000	3,151,000	15.3	100.0	100.0
With private bath and private flush toilet	19,349,000	15,830,000	3,519,000	22.2	81.5	76.9
With private flush toilet, no private bath	1,201,000	1,227,000	−26,000	−2.1	5.1	6.0
With running water, no private flush toilet	1,930,000	2,193,000	−263,000	−12.0	8.1	10.6
No running water in dwelling unit	1,268,000	1,347,000	−79,000	−5.9	5.3	6.5
Dwelling units not needing major repairs	21,755,000	18,271,000	3,484,000	19.1	91.6	88.7
With private bath and private flush toilet	18,586,000	14,753,000	3,833,000	26.0	78.3	71.6
With private flush toilet, no private bath	920,000	941,000	−21,000	−2.2	3.9	4.6
With running water, no private flush toilet	1,517,000	1,721,000	−204,000	−11.9	6.4	8.4
No running water in dwelling unit	732,000	856,000	−124,000	−14.5	3.1	4.2
Dwelling units needing major repairs	1,993,000	2,326,000	−333,000	−14.3	8.4	11.3
With private bath and private flush toilet	763,000	1,077,000	−314,000	−29.2	3.2	5.2
With private flush toilet, no private bath	281,000	286,000	−5,000	−1.7	1.2	1.4
With running water, no private flush toilet	413,000	472,000	−59,000	−12.5	1.7	2.3
No running water in dwelling unit	536,000	491,000	45,000	9.2	2.3	2.4
RURAL NONFARM
Total occupied dwelling units	7,533,000	7,151,000	382,000	5.3	100.0	100.0
With private bath and private flush toilet	4,029,000	2,823,000	1,206,000	42.7	53.5	39.5
With private flush toilet, no private bath	273,000	223,000	50,000	22.4	3.6	3.1
With running water, no private flush toilet	987,000	941,000	46,000	4.9	13.1	13.2
No running water in dwelling unit	2,244,000	3,164,000	−920,000	−29.1	29.8	44.2
Dwelling units not needing major repairs	6,563,000	5,559,000	1,004,000	18.1	87.1	77.7
With private bath and private flush toilet	3,878,000	2,587,000	1,291,000	49.9	51.5	36.2
With private flush toilet, no private bath	243,000	179,000	64,000	35.8	3.2	2.5
With running water, no private flush toilet	820,000	714,000	106,000	14.8	10.9	10.0
No running water in dwelling unit	1,622,000	2,079,000	−457,000	−22.0	21.5	29.1
Dwelling units needing major repairs	970,000	1,592,000	−622,000	−39.1	12.9	22.3
With private bath and private flush toilet	151,000	236,000	−85,000	−36.0	2.0	3.3
With private flush toilet, no private bath	30,000	44,000	−14,000	−31.8	.4	.6
With running water, no private flush toilet	167,000	227,000	−60,000	−26.4	2.2	3.2
No running water in dwelling unit	622,000	1,085,000	−463,000	−42.7	8.3	15.2
RURAL FARM
Total occupied dwelling units	6,319,000	7,107,000	−788,000	−11.1	100.0	100.0
With private bath and private flush toilet	1,007,000	776,000	231,000	29.8	15.9	10.9
With private flush toilet, no private bath	62,000	37,000	25,000	67.6	1.0	.5
With running water, no private flush toilet	705,000	480,000	225,000	46.9	11.2	6.8
No running water in dwelling unit	4,545,000	5,814,000	−1,269,000	−21.8	71.9	81.8
Dwelling units not needing major repairs	4,940,000	4,758,000	182,000	3.8	78.2	66.9
With private bath and private flush toilet	974,000	699,000	275,000	39.3	15.4	9.8
With private flush toilet, no private bath	62,000	31,000	31,000	100.0	1.0	.4
With running water, no private flush toilet	601,000	372,000	229,000	61.6	9.5	5.2
No running water in dwelling unit	3,303,000	3,656,000	−353,000	−9.7	52.3	51.4
Dwelling units needing major repairs	1,379,000	2,349,000	−970,000	−41.3	21.8	33.1
With private bath and private flush toilet	33,000	77,000	−44,000	−57.1	.5	1.1
With private flush toilet, no private bath	----------	6,000	−6,000	−100.0	----------	.1
With running water, no private flush toilet	104,000	108,000	−4,000	−3.7	1.6	1.5
No running water in dwelling unit	1,242,000	2,158,000	−916,000	−42.4	19.7	30.4

[1] A minus sign (−) denotes decrease.

TABLE 3.—Occupied dwelling units, by bathing equipment, for the United States, urban and rural, 1945 and 1940

Area and bathing equipment	Estimated number		Increase, 1940 to 1945[1]		Percent
	1945	1940	Number	Percent	1945	1940
UNITED STATES
Total occupied dwelling units	37,600,000	34,855,000	2,745,000	7.9	100.0	100.0
Bathing equipment in structure, exclusive use	24,587,000	19,777,000	4,810,000	24.3	65.4	56.7
Bathing equipment in structure, shared	1,566,000	1,641,000	−75,000	−4.6	4.2	4.7
None	11,447,000	13,437,000	−1,990,000	−14.8	30.4	38.6

[1] A minus sign (−) denotes decrease.

TABLE 3.—Occupied dwelling units, by bathing equipment, for the United States, urban and rural, 1945 and 1940—Continued

Area and bathing equipment[1]	Estimated number		Increase, 1940 to 1945[1]		Percent
	1945	1940	Number	Percent	1945	1940
URBAN
Total occupied dwelling units	23,748,000	20,597,000	3,151,000	15.3	100.0	100.0
Bathing equipment in structure, exclusive use	19,404,000	15,986,000	3,418,000	21.4	81.7	77.6
Bathing equipment in structure, shared	1,443,000	1,484,000	−41,000	−2.8	6.1	7.2
None	2,901,000	3,127,000	−226,000	−7.2	12.2	15.2
RURAL NONFARM
Total occupied dwelling units	7,533,000	7,151,000	382,000	5.3	100.0	100.0
Bathing equipment in structure, exclusive use	4,096,000	2,925,000	1,171,000	40.0	54.4	40.9
Bathing equipment in structure, shared	105,000	142,000	−37,000	−26.1	1.4	2.0
None	3,332,000	4,084,000	−752,000	−18.4	44.2	57.1
RURAL FARM
Total occupied dwelling units	6,319,000	7,107,000	−788,000	−11.1	100.0	100.0
Bathing equipment in structure, exclusive use	1,087,000	866,000	221,000	25.5	17.2	12.2
Bathing equipment in structure, shared	18,000	15,000	3,000	20.0	.3	.2
None	5,214,000	6,226,000	−1,012,000	−16.3	82.5	87.6

[1] A minus sign (−) denotes decrease.

TABLE 4.—Occupied dwelling units, by toilet facilities, for the United States, urban and rural, 1945 and 1940

Area and toilet facilities	Estimated number		Increase, 1940 to 1945[1]		Percent
	1945	1940	Number	Percent	1945	1940
UNITED STATES
Total occupied dwelling units	37,600,000	34,855,000	2,745,000	7.9	100.0	100.0
Flush toilet in structure, exclusive use	25,953,000	21,026,000	4,927,000	23.4	69.0	60.3
Flush toilet in structure, shared	1,684,000	1,725,000	−41,000	−2.4	4.5	4.9
No flush toilet	9,963,000	12,104,000	−2,141,000	−17.7	26.5	34.7
URBAN
Total occupied dwelling units	23,748,000	20,597,000	3,151,000	15.3	100.0	100.0
Flush toilet in structure, exclusive use	20,581,000	17,131,000	3,450,000	20.1	86.7	83.2
Flush toilet in structure, shared	1,547,000	1,578,000	−31,000	−2.0	6.5	7.7
No flush toilet	1,620,000	1,888,000	−268,000	14.2	6.8	9.2
RURAL NONFARM
Total occupied dwelling units	7,533,000	7,151,000	382,000	5.3	100.0	100.0
Flush toilet in structure, exclusive use	4,302,000	3,078,000	1,224,000	39.8	57.1	43.0
Flush toilet in structure, shared	119,000	135,000	−16,000	−11.9	1.6	1.9
No flush toilet	3,112,000	3,938,000	−826,000	−21.0	41.3	55.1
RURAL FARM
Total occupied dwelling units	6,319,000	7,107,000	−788,000	−11.1	100.0	100.0
Flush toilet in structure, exclusive use	1,070,000	817,000	253,000	31.0	16.9	11.5
Flush toilet in structure, shared	18,000	12,000	6,000	50.0	.3	.2
No flush toilet	5,231,000	6,278,000	−1,047,000	−16.7	82.8	88.3

[1] A minus sign (−) denotes decrease.

TABLE 5.—Occupied dwelling units, by water supply, for the United States, urban and rural, 1945 and 1940

Area and water supply	Estimated number		Increase, 1940 to 1945[1]		Percent
	1945	1940	Number	Percent	1945	1940
UNITED STATES
Total occupied dwelling units	37,600,000	34,855,000	2,745,000	7.9	100.0	100.0
Running water in unit	29,543,000	24,530,000	5,013,000	20.4	78.6	70.4
No running water in unit	8,057,000	10,325,000	−2,268,000	−22.0	21.4	29.6
No running water in unit but in structure	537,000				1.4
No running water in structure	7,520,000				20.0
URBAN
Total occupied dwelling units	23,748,000	20,597,000	3,151,000	15.3	100.0	100.0
Running water in unit	22,480,000	19,250,000	3,230,000	16.8	94.7	93.5
No running water in unit	1,268,000	1,347,000	−79,000	−5.9	5.3	6.5
No running water in unit but in structure	376,000				1.6
No running water in structure	892,000				3.8
RURAL NONFARM
Total occupied dwelling units	7,533,000	7,151,000	382,000	5.3	100.0	100.0
Running water in unit	5,289,000	3,987,000	1,302,000	32.7	70.2	55.8
No running water in unit	2,244,000	3,164,000	−920,000	−29.1	29.8	44.2
No running water in unit but in structure	104,000				1.4
No running water in structure	2,140,000				28.4
RURAL FARM
Total occupied dwelling units	6,319,000	7,107,000	−788,000	−11.1	100.0	100.0
Running water in unit	1,774,000	1,293,000	481,000	37.2	28.1	18.2
No running water in unit	4,545,000	5,814,000	−1,269,000	−21.8	71.9	81.8
No running water in unit but in structure	57,000				.9
No running water in structure	4,488,000				71.0

[1] A minus sign (−) denotes decrease.

TABLE 6.—Occupied dwelling units, with and without central heating, for the United States, urban and rural, 1945 and 1940

Area and central heating	Estimated number		Increase, 1940 to 1945 [1]		Percent
	1945	1940	Number	Percent	1945	1940
UNITED STATES
Total occupied dwelling units	37,600,000	34,855,000	2,745,000	7.9	100.0	100.0
With central heating	18,188,000	14,639,000	3,549,000	24.2	48.4	42.0
Without central heating	19,412,000	20,216,000	−804,000	−4.0	51.6	58.0
URBAN
Total occupied dwelling units	23,748,000	20,597,000	3,151,000	15.3	100.0	100.0
With central heating	14,536,000	11,986,000	2,550,000	21.3	61.2	58.2
Without central heating	9,212,000	8,611,000	601,000	7.0	38.8	41.8
RURAL NONFARM
Total occupied dwelling units	7,533,000	7,151,000	382,000	5.3	100.0	100.0
With central heating	2,679,000	1,933,000	746,000	38.6	35.6	27.0
Without central heating	4,854,000	5,218,000	−364,000	−7.0	64.4	73.0
RURAL FARM
Total occupied dwelling units	6,319,000	7,107,000	−788,000	−11.1	100.0	100.0
With central heating	973,000	720,000	253,000	35.1	15.4	10.1
Without central heating	5,346,000	6,387,000	−1,041,000	−16.3	84.6	89.9

[1] A minus sign (−) denotes decrease.

TABLE 7.—Occupied dwelling units, with and without electric lighting, for the United States, urban and rural, 1945 and 1940

Area and electric lighting	Estimated number		Increase, 1940 to 1945 [1]		Percent
	1945	1940	Number	Percent	1945	1940
UNITED STATES
Total occupied dwelling units	37,600,000	34,855,000	2,745,000	7.9	100.0	100.0
With electric lighting	33,356,000	27,604,000	5,752,000	20.8	88.7	79.2
Without electric lighting	4,244,000	7,251,000	−3,007,000	−41.5	11.3	20.8
URBAN
Total occupied dwelling units	23,748,000	20,597,000	3,151,000	15.3	100.0	100.0
With electric lighting	23,238,000	19,719,000	3,519,000	17.8	97.9	95.7
Without electric lighting	510,000	878,000	−368,000	−41.9	2.1	4.3
RURAL NONFARM
Total occupied dwelling units	7,533,000	7,151,000	382,000	5.3	100.0	100.0
With electric lighting	6,805,000	5,588,000	1,217,000	21.8	90.3	78.1
Without electric lighting	728,000	1,563,000	−835,000	−53.4	9.7	21.9
RURAL FARM
Total occupied dwelling units	6,319,000	7,107,000	−788,000	−11.1	100.0	100.0
With electric lighting	3,313,000	2,297,000	1,016,000	44.2	52.4	32.3
Without electric lighting	3,006,000	4,810,000	−1,804,000	−37.5	47.6	67.7

[1] A minus sign (−) denotes decrease.

TABLE 8.—Occupied dwelling units, by radio, for the United States, urban and rural, 1945 and 1940

Area and radio	Estimated number		Increase, 1940 to 1945 [1]		Percent
	1945	1940	Number	Percent	1945	1940
UNITED STATES
Total occupied dwelling units	37,600,000	34,855,000	2,745,000	7.9	100.0	100.0
With radio	33,998,000	28,847,000	5,151,000	17.9	90.4	82.8
No radio	3,602,000	6,008,000	−2,406,000	−40.0	9.6	17.2
URBAN
Total occupied dwelling units	23,748,000	20,597,000	3,151,000	15.3	100.0	100.0
With radio	22,416,000	18,925,000	3,491,000	18.4	94.4	91.9
No radio	1,332,000	1,672,000	−340,000	−20.3	5.6	8.1
RURAL NONFARM
Total occupied dwelling units	7,533,000	7,151,000	382,000	5.3	100.0	100.0
With radio	6,741,000	5,647,000	1,094,000	19.4	89.5	79.0
No radio	792,000	1,504,000	−712,000	−47.3	10.5	21.0
RURAL FARM
Total occupied dwelling units	6,319,000	7,107,000	−788,000	−11.1	100.0	100.0
With radio	4,841,000	4,277,000	564,000	13.2	76.6	60.2
No radio	1,478,000	2,830,000	−1,352,000	−47.8	23.4	39.8

[1] A minus sign (−) denotes decrease.

TABLE 9.—Occupied dwelling units, by installed cooking facilities, for the United States, urban and rural, 1945 and 1940

Installed cooking facilities	Total	Urban and rural nonfarm			Rural farm
		Total	Urban	Rural nonfarm
NUMBER
Total occupied dwelling units	37,600,000	31,281,000	23,748,000	7,533,000	6,319,000
With installed cooking facilities	35,878,000	30,022,000	22,842,000	7,180,000	5,856,000
No installed cooking facilities	1,722,000	1,259,000	906,000	353,000	463,000
PERCENT
Total occupied dwelling units	100.0	100.0	100.0	100.0	100.0
With installed cooking facilities	95.4	96.0	96.2	95.3	92.7
No installed cooking facilities	4.6	4.0	3.8	4.7	7.3

TABLE 10.—Occupied dwelling units, by size of household, for the United States, urban and rural, 1945 and 1940

Area and size of household	Estimated number		Increase, 1940 to 1945 [1]		Percent
	1945	1940	Number	Percent	1945	1940
UNITED STATES
Total occupied dwelling units	37,600,000	34,855,000	2,745,000	7.9	100.0	100.0
1 person	3,481,000	2,677,000	804,000	30.0	9.3	7.7
2 persons	10,529,000	8,630,000	1,899,000	22.0	28.0	24.8
3 persons	8,597,000	7,796,000	801,000	10.3	22.9	22.4
4 persons	6,817,000	6,325,000	492,000	7.8	18.1	18.1
5 persons	3,968,000	4,013,000	−45,000	−1.1	10.6	11.5
6 persons	2,044,000	2,360,000	−316,000	−13.4	5.4	6.8
7 persons	1,018,000	1,341,000	−323,000	−24.1	2.7	3.8
8 or more persons	1,146,000	1,713,000	−567,000	−33.1	3.0	4.9
Median number of persons	3.06	3.29
URBAN
Total occupied dwelling units	23,748,000	20,597,000	3,151,000	15.3	100.0	100.0
1 person	2,372,000	1,671,000	701,000	42.0	10.0	8.1
2 persons	7,076,000	5,441,000	1,635,000	30.0	29.8	26.4
3 persons	5,747,000	4,800,000	947,000	19.7	24.2	23.3
4 persons	4,279,000	3,801,000	478,000	12.6	18.0	18.5
5 persons	2,368,000	2,272,000	96,000	4.2	10.0	11.0
6 persons	1,064,000	1,233,000	−169,000	−13.7	4.5	6.0
7 persons	415,000	645,000	−230,000	−35.7	1.7	3.1
8 or more persons	427,000	734,000	−307,000	−41.8	1.8	3.6
Median number of persons	2.92	3.16
RURAL NONFARM
Total occupied dwelling units	7,533,000	7,151,000	382,000	5.3	100.0	100.0
1 person	786,000	645,000	141,000	21.9	10.4	9.0
2 persons	1,968,000	1,801,000	167,000	9.3	26.1	25.2
3 persons	1,583,000	1,583,000			21.0	22.1
4 persons	1,414,000	1,262,000	152,000	12.0	18.8	17.6
5 persons	830,000	794,000	36,000	4.5	11.0	11.1
6 persons	458,000	471,000	−13,000	−2.8	6.1	6.6
7 persons	257,000	267,000	−10,000	−3.7	3.4	3.7
8 or more persons	237,000	328,000	−91,000	−27.7	3.1	4.6
Median number of persons	3.14	3.21
RURAL FARM
Total occupied dwelling units	6,319,000	7,107,000	−788,000	−11.1	100.0	100.0
1 person	323,000	361,000	−38,000	−10.5	5.1	5.1
2 persons	1,485,000	1,388,000	97,000	7.0	23.5	19.5
3 persons	1,267,000	1,413,000	−146,000	−10.3	20.1	19.9
4 persons	1,124,000	1,262,000	−138,000	−10.9	17.8	17.8
5 persons	770,000	947,000	−177,000	−18.7	12.2	13.3
6 persons	522,000	656,000	−134,000	−20.4	8.3	9.2
7 persons	346,000	429,000	−83,000	−19.3	5.5	6.0
8 or more persons	482,000	651,000	−169,000	−26.0	7.6	9.2
Median number of persons	3.58	3.81

[1] A minus sign (−) denotes decrease.

TABLE 11.—Occupied dwelling units, by number of rooms, for the United States, urban and rural, 1945 and 1940

Area and number of rooms	Estimated number		Increase, 1940 to 1945 [1]		Percent
	1945	1940	Number	Percent	1945	1940
UNITED STATES
Total occupied dwelling units	37,600,000	34,855,000	2,745,000	7.9	100.0	100.0
1 room	610,000	1,156,000	−546,000	−47.2	1.6	3.3
2 rooms	2,330,000	2,905,000	−575,000	−19.8	6.2	8.3
3 rooms	5,416,000	4,929,000	487,000	9.9	14.4	14.1
4 rooms	7,402,000	6,477,000	925,000	14.3	19.7	18.6
5 rooms	8,815,000	7,014,000	1,801,000	25.7	23.4	20.1
6 rooms	6,976,000	6,132,000	844,000	13.8	18.6	17.6
7 rooms	2,968,000	2,792,000	176,000	6.3	7.9	8.0
8 or more rooms	3,083,000	3,450,000	−367,000	−10.6	8.2	9.9

[1] A minus sign (−) denotes decrease.

TABLE 11.—Occupied dwelling units, by number of rooms, for the United States, urban and rural, 1945 and 1940—Continued

Area and number of rooms	Estimated number		Increase, 1940 to 1945 [1]		Percent
	1945	1940	Number	Percent	1945	1940
UNITED STATES—continued
Median number of rooms	4.85	4.78
URBAN
Total occupied dwelling units	23,748,000	20,597,000	3,151,000	15.3	100.0	100.0
1 room	475,000	705,000	−230,000	−32.6	2.0	3.4
2 rooms	1,533,000	1,600,000	−67,000	−4.2	6.5	7.8
3 rooms	3,691,000	2,945,000	746,000	25.3	15.5	14.3
4 rooms	4,655,000	3,666,000	989,000	27.0	19.6	17.8
5 rooms	5,765,000	4,533,000	1,232,000	27.2	24.3	22.0
6 rooms	4,495,000	3,926,000	569,000	14.5	18.9	19.1
7 rooms	1,664,000	1,534,000	130,000	8.5	7.0	7.4
8 or more rooms	1,470,000	1,688,000	−218,000	−12.9	6.2	8.2
Median number of rooms	4.76	4.80
RURAL NONFARM
Total occupied dwelling units	7,533,000	7,151,000	382,000	5.3	100.0	100.0
1 room	85,000	289,000	−204,000	−70.6	1.1	4.0
2 rooms	476,000	688,000	−212,000	−30.8	6.3	9.6
3 rooms	931,000	964,000	−33,000	−3.4	12.4	13.5
4 rooms	1,409,000	1,389,000	20,000	1.4	18.7	19.4
5 rooms	1,808,000	1,375,000	433,000	31.5	24.0	19.2
6 rooms	1,393,000	1,168,000	225,000	19.3	18.5	16.3
7 rooms	735,000	595,000	140,000	23.5	9.8	8.3
8 or more rooms	696,000	683,000	13,000	1.9	9.2	9.6
Median number of rooms	4.98	4.68
RURAL FARM
Total occupied dwelling units	6,319,000	7,107,000	−788,000	−11.1	100.0	100.0
1 room	50,000	162,000	−112,000	−69.1	0.8	2.3
2 rooms	321,000	617,000	−296,000	−48.0	5.1	8.7
3 rooms	794,000	1,020,000	−226,000	−22.2	12.6	14.4
4 rooms	1,338,000	1,422,000	−84,000	−5.9	21.2	20.0
5 rooms	1,242,000	1,106,000	136,000	12.3	19.7	15.6
6 rooms	1,088,000	1,038,000	50,000	4.8	17.2	14.6
7 rooms	569,000	663,000	−94,000	−14.2	9.0	9.3
8 or more rooms	917,000	1,079,000	−162,000	−15.0	14.5	15.2
Median number of rooms	5.03	4.80

[1] A minus sign (−) denotes decrease.

TABLE 12.—Occupied dwelling units, by persons per room, for the United States, urban and rural, 1945 and 1940

Area and persons per room	Estimated number		Increase, 1940 to 1945 [1]		Percent
	1945	1940	Number	Percent	1945	1940
UNITED STATES
Total occupied dwelling units	37,600,000	34,855,000	2,745,000	7.9	100.0	100.0
0.50 or less	14,312,000	10,976,000	3,336,000	30.4	38.1	31.5
0.51 to 1.00	17,750,000	16,831,000	919,000	5.5	47.2	48.3
1.01 to 1.50	3,575,000	3,925,000	−350,000	−8.9	9.5	11.3
1.51 or more	1,963,000	3,123,000	−1,160,000	−37.1	5.2	9.0
URBAN
Total occupied dwelling units	23,748,000	20,597,000	3,151,000	15.3	100.0	100.0
0.50 or less	9,054,000	6,471,000	2,583,000	39.9	38.1	31.4
0.51 to 1.00	12,026,000	10,860,000	1,166,000	10.7	50.6	52.7
1.01 to 1.50	1,889,000	2,082,000	−193,000	−9.3	8.0	10.1
1.51 or more	779,000	1,184,000	−405,000	−34.2	3.3	5.7
RURAL NONFARM
Total occupied dwelling units	7,533,000	7,151,000	382,000	5.3	100.0	100.0
0.50 or less	3,055,000	2,417,000	638,000	26.4	40.6	33.8
0.51 to 1.00	3,171,000	3,112,000	59,000	1.9	42.1	43.5
1.01 to 1.50	823,000	826,000	−3,000	−0.4	11.0	11.6
1.51 or more	484,000	796,000	−312,000	−39.2	6.4	11.1
RURAL FARM
Total occupied dwelling units	6,319,000	7,107,000	−788,000	−11.1	100.0	100.0
0.50 or less	2,203,000	2,088,000	115,000	5.5	34.9	29.4
0.51 to 1.00	2,553,000	2,859,000	−306,000	−10.7	40.4	40.2
1.01 to 1.50	863,000	1,017,000	−154,000	−15.1	13.7	14.3
1.51 or more	700,000	1,143,000	−443,000	−38.8	11.1	16.1

[1] A minus sign (−) denotes decrease.

TABLE 13.—Tenant-occupied dwelling units, by contract monthly rent, for the United States, urban and rural nonfarm, 1945 and 1940

Area and contract monthly rent	Estimated number		Increase, 1940 to 1945 [1]		Percent
	1945	1940	Number	Percent	1945	1940
URBAN AND RURAL NONFARM
Tenant-occupied dwelling units	15,403,000	16,335,000	−932,000	−5.7	100.0	100.0
Under $5	251,000	900,000	−649,000	−72.1	1.6	5.5
$5 to $9	991,000	1,962,000	−971,000	−49.5	6.4	12.0
$10 to $14	1,518,000	2,305,000	−787,000	−34.1	9.9	14.1
$15 to $19	1,790,000	2,238,000	−448,000	−20.0	11.6	13.7
$20 to $24	1,812,000	2,031,000	−219,000	−10.8	11.8	12.4
$25 to $29	1,979,000	1,854,000	125,000	6.7	12.8	11.3
$30 to $39	3,488,000	2,546,000	942,000	37.0	22.6	15.6
$40 to $49	2,066,000	1,310,000	756,000	57.7	13.4	8.0
$50 or more	1,508,000	1,189,000	319,000	26.8	9.8	7.3
Median monthly rent (dollars)	27.88	21.38
URBAN
Tenant-occupied dwelling units	12,701,000	12,882,000	−181,000	−1.4	100.0	100.0
Under $5	74,000	249,000	−175,000	−70.3	0.6	1.9
$5 to $9	453,000	970,000	−517,000	−53.3	3.6	7.5
$10 to $14	975,000	1,588,000	−613,000	−38.6	7.7	12.3
$15 to $19	1,327,000	1,813,000	−486,000	−26.8	10.4	14.1
$20 to $24	1,529,000	1,787,000	−258,000	−14.4	12.0	13.9
$25 to $29	1,755,000	1,675,000	80,000	4.8	13.8	13.0
$30 to $39	3,180,000	2,402,000	778,600	32.4	25.0	18.6
$40 to $49	1,965,000	1,262,000	703,000	55.7	15.5	9.8
$50 or more	1,443,000	1,136,000	307,000	27.0	11.4	8.8
Median monthly rent (dollars)	30.25	24.60
RURAL NONFARM
Tenant-occupied dwelling units	2,702,000	3,453,000	−751,000	−21.7	100.0	100.0
Under $5	177,000	651,000	−474,000	−72.8	6.6	18.9
$5 to $9	538,000	992,000	−454,000	−45.8	19.9	28.7
$10 to $14	543,000	717,000	−174,000	−24.3	20.1	20.8
$15 to $19	463,000	425,000	38,000	8.9	17.1	12.3
$20 to $24	283,000	244,000	39,000	16.0	10.5	7.1
$25 to $29	224,000	179,000	45,000	25.1	8.3	5.2
$30 to $39	308,000	144,000	164,000	113.9	11.4	4.2
$40 to $49	101,000	48,000	53,000	110.4	3.7	1.4
$50 or more	65,000	53,000	12,000	22.6	2.4	1.5
Median monthly rent (dollars)	15.50	10.08

[1] A minus sign (−) denotes decrease.

VACANCY IN DWELLING UNITS IN THE UNITED STATES, 1945

Only 803,000 of the 2,981,000 unoccupied dwelling units in November 1945, or 2 percent of all dwelling units in the United States, were on the sale or rental market, according to estimates released today by Director J. C. Capt, of the Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. In urban areas the proportion was even lower; 252,000 units, or 1 percent of all units in urban areas, being available for rent or sale. On the other hand, rural nonfarm areas had 464,000 units, or 4.8 percent, on the sale or rental market.

The 803,000 vacancies which were on the market accounted for less than three-eighths of the Nation's 2,981,000 unoccupied dwelling units. Among the others there were 209,000 turn-over vacancies—that is, dwelling units which had already been sold or rented but were not yet occupied. These turn-over vacancies represent 0.5 percent of all dwelling units. Such vacancies were somewhat higher in rural nonfarm areas, 0.9 percent (86,000 units).

In addition, a substantial number of units—1,309,000, or 3.2 percent of all dwelling units—were being held off the market. Such units were held for absent household, awaiting demolition, held in litigation, or undergoing extensive repairs. Over half of these vacancies, however, were seasonal units, such as summer homes, cabins, and lodges. In urban areas 0.5 percent of the dwelling units (117,000 units) were being held off the market. In rural farm areas these vacanies amounted to 1.8 percent (115,000 units). In rural nonfarm areas 11.7 percent of the dwelling units (1,077,000 units) were in this group.

In addition to the habitable vacant units, 1.6 percent of all United States dwelling units (660,000 units) were vacant but not considered habitable. Again rural nonfarm areas had a higher percentage—5.3 percent (514,000 units).

A combined figure for all types of habitable vacancies—those on the sale or rental market, turn-over vacancies, and those held off the market—amounts to 5.7 percent of all United States dwelling units (2,321,000 units). A subdivision of this gross habitable-vacancy rate shows 1.9 percent (470,000 units) in urban areas, 3.4 percent (222,000 units) in rural farm areas, and 16.8 percent (1,629,000 units) in rural nonfarm areas.

The average size of such habitable vacancies was 3.6 rooms and only about 1 in 3 had all the following standard facilities—electric light, running water, private flush toilet, and private bath. The greatest proportion of habitable unoccupied units having all such standard facilities was in urban areas where about two-thirds were in this group. The lowest proportion, of course, occurred in rural farm areas.

About 40 percent of the habitable-vacant units did not have running water in the unit. Also, 1 out of 5 habitable vacancies was in need of major repairs. Three-tenths of the total habitable units were rental units and had an average (median) monthly rental of $16.53. The median rental for this type of vacancy was greatest in urban areas ($26.91) and only $9.65 in rural nonfarm areas.

For this report, the urban and rural areas are those that were classified as urban or rural in 1940 on the basis of the results of the 1940 census. The classification of rural population by farm and nonfarm residence is based on the residence at the time of enumeration. Thus, the 1945 rural farm population is the population living on farms in 1945 in areas that were classified as rural in 1940.

Source and reliability of estimates: These estimates were obtained as a supplement to the Monthly Report on the Labor Force for November 1945. The Monthly Report on the Labor Force is a sample survey which is conducted each month in order to obtain information on labor supply, employment, and other characteristics of the population. The sample is distributed in 68 areas, each area comprising one or more counties. These areas are located in 42 States and the District of Columbia. Approximately 20,000 households were included in the housing inquiry.

Since the estimates are based on a sample, they are subject to error due to sampling variability. The following table gives approximate measures of the reliability of the estimates. The measures of reliability are shown for several different sizes of numbers:

Size of estimate	Difference between the estimate and the number that would have been obtained from a complete census
	Chances are about 2 in 3 that the difference would be less than the figure in this column	Chances are about 19 in 20 that the difference would be less than the figure in this column
100,000	40,000	75,000
300,000	60,000	115,000
500,000	90,000	180,000
1,000,000	135,000	270,000
2,500,000	195,000	390,000

The sampling error of any percentage shown depends not only on the value of the percent but also on the size of base on which the percentage is determined. For example, the estimate of habitable unoccupied dwelling units in the urban and rural nonfarm areas in the United States in November, 1945, is 6.2 percent. The chances are 19 out of 20 that the rate obtained by a complete census would have been between 5.3 and 7.1 percent. The estimate of not habitable unoccupied dwelling units in the rural nonfarm areas in the United States in November, 1945, is 5.3 percent. The chances are 19 out of 20 that the rate which would have been obtained by a complete census would have been between 3.7 and 6.9 percent. Since the latter percent (5.3) has a considerably smaller base it is less reliable than the percent (6.2) based on all urban and rural nonfarm dwelling units. For percentages based on the total number of dwelling units in the United States, the urban and rural nonfarm, urban, rural nonfarm and rural farm areas, the table below indicates the reliability for several different sizes of estimated percentages:

Size of estimated percentage	Chances are about 19 in 20 that the absolute percent difference between the estimated percentage and the percentage which would have been obtained from a complete census would not exceed—
	United States	Urban and rural, nonfarm	Urban	Rural, nonfarm	Rural, farm
1	0.4	0.4	0.5	0.8	1.0
5	.9	.9	1.1	1.6	2.0
10	1.0	1.2	1.6	2.6	3.1

The measures of reliability given in these tables are only approximate. They are intended as indications of the general level of sampling reliability of the estimates. In addition to sampling variations, the estimates are subject to errors of response, but the possibilities of such errors are not included in these measures of reliability.

The estimates are presented in thousands of dwelling units, not because they are assumed to be accurate to thousands of dwelling units but for convenience in summation.

Vacancy and occupancy in privately and publicly financed dwelling units in the United States, 1945

Subject	United States	Urban and rural, nonfarm			Rural, farm
		Total	Urban	Rural, nonfarm
NUMBER
Total dwelling units	40,581,000	34,014,000	24,338,000	9,676,000	6,567,000
Occupied	37,600,000	31,281,000	23,748,000	7,533,000	6,319,000
Unoccupied	2,981,000	2,733,000	590,000	2,143,000	248,000
Habitable [1]	2,321,000	2,099,000	470,000	1,629,000	222,000
Rental	810,000	725,000	288,000	437,000	85,000
Available for rent	701,000	622,000	223,000	399,000	79,000
Rented, not yet occupied	109,000	103,000	65,000	38,000	6,000
Sale	202,000	180,000	65,000	115,000	22,000
For sale only	102,000	94,000	29,000	65,000	8,000
Sold, not yet occupied	100,000	86,000	36,000	50,000	14,000
Other [2]	1,309,000	1,194,000	117,000	1,077,000	115,000
Not habitable [1]	660,000	634,000	120,000	514,000	26,000
PERCENT
Total dwelling units	100.0	100.0	100.0	100.0	100.0
Occupied	92.7	92.0	97.6	77.9	96.2
Unoccupied	7.3	8.0	2.4	22.1	3.8
Habitable [1]	5.7	6.2	1.9	16.8	3.4
Rental	2.0	2.1	1.2	4.5	1.3
Available for rent	1.7	1.8	.9	4.1	1.2
Rented, not yet occupied	.3	.3	.3	.4	.1
Sale	.5	.5	.3	1.2	.3
For sale only	.3	.3	.1	.7	.1
Sold, not yet occupied	.2	.3	.1	.5	.2
Other [2]	3.2	3.5	.5	11.1	1.8
Not habitable [1]	1.6	1.9	.5	5.3	.4
SIZE, RENT, AND FACILITIES OF HABITABLE UNOCCUPIED UNITS
Average (median) size of habitable vacancies (rooms)	3.6	3.6	3.7	3.6	3.9
Average (median) monthly rent of habitable rental vacancies	$16.53	$18.77	$26.91	$9.65	$6.43
Proportion of habitable vacancies having all standard facilities (percent)	31.4	33.6	64.7	24.6	10.4

[1] Included as habitable are units in good condition or in need of minor repairs, also those in need of major repairs which are in no worse condition than similar occupied units in the same neighborhood. Included as not habitable are units in need of major repairs where similar units in the same neighborhood are not occupied, as well as units unfit for human habitation.

[2] Other vacancies include units held off the sale or rental market, such as units held for absent households, units to be demolished, units in litigation, units undergoing extensive repairs, etc.

APPOINTMENT OF ROBERT SPRAGUE BEIGHTLER AS PERMANENT BRIGADIER GENERAL IN THE ARMY

Mr. HUFFMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Senate bill 2480, a bill authorizing the appointment of Robert Sprague Beightler as permanent brigadier general of the line of the Regular Army. The bill was favorably reported by the Committee on Military Affairs.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be stated by title for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (S. 2480) authorizing the appointment of Robert Sprague Beightler as permanent brigadier general of the line of the Regular Army.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, I suggest to the distinguished Senator that there is a general understanding among some of us that in view of the shortness of time before the conclusion of the session the situation demands that as few matters as possible be brought up out of order. I shall object, at least temporarily. I may be able to withdraw the objection a little later.

Mr. HUFFMAN. Let me say to the Senator that this appointment is very unusual. It has been suggested by General Eisenhower. The case has been sent here by the President for the purpose of special legislation. It so happens that Maj. Gen. Robert Sprague Beightler is the only National Guard officer who led his division throughout the war. He made a wonderful record, leading the "Fighting Thirty-seventh" of Ohio at Bougainville, New Georgia, and Luzon, and racing with the First Cavalry for the capture of Manila. I think it will be found that both organizations arrived there about the same time.

With that wonderful record, and with the President of the United States and General Eisenhower supporting him, I think we should move immediately to pass the bill in order that it may go to the House before the session ends and be acted upon there, so that the President may send the nomination to the Senate for confirmation.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, I take it that this bill deals with a single officer.

Mr. HUFFMAN. That is correct.

Mr. WHITE. The Senator is now asking for consideration of the bill because of the anticipated end of the Congress within the next 2 or 3 days.

Mr. HUFFMAN. That is correct.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, I will say to the distinguished Senator that I hope to be able to withdraw the objection very shortly, but I must interpose it at this time. As soon as I can make inquiry I hope to be able to withdraw the objection. Certainly the objection does not go to any substantive question involving the propriety of the promotion, which is wholly deserved. I hope to be able to withdraw the objection after I have had an opportunity to look into the matter.

Mr. HUFFMAN. I shall appreciate it if the Senator will make an investigation as soon as possible.

Mr. CORDON subsequently said: Mr. President, I am happy to be able to say to the distinguished Senator from Ohio that I now withdraw my objection to his request.

Mr. HUFFMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the bill (S. 2480) authorizing the appointment of Robert Sprague Beightler as permanent brigadier general of the line of the Regular Army was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, notwithstanding any other provision of law, the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, is authorized to appoint as permanent brigadier general of the line of the Regular Army, Robert Sprague Beightler, presently serving in the grade of major general in the National Guard of the United States, Army of the United States.

SEC. 2. Any person appointed pursuant to the provisions of the first section of this act shall be counted for the purposes of provisions of law establishing the authorized number of brigadier generals of the line of the Regular Army.

AMENDMENT OF INTERSTATE COMMERCE ACT WITH RESPECT TO AGREEMENTS BETWEEN CARRIERS

The Senate resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. REED that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 2536) to amend the Interstate Commerce Act with respect to certain agreements between carriers.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, with respect to the motion now pending to consider House bill 2536, let me say that I have listened to the discussion of the motion by the able Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY], the able Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL], and the able Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL]. I have stood up on this floor and have, as in the tidewater case and in the insurance case and in other cases, opposed any attempt by the Senate or the National Legislature, to try to stop a criminal action or prosecution or any other action in the lower courts or in the Supreme Court of the United States. If I thought for one moment that the bill now under consideration was an attempt to stifle not only the prosecution of a pending case in the Supreme Court or the prosecution of the case in the State of Nebraska or any other State, I would be against the Senate considering the bill, and against the bill itself. I do not believe we should stop such litigation. I am not passing upon the facts, because I do not have them, but, as I understand, the litigation is based upon a charge of conspiracy. It is based upon conduct by railroads which was alleged to be such as to be in violation of the laws of the land. Every such violation should be prosecuted to the full extent. And I want to say, Mr. President, that in the past we have had only lip service from those in charge in the Department of Justice respecting prosecution of monopolies and of cartels. Oh, yes; we have had prosecutions against some 200 firms, but in those prosecutions settlements were made. There was no real determination shown to stamp out monopolies. No one was ever sent to prison, no one was prosecuted with the determination that if guilty they be found guilty in those cases, but settlements were made. Now we find that there is opposition even to bringing this bill on the floor. There is objection to bringing the bill to a vote by the Senate on the ground that it would interfere with or stop a prosecution in the Supreme Court.

Mr. President, I have tried to analyze the bill, and I find nothing in it at all which would in any way stifle or interfere with the litigation now before the Supreme Court, or would in any way interfere with a prosecution for conspiracy or violation of law in the past.

Mr. President, what does the bill attempt to do? It attempts to legalize certain activities on the part of the railroads in a certain field. There is nothing in the bill that would allow a conspiracy by railroads to avoid air conditioning railroad cars, as was suggested by the able Senator from West Virginia [Mr. KILGORE]. There is nothing in the bill that would allow any kind of conspiracy. If we look at the bottom of page 2, we will find what the agency or rate bureau may do.

The Commission shall approve such agreement if it finds that—

The object of the agreement is appropriate for the proper performance by the carriers of service to the public, that the agreement will not unduly restrain competition, and that it is consistent with the public interest as declared by Congress in the national transportation policy set forth in the act; otherwise the application shall be denied. The approval of the Commission shall be granted only upon such terms and conditions as the Commission may prescribe as necessary to ensure compliance with the standards above set forth in this paragraph.

Continuing—

(3) Each conference, bureau, committee, or other organization established or continued pursuant to any agreement approved by the Commission under the provisions of this section shall maintain such accounts, records, files, and memoranda and shall submit such reports as may be prescribed by the Commission, and all such accounts, records, files, and memoranda shall be subject to inspection by the Commission or its duly authorized representatives.

What we have attempted to stop in the past has been conspiracies by the railroads or by industries in the dark and among themselves. Here we are saying that these agreements, before they become effective, must first be passed upon by a body which we as Congress have established, and which has been in existence for many years, namely, the Interstate Commerce Commission. We say that all the records, accounts, and information surrounding the agreement must be submitted to the Interstate Commerce Commission. If this were an attempt to authorize monopoly, not only would I not defend it on the floor, but I would oppose it with all the resources at my command, because I do not believe in monopoly. As I read the bill, it does not promote monopoly, because the Interstate Commerce Commission, the instrumentality which we have created to search out and ascertain whether or not there is monopoly, or whether there is undue restraint of trade, and whether there has been a violation of law, will function in the future as it has functioned in the past. This is merely a permission for the railroads to submit to the Interstate Commerce Commission what they believe would be a proper rate or regulation. The railroads cannot act under it until after the Interstate Commerce Commission, the instrumentality of the United States Government, approves it.

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield.

Mr. HAWKES. I agree with everything the Senator has said. I should like to add to what he has said the fact that any agreement which the Interstate Commerce Commission approves may be disapproved and canceled at any time by the Commission.

I should like to add further that under this bill the Department of Justice would have the right to go to the Interstate Commerce Commission and make a complaint, setting forth the reasons why it believes that any agreement which is being approved, or is about to be approved, or has been approved, is not in the interest of the public.

Further, I should like to say to the Senator that what we are trying to do by this bill is exactly the same thing as has been done in the case of the Civil Aeronautics Board, which is authorized to approve agreements between air carriers affecting air transportation when such agreements are found to be not inconsistent with the public interest and the air carriers are relieved from the antitrust laws with respect to carrying out of agreements so approved. I merely wished to add that to what the Senator has said.

Mr. FERGUSON. I thank the able Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. President, I rose merely to express myself on the pending motion, because after an analysis of the bill I believe that the construction placed upon it by the able Senator from Kentucky is not in accordance with the terms of the bill. It does not interfere with the prosecution of the case in the Supreme Court, or any other case arising in the past. I should like to hear full argument on the bill. I am speaking now merely on the question as to what the bill does in relation to the Supreme Court case, or any other violations of law occurring up to the present time.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield.

Mr. CORDON. I should like to inquire of the distinguished Senator whether the statement of national transportation policy, as it appears in the 1940 Transportation Act, has been placed in the RECORD today. Does the Senator know that has been done?

Mr. FERGUSON. I cannot advise the able Senator from Oregon as to that.

Mr. CORDON. Then I should like to ask another question. Of course, the Senator from Michigan is familiar with that declaration of law, as it appears in the Transportation Act of 1940. There it is but a statement of policy. However, is the Senator in agreement with the position I take, namely, that that statement of policy will very definitely become the law if the pending bill is enacted in that it represents both an authority and a limitation upon authority, insofar as the agreements provided for in the present bill are concerned?

In other words, the language to which I refer is to be found in the bill at the bottom of page 2. The statement is that any agreement must be "appropriate for the proper performance by the carriers of service to the public, that the agreement will not unduly restrain competition, and that it is consistent with the public interest as declared by Congress in the national transportation policy set forth in this act."

So I take the position that when this bill refers to that statement of policy and requires any agreement which may be made to be consistent with it, it then breathes the authority and the certainty of law itself into that declaration of policy, and requires such agreements to conform therewith.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, I think that is a correct analysis and statement of this bill.

Mr. CORDON. Then, I suggest that perhaps the Senator from Michigan might insert that statement as a part of his argument, because it is so pertinent to it.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, as part of my statement, I ask, then, to have inserted in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks the statement appearing on page 2 of the Interstate Commerce Act. The statement is entitled "National Transportation Policy," and it follows the provision that:

This act may be cited as the Interstate Commerce Act.

Mr. President, the measure we are now considering proposes to amend the Interstate Commerce Act with respect to certain agreements between carriers, and the bill begins with the following words:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, is amended by adding after section 5 thereof a new section as follows.

The provision beginning in line 25, on page 2, and ending in line 1, on page 3, namely, "as declared by Congress in the national transportation policy set forth in this act," would relate not only to the amendment to the act but to the act itself; and, therefore, the national transportation policy set forth in the act would be the one that would be meant—not only the one set forth in the amendment, but the one set forth in the original act itself.

The national transportation policy reads as follows:

NATIONAL TRANSPORTATION POLICY

It is hereby declared to be the national transportation policy of the Congress to provide for fair and impartial regulation of all modes of transportation subject to the provisions of this act, so administered as to recognize and preserve the inherent advantages of each; to promote safe, adequate, economical, and efficient service and foster sound economic conditions in transportation and among the several carriers; to encourage the establishment and maintenance of reasonable charges for transportation services, without unjust discriminations, undue preferences or advantages, or unfair or destructive competitive practices; to cooperate with the several States and the duly authorized officials thereof; and to encourage fair wages and equitable working conditions;—all to the end of developing, coordinating, and preserving a national transportation system by water, highway, and rail, as well as other means, adequate to meet the needs of the commerce of the United States, of the Postal Service, and of the national defense. All of the provisions of this act shall be administered and enforced with a view to carrying out the above declaration of policy.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I am sure that the distinguished Senator from Michigan, for whom I have the greatest admiration, would not knowingly make a statement which was not absolutely accurate. A moment ago he stated that no one had been sent to jail for violation of the antitrust laws. I wish to say that that statement is correct so far as it pertains to Attorneys General before the present Attorney General took office. I may add that several months ago I felt exactly as the Senator from Michigan now feels.

Therefore, I made an investigation. During the course of that investigation I wrote to the present Attorney General of the United States. He furnished me with a list of individuals who have been sent to jail, as well as a list of corporations which have been fined, since he has taken office. I am sure the distinguished Senator from Michigan was not aware of that fact when he made his statement a few minutes ago, for I am sure he would not knowingly make an incorrect statement.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, I thank the able Senator from North Dakota for giving me that information, because not so long ago I discussed this very question with him, and I think we agreed that no one had been sent to jail on that account. I wish that at some time the able Senator from North Dakota would insert in the RECORD the names of those who are in the category he has mentioned, those who have been sent to jail under the present Attorney General.

Let me say to the Senator from North Dakota that I am, indeed, delighted that he has called this matter to my attention, and I am also glad to hear that there is a different policy at this time in the Attorney General's office. I thank the Senator again for correcting the statement, because I would not knowingly allow an inaccurate statement to remain in the RECORD.

LYNCHING IN GEORGIA

Mr. KNOWLAND. The Constitution of the United States, in article IV, section 2, provides that—

The citizens of each State shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States.

The fourteenth amendment to the Constitution provides that—

Nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law.

In the last few days the newspapers have carried a story, originating in the State of Georgia, relative to the lynching of four American citizens. I feel sure that the local authorities in that State will use the full power of their authority to bring to swift justice those who have participated in this murder of American citizens.

Mr. President, I shall ask unanimous consent to have printed at this point in the RECORD an Associated Press article, appearing in today's edition of the New York Herald Tribune, relative to the cold-blooded killing in the countryside, by a mob of unmasked men, of four Negro citizens, one of whom was a former soldier of the Army of the United States. Mr. President, regardless of the color of his skin, he had been a soldier in the Army of the United States. He and his fellow citizens were entitled to the full protection of all the laws of any State of the Union and the full protection of the Government of the United States.

Mr. President, nothing that we can do here today can bring back the lives of those people. But by what we do here today we can show, or at least speak out and say that such things must not continue in the United States of America.

Mr. President, I am pleased to note that the Attorney General has declared that the full power of the Department of Justice will immediately be brought into play, and that the officers of the Government of the United States will cooperate with the local law-enforcement officers of the State of Georgia in bringing to justice at an early date those who participated in that crime. As one Member of the Senate, I wish to say that I hope the Department of Justice, as represented by the Attorney General of the United States, will bring the full power of his office, including the full power of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, into play, because this is not merely a blot upon the escutcheon of a single local area, but this and this sort of thing is a blot upon the entire United States of America.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, reserving the right to object to the request the Senator has made, I should like to see the article which the Senator wishes to have printed in the RECORD. If the article is an attack upon Gene Talmadge, similar to the one made in an article appearing in the newspaper PM today, I shall certainly object to having it printed in the RECORD. The article in PM is entirely unfair. It blames Gene Talmadge for the shooting of those four Negroes. As a matter of fact, Gene Talmadge was in the State of California when that shooting occurred. He was not even in the State of Georgia at the time.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, let me say that, so far as I have been able to ascertain, the article makes no mention of Gene Talmadge. It is an Associated Press article, and it does not attempt to place the blame for the lynching which occurred.

Mr. LANGER. Then I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Herald Tribune of July 27, 1946]

TWO NEGROES AND WIVES LYNCHED; GEORGIA INQUIRY BEGUN BY UNITED STATES—UNMASKED MOB TAKES FOUR FROM AUTO OF WHITE FARMER WHO HAD GONE BAIL FOR ONE IN STABBING OF WHITE EMPLOYER; CASE PUT IN FBI'S HANDS

MONROE, GA., July 26.—The massacre of two young Negro farmhands and their wives late yesterday by an armed and unmasked band of white men brought the promise of a Federal investigation on its revelation today.

The details of the multiple lynching were told today by Loy Harrison, a well-to-do white farmer who was taking the Negroes to his farm and was held at gun-point by the mob.

Harrison had come to Monroe to get Roger Malcolm, 27-year-old Negro, for whom he made bond on a charge that the Negro had stabbed his farmer-employer, another white man. Malcolm was accompanied by the three other Negroes, Malcolm's wife and George Dorsey and his wife.

Harrison and the four Negroes were en route back home in a car when they were waylaid by the mob of 20 men. The mob's questioning indicated they were seeking Malcolm. There was no indication why they also took Dorsey out for execution. The women, sisters, were killed because one of them recognized a member of the mob.

Harrison said in his statement today that the band, led by a "tall, dignified-looking white man," lined the Negroes up four abreast, and then to the count of "one, two, three" by the leader, three volleys were fired into the quartet.

"I didn't have anything but a pocket knife," Harrison related. "What could I do?"

Harrison said: "Most of the men were dressed in khaki clothes, just like me. The leader looked like a retired businessman. He was about 65, wore a brown suit, and had on a big, broad-brimmed hat. He looked as if he had a good Florida sun tan."

Sheriff E. S. Gordon said that, since Harrison could not identify any member of the band, he had gone as far as he could with his investigation. He called in State police.

FBI TO MAKE INQUIRY

Word of the massacre, which occurred about 8 miles from here, 40 miles from Atlanta, did not "leak out" until today. A few hours after it did, Attorney General Tom Clark's office in Washington announced that a "complete investigation" had been ordered. The announcement from Washington said that the Federal Bureau of Investigation would carry out the inquiry for the civil rights section of the Department.

The lynching was the first in the Nation in nearly a year, and was the first multiple lynching since two 14-year-old Negro boys charged with attempted rape were hanged by a Mississippi mob in October 1942.

It was the first lynching of more than one person in Georgia since 1918. Ten Negroes were lynched in Brooks County then. There have been nine instances of multiple lynchings in the State since 1892.

Lynchings have declined steadily in the last decade. Last year, only one lynching was listed by Tuskegee Institute, and it was disputed whether the act, which occurred in Florida, was actually a lynching.

RECORD IN 1892

In 1933 there were 28 lynchings in 11 States. By 1939 there were only 3 lynchings in 2 States. In 1940 the figure rose to 5, but it dropped to 4 in 1941. In 1942 there were 5 again, in 1943 3 and in 1944 2.

Lynchings have taken a sharp downward curve in the last half century. The all-time high was in 1892, when 231 were recorded, according to the figures of the Southern Regional Council in Atlanta.

The slaughter of the four Negroes near here came as the aftermath of the stabbing of Barney Hester, 22, on July 14. Hester is still in a hospital here. Malcolm had just been released from jail under $600 bond on charges of stabbing Hester.

Dorsey's mother, Monia Williams, said that her son had just been discharged from the service after 5 years in the Army, including duty in Australia and North Africa. She received his discharge button in the mail this week, she added.

Both the young couples, she said, had married recently.

Harrison was the only witness to testify last night at the inquest, which resulted in a verdict of death at the hands of unknown parties. He testified to these details:

With the Negroes in his car, he came to a wooden bridge spanning a river which divides Walton and Oconee Counties. An automobile across the road blocked his passage.

He stopped. Another car drove in behind him, then another and another. A man who apparently assumed the role of leader of the mob, armed with rifles and shotguns, walked up and said: "We want Roger."

Harrison answered: "That's not Roger. That's George."

Another mobster put a gun to Harrison neck, and the leader said: "This is our party. You keep out of it. We ought to kill you, too."

The Negro men were dragged out of the car and bound with ropes and marched off.

Harrison said that the women nearly escaped the purpose of the mob.

RECOGNIZED BY WOMAN

The women first were held at the automobile. Then a member of the mob said one of the Negro women had recognized him.

"Get those damned women, too," the mob leader shouted.

Several of the men came back and dragged the shrieking women from the automobile. A few moments later Harrison heard shots—many of them. The mob dispersed.

The nearest house to the scene was a mile and a half away. Harrison made his way 2 miles to a country store and called the Sheriff. The Sheriff came, and they found the bodies in the bushes.

The hands of the two Negro men were bound behind them. The hands of the women were free. The upper parts of the bodies were scarcely recognizable because of the mass of bullet holes.

ONE SHOT IN BACK

One of the Negroes was shot in the back, and W. T. Brown, coroner, said that this indicated some member of the mob had fired at him after he fell from the first fusillade.

The coroner said that at least 60 bullets had been pumped into the bodies.

Harrison left his stone house on his big farm and accompanied newsmen and officers today to the scene on the banks of the Appalachee River, where he gave this account:

"I was on my way back home. I'd made bond for one of the Negroes—Roger Malcom. We came to the bridge across the river, and I looked across and saw a car blocking the other end of the bridge.

"I thought to myself, 'Federal men.'

"Then from both sides of the car men commenced coming out from the side. A car came up behind me, and his bumper touched mine. One of the men came out, put a shotgun against the back of my head and said, 'All of you put 'em up.'

MEN ARE BOUND

"One man said, 'There's the man we want'—pointing to Roger.

'Some of the men in the group then went to the two Negro men and slipped ropes around their hands—expert like, pretty like.

"They then pulled the two Negro men from the car and started leading 'em off.

"Then one of the Negro women commenced cussing like everything and called out one of the men's name whom she evidently recognized. When she did that, the leader of the group who was leading the two men away said, 'Hold everything,' selected four men and said, 'Go back and get them.'

"They then told me to get out by my car. They pulled the women out of the car, and I stood beside it while a little short man stood at the end of the bridge and looked down the barrel of his shotgun at me all the time.

"One of the men asked, 'You recognize anybody here?' I replied, 'No.'

"I'd turn my head sideways and I could see the men line 'em up. I could see the Negroes four abreast. I could see the back of the men's heads. I heard the leader of the group say, 'One, two, three,' and then boom. He did that three times. There were three volleys.

"They told me then to get back in the car. I did, and they told me I could turn my car around and go when I wanted to. I did turn around and I looked up in the car mirror and saw 'em going two by two across the bridge.

"I then went to the phone and called the sheriff."

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, no Member of the Senate deplores for a moment more than I do the murders which are said to have been recently committed in my State. According to the accounts printed in some of the newspapers, the murder to which the Senator from California adverted, was a brutal crime. I know the people of Walton County in the State of Georgia. Walton County is the county in which this crime is said to have taken place. The people of that county are law abiding and upright, and would be as much opposed to any murder as would the people of any other county in this country. There are no better people than the people of Walton County. I have no doubt that the State authorities of Georgia will prosecute to the full extent of their powers any person who may be charged with the commission of that crime.

I may say, Mr. President, murders of all kinds are often committed in other States, sometimes by more than two or three persons. I frequently read about them in the daily press. There is no element of politics in these crimes unless they involve a difference in races and happen in the South. There seems to be an effort to make political capital out of crimes in which Negroes are the victims if they are committed in the South and we hear a clamor for Federal intervention which is never raised in the case of similar crimes committed in other sections of the country.

Mr. President, I am conscious of my rights, but I did not object to the Senator from California inserting an article from a newspaper in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. I shall not object to the insertion of other articles. But, Mr. President, I may say that crimes of the nature to which the article refers, as well as other crimes, are not confined to the State of Georgia. Almost every newspaper that we read has in it an account of some brutal murder or some terrible crime which has been committed by one or more persons. If I were to peruse the newspapers of California I doubt not that I could find in them accounts of crimes of unspeakable brutality, including crimes of murder, which had been committed by certain citizens of that State.

If a custom is to be established in the Senate of singling out States and holding them up to criticism before law enforcement officers of those States have had an opportunity to act, I shall adopt the policy of placing in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD newspaper accounts which refer to crimes committed in other States of the Union.

I repeat, Mr. President, that I deplore the crime to which the Senator has referred, more than does he. I deplore it especially because it was committed in my State. But in the future I shall exercise the right of calling attention, through the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, to other crimes of equal brutality which occur in other States of the Union.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, I may say to my able colleague from Georgia, for whom I have the highest respect, that if an occurrence such as that which took place in Georgia should happen in the State of California, the junior Senator from California will be the first to call the attention of the Senate to the crime and will ask for the same kind of an investigation as that which has been requested in connection with the crime which was committed in Georgia.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I recall that a few years ago two persons in the State of California were bound with ropes around their necks and were thrown off a bridge in or near a great city of that State while a crowd of thousands applauded the lynching. I do not recall that a Senator from California called the attention of the Senate to any newspaper articles concerning the matter at the time, or asked that any of those newspaper articles be placed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD or demanded action by the Attorney General.

Mr. KNOWLAND. The Senator from California was not a Member of the Senate at that time.

Mr. EASTLAND. Mr. President, I desire to concur in everything which the Senator from Georgia has said. I may state further that the crime record of the State of Georgia will compare very favorably with the crime record of the State of California.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, I wish to endorse everything the Senator from Georgia has said with regard to the very sad occurrence which took place recently within his State. At the same time, I wish to make very clear for the RECORD that in my State, South Carolina, there has not been a lynching for more than 20 years. That fact indicates how the people of my State feel in regard to matters of this kind. But I resent a Member of the Senate putting into the RECORD articles of any kind which reflect discredit upon another State. I have heard of crimes which have been committed in a great many States of the Union, and if I should begin to put into the RECORD newspaper accounts of every brutal crime which is committed from time to time, I fear that the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD would be filled up entirely not with speeches of Senators, but with news articles concerning the commission of crimes.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, it is quite interesting to note, in connection with the statements which are now being made, that in spite of many heinous crimes which have been committed in the city of Washington, D. C., and in other places, crimes which involved various races, and crimes which, in some cases, involved white women being raped and murdered by Negro men, persons who are so very interested in the enforcement of the law did not feel themselves called upon to ask that newspaper articles concerning such crimes be placed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. We can fill the RECORD daily with news accounts of crimes if we desire, but Mr. President, when we do many of the most heinous will be recorded from other sections of the Nation, rather than having occurred in some State in the South.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, if my memory serves me correctly, and if we consider for a moment some of the crimes which have taken place in Hollywood, Calif., we will come to the conclusion that many newspaper articles concerning those crimes could also be placed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. However, I hope that we will not follow the precedent which has been set by the Senator from California and proceed to put into the RECORD newspaper articles concerning crimes which take place all over the United States.

Mr. President, if the Senate were to enforce its rule XIX, the article which the Senator from California has inserted in the RECORD would not have been inserted. I read into the RECORD paragraph 3 of rule XIX:

> No Senator in debate shall refer offensively to any State of the Union.

I am willing to allow the Senate to judge whether the article to which the Senator from California referred reflects on a State. I think it does.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, speaking to the point of order which my able colleague has raised, I wish to point out that in no part of my remarks did I refer offensively to the great State of Georgia, for which I have the greatest respect. On the contrary, I expressed the hope and the belief that the authorities of the great State of Georgia would proceed to bring the murderers to justice. I declared further that I believe that the Government of the United States, acting through its Attorney General, should render to the law enforcement authorities of Georgia every possible support, including that of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, in bringing the killers to justice.

Mr. EASTLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. In reply to the Senator from California, I ask him if he thought, when he asked and received permission to have the newspaper article inserted in the RECORD that it would do the State of Georgia any good?

Mr. KNOWLAND. I certainly did not believe it would do Georgia any harm, and I certainly meant no offense. I do not believe that a reading of the article will be offensive to any person except those who participated in the lynchings.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, I ask this question of the Senator from California: What good does he believe can come from having such an article placed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD?

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, I believe that the Senate of the United States should not remain silent when a crime of such nature has been committed, when a mob of people drag out citizens of the United States and murder them in cold blood, and when one of those persons had worn the uniform of a soldier of the United States.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. So it is the Senator's purpose for the United States Senate to undertake to enforce all the criminal laws in the United States.

Mr. EASTLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator from South Carolina yield?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I yield.

Mr. EASTLAND. It is very strange that the Senator from California would call on the Attorney General of the United States to send the Federal Bureau of Investigation into Georgia, but I have not heard him make that request when crimes of murder were committed in the State of California.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. That is the question I am raising. We should let the States handle their own affairs.

Mr. EASTLAND. In other words, the Senator from California follows that doctrine so far as California is concerned, but not where the interests of Georgia are involved.

EDUCATIONAL FACILITIES FOR VETERANS

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HOEY in the chair) laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2085) entitled "An act to amend title V of the act entitled 'An act to expedite the provision of housing in connection with the national defense, and for other purposes,' approved October 14, 1940, as amended, to authorize the Federal Works Administrator to provide needed educational facilities, other than housing, to educational institutions furnishing courses of training or education to persons under title II of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended," which were, on page 4, line 4, strike out "II" and insert "III"; on page 5, line 3, strike out "individual." " and insert "individual"; and on page 5, after line 3, insert:

> (g) Nothing in this section shall authorize the transfer of any property to the Federal Works Administrator until the preference to veterans provided by section 16 of the Surplus Property Act of 1944, as amended, has been fully satisfied in accordance with its terms; and for the purposes of such section 16 transfers to such Administrator under this section shall not be considered as transfers to a Government agency.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, this bill passed the Senate approximately a week ago yesterday, and it was passed yesterday by the House of Representatives, with amendments. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from New York to concur in the House amendments.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I wish to ask the Senator from New York to explain the principal amendment which the House added to the bill.

Mr. MEAD. The House committee added an amendment to the bill with which I am sure the Senator from Wisconsin is familiar.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I am familiar with the bill, but not with the particular amendment.

Mr. MEAD. The amendment to which I refer is on page 5, after line 3, to insert the following:

(g) Nothing in this section shall authorize the transfer of any property to the Federal Works Administrator until the preference to veterans provided by section 16 of the Surplus Property Act of 1944, as amended, has been fully satisfied in accordance with its terms; and for the purposes of such section 16 transfers to such Administrator under this section shall not be considered as transfers to a Government agency.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I see no objection to the amendment. I thank the Senator for his explanation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from New York.

The motion was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF INTERSTATE COMMERCE ACT WITH RESPECT TO AGREEMENTS BETWEEN CARRIERS

The Senate resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. REED that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 2536) to amend the Interstate Commerce Act with respect to certain agreements between carriers.

Mr. TUNNELL. Mr. President, I should like to discuss for a few minutes the motion pending before the Senate. The question arises on a proposed amendment to the Interstate Commerce Act contained in the measure generally known as the Bulwinkle bill.

I do not like to disagree with the majority leader in the position he has taken, but, as a member of the Committee on Interstate Commerce, I have never had the idea that the bill now proposed would do what, from his statement, he seems to think it would do. My understanding is that it has been the custom of railroads, since there were connecting railroads, to meet, agree upon schedules of rates, and to file such rates in a legal manner. I understand from the railroad witnesses who appeared before our committee that they are now uncertain as to what they can do in the way of filing rates, and how they can agree, particularly when there are connecting roads, as to what proportion of the freight rate is to be taken by each road, and what rate shall be charged on a particular article.

I agree with the Senator from Michigan in this respect, that I do not understand that the bill has for its purpose the taking of a case out of the Supreme Court. I do understand it has for its purpose a statement of what method railroads shall follow in determining what they may do with reference to certain matters which they are supposed to do.

I am not speaking as an attorney for the railroads. In fact, so far as I can remember, I never represented a railroad company in litigation. I have, perhaps unfortunately for myself at times, from a fee standpoint, represented the other side.

The bill starts off by stating that it is an amendment to the Interstate Commerce Act, and in paragraph 2 there is set forth exactly what is proposed to be done. It reads:

Any carrier, party to an agreement between or among two or more carriers concerning, or providing rules or regulations pertaining to or procedures for the consideration, initiation, or establishment of, rates, fares, charges (including charges as between carriers), classifications, divisions, allowances, time schedules, routes, the interchange of facilities, the settlement of claims, the promotion of safety, or the promotion of adequacy, economy, or efficiency of operation or service, may, under such rules and regulations as the Commission may prescribe, apply to the Commission for approval of the agreement, and the Commission shall by order approve such agreement (if approval thereof is not prohibited by paragraph (4), (5), or (6)) if it finds that the object of the agreement is appropriate for the proper performance by the carriers of service to the public, that the agreement will not unduly restrain competition, and that it is consistent with the public interest as declared by Congress in the national transportation policy set forth in this act.

If it is consistent with the policy of the Interstate Commerce Act, and if the Interstate Commerce Commission approves it, then the rate, or whatever it may be that has been agreed upon, if it is not against public policy under the Interstate Commerce Act, may be filed, and the railroads will then know what their rights are in that respect.

It does not seem to me that this is so much an attempt to affect a particular case which is pending in the court as it is to say to various railroad organizations what they may do in certain contingencies.

The bill proceeds in paragraph 3 to state:

Each conference, bureau, committee, or other organization established or continued pursuant to any agreement approved by the Commission under the provisions of this section shall maintain such accounts, records, files, and memoranda, and shall submit such reports as may be prescribed by the Commission, and all such accounts, records, files, and memoranda shall be subject to inspection by the Commission or its duly authorized representatives.

In paragraph 4 it is provided:

The Commission shall not approve under this section any agreement between or among carriers of different classes unless it finds that such agreement is limited to matters relating to transportation under joint rates or over through routes.

The question arises, If there is no body which can say to the railroads that a certain amount of the charge, which may be $1.50 a hundred, or whatever it may be, shall go to one road and the remainder to another, or perhaps to half a dozen roads, as there may be a division of freight, how are the roads to know how to proceed? Personally I have not yet heard on the floor of the Senate any explanation as to how the railroads can proceed. This bill is to provide a legitimate manner of procedure.

If there is anything wrong about the bill, let us vote against it when it is brought before the Senate, but I do not see that there is anything which should entitled anyone to say to the Senate, "You should not even consider a bill."

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TUNNELL. I yield.

Mr. RUSSELL. Does the Senator know of any other case in which a bill of this importance, and so highly controversial as this measure is, has been brought up without Members of the Senate who are not members of the committee handling the bill having an opportunity to read the hearings?

Mr. TUNNELL. I do not think the matter which is set out in the bill is so highly controversial. I think that if there is injected into it something which is not there, if it is said it is a proposition to take away from the Supreme Court something over which it has jurisdiction, then it would be highly controversial, but to say that the railroads may under certain conditions learn what they can do, and have the approval of the body in the United States which has the right of approving with reference to transportation generally, I do not think is highly controversial. I think it is fixing a policy. The policy may be wrong, it may be that the Senator from Georgia prefers some other remedy, but I think that the railroads of the country are entitled to have a method provided by which they can know what they can charge, and how much of it shall go to each particular road.

Mr. RUSSELL. I gather the Senator's answer is, then, that he does not regard the bill as being important, and therefore he does not desire to have the hearings. Is the Senator a member of the committee?

Mr. TUNNELL. Yes; the Senator from Delaware is a member of the committee, and the Senator from Georgia has not the slightest reason for saying that I do not regard the bill as important. I do regard it as sufficiently important to be entitled to be heard by the Senate of the United States, and I do not think a motion, or a resolution, or a vote, to prevent corporations or individuals of the United States having a matter discussed or determined by the Senate of the United States, is in the interest of the public.

Mr. RUSSELL. The Senator is a member of the committee, and heard the testimony, and he has reached the conclusion that the bill should be enacted into law. There are others of us in the Senate who are not so fortunate as to be members of the Committee on Interstate Commerce, who have had representations made to us that the bill is not so meritorious as the Senator from Delaware conceives it to be.

I am oftentimes perfectly willing to follow the leadership of the Senator from Delaware, but when matters vitally affect my own State I like to try to reach my own conclusions respecting them, and to reach them as intelligently as I can after having made an examination of the facts. I think any Senator who is interested in this measure should be entitled to have an opportunity at least to glance through the hearings and see what was developed by the witnesses. It might be that after having done so I would arrive at the same conclusion as the Senator from Delaware has, but there is a possibility that I might not.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. TUNNELL. I yield.

Mr. OVERTON. When were the hearings conducted by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee on this bill concluded?

Mr. TUNNELL. If the Senator wants the date, I should have to refer to the committee record.

Mr. OVERTON. Can the Senator give me the approximate time?

Mr. TUNNELL. The Senator from Kansas [Mr. REED] is on the floor. I remember the occasion, but I do not remember the date. It seems to me as I think back that it was probably 2 months ago.

Mr. OVERTON. The next question I wish to ask: Why were not the hearings printed?

Mr. TUNNELL. I was going to say that the Senator from Georgia had discussed a matter which perhaps may be vital. I was not aware that the hearings had not been printed. I was present at the hearings and heard the testimony. The Senator from Georgia is correct in saying that I had an opportunity to know what was said. I had never had called to my attention, however, the fact that the hearings have not been printed.

Mr. RUSSELL. I will say that for 3 weeks I have called the committee, I should say every other day, and as earnestly as I am able have sought to obtain a copy of the hearings, but have only received a few pages of the print proof of the testimony of the Assistant Attorney General, and I had to secure those from the Department of Justice.

Mr. TUNNELL. It never before occurred to me, Mr. President, that Senators would want the hearings. I have no doubt now that they do want them, but I had never previously heard of such a desire. If the Senator had taken the matter up with the chairman of the committee or the acting chairman of the committee I am quite sure that something would have been done about that matter. But, so far as knowing whether the provisions of the bill are good or bad, I think the Senator from Georgia can judge that pretty well.

Mr. OVERTON. So far as I am concerned, I cannot.

Mr. TUNNELL. The Senator cannot?

Mr. OVERTON. I cannot.

Mr. TUNNELL. Has the Senator from Louisiana examined the bill and attempted to determine?

Mr. OVERTON. In a cursory way; sufficient to know that I should have to read the hearings to determine.

Mr. TUNNELL. What kind of a way did the Senator say?

Mr. OVERTON. A very cursory way.

Mr. TUNNELL. I thought the word "curse" was used.

Mr. OVERTON. Well, accursed be the bill, and accursed be the hearings which have never been submitted to the Senate for consideration, and accursed be the scheme and policy by which the plan is sought to be adopted. If cursing were in order, I can do a lot of it, I will say to the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. TUNNELL. I assume we can all do that.

Mr. OVERTON. I will say further to the Senator, if he will yield, that I am sorry we cannot secure any information as to why we cannot obtain the printed hearings, so we may read them for our information.

Mr. TUNNELL. I cannot agree with what seems to be inferred by the Senator that there may have been some scheme or plan on the part of the committee to withhold the hearings. If I were adopting such a scheme or plan, the Senator from Louisiana is the last person I should try to keep in the dark. I never before heard that he was so anxious for this knowledge, and I do not believe the committee had information of his desire.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I do not know about the Senator from Louisiana, but, so far as the Senator from Georgia is concerned, I have had my office call the committee on at least four or five different occasions, to inquire about when I would be able to see a copy of the hearings. My State is somewhat involved in this matter, and the governor of my State appeared as a witness before the committee. The governor has never discussed the matter with me, but he did present to the committee the views of the State of Georgia, and I have been unable even to have an opportunity to find out from the record what are the views of the governor in regard to how this proposed legislation will affect my State.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, for the information of Senators, I will say that I have on my desk in galley form some of the record of the testimony taken, most of which I hope to read into the RECORD at the proper time. Senators can see what a great amount of testimony was taken.

Mr. TUNNELL. I hope the Senator will not read it all.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I shall not read it all, but I shall read a portion of it into the RECORD so Senators may have knowledge of what the bill would do.

Mr. TUNNELL. I hope the Senator will not read it all into the RECORD if we are to adjourn next Friday. I am sorry this situation has arisen. I am sure the committee regrets it. I do not believe this situation would have existed had the chairman or the acting chairman of the committee, or the Senator from Kansas [Mr. REED] known of the desire for the printed hearings. The Senator from Kansas announced, and it was generally known, that he was trying for several days to bring the matter before the Senate. He announced that he was going to bring it before the Senate, and this is the first time I had knowledge of the fact that the hearings had not been printed or that there was any complaint about it. But I think that where there is a reason, as there appears to be in this case, the Senators interested should have made some demand on the committee other than a call over the telephone to a clerk of the committee who probably did not even know who was calling.

Mr. RUSSELL. I desire to say, Mr. President, if the Senator will indulge me, that I suggested to the distinguished Senator from Kansas several days ago that I had been unable to secure a copy of the hearings. The chairman of the committee was not in the city. It is a most unusual practice for Senators to rise on the floor and try to direct committees of which they are not members, as to when they should print hearings. I exercised all the diligence I knew how to exercise, and I complained to the Senator from Kansas, who talked to me about this bill on two or three occasions, that I had not been able to secure a copy of the hearings. I did not go to the committee and ask when they could hold a meeting to see if the hearings could be printed for my benefit. It is customary to have the hearings printed and available when a bill is brought forward for consideration.

Mr. TUNNELL. It is not customary always to have the hearings printed.

Mr. RUSSELL. No; but it is when a highly controversial bill is to be considered. Such a bill seldom reaches the floor without having the hearings printed and available to Senators.

Mr. TUNNELL. I am not sure that the bill in question is controversial.

Mr. RUSSELL. I am quite sure that the Senator will conclude it is highly controversial before it is enacted into law.

Mr. TUNNELL. I do not mean that there is no opposition, but I do not think opposition makes it a controversial matter. Some Senators oppose the bill, although they do not know what the testimony respecting it shows. But I do not think the bill represents anything of a really controversial nature. The bill is intended to provide a way for railroads, transportation companies, to determine what they may do with reference to certain matters, and I think they are entitled to have the bill discussed. If the chairman or acting chairman of the committee had been notified of the desire for printed copies of hearings, I do not think Senators would have reason to complain. But it appears that the Senator now is very anxious for certain testimony. I think the Senator is entitled to have it, and I think the Senator from South Carolina seems to have found it. He was, I believe, more diligent than was the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. RUSSELL. The Senator from South Carolina was more fortunate, but he certainly was not more diligent than was the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I should like to say that the copy of the hearing I have is not in finished form. It is in galley proof, ready to be made up in pamphlet or book form. I do not know why it has not been made up in pamphlet or book form so every Senator could have a copy. I had this record delivered to me, I will say, 10 days or 2 weeks ago, which shows that it has been somewhere—I do not know where. But I am sure that Senators do not have a printed copy on their desks.

Mr. TUNNELL. I may say that if the Senator should use what he has on his desk for a few more days it will be in its finished form.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Yes, but every Senator will not be able to read it.

Mr. TUNNELL. No; nobody will then.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I do not believe every Senator will stay on the floor and listen to me when I read it.

Mr. TUNNELL. I do not know of any way to keep Senators here to listen to the Senator read.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SWIFT in the chair). The Senator will state it.

Mr. OVERTON. Cannot Senators have a copy of whatever has been printed in the way of hearings? I understand something has been printed. The Senator from South Carolina has something on his desk.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. That is the galley proof. I have had it for 10 days. I do not know why it has not been printed and delivered to all Senators.

Mr. OVERTON. I do not know why we cannot have 96 galley proofs distributed to the Senators.

Mr. TUNNELL. I do not think there are 96 Senators who would ask for it or want it. I think perhaps no more than six Senators would.

Mr. OVERTON. I think every Senator is entitled to have a copy of the printed record on his desk.

Mr. TUNNELL. I will ask the Senator from Kansas about the matter of printing the testimony. It seems as though some of our friends have become very anxious for copies of this record.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I may say to the Senator from Delaware that I am not in control of the Interstate Commerce Committee and its machinery. For my own use I have inquired a number of times about the printing of the hearings. The Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] is chairman of the committee, as we all know, and I had no authority to order the galley proof bound and made available for distribution. The Senator from Montana, as we all know, is against this bill. But I do not want to leave any inference that the Senator from Montana, who is chairman of the committee, failed to have the hearings printed because he is against the bill. At the same time I myself do not want to take any responsibility for not having them printed. I made inquiry of the clerk of the committee a number of times as to when the hearings would be bound and available for distribution. The hearings, as the Senator from Delaware knows, ran over a period of several weeks—in fact, they ran into the months. The hearings held by the House have been printed. They cover the same subject matter and by very much the same witnesses, except Governor Arnall, of Georgia, who appeared before the Senate committee but did not appear before the House committee. The House committee hearings are printed and are on the desks of nearly all Senators and available for their use if they desire.

It never occurred to me that any point would be made of the failure of the Senate committee to have the hearings printed. The printing of the hearings would have involved a considerable expense. That might be the reason why the chairman of the committee thought that, in view of the fact that the House hearings had been printed and that they covered the same subject matter, there was no case for printing the Senate hearings. It is unfortunate, but it is only a talking point. All the reasons for the bill can be found in the House hearings.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, I have before me the transcript of the record of testimony of the various witnesses who appeared before the committee. The hearings have not been printed and delivered to Senators in document form, as is usually done. I have before me all the testimony.

Mr. REED. There certainly was no design on my part, and I do not think there was any design on the part of the Senator from Montana, in not having the hearings printed. I am for the bill. He is against it. He is chairman of the committee and has charge of the mechanics relating to the printing of hearings. My office force inquired on my behalf perhaps half a dozen times as to when the hearings would be bound and available for distribution. The members of my staff were told that the clerk of the committee had no word as to when that would be done. It never impressed me as a matter of great importance. I am not trying to hold out anything. The Senator from South Carolina apparently has before him a transcript of the hearings. If I correctly identify what is at his right hand, he has the galley proofs.

Mr. TUNNELL. Mr. President, the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. OVERTON] objected to the design or scheme by which the testimony was not printed.

Mr. REED. Let me say to the Senator from Louisiana that I am sure he does not make such a charge.

Mr. OVERTON. I make no charge against anyone. However, the Senator from Delaware entered into a controversy with me in which he charged me with being in absolute darkness, and he seemed to have no desire to shed light upon me. He made some reference to a curse, and we then discussed what constituted a curse, and I made a remark somewhat to the effect, "Cursed be the plan by which the hearings were not printed." I have forgotten exactly what was said, but I certainly intended no reflection on any member of the committee. I did not say that there was any design.

Mr. REED. I certainly acquit the Senator from Montana of any such charge.

Mr. OVERTON. When there is such a demand for the hearings, I do not believe that we should consider a bill when the hearings are not available. As I understand, this proposed legislation vitally affects my own State of Louisiana. That may be true or it may not be true. I do not know; but I should like to know something about it.

Mr. REED. I wish to acquit the Senator from Montana, who is opposed to the bill, and who is chairman of the Committee on Interstate Commerce, of any design in withholding the printing. I do not mean that he personally withheld it. Certainly I am for the bill, and probably I could have had the galley proofs converted into volumes and bound. It did not occur to me that there was any point about it. The printing would probably cost several thousand dollars. I went along on the basis of the galley proofs.

Mr. RUSSELL. Does not the Senator from Kansas recall that 2 or 3 days ago I spoke to him and told him that I had been unable to obtain a copy of the hearings? It is my recollection that he informed me that they could not be printed until September, or some such time.

Mr. REED. I do not recall giving the Senator from Georgia any information to that effect, but perhaps that is the case. There has been an enormous demand on the Government Printing Office for printing, as everyone knows. The printing and binding of these hearings in pamphlet form would be quite a job. As I recall, I never received any date from the clerk of the committee, who looks after the printing, as to just when the hearings would be available. But certainly my office force was never able to obtain from the clerk of the committee any assurance as to just when they would be printed.

Mr. TUNNELL. I thought the Senator from Kansas ought to clear up the idea that there was a scheme or design not to let Members of the Senate have copies of the hearings.

Mr. REED. I am sure the Senator from Louisiana would not press such a suggestion as against either the Senator from Montana or the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. OVERTON. I have already made a statement on the subject.

Mr. TUNNELL. Mr. President, I do not wish to discuss this subject further. I believe that Senators who are interested in the bill have some rights. I believe that Senators who are interested in the passage of the bill have some rights.

CREATION OF INDIAN CLAIMS COMMISSION

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, on behalf of the senior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY], who is chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, I submit a conference report on the so-called Indian claims bill and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The conference report will be read.

The report was read as follows:

> The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4497) to create an Indian Claims Commission, to provide for the powers, duties, and functions thereof, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:
>
> That the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 10.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 5, 8, 9, 13; and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 4: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 4, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "all other claims in law or equity, including those sounding in tort, with respect to which the claimant would have been entitled to sue in a court of the United States if the United States was subject to suit; (3) claims which would result if the treaties, contracts, and agreements between the claimant and the United States were revised on the ground of fraud, duress, unconscionable consideration, mutual or unilateral mistake, whether of law or fact, or any other ground cognizable by a court of equity; (4) claims arising from the taking by the United States, whether as the result of a treaty of cession or otherwise, of lands owned or occupied by the claimant without the payment for such lands of compensation agreed to by the claimant; and (5) claims based upon fair and honorable dealings that are"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 6: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 6, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"In determining the quantum of relief the Commission shall make appropriate deductions for all payments made by the United States on the claim, and for all other offsets, counterclaims, and demands that would be allowable in a suit brought in the Court of Claims under section 145 of the Judicial Code (36 Stat. 1136; 28 U. S. C. sec. 250), as amended; the Commission may also inquire into and consider all money or property given to or funds expended gratuitously for the benefit of the claimant and if it finds that the nature of the claim and the entire course of dealings and accounts between the United States and the claimant in good conscience warrants such action, may set off all or part of such expenditures against any award made to the claimant, except that it is hereby declared to be the policy of Congress that monies spent for the removal of the claimant from one place to another at the request of the United States, or for agency or other administrative, educational, health or highway purposes, or for expenditures made prior to the date of the law, treaty or Executive Order under which the claim arose, or for expenditures made pursuant to the Act of June 18, 1934 (48 Stat. 984), save expenditures made under section 5 of that Act, or for expenditures under any emergency appropriation or allotment made subsequent to March 4, 1933, and generally applicable throughout the United States for relief in stricken agricultural areas, relief from distress caused by unemployment and conditions resulting therefrom, the prosecution of public work and public projects for the relief of unemployment or to increase employment, and for work relief (including the Civil Works Program) shall not be a proper offset against any award."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 7: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"SEC. 11. Any suit pending in the Court of Claims or the Supreme Court of the United States or which shall be filed in the Court of Claims under existing legislation, shall not be transferred to the Commission: Provided, That the provisions of section 2 of this Act, with respect to the deduction of payments, offsets, counterclaims and demands, shall supersede the provisions of the particular jurisdictional Act under which any pending or authorized suit in the Court of Claims has been or will be authorized: Provided further, That the Court of Claims in any suit pending before it at the time of the approval of this Act shall have exclusive jurisdiction to hear and determine any claim based upon fair and honorable dealings arising out of the subject matter of any such suit."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 11: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 11, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows:

Omit the matter proposed to be stricken out by the amendment of the Senate, and in lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the amendment of the Senate insert the following: "such report shall have the effect of a final judgment of the Court of Claims, and there is hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as are necessary to pay the final determinations of the Commission";

On page 13 of the House engrossed bill beginning with line 17 strike out down through and including line 8 on page 14, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"(b) When the final determination of the Commission has been filed with the clerk of said Commission the clerk shall give notice of the filing of such determination to the parties to the proceeding in manner and form as directed by the Commission. At any time within three months from the date of the filing of the determination of the Commission with the clerk either party may appeal from the determination of the Commission to the Court of Claims, which Court shall have exclusive jurisdiction to affirm, modify, or set aside such final determination. On said appeal the Court shall determine whether the findings of fact of the Commission are supported by substantial evidence, in which event they shall be conclusive, and also whether the conclusions of law, including any conclusions respecting 'fair and honorable dealings', where applicable, stated by the Commission as a basis for its final determination, are valid and supported by the Commission's findings of fact. In making the foregoing determinations, the Court shall review the whole record or such portions thereof as may be cited by any party, and due account shall be taken of the rule of prejudicial error. The Court may at any time remand the cause to the Commission for such further proceedings as it may direct, not inconsistent with the foregoing provisions of this section. The Court shall promulgate such rules of practice as it may find necessary to carry out the foregoing provisions of this section";

On page 14 of the House engrossed bill, beginning with line 15, strike out down through and including line 21, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"SEC. 21. In each claim, after the proceedings have been finally concluded, the Commission shall promptly submit its report to Congress";

On page 14 of the House engrossed bill, after the word "proceedings" in line 24, insert the words "or judgment"; and

On page 15, line 13, of the House engrossed bill strike out the words "Any final determination of the Commission", and insert in lieu thereof the words "A final determination."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 12: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered —, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Omit the language proposed to be stricken out by the amendment of the Senate, and insert in lieu thereof the following: "save as provided by section 11 hereof as to the deduction of payments, offsets, counterclaims, and demands"; and the Senate agree to the same.

JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY,
ELMER THOMAS,
ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE, JR.,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

HENRY M. JACKSON,
W. G. STIGLER,
KARL E. MUNDT,
CHAS. R. ROBERTSON,
A. M. FERNANDEZ,
Managers on the Part of the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the conference report?

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, is the report signed by the minority conferees?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It is signed by the senior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE], representing the minority.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the conference report?

There being no objection, the report was considered and agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States submitting nominations was communicated to the Senate by Mr. Miller, one of his secretaries.

AMENDMENT OF INTERSTATE COMMERCE ACT WITH RESPECT TO AGREEMENTS BETWEEN CARRIERS

The Senate resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. REED, that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 2536) to amend the Interstate Commerce Act with respect to certain agreements between carriers.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, I would not take any part in the controversy as to whether or not the motion for the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill should prevail were it not for the rather peculiar circumstance that no hearings were printed in connection with the consideration given to it by the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce.

I have had occasion to be chairman of subcommittees conducting hearings. In connection with all controversial measures I direct that the hearings be printed at once, frequently, for the benefit of members of the committee or the subcommittee, so that they may read what took place a day or two before and refresh their memories as to the testimony.

I do not find any great difficulty in having hearings printed. What struck me as peculiar was the singular fact that according to the best information I could get, the hearings had been concluded 2 months ago, and that they had not been printed so as to be available to Members of the Senate. The majority leader, who I have no doubt knows more about this matter than I, and possibly more than does the Senator from Delaware, stated earlier in the day that the bill was highly controversial. I did not know that the bill was coming up until yesterday, when I heard that it was coming up today. I should like to have an opportunity to look through the hearings. I do not mean for a moment that I expect to read every page of the hearings, because they appear to be very voluminous. There is quite a pile on the desk of the Senator from South Carolina. It seems to be about 2 feet high. There must be between 15,000 and 20,000 pages of testimony. I do not know. I have not examined it. I do not expect to read all of the hearings. However, we have a way of scanning them and picking out the most important items of testimony and reading the testimony of the witnesses who we think are likely to know most about a bill, skipping a great many things which we regard as more or less trivial. When a bill so controversial as this bill apparently seems to be is presented to the Senate, and its proponents insist upon the Senate taking it up for consideration without any of the voluminous hearings being printed, I think it is asking the Senate to follow a course which is not exactly in line with good procedure.

The Senator from Kansas states that there is no necessity to read the Senate hearings because the House committee conducted extensive hearings on the subject matter of the bill and caused the voluminous testimony to be printed. If there is no necessity for us to read the Senate hearings, why have such extensive hearings before the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce? There must have been some reason for it. The committee is composed of very able men. I do not know who comprised the subcommittee conducting the hearings. Probably the Senator from Kansas himself was a member of the subcommittee.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. OVERTON. I yield.

Mr. REED. The chairman of the committee, the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] presided over most of the hearings himself. No subcommittee was appointed to conduct hearings on this bill.

Mr. OVERTON. Were the hearings conducted before the full committee?

Mr. REED. It was a full committee proceeding all the way.

Mr. OVERTON. The Senator from Montana is not only a very able Senator, but he has been a Member of the Senate for a great many years and is thoroughly well schooled and experienced in the conduct of committee hearings. He has presided over the Interstate Commerce Committee for a number of years. If he directed hearings to be held and a transcript to be prepared, I presume it was for the purpose of having the hearings printed later. He must have had some very good reason for it. Therefore I think the Senate would have very good reason to request a copy of the printed hearings before it proceeds with consideration of the bill.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. OVERTON. I yield.

Mr. REED. I wish to emphasize what I stated a moment ago. The Senator from Montana is opposed to the bill. The Senator from Kansas is for the bill. The Senator from Kansas reported the bill at the direction of a majority of the committee. The Senator from Kansas had no authority as chairman of a subcommittee, because there was no subcommittee.

Mr. OVERTON. I am not criticizing the Senator from Montana or the Senator from Kansas or any other member of the committee. I am simply pointing out the fact that we have no guide as to what is the object or purpose of the bill, except as we ascertain it by reading the bill; and it is not always possible to understand the full import of a bill simply by reading it. Some of us are not so thoroughly conversant with interstate commerce rules and regulations as is the Senator from Kansas, and some of us are not so thoroughly conversant with the laws applicable to railroads as are the Senator from Kansas and other members of the Interstate Commerce Committee, who have made that their chosen work in the Senate.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. OVERTON. I yield.

Mr. AIKEN. The Senator has been on the floor of the Senate for some time and he has heard some of the proponents of the measure intimate that it is not so controversial, after all, and that we should not assume that it is controversial.

However, after hearing the Senator from Kansas say that the Senator from Montana is opposed to the bill, and inasmuch as the Senator from Kansas is in favor of the bill, it seems to me that a controversial situation would develop as soon as we took up the bill on the floor of the Senate; and with a controversy of that sort under way, I should say that we might just as well give up any idea of having the Senate concur in the House concurrent resolution providing for sine die adjournment of the Congress on Friday.

If this bill is brought up now, its consideration will undoubtedly consume the better part of a week.

I think we must make up our minds which we wish to do—whether we wish to have the Congress adjourn sine die on Friday, or whether we wish to bring up this bill.

Mr. OVERTON. I thank the Senator for that information. He has given me information which I did not have in my possession until he very kindly presented it to the Senate.

I assume that the Senator from Kentucky was correct when he said earlier today that the bill is controversial. I assume that he knows whereof he speaks.

Mr. President, the bill will be controversial so far as I am concerned, because I do not propose to vote for a bill of this kind in the dark, and I do not propose to vote to have the Senate take up the bill without having light shed on it, both as a result of studying the hearings and having the subject amply discussed.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Green	Johnston, S. C.
Austin	Gurney	Knowland
Carville	Hart	La Follette
Donnell	Hawkes	Langer
Pulbright	Hill	Lucas
George	Huffman	McCarran
McClellan	Overton	White
McFarland	Reed	Wiley
McMahon	Russell	Willis
Moore	Smith	Young
Murdock	Swift
Murray	Thomas, Utah

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Thirty-four Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is not present.

The clerk will call the names of the absent Senators.

The legislative clerk called the names of the absent Senators; and Mr. BALL, Mr. CAPPER, Mr. CONNALLY, Mr. FERGUSON, Mr. GUFFEY, Mr. HAYDEN, Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado, Mr. MILLIKIN, Mr. PEPPER, Mr. RADCLIFFE, and Mr. TUNNELL answered to their names when called.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Forty-five Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is not present.

Mr. HILL. I move that the Sergeant at Arms be directed to request the attendance of absent Senators.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL].

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Sergeant at Arms will execute the order of the Senate.

After a little delay Mr. VANDENBERG, Mr. STEWART, Mr. BILBO, Mr. MCKELLAR, Mr. ANDREWS, Mr. BURCH, Mr. CORDON, and Mr. WHERRY entered the Chamber and answered to their names.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-three Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I regret very much to consume time of the Senate at this late hour of the day when a bare quorum is present, but I feel that some of the principles which are involved in House bill 2536 are so far reaching and fundamental that I must discuss them.

We have been told that this is not a controversial measure. The Senator from Delaware stated that, in his opinion, it is not a controversial bill. I do not know, Mr. President, what it would take to make a bill controversial if this is not a controversial bill.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. REED. The Senator from Kansas has just inquired of the clerk of the Interstate Commerce Committee with reference to why the printing of the hearings has not been accomplished by now. The clerk has informed me that he has pressed the matter with the Government Printing Office for some time and has received a promise that a delivery would be made on Monday of the present week of the printed hearings. He informed me that later in the week he was to receive a delivery of the bound volumes which would be available not later than Thursday. The clerk informs me further that he had a talk with the Government Printing Office with regard to why the Office had not carried out this arrangement. He was told that the hearings ran to 2,200 pages, and that because of there having been such voluminous printing of other matter, including the report on the Pearl Harbor investigation, as well as other investigations which have taken place, the Printing Office was not able to bind the volumes of hearings and deliver them as soon as it had thought the volumes could be delivered.

I make that statement only to explain the situation. Perhaps the Senator from Kansas has been negligent in the matter, although he had no authority over the committee. The committee which handled the matter was the full committee, and not a subcommittee. The full committee held the hearings and not a subcommittee. The delay in delivering the bound volumes of the hearings has been because of the reasons which I have explained. The Printing Office has not been in position to deliver the bound volumes of the hearings up to the present time.

I thank the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. RUSSELL. I appreciate the explanation which has been given by the Senator from Kansas. I am glad to know the reason for the absence of the hearings, but whatever the reason may be, the fact remains that we are faced with the naked truth that, with the exception of the members of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, no Members of the Senate have had available to them the hearings on this important measure.

Mr. REED. Will the Senator yield further to me for an observation?

Mr. RUSSELL. I am always glad to yield to the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. REED. The Senator from Kansas believes that he has furnished the Senator from Georgia with a better talking point than he would have had under any other circumstances.

Mr. RUSSELL. I thank the Senator for supplying me with a talking point. Mr. President, I wish to say that if this bill is not a controversial measure, there has never been a controversial measure before the Senate of the United States. We have been told that the distinguished and able chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee, the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER], who has been the chairman of the committee for many years, and who is perhaps as familiar with all the intricacies of transportation legislation as is any other member of the Senate, and who would probably yield only to the Senator from Kansas in his knowledge of the intricacies of rate structures, opposes the bill.

Mr. President, minority views were filed by two members of the committee who had an opportunity to attend the hearings. The able and distinguished Senator from South Carolina [Mr. JOHNSTON] and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY] were so opposed to the bill and so convinced that it was a vicious piece of legislation that they saw fit to file minority views which have been printed, and which are available to all Members of the Senate.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator from Georgia yield briefly to me once again?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. REED. Nine members of the committee voted to report the bill to the Senate, and two, including the chairman, voted against reporting the bill to the Senate. If the full committee had voted, while no Senator can be sure of how they would have voted, the best judgment of the Senator from Kansas is that 16 members of the committee would have favored the bill and that 5, including the chairman, would have opposed it.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, under my definition of a controversy, whenever any substantial segment of a committee, including its chairman, is opposed to a bill and some of the members of the committee are so vigorous in their opposition that they file minority views, the bill is a controversial one.

Mr. REED. I never shared the view that the bill is not controversial. I believe the bill contains some provisions which are highly controversial. On the other hand, there are matters in the bill with reference to which there is agreement.

